Pvt. Bobbie Tarrant, Pfc. Willie Mills, Cpl. Horace Lucas, Cpl. Leroy Jenkins, Pvt. Frank Vaughan, all of Brooklyn; M/Sgt. Alfred Harrison, New Rochelle; S/Sgt. James Berwick, White Plains; Sgt. William Ragland, C. Corona.

MD.-PENNSY-JERSEY

Maryland — T/4 Wallace Rogers, Weston Grove; T/5 Joseph Willis, Crisfield. Pennsylvania—Cpl. James Johnson and Sgt. David Johnson, Pittsburgh; S/Sgt. John Deshields, Sellerville, and Cpl. Sanford Pleasant, Pittsburgh;

Jerseyites—Sgt. Ernest Eggerston, Plainfield; S/Sgt. Harry Morrison, Elizabeth; Pvt. Leonard Hayward, Millstone; Pfc. William H. Jones, Camden, and Pfc. William O. Shapeless, Haddonfield. 9-9-44

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA

Virginia — Pfc. Arthur Pegram, Amelia; Pfc. Jesse Collins, Craddockville. North Carolina—Cpl. Willie L. Elliott, Edenton; M/Sgt. William McKoy, Maxton; Sgt. James O. Brown, Marion; T/4 Otis D. Paul, Hertford; T/5 Herman Merritt, Fayetteville; Pvt. William Pearcy, Salisbury; S/Sgt. Carl Edwards, Lynchburg; T/4 Ernest Payton, Greenville; Pvt. Marion McNeil, Laurinburg; Pfc. Charles Yelverton, Goldsboro; Cpl William Bismarck, Asheville; Pvt William Dukes, Ahoskie; and S/Sgt Leotha Wise, Elm City.

Alabama Soldiers Help Gen. Patton

Birmingham Weekly Review

AN AIR SERVICE COMMAND DEPOT IN ENGLAND — Six Alabama soldiers helped hook up an emergency aerial ppie line for gas to power Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's tank drive into Germany.

When the armored division outran their fuel supplies, he and other crack drivers of the Air Service Command's streamlined trucking organization, the Combat Support Wing, loaded up their trucks from rear echelon gasoline supply depots. 12-16-44

Negro Chemical Unit Plays Important Role

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

6-3-44

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender's War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA.—Working at an unspectacular job for which it has been trained, is one of the only two Negro chemical processing companies in the United States army.

It is quite possible that the work of this organization may never assume an important place in the pattern of this war. But it's importance to our men in the field can't be overestimated.

The company which is commanded by a white captain and four Negro lieutenants has been carefully trained to operate an impregnating plant which chemically treats clothing in such a way that they neutralize the dangerous affects of poison gases.

Many of the details of its work are a closely guarded secret.

Only 12 Are Privates

It was pointed out by the commanding officer, Capt. Louis P. Harris, white, who was research chemist in the Oakland, Calif., laboratories of the Sherman Williams Paint company before the war, that on paper only 12 of his more than 140 enlisted men are privates.

Master Sergeant Robert Barber, Buffalo, N. Y., serves as superintendent.

The technical sergeants, Carl A. Gilmer, Guthrie, Okla., and Charles Russell, Ardmore, Okla., a graduate of Philander Smith college, are assistant superintendents. 6-3-44

Serving as foremen are staff sergeants: Nathaniel H. Brown, of Muskogee, Okla.; Embry B. Johnson, Binger, Okla.; David Mills, Baton Rouge, La.; Fred Russell, Anadarka, Okla.; Ollie S. Warren, Cleveland, Ohio, and Walter L. Watson of Philadelphia.

Staff Sergeants Walter L. Watson of Philadelphia.

Staff Sergeants Walter C. Douglas, Sherman, Texas, a graduate of Texas college, and Aura J. Miller, Mobile, Ala., a graduate of Livingstone college are in charge of supplies. David Pegues, New York City, is chief clerk.

In connection with the plant is a laboratory operated by the officers with the assistance of enlisted men. A high degree of specialized knowledge is required also of the officers. 6-3-44

All are college graduates and one, Lt. Julius W. Hill, Atlanta, has completed most of his study for a doctor of philosophy degree.

Hill, a native of New Yorker, was graduated from Johnson C. Smith university in 1931 and earned his master of science degree from the University of Illinois where he has also completed most of his requirements for a doctorate.

As an undergraduate, he participated in football and basketball and has since served as an athletic official in the Southern Intercollegiate athletic Association.

Prior to his induction into the army, he was instructor of chemistry and physics at Booker T. Washington high school in Atlanta. His wife, the former Miss Maudie Bell, Pulaski, Ill., is also a graduate of the University of Illinois and the Atlanta School of Social Work.

The other second lieutenant in the organization is James G. Green, a native of Haines City, Fla., who was making Steubenville, Ohio, his home before the war. 6-3-44

Wilberforce Athlete

Green majored in chemistry at Wilberforce university from which he was graduated in 1943, just in time to answer his draft call and enter officer training school. A good athlete, he ran the mile and won the college middleweight boxing championship. He is single and in addition to his other responsibilities, serves as special service officer for the company promoting various types of rigorous sports for the men. 6-3-44

Jesse T. Richie is one of the two first lieutenants in the organization. He is a native of Dinwiddie, Va., and a 1937 chemistry graduate of Virginia State college. After graduating he taught sciences in high school at Dinwiddie until coming into the army.

Like Green, he is a great lover of sports and has also a flair for dramatics. His wife, the former Miss Edith Lang, of Deneseo, N. Y., is living in Brooklyn.

Executive officer is La Vada W. Cephas, of Cleveland, Ohio, who finished West Virginia State college where he majored in chemistry in 1941. For a short while he was a lab assistant at his alma mater, then was drafted. He is married to the former Miss Marian Thompson of Sandusky, Ohio.

First sergeant of the organization is Philadelphia born Douglas D. Addison who was a student at Bok vocational school when drafted. Company clerk is Cpl. George H. Allen, ex-New York City milkman.

Most of the personnel of the organization has been drawn from Texas. There is one Chicagoan, Pvt. Alonzo Allen, and a few others from Virginia, New York, Oklahoma, West Virginia, Maryland, Georgia, Alabama and New Jersey. 6-3-44

Among these are Pvt. Donald J. Barnett, Brown's Mill, N. J.; Cpl. Willie Belser, Richmond, Va.; Pfc. Leo R. Boler, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Sgt. Thurby Braggs, Muskogee, Okla.; Cpl. William E. Brown, Richmond, Va.; Cpl. Joseph Burrell, Baltimore; Pfc. Oliver Caldwell, Vernon, Okla.; Pvt. Benjamin J. Capers, Charleston, S. C.; Pfc. Louis D. Carmona, New York City; Pfc. Jimmie Casort, Muskogee, Okla.; Pvt. Eugene Christopher Jr., Bowling Green, Va.; Cpl. Napoleon L. Crawford, Muskogee, Okla.; Pvt. Maxie A. Cunningham, Union City, Tenn.; Cpl. Booker T. Daniels, Valdosta, Ga.; Cpl. Warren H. Davis, St. Louis; Pvt. Emmett Dehart, Pulaski, Va.; Pfc. Mozell K. Douglas, Norfolk, Va.; Pvt. John R. Dykes, Eldorado, Ark.; Pfc. Reed J. Fells, York, Pa.; Pfc. Mack T. Ferguson, Algoma, W. Va.;

Pvt. Hubert Godsey, Sparrows Point, Md.; Pvt. Burnis Hall, Mansfield, La.; Pvt. Zachariha F. Holmes, Baltimore; Sgt. Leotis H. Hood, Atlanta; Pfc. Charles W. Howard Jr., Ardmore, Okla.; Pvt. Richard H. Hudgins, Norfolk, Va.; Pfc. John Y. Huff, Pasadena, Calif.; Pvt. James O. Jackson, New Orleans; Sgt. Jonas Jacobs, Ponca City, Okla.; Pfc. Irving J. Johnson, Philadelphia; Cpl. Raymond L. Johnson, Camden, N. J.; Pvt. Roy L. Johnson, Birmingham, Ala.

Cpl. William T. Jones, Summitt, Va.; Pvt. Theodore J. Jordan, Berwyn, Pa.; Pvt. Fred D. Lake, Cambridge, Md.; Cpl. Arthur Lawrence, Syracuse, N.Y.; Sgt. David G. Lewis, Columbia, Ala.; Pvt. Joseph C. Lokey, Augusta, Ga.; Cpl. William Mack, Augusta, Ga.; Pvt. Claud Maxwell, Royston, Ga.; Cpl. Ira T. Miles, Oklahoma City; Cpl. Martin W. Miller, New Orleans; Pfc. James A. Minor, Baton Rouge; Cpl. Milton M. Moore, Poolesville, Md.; 6-3-44

Pvt. Ralph H. Morgan, Cottageville, S. C.; Cpl. Jesse Payne, Cambridge, Md.; Pvt. Marshall D. Pierce, Paducah, Ky.; Pfc. Leon F. Post, Norfolk, Va.; Pvt. T. L. Powell, Shreveport, La.; Pfc. Roosevelt Robinson, Skipper, Va.; Pfc. Hamon B. Ross, Cambridge, Md.; Pvt. James A. Sharpe, Norfolk; Pvt. Edward T. Skinner, Washington, D. C.; Pvt. Joseph C. Smith, Richmond, Va.; Sgt. William F. Smith, Roxbury, Mass.; Cpl. Cleveland C. Tillman, Cotton Plant, Ark.; Pvt. Alvin A. Thorogood; Pvt. Willis J. Towner, Mobile, Ala.; Pvt. James Walker, Baltimore, Md.; Sgt. Robert A. Walker, New York City; Cpl. Alfred Warner, Trenton, N.J.; Cpl. Ralph Warren, Cleo, Ala.; Pfc. Frank Williams, Augusta, Ga.; Cpl. Stanley Williams, Buffalo, N.Y.; Pfc. Morgan E. Witherspoon, Manning, S.C.; Pvt. Pinkney Young, Mobile, Ala.

The following are from Texas: Cpl. Curtis Amison, Milford; Pvt. Mirt Anderson, Sherman; Pvt. Elton Ausbie, Roxton; Pvt. Luther Austin, Palestine; Pvt. Elsie J. Bagley, Mt. Enterprise; Pvt. Robert Bates, Alvarado; Pvt. Archie Bell, Hillsboro; Pfc. Edgar Bennet, Palestine; Pfc. Floyd B. Benson, Dallas; Pvt. Jericho Birdow, Palestine; Cpl. Jessy Bowie, Dallas; Sgt. Jesse H. Bowser, Temple; Cpl. Thurston Brooks, Terrell; Cpl. Tilton Brooks, Dallas; Cpl. Willie D. Buster, Grandall; Pfc. Lorenzo B. Calhoun, Dallas; Pfc. Louis Carr, Palestine; Pfc. Woodrow W. Carter, Corsicana; Cpl. Harold Chilton, Tyler; Pvt. James W. Dawson, Tennesse Colony.

Pvt. Plural Diamond, Royse City; Cpl. William D. Edwards, Waxahachie; Pvt. Junior L. Flippen, Ovington; Sgt. Wayne Giles, Sherman; Pfc. Bernice Hackney, Dallas; Pvt. Robert L. Henderson, Henderson; Pvt. Monrae Henley, Waco.; Alvin A. Hightower, Milford. 6-3-44

Other Texans are Sterling Hodges, Arlington; Robert Holbert, Alvarado; Jasper Holley, Groverton; Pvt. R. C. Houston, Douglasville; Pfc. Henry Isaacs, Waco; Cpl. Charles Johnson, Sanavy; Pvt. Bernice Jordon, Bullard; Pvt. Troyce E. King, Leonia; Pvt. Vertea Lucky, Terrell; Pvt. William H. Matthews, Alto; Pvt. Willie D. Newman, Henderson; Pvt. Otis Norwood, Alvarado; Pfc. Eley Perkins, Trinity; Pvt. Chestell Price, Palestine; Pvt. Reuben D. Price, Poyner; Sgt. Willis Robinson, Moddy; Pvt. Jesse Rockwell, Roy City; Cpl. Jesse J. Royall, Athens.

Also from Texas are Pfc. Napoleon L. Scurlock, Crockett; Pfc. Horatio W. Session, Mineola: Cpl. Jessie J. Spen-

Diplomats Of U.S. Army

12-17-44

WITH THE U. S. ARMY IN ITALY—(ANP)—In the "Stars and Stripes," the armed forces' daily newspapers Lt. William H. Venn, a member of the Army air force, has praised the American Negro soldier.

"Department of the Army commends the American Negro soldiers in public as well as on duty. While in Africa, I was told by a British soldier that American Negro soldiers are America's best goodwill ambassadors. They are kind, generous. The sympathetic and generous. The Italian people have discovered that we are a decided credit to our country and a profound asset to their race or any country. These men is quite worthy of emulation and should be based upon small integral part of the world's future peace will importance of course, they play upon that good and appreciated. in these conquered countries.

However, I do believe that the more openly recognized nature.

Negro Troops Are Daily Called Goodwill

47m-1944 Foreign Service

Troops Keep Supplies Rolling To Russia From Persian Ports

By FRANK E. BOLDEN, NNPA War Corresp

CAMP PARK, HAMADAN, Iran--During the early days of the Persian Gulf Command truck convoys operated by the Motor Transport Service made the run from the Gulf ports all the way to Kazvin, a distance of some 700 miles, without the benefit of maintenance stations along the way. It was quite apparent that the situation had to be remedies if supplies were to be placed in Russian hands in sufficient quantities and on time. Accordingly, a series of maintenance stations were erected.

Camp Park, here at Hamadan, is one such station. It is under the supervision of Acting Commander Maj. H. U. Buchi of Tennessee and its general isolation is pronounced. It can only be reached by the highway as the railroad is farther east. There is no telegraph, and mail is carried by dispatch riders.

There are two detached units of colored troops stationed here, the rest of the Company C (part in Teheran) of the 352nd Engineer Regiment, and a complement of the 153rd QM Bakery.

Rugged Days

Since most of the heavy work on the highway up this way has been finished Company C now has the duties of post maintenance, trucking camp supplies, chauffeuring and pulling guard duty.

"Our early days here in the command were quite rugged ones," commented William L. Anderson, ex-auto assembly line worker from Inkster, Mich, to this correspondent one evening as a group of us sat around "shooting the breeze."

Road Melted Away

"Remember how we used to have to stand up and eat in the chow line because there were no seats?" asked S/Sgt. James M. Bell of Morehead City, N. C. "Yeah," drawled T/5 Acie Yancey of Houston, Texas, "and what about those pesky flies that spent more time in our food than they did flying around?"

Remarked Sgt. Carl J. Goodwin of Chicago, "We worked like beavers to check a flood, with only shovels and sandbags for tools around Khorramshahr. In the heat of summer, which caused the men to fall out like flies, we've watched the road which we were 'blacktopping' melt away as fast as we would finish it."

"The mustering out pay will be swell," declared motor dispatcher Sgt. Rufus James of Phoenix, Ariz., "but nothing beats a good, steady job."

Over at the motor pool on the following day I talked with drivers Sgt. Jonathan Craven, Los Angeles, Calif.; Cpl. Jim Hatley, Arkadelphia, Ark., and Pvt. Edward Mapp of Philadelphia, Pa. These men felt that they deserved the chance for a rest, since they had been in the desert heat for almost two summers before moving here.

Four other tan GIs, Pvt. Isaiah Chesson, Norfolk, Va. George Winters, Vandale, Ark.; James Appleby, Cincinnati Ohio, and Woodrow Beard of Hinesville, Ga., wanted to know "if the girls back home were still waiting for the likes of them."

A former Tuskegee student, T/5 Oscar E. L. Kirk, of Okolona, Miss., hopes to be able to return to school under the program of Governmental aid for veterans of this war.

Get On The Ball

Queried Pvt. James L. Lonsdey of Chicago, who pounds the road in a high octane gas truck some 1500 miles each week "Can't those folk back home get on the ball? We're still knocking it out over here each and every day for $50 a month room and board."

I also met and talked with two mail dispatch runners, Pfcs. Charlie Bell of Carthage, Texas, and Henry Black of Palestine, Texas.

From the commanding officer, Lt. George W. Wright, white, of Baltimore, Md., down to the buck privates, it could be plainly seen that the men were actually tired. Fatigue lines were indelibly etched deep in their faces. But they are still soldiering and anxiously waiting for "that break."

Pittsburgh Courier---11-11-44 P2.

Texan Bags Two Japs Then Gets Wounded Behind Lines

Finds Front Safer Than Rear Area

SAN FRANCISCO. — Private Luther J. McNair's regular Infantry job was in a 60-mm mortal squad of the 93rd Infantry Division. 11-12-44

But the two Japs he bagged on Bougainville were killed by other weapons, the Browning automatic and M-1 Gerand rifles.

"Most every man in my outfit could handle all the Infantry wea-

His body hung from the tree the rest of the day.

"The other Nip I got was several days later when were advancing. I was carrying my M-1 and saw him using a telephone in a hole about 35 yards ahead. It would have been hard to miss him, and I didn't."

Private McNair got through those weeks on the front line without scratch, he said, but he wasn't so fortunate when he went back to the rear for a rest.

'I was standing about 25 yards from a bulldozer just as it scraped across a land mine or an unexploded shell," he related. The blast knocked me about 10 feet. That was the last of May, and I've been hospitalized since then."

Private McNair's wife, Mrs. Lucille McNair, lives at 3025 Alhambra Ave., Los Angeles. He is the son of Mrs. Myrtle McNari of 906½ Fuller St., Houston, Texas.

Private McNair, who was in the Army 2 years before he got overseas, said he was in an interview at Camp Polk, Louisiana, before he was sent to Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco, released this week by the War department.

"For months we had been through intensive maneuvers, and we were well trained before we went overseas," he said, "and we didn't morning and let go a BAR burst waste much time going into ac-into the tree he was firing from.

Negro Sailors In Pacific Play Big Role In Philippine Invasion, Scribe Finds

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

11-11-44

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN THE PHILIPPINES—The role of the Negro sailor in the Pacific is much greater than is appreciated by the folks back home.

And what is true in the Pacific is true wherever else ships of the American navy are operating.

On one of the vessels of the huge fleet required to transport the task force which made the landing at Leyte in the Philippines were 20 Negro crewmen.

Togther with three Filiponos and one Guamese, they comprised the mess section. Negroes as messmen are a tradition in the navy and there is hardly a naval craft afloat which does not have a complement of Negro messmen.

1000 Take Part

Considering the large number of naval vessels which participated in this landing it can be safely assumed that 1,000 Negro sailors took part.

11-11-44

While the men perform their assigned tasks with efficiency, enjoy cordial relations with other members of the crew, their greatest pride stems from their assignment to various battle stations when the vessel goes into action.

On this type of vessel more than in any other type of navy ship, a greater number of the messmen work topside during battle. After the large number of Higgins boats are launched to carry assault troops to establish a beachhead, many of the ship's guns are manned, at least in part, by Negro messmen.

Three of the guns are manned by all colored crews. This means Negro messmen, in addition to their other tasks, are filling every position required to operate one of these guns. In addition they are constantly volunteering for other tasks.

Rate High In Scoring

Several of the men told me they had volunteered for an underwater bomb demolition squad. This is typical of the high morale and enthusiasm of the men.

The vessel's commander, Capt. John C. Lester, of Baltimore, told me that in practice, the three guns manned by all-Negro crews have repeatedly rated high in scoring. He also declared that they ranked with the best in airplane identification.

11-11-44

But even as messmen they sometime get an opportunity to display their courage. StMc. William Platt, of Cincinnati, and Stm1c Carlton Russell, of Providence, R. I., went ashore under fire at Peleliu to carry food to members of the Higgins boat crews who had taken assault troops to the beach in the first wave.

Platt, with two years service in the navy, had previously served on a cruiser. He is a talker on a 20mm gun. Russell, with 18 months service, is on his first sailing and is a trunnion operator. His brother, Howard, is also in the navy.

Mostly Newcomers

The vessel, which celebrated its first anniversary while enroute to the Philippines, has been in operations at Kwajalein, Guam and Peleliu. It has anchored or moored at 18 foreign ports, travelled 45,083 nautical miles and transported 11,358 troops.

11-11-44

Most of the Negroes aboard are on their first sailing, and have been in the service only 18 months. The nucleus of the crew, however, is a group of five veterans with experience ranging from two to six years. They have served on many types of vessels—battleships, cruisers, destroyers and mine sweepers.

In this group of old-timers are Stlc H. H. Ray, of San Francisco, whfo has been in the navy six years. After attending Virginia State college, he served as assistant to "pud" Waters coach at Norcom high school in Portsmouth, Va. His wife is the former Miss Dorothy Rose of San Francisco. He has two brothers, Warren, in the navy and Joseph, a soldier.

Father of Two

St3c Darling F. Guy, is a four-year veterans from Long Beach, Calif., with two brothers, Ellis and Douglas also in the navy, and a cousin, StM1c R. C. Heliton, of Houston, a shipmate.

Like Ray he is married, but is also the father of two children, Farrel Guy, Jr., and Dorothy.

Ck1c Arthur Evans, of Indianapolis, is a five-year veteran with battleship experience. His wife is the former Miss Pauline Hines, of Indianapolis. They have a son, Sydney.

11-11-44

Heliton, Gay's cousin, has three years service and like Guy, has two brothers in the service—Alexander, in the navy and Charles in the army.

Former Farmer

Other Negro members of the crew are St3c James S. Jackson, of Kingston, N. Y., whose wife Blondzela, is taking care of James S., Jr. His two brothers, Clarence and Arthur, are in the army.

Away off base is StM1c Herbert O'Niel Smith of Remo, Va., who with his father operated a small farm before the war.

StM1c Walter Sheppard, of Norfolk, Va., never dreamed of being a sailor when he was working as a checker at the Naval Operating Base at his home two years ago. One of his two brothers in the service, Columbus, is a lieutenant in the army. Irvin is in the navy.

StM1c Andrew Smedley, of Cleveland, Ohio, was a defense worker and one-half of a prize winning one-jitterbug team before joining the navy. His dancing mate, Miss Cora Lee Noles, has given up her search for a new partner.

Ex-War Worker

Ck3c William Thurman, of Louisville, like most of the others is married. His wife is the former Miss Margaret Wilson of Louisville. His two brothers, Roy and Carl are in the army.

11-11-44

StM2c E. D. Watkins, of Wilmington, Del., is a former defense plant worker and is first loader for a 40mm gun.

StM1c W. G. Scott, of Charlottesville, Va., is the only member of the group with less than two years service who has served on another vessel. Before joining this ship he was on a communications ship. His brother, Fred, is also in the navy.

StM2c E. R. Williams, of Providence, R. I., was a truck driver and neighbor of Russell before joining up. His brothers, Marshall and James, are in the army and navy respectively.

StM1c S. D. Shell, of Columbia, SC, a gunner, was a hospital orderly two years ago. His wife, before her marriage was Miss Rosa Wilson of Reedersville, S. C.

StM1c Ernest Sykes, of Columbus, Miss., a loader, has a brother, Thomas, in the army.

StM1c J. E. Henderson, of Memphis, a trunion operator, was employed in a defense plant prior to being drafted.

StM1c Donald E. Hall, Jersey City, N. J., another loader, has a brother, Raymond, in the army.

St3c William Howard Truitt, Salisbury, Md., who was an auto mechanic is a surface lookout. His wife is the former Miss Elizabeth White, also of Salisbury.

11-11-44

StM1c Claude Louis Shelton, was a student at Drakesburg Community high school before entering the service and is perhaps the youngest, though not the smallest, of the group. His only brother, Elgin, is also in the navy.

Nazis Fear Negro GIs, Returned Veteran Says

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

10-30-44

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(ANP)—The "master race" theory of the German soldiers disappears like magic when faced with the daring and capability of colored Allied troops, T-Sgt. Walter Malichi, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Malichi of Bennetsville, S. C., and just back from France on furlough said while visiting here Wednesday.

"I have seen Germans, fully armed, run away like the devil upon being confronted with colored soldiers," Sgt. Malichi continued. Most feared by the Germans are the Senegalese, French colonial troops who, the Germans contend, delight in cutting off their heads and ears as retaliation for brutalities inflicted upon their less fortunate comrades who fell into German hands in the ill-fated battle for France back in 1940.

The Senegalese, the veteran said, "are beyond doubt the world's best soldiers. They are plenty tough and I am very glad we are on the same side."

T-Sgt. Malichi's outfit is the 320th AA Balloon battalion, the army's only such outfit. On D-Day, it was assigned to fly barrage balloons from the invasion convoy and captured areas on the beachhead to prevent strafing by enemy planes at an effective altitude. "We were the first all-colored outfit to reach Normandy on D-Day," Malichi boasts.

10-30-44

Cited For Work

For its part in the invasion, on the Normandy beachhead, in Brittany and in Belgium, the outfit has been cited by its commanding officers, Gen. Timberlake and Gen. Eisenhower. It is back home for a few days of re-equipping before being sent into another theatre of operation.

T-Sgt. Malichi believes the American soldier and his ally in Britain far superior to the German soldier. German soldiers are kept sogged in dope and alcoholic drinks, he said. When without the influences of these stimulants, they surrender in large numbers. "I have seen them slipping away from their own outfits with white flags or upraised hands over to our men to surrender," he continued.

10-30-44

T-Sgt. Malichi and his fellow soldiers have high praise for the reception tendered them by both the French and British, the British going the French perhaps a fraction better in their treatment of colored soldiers. Both, he said, seem quite puzzled over our race question and try hard to make the colored soldier feel himself appreciated and loved.

Negro Squad Cleans Up A German Nest

N.Y. Amsterdam News

11-18-44

N.Y.C.

Tasty Box of Snuff Lost In The Shuffle

At the end of a furious scrap in a little French town near the Belgian border , an Army Ordnance ammuntion unit's 62-man "clean-up squad had slain 35 Nazi SS troops and wounded three more while cleaning out an isolated pocket of German resistance.

According to a battle front report received this week by Brigadier General Stewart E. Reimel, New York Ordnance District chief, the scrap occurred as the unit was preparing to move its ammuntion depot into position to supply units of Lieutenant General Courtney Hodges' First Army, hammering against the Siegfried Line. The Germans had "dug in" at the village and their presence was made known to the unit commander, Captain Jack Carstarphen, Fort Worth, Texas, by members of the French Forces of the Interior.

Captain Carstarphen divided his unit into three sections of 20 men each. After a reconnaissance of the area was made, the three sections deployed and moved in from different directions. The Ordnancemen were armed only with carbines and rifles, and a few incendiary hand grenades. The Germans were using automatic machine pistols, in addition to their other weapons.

Meets Mechine Gun Volley

Lieutenant Seymour Goodstein of Brooklyn, New York, who spoke German, worked his way towards a barn, where the largest group of Germans were hiding. He was met with volleys from machine pistols, and fighting began.

The first Nazi was shot by Corporal Paul Wood of Chicago, who dropped one of the Nazis who had fired at Lieutenant Goodstein. The Germans withdrew to the interior of the barn, and blind firing began. Technical Sergeant Harold F. Jackson of Milwaukee volunteered to move in close to the barn door, and threw an incendiary grenade into the building. The building burst into flames, and the Germans came out fighting. The Negro Ordnance soldiers opened fire on them.

Private Jim Scott, Shreveport, Louisiana, told First Sergeant Louis Reynolds of Chicago: "It sure did something to me to see one of our boys lying there wounded, with all those bullets flying around. I never did call on the Lord's name any more than I did right then."

Evacuates Two Wounded

Private William A. Wheatley, Hardinsburg, Kentucky, evacuated two wounded comrades, driving a ¾ ton truck through the field of fire twice. Corporal Clark C. Callotil the Germans Lieutenant Loyal linois; Corporal icago; Pfc. Allen k City; Pfc. Alex South Carolina; ley of Evanston, obert Murray of Marion Griggs of rivate Robert C. xas, and I ate ported having lost a prized box of snuff as he ducked violently to avoid the fire of a German aiming at him.

Johnson Smith of Philadelphia, Pa.

Private James Bradley of Scott of Chester, South

On the lighter side, Staff Sergeant Matthew Geal of Chicago reported having lost a prized box of snuff as he ducked violently to avoid the fire of a German aiming at him.

Private Robert Lewis Hinton of Chicago; Private Mario New York; Private Macon Georgia; Private

Among the other members of the Army Ordnance unit who per-

2 Brothers Killed; War Dept. Returns New Orleans Soldier

11-25-44

Informer

Houston, Texas

NEW ORLEANS.—First in this city to benefit by the new ruling of the War Department which returns the "last son" to families that have lost other sons in the present war was a Negro family, that of Privates Lloyd and Ferdinand Barre, 3231 Pauger street. Both young Barre boys were killed in action this year and this week their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Barre, were notified by the War Department that the remaining son, Corporal Clarence Barre, is being returned here to be stationed at the local Port of Embarkation, or on United States soil for the duration.

11-25-44

Almost overcome with happiness at the return of her remaining soldier son, Mrs. Marguerite Barre disclosed how she had been notified of two of her sons' deaths within a month's time.

and were planning a celebration when a later telegram informed of his death. He is survived by a wife, formerly Miss Gloria Labuzan and a son, Ferdnand Jr., age 10 months, residing at 1473 North Robertson street.

Private First Class Lloyd Barre, 21, was killed in New Guinea on July 13, 1944; his mother received a Purple Heart citation in October, she said.

Corporal Clarence Barre, who is being returned to New Orleans, is 23 years of age; a graduate of Dillard university, and entered the armed forces only six hours after receiving his B. A. degree a year ago.

Just three hours made the difference between sorrow and joy in the case of Corporal Barre. He was already aboard a transport at an Eastern Port of Embarkation last week, three hours before sailing overseas, when the War Department's telegram ordering him back to New Orleans was delivered.

"I thank God that my other boy has been saved for us," Mrs. Barre said, "although my family wishes to do all it can."

Sharing the Barre family's happiness was the Rev. Father Harry Maloney, SSJ., pastor of Corpus Christi church, who, seeing the mother prostrated with grief after learning of her two sons' death within a month this summer, wrote the War Department on his own initiative to appeal for her.

His letter received long before the War Department's announced policy, was one of those which caused the new protective ruling to come about.

The Barre family consists of two other sons, Stanley and Stanford, 17-year-old twins, who are civilian employees at Camp Plauche; and a daughter, Theda, a student of Xavier Prep.

Pvt. Ferdinand Barre, 19, was killed on September 7, 1944 in North Africa after his parents had been notified that he was recovering from wounds and was coming home. In anticipation of his arrival, the family renovated their home

Work of Engineer Outfit Termed "Secret Weapon"

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

WITH U.S. SUPPLY FORCES IN BELGIUM — The work and skill of the 375th Engineer General Service Regiment was one of the American "secret weapons" behind the armored sweep across France which sent the Nazis reeling back to the borders of the "Fatherland." 12-2-44

When American forces broke through at St. Lo and started the big push to Germany, supply lines jumped from 50 to 400 miles. The haul was too long for trucks, so French railways had to be put into operation.

Moreover, as the Germans retreated, they dynamited remaining railway bridges and placed demolitions along rail lines and beside switches. Other bridges and yards already had been destroyed behind the Nazi lines by the Allied Air Force.

Repaired in Normandy

The regiment, which had repaired roadways and bridges along the Normandy beachhead six days after the invasion, with the breakthrough at St. Lo, was called upon to follow the advancing First Army and repair rail lines and trestles. 12-2-44

Its first major task was the repair and rebuilding of 700 feet of bombed-out rail lines, numerous dynamited switches, and a bridge for a mile-long train, loaded with more ammunition and gasoline which was already feeling its way down the Cherbourg peninsula.

For completing the task in two days and nights, the regiment received the commendation of Brig. Gen. Ewart G. Plank. During the entire period of repairing the men were never bivouaced in one location more than a week.

Moved on to Front

After the rail lines were opened, the regiment was assigned to the front line in Germany and transport captured engineer equipment and materials to a warehouse near a city in Belgium. 12-2-44

5 Negro Units on 1st Belgian Train

ITH ALLIED FORCES IN FRANCE--It has just been revealed that five Negro quartermaster units were in the first troop train which crossed the France-Belgium border, after U. S. forces had smashed their way into Belgium in September.
The five, consisting of one base depot, one QM group, one QM battalion, a depot supply company, and a QM service company, made the trip without incident.
On a recent inspection trip made by Major General Robert Littlejohn, chief quartermaster, ETO, one member of the group Corporal Marvin M. Patrick, was commended for service ren-

France's Negro Soldiers First To Enter Free Paris

World - Memphis - Tenn. Sept 1, 1944

PARIS—(A N P)—The late Gov. Felix Ebou's French Equatorial African Army, composed of Senegalese, Morocoans and native tribes recruited in the Lake Chad territory and the Cameroons, made a triumphant entry into this liberated city last week. They were the first allied soldiers to arrive here on the heels of the fleeing Nazis.

Armed with modern American weapons, they were members of the 2nd French armored division. Their battle marked tri-colors bore the Cross of Lorraine as they marched down picturesque Champs Elysess to the tune of Le Marseillaise, en route to the Arch De Triumphe to honor the grave of the Unknown Soldier.

Fighting under the command of Gen. Jacques LeClere, these veterans are fearless fighters. They have been seasoned by the rigors of the African campaign where they distinguished themselves for effecting a juncture with the allied forces in North Africa in Tunisia. They marched 1,700 miles across the hot sands of the Sahara desert from Chad to Tunis to reach Paris.

Parisians gave these black sons of the French Republic a wild welcome. Women, men and children lined the boulevards to display their appreciation for their heroes who rallied to the appeal of Eboue and the Cross of Lorraine in France's most crucial moment.

Negroes Integrated Into All Parts Of Vast Allied Machine In France

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

8-26-44

By RANDY DIXON, Courier War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE—American assembly lines seem to be pouring directly into France with the last vehicle at the beachhead pushing the first quite a few miles ahead with all the intervening vehicles bumper to bumper. This flow of men and materiel, like moving a city the size of Chicago and transplanting it overseas with everything necessary to run it, is best seen when following the roads to and from the front lines. The integration of Negroes into the overall pattern is amazingly complete. In the advanced communication zones and in the rear echelons one sees more Negroes than ever before in one's life. Like everybody else, they are doing anything and everything.

NEGROES GUARD NAZI PRISONERS

A long convoy of German prisoners crammed in trucks passed by with Negro boys driving them and guarding them with rifles beaded for any emergency. Further along more Negro drivers are evacuating French civilians who have sneaked through the German lines. Nearer the fighting lines, Signal Corps Negroes are laying telephone lines and an engineering company of the regiment is laying railroad tracks.

8-26-44

S/Sgt. William Lyle, Old Fort, N. C., and Cpls. Nick Vaughn, Helena, Ark., and Beaucea Washington, Miami, Fla., are operating bulldozers. Cpl. Goliath Slovent, Plymouth, N. C., and Pvt. Azee Ivester, Pelzer, S. C., handle rails.

At the front, colored and white ambulance drivers are turning the wounded over to the stretcher bearers. Pvt. William Reynolds, Englewood, N. J., is dislodging 50 machine gun shells from the right hand corner of the cab of his vehicle after speeding through enemy ambush and strafing. S/Sgt. William Jones, Darnell, La., is checking out patients to a rear evacuation point and nearby are groups of colored ambulance men so busy at their tasks they have little time to answer questions.

GERMANS LOW ON BANDAGES

Additional drivers come in with captured German medics who are to be assigned to caring for wounded German prisoners. The wounded German prisoners arrive amidst an overwhelming stench. The Germans must be low on bandages as the prisoners' wounds are dressed with crepe paper; their wounds are eight days old and gangrene has set in.

8-26-44

These are the men I have encountered, but Negroes are everywhere—from Vire to Le Mans to Avranches to St. Malo to Brest to L'Orient. At all points Negro artillery pounds away. Negro anti-aircraft units have moved south. Ammunition and infantry personnel supplies are being transported right to the front by colored "noncombats" who push into battle alongside the infantry.

FILM GROUP ALMOST CAPTURED

St. Malo almost proved tragic for the party of technicians and consultants who are making the film sequel to "The Negro Soldier." Attracted by the deeds of the colored artillery helping to lay siege to St. Malo, the group arrived 24 hours after the Germans had hoisted the white flag of surrender. They didn't know that the enemy had only partially surrendered and had retired to a citadel in the old section of the town, and that it was all a trick of a fanatical German commander now known as "the Mad Man of St. Malo," to bait us into the open.

8-26-44

Carlton Moss, narrator and script writer, two correspondents and several others drove into town and proceeded into the old section when an American major ran from a building and told them that fighting was still in progress. Fifty feet further they would have been in German hands. The group scurried away pronto with the correspondent from Chicago breaking every speed record in his exit.

GIs REPAIR GERMAN RADIO

A safe distance to the rear, Pvt. Elbert Thompson, Pittsfield, Mass., Pvt. Felix Capeda, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Pvt. Carroll Anderson, Jr., Richmond, Va., were repairing a radio taken from a German officers' billet at the front and playing it from an improvised battery. A mile further an ambulance waits while a Negro lieutenant and four white medics work frantically trying to rescue six colored boys buried when a landslide piled tons of dirt on their trucks and on them.

As the last victim is extricated, weak and puffing, he jumps up and shouts, "I'm alive! They saved me!" The medics rush him into the ambulance and we can't follow to get his name. They moved in the opposite direction.

Soldier Yells "Who Dat?" Captures 20 Germans, Says White Reporter

The Whip — Miami, Fla.

In typical fashion of ridiculing even when reporting heroism of Negroes, the United Press reporter Henry T. Gorrell, with US Armored Forces Attacking Coutances, France, has filed a story in which is included what he calls the "prize capture of the day" in those parts.

8-26-44

According to Gorrell the "prize capture" was made by a Negro signalman who was stringing wire during the night when a German approached him. "Jumping", reports Gorrell, "he shouted, 'Who dat?' this began firing his rifle. Twenty more Germans, who had been thinking it over, tumbled out of the bushes and surrendered."

8-26-44

The signalman is not identified. A signalman entrusted with the stringing of wire is likely to be a chap with some educational background even among whites. Among Negroes, he is even more likely to have a background to compare with Gorrell's and possibly says "who's that" as clearly.

Negro Troops Bag Prisoners, Win Honors in French Drive

PM — N.Y., N.Y. Sept 7, 1944

WITH U. S. FORCES IN FRANCE—With a bag of 49 German prisoners and incalculable heroics under fire in combat to its credit, a Quartermaster Troop Battalion has been in the front lines adapting itself to the new chores imposed by our super-blitz in France.

PM, N.Y., N.Y.

By force of circumstances, the success of the breakthrough depended entirely on the success of the mission of these Negro truck drivers. These soldiers went into battle untested, untrained, and came out with the praise of every commander ringing in their ears.

The commander of the 22nd Infantry Regiment, whose 3d Battalion rode the "Glamor Wagons," as the drivers call them, said: "Not one flinched. They carried out their mission with as much courage and ability as the best frontline troops. I'm proud of them."

Besides being the first time that the Negro troops had seen any frontline action, it also was the first time that a tank-truck assault team, as a spearhead, had been used in France.

Maj. Harlan W. Hendricks of Hamburg, Pa., filed a report of tactical operations. The following is a brief excerpt from the battalion executive officer's report:

"This unit left its bivouac area on July 19 and reported to the 22d Infantry Regiment south of St. Jean Du Day. On the day of the attack the vehicles moved the battalions to the vicinity of Pont Herbert. The troops dismounted from trucks with the exception of seven trucks. These seven trucks went forward with the infantry at the start of the attack.

"The trucks that went forward

Negroes Win Praise From British Chief

Bracken Hails Americans as Men And Soldiers

By Roi Ottley
Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1944, by Field Publications)

LONDON, Sept. 20. — The American Negro is being praised, lavishly here as a man and a soldier.

The recent flow of compliments emanating from official sources is perhaps a reflection of the concern created by racial conflict here and its possible aftermath in the post-war period. The public debate in the U. S. A. over the fate of India is a contributing factor, for in the view of official Britain, Americans are presumptious to talk of the India problem in the face of their own unsolved Negro problem in the U. S. A.

Pointed Reminder

Much of the praise of Negro troops, therefore, may be interpreted as a reminder to Americans of their own Negro problem. There is much off the record talk about this, but obviously no one will have his name attached to this point of view for fear of disrupting Anglo-U. S. amity.

The most recent praise of Negro soldiers came from Brendan Bracken, Minister of Information, in an exclusive interview.

"From the moment of their arrival in Britain," he said, "the American Negro soldiers made themselves at home. Neither our strange ways and customs nor our strange climate seemed to dismay them. They talked freely and readily to Britons, and with British children especially.

"They have struck up the greatest friendship at street corners in the big cities and at crossroads in the country. A Negro soldier surrounded by a small crowd of delighted children is a pleasing and frequent sight.

Majestic MP's

"The friendliness and good spirits of the colored American soldiers has made a lasting impression on the British public. Negro soldiers became as much a part of our wartime landscape as air raid wardens and generals. The majestic bearing of the Negro military police is as familiar to us as the dignity of our own guardians of the law.

"Red Cross clubs staffed by Negroes were soon set up in many of our large centers. In these clubs British volunteers have helped to make the Negro soldier feel at home when he is off duty.

"It was soon recognized in Britain that the American Negroes are playing their full part in the United Nations' war effort. As members of the great and victorious array of free peoples, they have earned the respect of the people of Britain."

Half Negro Troops In Overseas Units

WASHINGTON—There were 698,911 Negroes serving in various branches of the army as of June 30, 1944, the War Department announced last week. This was an increase of 34,846 above the number announced in February. Over half of this number, or 361,456, are in units overseas.

In releasing these figures the War Department reported that numerous field commanders of Negro units have praised the efficiency, high morale, and courage of Negro combat and service troops under fire in Europe.

SAYS THE COMMANDING GENERAL

Men Seek No Special Attention

GEN. CLARK SAYS NO RACE PROBLEM

But Men In Ranks See Sinister Hand

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY (ANP(While the commanding general of this first Negro combat unit to meet the Germans in the European theatre reports that their development and progress has been normal and satisfactory, the boys of that division let it be known that they object to special attention because of their race.

Color Bar Let Down at Camp Amirabad, Persia

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
ANPA War Correspondent

TEHERAN, Iran (Delayed).—I had a new experience here in Persia, at Camp Amirabad, where I watched colored and white troops live and enjoy themselves together in the "good neighbor" fashion, without any "incidents."

The camp is made up of two units of colored troops, a complement of the 153rd QM Bakery Company and the 519th QM Car Company, and a white unit, the 186th QM Depot Company.

They live in the same area, use the same mess hall, share the same shower room, latrines and recreation room, and use the same PX. Only their sleeping quarters are separate.

To a man, they wish their battlefield exploits to receive the same consideration as other units, no more, no less. Aware of the great historical nature of their work as American Negro soldiers, the men who form the fighting vanguard of 2nd division have been in the ront line for more than two months and have successfully ept pace with more experienc-d divisions in some of the more iery sectors around Bologna.

All of this has been done, according to the testimony of the officers and men, with the same legree of fate and fortune that generally accompany any military unit. The 92nd has had ts losses. On the other hand, t has its heroes. One of the men is up for citation for having killed 13 Germans with his damaged carbine.

There's no official segregation in forward or rear areas at mess es or latrines or in sleeping accommodations although every man in the division has had his share of it when he trained in the same southern state. Although there is only one ta-le in the officers' mess, in the divisional headquarters the pic ture is different. Whether voluntary or involuntary, a group of officers often eat together.

While Gen. Mark W. Clark commander of the Fifth army will not admit that there is a problem of race relations with in his army, the sinister hand of race prejudice overshadows the unit. It is there, although every effort has been made to push it out of sight. Its handwriting is on the wall in at least two places.

First, white officers are an issue within the 92nd division. At present, all officer replacements are white. There are many Negro company officers, captains and lieutenants, but according to the colonel, who is a native of Connecticut but recently of Virginia, the time is far distant when Negro junior officers will outrank white junior officers.

Secondly, there is the question of MP's. The military police problem has been solved by having one white and one Negro MP patrol border areas together. The basic principle is that the white man handles white offenders and the Negro handles Negroes. Negro MP's not not carry pistols, but short ry pisto. They carry short clubs. They are more than six feet tall. Negro GIs do not carry concealed knives.

Acccording to Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, Luray, Va., the 92nd division is a military and not a sociological problem. Negro officers are stressing that race is secondary to patriotism. They say that they want above all to be regarded as American fighting men, but some of the enlisted men confusingly place more emphasis on race pride than Americanism.

the coastal left flank of the Italian front where American Negro forces of the 92d Division are fighting in a sector which combines the swankiest of pre-war beach resorts with some of the toughest mountain terrain in Italy.

American troops already hold long stretches of the Tyrehennian coast which Mussolini developed to compete with the French Riviera. Along the heavily mined beaches are sprinkled now useless blockhouses which invasion-fearful Fascists built to oppose a landing.

Forts Rotting Away.

These fortifications, some camouflaged as restaurants or beach cabanas, lie in empty decay as American military vehicles ply the nearby highways.

A short jeep ride takes you into the actual battle area. You climb into a jeep with Lt. Walter Vaughn of Roanoke, Va., and start out on a series of roads under the easy observation by enemy troops in the hills above. (Vaughn is a white officer, all of the others mentioned below are Negroes.)

We started up a snaky trail leading up a mountainside.

Men Replace Mules.

At the summit, you join Lt. Stanley Braitswait of New York City in an artillery observation post. You watch as he and Corporal James Gant of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Pfc. Robert Saunders of Memphis, Tenn., direct a concentration of shells against an enemy position on a ridge ahead.

Near the crest, Sgt. Coby Edmond of Wardell, Mo., a mortarman, tells of his pride in the work of his section. Pfc. Johnny Gibson of Monrose, La., and Cpl. Alvin Adams of Charlotte, N. C., trudge up carrying ammunition across terrain no pack mules could negotiate.

Negro Troops Give Germans No Respite

With the 92d Division in Italy, Nov. 20 (Delayed) (AP)—Axis troops are getting no respite on

Burma Drivers Either Good Or End Up In Grave

Chicago Defender 1-28-44

Chicago, Illinois

By DETON J. BDOOKS
(Defender War Correspondent)

ALONG THE LEDO ROAD—With the sharp command "mount up and turn 'em over," lights flashed on and motors purred as our convoy of 40 trucks roared away into the night.

Each truck moved slowly into line about twenty feet apart forming a snake-like chain of shimmering light against the moonless blackness, as we started on what I found to be the roughest, toughest road ride, I've ever had in my life.

I had decided to take the trip to see why black quartermasters who nightly drive this long supply route, are hailed by high-ranking officers as the best truck drivers in the world. And by the time it was over, I knew the reason. They are either good—or they end up in their grave.

Up Into Mountains

Seated in the second truck of the first section of the convoy which was carrying an engineer detachment up forward, I took the opportunity while we were still on level ground to get acquainted with my driver, tall, sturdy and companionable Pvt. John Neely, Statesville, N. C.

According to Neely he was just another Carolina boy who had been drafted into the army who hoped to get north after the war to work in one of the large industrial centers. But this night he was an important guy to me, for my life and those of 18 other men depended upon his skill.

After about an hour and a half, we started moving up into mountains alongside of cliffs which dropped away into a fathomless bottom of yawning jungles.

Vision: Zero

Slowly we moved along in low-low gear, for the grade was steep and it was a long pull. As we moved higher, heavy clouds enveloped us and we could see no further than five feet. Neely sitting on the edge of his seat peered intently ahead as he eased the truck along lest we plunge over an embankment instead of rounding a curve. Finally we were over the first mountain range and down into the valley.

About three a.m., just as we started to climb again, it began raining. No matter how carefully the drivers drove, the large six by sixes slid on the slippery clay, their rear right wheels swinging dangerously close to the edge of the cliff. Skillful maneuvering just as disaster seemed certain managed to keep them from toppling over.

In keeping away from the cliffs some of the drivers including my own hugged the mountain side a little too closely, their trucks slipping into a deep drain ditch. Some had to be pushed out, others were able to make it out themselves after a short struggle.

Our truck developed engine trouble and before the convoy mechanic had repaired it, we had dropped back from second to twelfth place. So dawn caught us 40 minutes behind the head of the column at the highest peak of the road before we began the deep descent down into the Mogaung valley where some of the bitterest fighting against the Japs in this theatre has taken place.

There below us hung white billowy clouds, obscuring military installations in the valley as effectively as if they were a smoke screen.

Overhead, the rising sun gave a golden-hue to the rim of grayish-black clouds which dotted a pale blue sky. It was a magnificent sight and we gave a sigh of relief that the night and the worst of the mountains were behind.

But just as we rounded our last dangerous curve, we came to two of our trucks smashed by a landslide which partly blocked the road. The injured had already been taken to a nearby hospital by one of the convoy officers, so we proceeded on our way, reporting the incident to the commanding convoy officer, affable, hardworking, Captain Cauman, Boston, Mass., who had arrived at our first station at the head of the column.

While the drivers rested and had breakfast, he and I swung about in his jeep and visited the injured. Fortunately there were just five only one seriously hurt. By the time he had finished his investigation it was eight o'clock—time only for a quick breakfast—then the convoy swung on its way down the valley.

It must have been this section of the Ledo Road a Life reporter rode when he described it as "a four lane macadam highway." For only here could this description be true, though improvements are taking place all along the way and after it has had time to thoroughly dry, it will be a hundred per cent better than it is now. But in spite of the excellence of this section, we ran into a dust hazard, worse in many respects than the rain in the mountains.

Dust was so thick that it gave the impression of a dense fog. We could see neither ground, nor sky, nor even the side of the road. When we stopped to cross a bridge we lost another truck when a dump truck smashed into its rear.

The driver was bruised but not seriously hurt. We were caked with dust and some of the drivers wore masks — others like myself tied wet handkerchiefs about our faces so we could breathe.

By late afternoon we had beat this hazard and arrived at our destination, delivering our precious cargo of army personnel. A nearby crystal-clear Burma stream gave us a chance to bathe before eating. And then after twenty-two hours of battling the Ledo Road, we slung our jungle hammocks in the back of the trucks. I immediately fell off into a deep sleep.

The next morning, I left the convoy to go further forward while they returned to get another load and fight their way through once again, after a short twenty-four hours in their company area.

None but the best and most rugged physical specimens can stand this constant strain of road and weather and danger—a good enough reason why colored boys monopolize this convoy business.

Among the GI's who drove this night were Sgts. James Coleman, Jr., Topeka, Kans.; Max S. Vaughn, Ganden City, Kans.; Cpls. Frederick White, Russellville, Ark.; Boman S. Coogler, Oakland, Calif.; T-5's Raymond Jackson, Washington, D. C.; Edward B. Jefferson, Indianapolis, Ind.; William Drew, San Diego, Calif.; Joe Cheers, Jr., Hickory Valley, Tenn.; Lewis Conner, Chicago, Ill.; Robert Fort, Forestville, Conn.; William Parker, Carbon Hill, Ala.; Andrew Cherry, Sallnas, Calif.; Jack Hill, Norwalk, Conn.; and Pvts. Cecil C. Miller, Washington, D. C.; Ernest Clifton, Alexandria, La.

Courier--Pittsburgh, Pa.
12-9-44

Ignoring Own Wounds, Bleeding Yank Saves Life of Best Friend

By HASKELL COHEN

WITH THE 92nd IN ITALY--You can't tell a hero by his appearance! Pfc. James L. Robinson of Atlantic City, N. J., for instance. Nobody in the world would expect Robinson to be a hero, not by his appearance at any rate. Bobby tips the beam at 260 pounds, quite a load for a line soldier, but a good deal of that poundage is heart and guts.

On November 9, the first platoon of Company K in a 92nd divison battalion was making an attack. Operations called the objective "California." Robinson was among the first men in the platoon up the slope of "California" that early dawn when the enemy's small arms fire stopped him with two slugs in his left shoulder.

BEST FRIEND FALLS

The wounded man--he is only 18--started back toward the medics when he saw his best friend, Pfc. Richard L. Law, fall. A dud mortar shell felled Law, piercing his right thigh and pinning him to earth. First aid men were just ou of the question. They just couldn't get to the men in the hell that had broken loose on "California." The other soldiers of the platoon were too occupied with the business of fighting to help remove the dud.

Despite his own wounds, Robinson managed to remove the dud without exploding it.

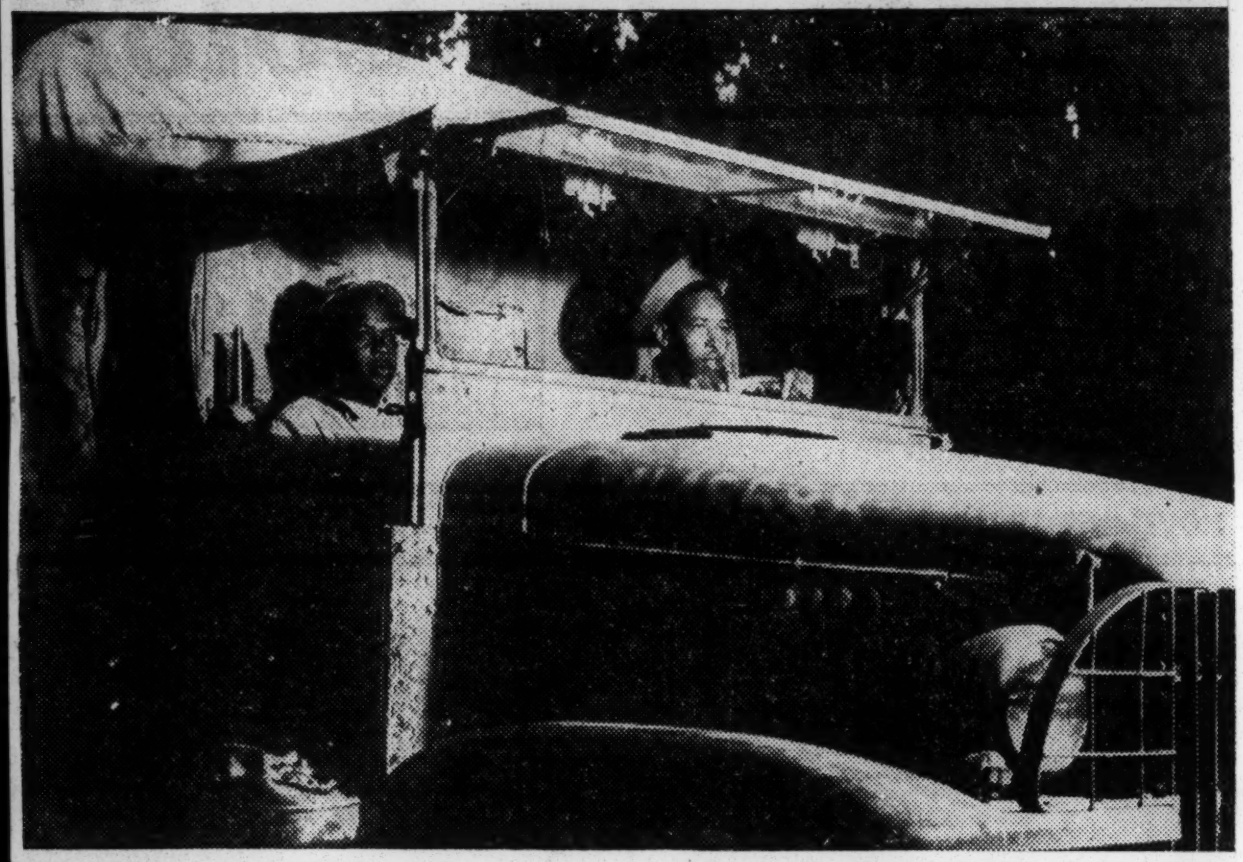
CARRIED FRIEND TO BASE

There was still the task of removing his friend from the hilltop, but before the commanding officer to receive a medal, spectators will take that was easy compared to the operation Private Robinson just performed. one look at his vast bulk and remark: It was a 500-yard walk down the mountainside and then up the reverse side "That soldier a hero? I would never of the hill to Company K's command believe it."

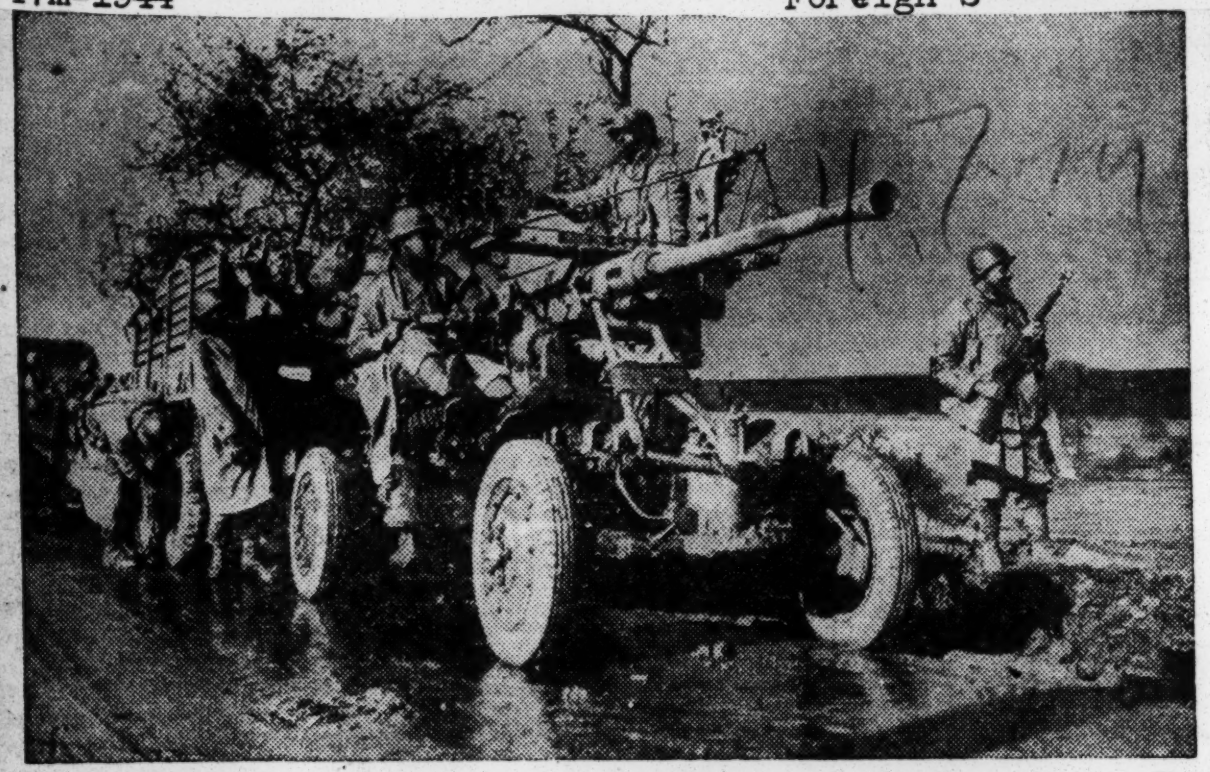
post, but the private brought his It just goes to show you one can best pal in safely. never judge a hero by his appearance.

They will probably cite Robinson for his brave deed and when he stands

NIGHT DRIVING ON TREACHEROUS LEDO ROAD



T-5 Coleman Garrett, Canton, Miss., reves up motor preparatory to starting long night-time convoy trip along Ledo Road carrying supplies to troops in advance positions. At his side is Sgt. Major T. Johnson, Miami, Fla., acting as assistant convoy officer.



NEGRO ARTILLERY UNIT stands by and checks equipment on a road leading to the front. That's a 40mm Bofors antiaircraft gun. —Signal Corps Photos

THEY LEAD ARMOR—Lieut. Col. Paul L. Bates (right), of Boonton, N. J., confers with his officers of a tank unit. (Left to right): Lieut. Warren F. Taylor of Philadelphia, Pa., Warrant Officer (jg) Clarence L. Godbold of Yonkers, N. Y., Lieut. Leonard P. Taylor of Atlanta, Ga., and Maj. Edward W. Reynolds of Lincoln, Neb.

Frenchman Calls Negro Soldiers the Only True Americans; His Wife Kisses Three

Call—Kansas City, Mo.
12-8-44

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR,
ANP WAR CORRESPONDENT

PARIS. — (ANP) — While talking to a Frenchman and his wife who were congratulating me on my success in the William Grant Still concert here, he told me that when France was liberated his wife told him that she must kiss an American.

The Frenchman told her that he would agree to her request under one condition. She must kiss an American Negro soldier, because he is the only true American. His wife obeyed, he said. Instead of kissing one, she kissed three American Negro soldiers, the husband confided.

Negro Tank Crew In Action at Metz

WITH THE THIRD U. S. ARMY IN THE METZ AREA

SPEARHEADING a task force of the 26th "Yankee" Division, the all-Negro 761st tank battalion now in action with the U. S. Army captured four important towns, secured two bridge crossings and successfully battered its way through the strongly defended Forest de Bride.

The Negro tankmen went into action after the 26th Division captured Metz, which never before fell to direct assault in modern times. They lunged into the battle with such ferocity and courage that Capt. Irwin McHenry of Leavenworth, Kansas, received the nickname of "The Bronze Devil." Staff Sergeant Reuben Rivers of Tecumseh, Okla., received the Silver Star for routing nearly 300 Germans. A dozen members of the medical detachment were cited for heroism under fire.

A captured German officer, after having had a taste of the Negro tankmen and their work said: "So far as fighting is concerned, I have never before seen such bravery except once before, and that was on the Russian front." It came when a German rocket gun knocked out a tank of the Negro unit. The crew dismounted, brought out the .50 calibre and .30 calibre machine-guns, crawled under their tanks for protection, and continued to blast away at the enemy.

Sgt. Warren G. H. Creecy, of Corpus Christi, Texas, a tank commander, climbed up on the rear of his tank which had been immobilized by anti-tank fire, and held an enemy force at bay with his own anti-aircraft gun, while protecting the advance of an infantry group.

Later in the action a tank commanded by Cpl. Dennis A. Osby was hit and caught fire. He and his crewmen dismounted through the escape hatch and ducked into a ditch. Cpl. Osby noticed one man, Pvt. Archie Fletcher, was missing. He crawled back, entered the flaming tank, and rescued Pvt. Fletcher whose feet were tangled in an ammunition belt.

For this action Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton personally commended the men.

The unit moved out from Athianville for its first action at 6 o'clock on the morning of Nov. 8, as part of a task force, which was operating in two columns. Athianville is approximately 14 miles east of Nancy. This task force consisted of tank destroyers, infantry, engineers and medics, with units of the Negro tank battalion. It was divided into two columns, with their ultimate objective being a town some 20 miles away, beyond the edge of the dense Forest de Bride.

The two columns moved out for the attack, and in short order captured Vic-sur-Seille and Monyenvic, two strongly defended towns which skirted a German rail supply route leading from the Saar Basin. They secured crossings over two canals. These towns were some fifteen to eighteen miles east of Nancy and constituted the German frontline defenses at that point.

After securing these two towns, the next tasks was to move on to Morville, a town some four miles beyond Vic-sur-Seille. Splitting up here, one column moved toward Morville for the attack.

They ran into the most stubborn opposition of the drive, for here the Germans had constructed a two-mile-long anti-tank ditch in anticipation of the offensive. They had re-enforced this tank barrier with staggered concrete pill-boxes, completely covered with earth, and with rocket launchers and bazooka teams dug in in strength.

After passing Morville, which they had practically destroyed, the columns moved on to Hamport, four miles farther east.

Company A, commanded by Capt. Dave Williams, of Pittsburgh, Pa., helped to obliterate and capture Chateau-Salins, the first major town east of Nancy. The task of the 761st in its first battle action was all the more difficult because it was faced by the members of a German Officer Candidate School of Artillery at Marshal, who fired heavy concentrations at the tanks during the entire engagement.

Following this, Company A also moved to Hamport. It was during these engagements that Staff Sergeant Rivers began to earn his spurs, for in almost every instance his tank was the first to enter a town and he was always in the thickest of the fight.

T/4 George McKenney, of Atlanta, Ga., member of a Fifth Army Medical Unit, in Italy, who on November 10, when this sector was less than a mile from the front, delivered the child lying in its mother's arms.

Soldier Delivers Baby for Italian Mom; He's 'Dr.' Now

By DANIEL A. PAYNE

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY—T/4 George H. McKenney, Atlanta, Ga., ranks among the most popular soldiers in Italy. I paid him a visit this week and things proved even more exciting than I had heard.

It all happened because he delivered a baby for an Italian woman. Now there is not an ailment in the little community that is not brought to him.

Women in nearby communities, anticipating an immediate visit from the stork, have sought to date him for future assistance.

As we walked along a stone pathway, en route to pay a visit to young George McKenney (because the parents have named the baby after the soldier), a number of natives stopped George and told him of their troubles.

One woman brushed all others aside and thrust her baby into his arms. An old man hobbled to his side seeking aid and little children along the roadside yelled, "George O." That is what they call him.

We hurried to the house where George O had brought a baby into the world and as we edged our way forward, Jerry sent mail (artillery fire) into the sides of the mountain just above us. We paid little attention as we listened to our hero tell his story:

"There was nothing heroic about what I did," the modest soldier stated. "We were called upon for help and I happened to answer the call. Any man would have done just as well or better."

"Hi, Doctor," the Men Yell

The men along the road yelled out, "Hi, Doctor," for that is what they call him since his recent intrusion upon the medical profession. He waved a timid hand to them and continued his explanation:

"It was 2 o'clock in the morning when I reached the house. I did not know exactly what had happened so I rushed in. The mother was already in the midst of childbirth. I fell in and did the best I could and that happened to be enough."

The mother is already up and doing her household chores. The baby is doing fine. George O is thinking about his wife and baby back in Atlanta.

Medics Doing Fine Work In Belgium

WITH THE FIRST U. S. ARMY IN BELGIUM—There are four companies of colored ambulance drivers attached to a medical battalion, which are now doing the same tremendous job with the First Army in Belgium which they did while back in France, after their landing on a Normandy beachhead on June 29, and crossing the Belgian border on September 14.

A colored warrant officer, junior grade, Gregory A. Guilford, 24 south 17th street, East Orange, New Jersey, is the battalion adjutant.

These four companies are handling the evacuations for the First Army, and taking the patients back to hospitals of the Advanced Section Communications Zone, and the battalion is the farthest forward of the colored units with the First Army.

Guerrilla Band Leader Is Idol Of Leyte Isles

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(U. S. War Correspondent, representing the NNPA and the Philadelphia TRIBUNE)
Copyright: Reproduction Prohibited

ON AN ISLAND NORTHEAST OF LEYTE, November 14, (by Cable)—Fighting with the fierceness of an enraged animal is an American colored leader of a Filippino guerilla band. He is one of the big stories of the Pacific War.

His deeds and those of the ragged men he leads have spread among American troops like wildfire. The exact whereabouts of the giant Negro is a military secret. However, this correspondent has been granted permission to find and join him.

My search should be well worth while, for what Livingstone meant to the natives of Africa, this Negro means to the people of these islands. As the news of Livingstone was spread around the world, so should the deeds of this man be made known.

He is worth walking across a continent to find and every attempt will be made to find him.

Nazis Urge Our GI's to Desert

Why Fight? German Leaflet Asks 92nd

CARTER REPLACED

Chaplain Douglas Hall Promoted to Captain

By MAX JOHNSON
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY (By Cable, Censored) — Chaplain Douglas F. Hall, former AFRO staff writer now serving with the 92nd Division on this Fifth Army front, has been promoted to the rank of captain, according to an announcement here this week.

Chaplain Hall entered the service last December, was assigned to a regiment in the 92nd in February, and came overseas last August. He has since been serving with his regiment in combat.

Prior to joining the army, he wrote a column, "Seen from My Window," for the AFRO and did other staff work. He married before being shipped overseas.

Replaces Art Carter

Replacing the AFRO's Art Carter, now en route home, I arrived at the 92nd Division headquarters on Wednesday, following a plane hop from the Seventh Army front in Eastern France and an additional ride by jeep through cold rainstorms which occur almost daily in this area of Italy.

Among the first to greet me in joining this outfit was Capt. Leroy Clay of Baltimore, a long-time friend, who holds the divisional job of assistant executive officer and is the only officer of his race other than the ranking chaplain, Lt. Col. Louis J. Beasley, working as attache to the staff of Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, 92nd commander.

"Old Home Week"

Subsequent introductions to the personnel of some of the divisional units, including recently attached replacements, made joining the 92nd seem like "Old Home Week," since I found here many officers and men whom I accompanied overseas.

Among those in that category were Majors James O. Fowler, 121 U Street, Northwest, West Point graduate; George P. Lawrence, 1336 Rigbs Street, Northwest, and Capt. Frederick Davison, 3107 Eleventh Street, nw., all of Washington.

The Nazis on this front are repeating their former procedure of dropping propaganda leaflets on the 92nd frontline troops.

The latest one this week asks the men what they are fighting for and why they should risk death when loved ones at home are waiting for them.

Picturing two colored babies, the leaflet states that these children want "daddy home safe" and adds that comfortable camps with full facilities for communicating with their families in America await colored soldiers who desert.

I have heard no reports of desertion. Activity is otherwise quiet on the front and is limited to patrols.

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Two Divisions Kept Shooting

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent

(Representing the ATLANTA DAILY WORLD and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)
(Copyright — Reproduction prohibited)

12-2-44

ORMOC BAY SECTOR, PHILIPPINES — By Courier —Within rifle range of the Ormoc sector is stationed an all-Negro railhead unit servicing the 24th and 1st Calvary divisions, infantry forces of the 10th Corps operating in southeast Leyte.

Commanding the unit is First Lt. Clarence A. Laws, former executive secretary of the Urban League in New Orleans. Other officers include Second Lts. Leon G. Weston, Columbia, South Carolina; Berry Slater of Los Angeles; and Joseph Kimbrough of Chicago. All are graduates of the Officers Candidate School, Brisbane, Australia.

Receiving, breaking down, and supplying rations to two divisions, plus the administration of another Negro service unit is the all-important mission performed by these troops. Immediately behind the lines, work has often been retarted by bombing and long range artillery. The supply dump holds high priority on the enemy list of installations "to be immediately demolished."

12-2-44

NO CASUALTIES

Lt. Weston admitted that the work "has its moments" of exciting experiences, but the unit has not suffered any casualties. Men live in huts evacuated by natives who fled to the mountains when the enemy occupied Leyte. Surrounding the bivouac are countless acres of rice. Filipinoes work these fields in the midst of shell fire.

Frontline observation proved conclusively that infantry men hunger for hot bread, fruits, canned vegetables, and beef not of the bully variety. And having the highest priority on supplies, this foodstuff is rushed forward.

12-2-44

The first night with the units revealed several important items. Tons of foodstuff arrive periodically and a type of inventory and daily record must be kept. However, such work is not strange to these men, sixty percent of them having served overseas for 32 months.

As Lt. Slater explained it is all a matter of organization. To hear various titles is amusing. for instance:

ALL HAVE TITLES

Vice president in charge of labor coordination, Platoon S. Sgt. Louis Sizemore, of Jersey City, New Jersey.

Vice president in charge of checkers, Sgt. A. W. Ingram of Detroit, Mich.

Atlanta Daily World

Chafe At Bits As News Of Metz Fall Is Revealed

Atlanta, Ga.

12-12-44

Atlanta Chaplain Says Morale Is At High Peak

WITH THE U. S. THIRD ARMY IN FRANCE — The first U. S. tank destroyer battalion made up of Negro soldiers has already seen action with Major General Harry L. Twaddle's tough 95th Infantry Division, which figured in the capture of the German fortress city of Metz.

12-12-44

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 3525 Forrest Avenue, Lansing, Michigan and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its trek from the Normandy Penninsula, the day prior to the fall of Metz. It had been awaiting orders to move to the front since October 8, when it landed in France.

ACTIVATED IN COLORADO

The tank destroyer battalion was activated at Camp Carson, Colorado, on July 25, 1942, and received its training there and at Camp Bowie, Texas, before it moved to Camp Hood, Texas, the home of battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In August, 1944, the unit landed in England, and continued training while it awaited the call to action.

The battalion took its place with front line troops in the Metz area, not far from the sector in which the all-Negro Tank Battalion is fighting.

12-12-44

Well-equipped for battle and keen for action, members of the unit exhibited great eagerness to close with the enemy. They chafed at the bits as the news of the fall of Metz reached battalion headquarters soon after their arrival in the area. According to Chaplain (Captain) Harvey E. Johnson, of Atlanta, Georgia, the morale is at a high peak, and Lieutenant Colonel Pritchard said: "I believe that the men are ready."

HIGH RANGE SCORE

12-12-44

Typical of the crews and their aptness for their weapons is the range score turned in by the crew of gun commander, Sergeant Robert C. Garrett, of Route 1, Box 19, Tarboro, N orth Carolina. In range tests his crew did not miss the direct fire target a single time with the 3-inch anti-tank gun, which their vehicle mounts, in addition to its .50 calibre machineguns. Crews are composed of ten men, including the gun commander.

It is a "towed" destroyer unit, meaning that the big AT guns are mounted on a separate chassis, with the M-8 half-track serving as the prime mover.

The staff of the unit includes Negro officers, Captain Thomas M. Campbell, Jr., of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, son of the noted agricultural expert of the Institute, who serves as battalion surgeon; Chaplain (Captain) Harvey E. Johnson, 568 Auburn Avenue, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia and First Lieutenant Robert S. Williams, of 1909 Fourth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., a Howard University product who is the battalion reconnaissance officer.

12-12-44

Other officers of the staff are Major LeRoy H. Sample of Mt. Clemens, Michigan, executive officer; Captain Charles W. Ogelsby, of Bryn Mawr, Pennsylvania, S-2; Captain Robert J. O'Leary, of Glenburn, North Dakota, S-3; Captain Charles J. Richard, Okla.; Captain Gordon P. Maloche, of Santa Barbara, California, S-4.

NEGRO STAFF OFFICERS

The all-Negro staffs of the various companies are composed of the following officers:

Headquarters Company — Commander: Captain James H. Carr, 624 Gresham Place, N. W., Washington, D. C.; Liaison; First Lieutenant Ormonde Forte, Jr., Cleveland, Ohio; Public Relations and Special Services Officer; First Lt. Leonard I. Burch, 5724 South Parkway Avenue, Chicago, Ill.; Other officers: First Lt. Serrea S. Nelson, 3014 R. Street, Omaha, Nebr., First Lt. Joseph L. Keeby, Chicago, Ill., First Lt. Claude W. Ramsey, Ypsilanti, Mich.; Second Lt. Andrew J. Favors, 1339 South May Street, Philadelphia, Pa.; Two warrant officers complete the staff of this company; WOJG Arntie E. Hollis, of San Marcos, Texas and WOJG Raymond Lamb, of Detroit, Mich. Second Lt. Preston Helm, Jr., 518 Browning Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Company A — Comander: Captain Beauregard King, born into the Army at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and a veteran of 15 years Regular Army service with the 24th and 25th Infantry regiments. Other officers: First Lt. Milton B. Deas, 4435 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill.; First Lt. Charles Robinson of Long Beach, Cal., First Lt. Edward J. Cary, Jr., 2118 Montgall Avenue, Kansas City, Mo., and Second Lt. Lloyd Gregory of 98 Morningside Avenue, New York City.

12-12-44

Company B.—Commander: Captain Robert L. Finley of 6540 Stanford Avenue, Detroit, Mich.; Other officers: First Lt. Raymond H. Powell, 437 Breadon St., Youngstown, Ohio, First Lt. Ulysees W. Watkins of Huntsville, Texas, First Lt. Charles J. Nelson, 26 Wilkes St., Battle Creek, Mich., and Second Lt. Forrest A. Walker of 2420 North Sherman St., Kansas City, Mo.

Company C — Commander: First Lt. Charles L. Thomas of 5877 Beechwood Avenue, Detroit, Mich.; Other officers; First Lt. George Mitchell of 3446 Magnolia Street, New Orleans, La.; First Lt. Thomas H. Shaw, 902 Fayetteville St., Durham, N. C.; First Lt. Walter S. Smith, 410 Parallel Avenue, Los Angeles, Cal., and First Lt. Floyd J. Stallings, also of Los Angeles.

There are several veterans among the enlisted personnel who have had long periods of Regular Army service. Among them, the oldest in service is First Sergeant Gordon Brown, 1132 High Street, Montgomery, West Va., who has seen 27 years in the Army.

12-12-44

30 Men Under Lieutenant King Prove Experts

Atlanta Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Claim No Soldiers In Army Better Than This Unit

12-31-44

By LT. JOHN MACAULEY

WASHINGTON-It was the fitfh night after the initial American attack on the Philippines,. Thirty Negro soldiers--soggy with w e t and fatigue--crouched on their rain-filled foxholes n e a r Palo with the water up above their chests.

Within the last two hours, while the rain pelted down incessantly they had helped beat off three Japanese attacks. And now, as the storm dribbled to a stop, the Japanese were trying a different maneuver. They were infiltrating into Palo on the opposite side of t h e American fortifications. There w a s almost no defense against this sort of thing.

The Japanese were really close now. Most of the soldiers were holding their fire, for firing from a foxhole gives away ones' position. O n e of the Negro troops whispered softly to the young white lieutenants in charge of the beleaguered unit:

"Lieutenant King," he muttered "should I fire when I see one of those——?

12-31-44

Wisley, King didn't answer.

Then came another voice, a bit louder, more insistent: 'Lieutenant King--" "I'm hit, Lieutenant King--" "Help Lieutenant King."

Second Lieutenant Dewey King, TC-24 year-old, 200 pound former freshman tackle from Auburn and Mobile, Ala., could take it no longer. He raised his head slightly and peered into the darkness around him, seeking the wounded man.

NEAR PERFECT MIMICRY

"What--" he whispered, and a billet tore through the sandbag on the brim of his foxhole, a fraction of an inch his head. He ducked and held his tongue the rest of the night. The anguished cries had come not from his own men, but f r o m the Japanese! Their mimicry was nearly perfect Too prefect, perhaps, since most of the Negro troops in the unit

12-31-44

Macauley first met the Negro representative with the invading force. "Obviously," he wrote "the coming operation was to be no soft touch for this Liberty. This was learned by merely observing the New Guinea port for soldiers who came aboard. There At that time, nel- was an ack-ack unit which would nor the men knew was an ack-ack unit, which would were from Northern cities- a n d in serving the dinner in the beautiful Southern accents were a bit at a fully decorated dining room of the premium. home were Mesdames J. S. Downs. The 30 Negro soldiers were all ship and its gallant crew and duck drivers, a n d these chaf- Navy armed guard, is told graphifeurs of seagoing trucks had cally by Lieut. John Macauley, joined the invasion on the first ship left a New Guinea port for to Philippines. At

Still Seek Negro Leader Of Guerrilla Band In Philippines

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
Representing the Journal and Guide and the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden.)

LEYTE BEACH, Philippines —The exact whereabouts of Capt. Frank Merith, giant American Negro leader of a Filipino guerilla band, is still a military secret, but this correspondent is pushing the search for him.

The guerrillas on Samar continue to fight the enemy. Armed with bolos, knives, even sticks —these natives, many clad in rags, ferociously defend the be one of the first in the area, one of the first Army units to be relied on for defense against Japanese bombing. Another was an ordnance outfit which would keep replacing vital equipment. There were 30 Negro duck drivers. It was said they would be the first troops off the ship—"

MACAULEY MEETS KING

Later, on Attack Day, Macauley met Lieut. King, the U. S. Maritime Service training center "shavetail" who was in charge of the eight ducks, the amphibious trucks used for carrying small amounts of cargo from ship to shore, up the beach and to combat troops.

"There are duck drivers and duck drivers," he wrote that day, "but the 30 colored boys now under King's command who trained as both drivers and mechanics are experts in their line. They were especially chosen for ability cleanliness and intelligence. They are proud Negroes and King has kept them that way. Both King and his boys were untried in combat until this afternoon, but each day during this trip, King has gone after to feel his boys they must not let him down. Once one of them answered.

"Don't worry sir. We'd all follow you to Manila and back again!" 12-31-44

Later in the day, when the Liberty ship was being unloaded and the duck crews were rushing ammunition to the front, Macauley wrote:

"King and his boys have spent the entire day going in and out of the small town of Palo. Palo has already fallen, but Jap snipers have made it hot for the unarmed ducsk. Still he kept leading them in and not one of his men has hesitated.

"The shadows are lengthening across the water as the correspondent (Macauley), King and his driver and mechanic make their way towards the beach. The bucking of the duck over the waves makes it difficult for the correspondent to beat out his story on his typewriter which he is holding on his knees. We are on our way to spend the night ashore. King's round, sweaty and begrinned face is beaming. The night to come has no terrors for him. His main fear has been stilled; his men have stood their 1st fire, stood it very well.

NONE BETTER 12-31-44

"By damn!!," he says, "There ain't no soldiers in this man's Army that kin do better than mah boys."

Three days later, when the unloading of the Liberty ship was almost completed, Macauley wrote:

'Last night about 6:15 we found a small sandy beach and decided to spend the night there. King and his driver pulled well above the water mark and signaled the other ducks in. The enlisted men began to dig their foxholes. It was getting dark and they were working fast. An ordnance officer, Captain H. W. Richardson, whose mother lives at 219 Elm St. Mansfield, Mass., and who had hitched a ride with us, suggested that instead of establishing our own perimeter we might do well to find someone else who had been in the region more than a few minute. 12-31-44

'King, always coniderate of his

"King, always considerate of his foxholes, demurred. At the moment a bullet hit the side of a duck and went singing out over the water. This decided him. We moved up the beach about 50 yards and stumbled right into a camp that was completed blacked out. The men were having coffee. It tasted delicious. The major in charge of the camp told us we could bed down for the night whenever we could find a clear space of ground near aslit trench. The colored enlisted men went down on the beach to dig their own holes.

NO SLEEP ALL NIGHT

"But there was no sleep all night. 12-31-44

Right after breakfast, five Japanese planes attacked the convoy. One of the planes, hit by flak, went out of control and landed on the deck of a nearby vessel. The ship turned turtle and sank. Another dived straight for the Liberty ship, but a 19-year-old seaman first class remained at his gun and kept shooting at the plane even when its wing hit the edge of the sailor's tub and flung hot metal into his torso and face. The plane crashed into the ocean and exploded Macauley and one of the duck drivers Corp. Ray Peoples, of Cleveland, Ohio, rushed the wounded youth to a beach dressing station.

That night, while King's unit staved off attacks from their water-filled foxholes, the Japanese tried the mimicry trick. It failed however, and the Japanese crept closer.

"They were less than 20 yards away." Macauley wrote, "Sometimes our soldiers would fire at them-more often not. One of the duck drivers next to the correspondent, a big rangy ex-Golden boxer named Karl Mahone, took careful aim and fired. There was a Jap scuttling past on the dead run right in front of us. A fusillade of bullets must have been hitting all around him. He zigzagged inward and we saw his arm fly back and forward.

"There was a blinding flash as he hurled the hand grenade into a dump of over 200 boxes containing 105 and 155 howitzer shells 40 and 30 mm. shelis. The Jap could not have survived the explosion. The blast from the first box of ammunition blew the correspondent's shirt off as if it were tissue paper. Then it really started. 12-31-44

HORROR OF WAITING

"There would be the deep-throated crackle of 20mm. amspangle the sky in all directions. munition and tracer would The resounding bank of 40 mm. shells the roar of 105 howitzer shells ,the earth-shaking crash of the 155s turned the night into a horror of waiting 50 feet away, of wondering whether too much ammunition was going to blow up But the small stuff kept going off in salvoos while the big shells seemed to go off one at a time. We dug our faces into the mud and prayed. And how we prayed! Near the correspondent a colored youth was mumbling the Lord's Prayer. We all ran the gamut of every religious plea we had never learnedd."

It was not all prayer and defensive fighting, however. The next day on other occasions, the duck drivers paid off the Japs for that night. One such occasion arose when Macauley was writing his dispatch on the ruined vafanda of the town grammar school in Palo. This shed was used as the assembling place for the duck drivers in carrying their ammunition up to the front.

"Groups or doughboys from this unit are patroling the village streets and searching every house as often as possible. A Jap runs right across in front of the corsrespondent with a party of yelling Yanks in pursuit. One of the colored duck drivers, T/5 Pedro Croughter, runs alongside the Nip and puts three carbine bullets in him. Before the Jap has been on the ground three seconds he is riddled with tommy gun M-1 and carbine shells.. Later the Filipinos flushed another soldier of the Emperor from under a house. American rifle fire killed him." 12-31-44

In concluding his account of the unit's operations, Macauley wrote:

"Those Negroes had stood like the Rock of Gibraltar-Cpl. James Brown, 1015 N. Caroline St., Baltimore, Md.; Sgt. Osuah Aceptin 142 Ashton St., Los Angeles, Cal; Pfc. Lillean F. Carter, Farmingdale, N. J.; Cpl. Karl Mahone, 2457 Delaware St., Gary, Ind.; Cpl. James A. Johnson, 31 Plainsfield Ave.; Scotch Plains, N. J.; Cpl. Jos. C. Williamson, Jackson, Miss.; Cpl. Eminir B. Hawkins, 1405 North 18th St. Philadelphia, Pa.; Cpl. James A. Ross, 56 Kenilworth St., Orange, N. J.; Pfc. Jas. Williams, Baton Rouge, La.; Cpl. Karrie Davis, Route 2, Box 63, Vamville, S. C.; Cpl. Zachariah Brinkley, 214 Reid St. Elizabeth, N. J.; Cpl. Paul Wright 2217 East 76th St., Cleveland, O.; Cpl. Jas. S. Wells, 161 North 37th St., Philadelphia, Pa.; Cpl. Pedro Croughter, 49 Veronnica Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Cpl. Judge Paterson, 162 Oakwood Pl., Orange, N. J.; Sgt. William O. Jenkins, RFD 3, Box, Henderson Tenn. Cpl Philip Lee, Apt. 2, 501 Hendric St. Detroit, Mich.; Sgt. Tommy L. Thorpe, 209 Madison St., Macon, Ga.; Sgt. William Thorpe, 662 E. Ferry Ave., Detfoit, Mich.; Cpl. George E Hope, 259 Taylor Ave. Columbus, O.; Sgt. Lucius Smith, 255 Cole Alley, Memphis, Tenn.; Pvt. Eddie Ford, Route 1, Box 141A, Caledonia, Miss.; and Cpl. Jas. K. Johnson. 1424 New Jersey Ave., N. W. Washington, D. C. They had come through a first and second night of harrowing combat like veterans."

And in describing the Liberty ship's departure, five days after it arrival and two days after its whole crew had helped unload the freighter's military cargo in less than three days, he wrote:

'At sea the ship is riding out the storm. She should ride it out; she is, in seamen's parlance, "a lady," however ugly and battered. And to whom she will be a great vessel-not great in the individual sense of the ARC ROYAL, the ENTERPRISE, the BOISE, but in the new tradition of steel men on steel freighters, which began when the US Merchant Marine became the first American service to enter World War II, when a man took pen in hand and signed the Lend-Lease bill--'Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Captain Merith, it was told the writer, was chosen as one of the leaders. Under the Negro and others, their valor reaches daily new heights. 12-9-44

The story goes that Capt. Merith has been in the Philippines for many years, making his home on Samar. He married a native woman and owned property. The enemy caught him as well as the others. The population was stripped bare of food. The population Negro was attached to General MacArthur's command. Every three out of five Fil-

TAKE RIFLES FROM JAPS

Few rifles were taken from the Japs. And American planes dropped some ammunition. American submarines smuggled equipment in. However, because of the intenseness of the operations, all has been too little.

The enemy has reached a maximum of ruthlessness on Samar. The town was burned. The enemy its meagrerre resources.

Perhaps the heaviest penalty of all was that the Japs took away the food. The population is miserably from malnutrition. Only since American troops entered have food and medical supplies begun to pour in. Five doctors and one dentist are presently at work patching up the ills of the populace. Sores, blisters, malarial cases, pneumonia — these are only a few of the items which harass the population.

grows in the trees — all fought. It has and continues rillas are lacking in modern equipment. 12-9-44

Few rifles were taken from the Japs. And American planes dropped some ammunition. American submarines smuggled equipment in. However, because of the intenseness of the operations, all has been too little.

The enemy has reached a maximum of ruthlessness on Samar. The town was burned. The enemy its meagrerre resources.

Perhaps the heaviest penalty of all was that the Japs took away the food. The population is miserably from malnutrition. Only since American troops entered have food and medical supplies begun to pour in. Five doctors and one dentist are presently at work patching up the ills of the populace. Sores, blisters, malarial cases, pneumonia — these are only a few of the items which harass the population.

Captain Merith, it was told the writer, was chosen as one of the leaders. Under the Negro and others, their valor reaches daily new heights. 12-9-44

The story goes that Capt. Merith has been in the Philippines for many years, making his home on Samar. He married a native woman and owned property. The enemy caught him as well as the others. The population was stripped bare of food. The population Negro was attached to General MacArthur's command. Every three out of five Fil-

Is worth walking a continent to find. Every attempt will be made to find him.

Capt. Merith is the story. He is very good fighter too."

good man—our friend. And he is And many have said, "Ah, he is or know of Captain Merith. pinos questioned on Leyte know

White and Colored Soldiers Work in Harmony In Same Unit Over in France

Call — Kansas City, Mo.
11-24-44

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

(ANP War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.—(ANP) —I was immensely pleased and gratified when I visited one of the strangest units ever to come under my notice on the western front, called "quarter master effects company" and composed approximately of an even number of white and colored soldiers who work and live like a large family.

I woull not have known of this outfit had I not paid a visit to the "Silhouette" in Paris, a charming little cabaret on Rue-Notre-Dam-de-Lorette where I met Pvts. Ed Warner of East Chicago, Ind., and Conway Butler from New Orleans. Those two GI's presented an air of happiness and contentment, and their eyes were sparkling like the champagne cocktail they were sipping. They asked me to have a drink with them which I readily accepted.

"How are they treating you? I asked. "Swell" said these boys. Here Warner interjected: "We couldn't expect anything better. I am the driver for our commanding officer, Major MaCormick, and I can truthfully say that he makes no distinction in the company." With this information I decided to visit the company the very next day and see for myself.

Greeted by Major 11-24-44

I met Major R. R. MaCormick from Florida who was evidently pleased to see me and tell me about his work and his men. He said that his primary function was the efficient execution of the important task assigned him and secondly, he was interested in the welfare and happiness of each man in his company.

I had lunch with the officers . . Capt. Joseph Minetti from New York who is in charge of the warehouse; Capt. Henry H. Beck from Oshkosh, Wis., Capt. W. Freeman Sharp Jr.; Lt. S. Maurice Pool, Lt. Joseph Vogl from New York City, and 2nd Lt. Thomas F. Flannery from Springfield, Mass.: who is in charge of the colored soldiers in the outfit. All of these officers have expressed sincerely their pleasure of their association with this mixed team.

"We exercise justice in small things, and would avoid all cause of offense, not by seeking merely to please all, but to give all their due." These were the words Capt. Minetti said to me. Capt. Henry Beck said there is always an amicable adjustment of disputes if and amicable adjustment of disputes if there are any. At lunch I saw the men sitting together full of geniality, humor, conversation, and cheerfulness of nature which make men agreeable.

Those people who repeatedly say that white and colored soldiers cannot associate amicably are creating a distortion of right and justice, by imputing defects of character on the part of the Negro. Here is another unit that has given the lie to such unjust propaganda.

Great Injustice 11-24-44

The greatest injustice one can do to any honest man or race is to call his probity in question. The quicker the practice of this ludicrous mischief is dispensed with, postwar conditions in America would serve out among the two races in the most peaceful manner without resorting to violence.

This organization is charged with the responsibility of receiving and storing. In addition, it must make proper disposition of personal effects of all US personnel and people subject to military law in the ETO. For example, those wounded in action, missing, deceased and prisoners of war.

When a soldier is ill in the hospital and becomes well again, the executive department of the hospital communicates with the effects office and the personal belongings of the soldier are returned to him. If he is deceased, his effects are sent to Kansas City to be handed over to his next-of-kin.

The operation of this unit is extremely interesting. All effects are handled in the same manner whether it be a general or a private. If for example Gen. Eisenhower were taken prisoner, he would not have any priority over Ed Warner. Everyone takes as much interest in the material he handles as if it were his personal belongings.

Any matter pertaining to military information is extricated from the effects. Also pornographic literature, obscene pictures and anything that would mar the good memory of the soldier.

Honesty combined with integrity and dignity of character are the outstanding features of this QM effects unit. The colored soldiers are the guards and upon them is placed an obligation of trust in the execution of their duty.

Must Be Firm 11-24-44

They must be firm, constant and alert during the 24 hours that they are on duty. When the colored soldiers were taken into the service, they were given a special lecture as to the importance of their task. A brigadier general once visited the warehouse and was not properly identified, and he was refused admission by the colored guard.

These are the names of the colored boys in the outfit: Sgt. A. G. Newton from Manhattan, Kas., is in charge of the colored soldiers. Sgt. Marvin A. Wortham, Cpl. Charles Albertson, Philadelphia; Cpl. W. Earl Grimes, Detroit; Cpl. Robert Jones, Palm Beach, Fla.; Cpl. Numa Barnabe, Opelousas, La., and Pfc. A. Richie Carter, Houston, who writes more love letters than any other member in the company. Here is the list of the Pfcs.: Clarence Domingues, New Orleans; Robert Franklin, Arizona; James Hennings, St. Louis; F. Julius Lissimore, Valdesta, Ga.; Ike Perry, Atlanta; W. John Robertson, Cleveland; A. Joseph Willis, Atlanta, and Robert Winter, Jacksonville, Fla. 11-24-44

Here is the list of the Pvts.: Frank Collier, Houston; Trellie Culbreath, Monroe, Ga.; Robert L. Giddins, Houston; N. Ambrose Johnson, West Virginia; Walter Latham, Kingston, N. C.; Joseph Lebo, Nantucket, Mass.; James Maxwell, Savannah, William McCall, North Carolina; A. Arthur Nash, Hope, Ark.; Brazee Robinson, Miami; L. Herbert Sanders, St. Petersburg, Fla., and William Wilkerson, Chicago.

Priority Ranks Second Only To The Air Corps

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
12-5-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN

(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World And NNPA)
(Copyright — Reproduction prohibited)

LEYTE BEACH, PHILIPPINES — By Courier — The Pacific during recent months. His shifting of levers and gears plus the handling of automatic weapon have made him one of the essentials. His priority ranks second only to the Air Corps. His vehicles are among the primary targets for enemy aircraft.

Interested notice was taken of him during the Biak campaign. Prior to that time his vehicles were used fundamentally as caravans of supply. At Biak the DUKWS ranked equally with amphtracks, and together they compose the first assault wave.

In the present operation here, the DUKW is as familiar as the jeep. And it is used not only as a conveyor for personnel, but ammunition, wounded, and artillery field pieces.

FRESH UNIT HERE.

Representative of the amphibious quartermasters here is a unit relatively fresh from the States. In the Leyte operation they helped form the first wave. Since the initial days of the Philippine campaign, their service "has been inestimable." An official close to MacArthur's headquarters chose to Churchillize his praise: "Never have so few been quite so important in their capacity."

12-5-44

When elements of three divisions hit Leyte beach, as is true with past operations, they spread in a thin layer parallel with the water line. This move prefaced the assault inland. Enemy forces were holding high grounds which served as a backdrop for the beach. Our forward elements were speedily flung from the main base of supply.

Artillery had ripped bridges along the beachhead. This condition left it impossible for heavy trucks to journey to the front. DUKWS and amphtracks could make it with relatives ease. Relative because there remained, at least for a time, enemy aircraft making stabs at our chipping, and also, Japanese mortars vainly attempting harassing on the beach. Loping DUKWS ran into both, even more so as the supply lines lengthened.

Speared away in a semi-dispersal area is located the mentioned units. Negro drivers, caked thickly by the powder-like dust of Leyte, and their seasoned seagoing trucks live like husband and wife. The units stand alerted around the clock. The call can come at 1 p. m., or a. m., and delay can mean delay in the advance since these men are commissioned to roll the ammo forward. 12-5-44

DESCRIBES CAMP

Our visit to the unit showed conclusively that life around the camp is rugged, repulsive, revigorating. Rugged because bombs fall often in and around the bivouav. Repulsive, because in the advance echelon the stench of decayed bodies is discernible. Revigorating, because of the dangerous living.

Technician Fifth Leon Deramus, of Montgomery, Alabama, almost had to return to the post on a prayer. Making one of the lonely and long trips to the lines, he encountered artillery fire. Whether it was enemy or friendly was little concern, Deramus bailed out. He hung to the side of the tossing vehicle. Shells fell close. Recalling the experience, Deramus said:

"I couldn't tell directly where the first was coming from. I could hear it whistling overhead. There was little to do but jump. And jump I did. I clung to the side of the truck until the firing stopped. "It would have been funny had we been hit, I would have been stranded, I guess."

T/5 Harold Breden, of Trenton, N. J., didn't fare as well. Shrapnel caught the duck and left the body of the vehicle resembling a sieve. Twenty-six holes were later found in the DUKW. Breden was blown out. However, he was able to bring her in.

TWO CASUALTIES 12-5-44

Theer have been but two casualties in the unit up to date. Both minor. The total is incredible in view of enemy harassing raids nightly. Considering the overall picture the general casualty rate is low. Night after night the planes come, and remain until daylight. Many of us are of the belief that the enemy has tried everything in the book, and succeeded at many in penetrating our aerial defenses.

In this one unit there are more than fifty vehicles, and two-thirds must be kept in running condition at all times. Except for the facing of enemy fire, this presents a difficult task. T/Sgt. Earl R. Williams, Michigan City, Ind., and T/4 Richard Page, of Anderson, Ind., explained:

Under them are thirteen mechanics who must pull wheels, repack bearings, and periodically pull the motors for repair. The salt water makes the job doubly hard. One of the mechanics has devised a new method of greasing the wheels which might "change the whole procedure and increase the speed of servicing." The plan is at present in use.

STAY ON SCHEDULE 12-5-44

Despite the prevalent hell and high water, missions are completed on schedule time. Completed by drivers like Tech. Fifths Loyal J. Spotser, William Mullins, and James C. Gray, all of Chicago. Tech Fourth Carl Jeffries, and Tech Fifth Fernandus Hall, of Pittsburgh. Tech Fifths James R. Tiller and Arthur L. Savage; and Sgt. Alfred L. Hall, of Philadelphia. Pvt. Henry A. Session of Morganfield, Kentucky.

From Texas and making the trip safely to the Philippines, and driving "hell for leather" are Pfc Griffis Hillis, Naples; Cpl. George T. Winn, Austin; Tech 5 Marcus Smith, Livingston; Tech 5 William V. Cade of Waxahachie.

From Cleveland: Pvt. John E. Cary, Pfc William A. Jones, and Tech 5 Douglas Tucker. Sgt. Louis Rozier, of Lockland; S/Sgt. Ernest Q. Shern, Dayton; and Tech James Marshall, of Cincinnati.

Tech 5 Henry R. Artis and Pvt. Eugene H. Johns, of Norfolk, Virginia. These men look as rugged as hot and tired, scared their "boats," and at the present are taking what their ruggedness requires. They're greasy and dirty, about the DUKWS move on.
12-5-44

Ollie Visits Officers, Men of Tank Battalion at Front

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

By OLLIE STEWART

WITH TANK BATTALION, THIRD ARMY—(By Mail)—I found the adjutant, First Lt. Leonard P. Taylor of Atlanta, trying to get his tent set up in the mud. He was talking to M/Sgt. Robert L. Jenkins of Brooklyn, who wiped raindrops from his face and selected a fairly level spot.

"I don't think we'll be here long," said Taylor, whom I had not seen since long ago in a Florida training camp. "This place is an ideal target and I'll bet Jerry has it zeroed already." (How right he was.

War Too Close

The only tent was the mess tent. We went there and stood before the field range while waiting for some cans of C-rations to heat.

The mess sergeant, S/Sgt. Charles W. Guy of Chicago, was still shaky. He had been shelled on a bridge that morning and his cook hit by shrapnel. The cook was now in the hospital but would recover.

Taylor and Warrant Officer Clarence Godbold of Yonkers began talking. Somebody said something about one company's having eighteen men missing, but whether they were dead or prisoners, I couldn't tell.

Anyway, I was being given some hot meat and beans by Cpl. Albert Thomas, Hempstead, L.I., and Pvt. Osborne Harris, Jr., Brooklyn.

Prediction Accurate

While I ate, Cpl. James Jackson, Indianapolis, and Pvt. James A. Bulluck, Louisville, Ky., came in soaking wet. We all cursed the weather, while First Sgt. Purvis Easley, Atlanta, made some coffee.

I never got the coffee, because I went away with Lt. Taylor to look at the officers' roster and the shells started to fall.

There are three colored captains in the battalion: Capts. Irvin McHenry, Leavenworth, Kans., and Ivan H. Harrison, Detroit, company commanders, and Capt. Garland N. Adamson, Chicago, battalion surgeon.

Other officers included:

First Lts. John D. Long, Detroit; Charles H. Barbour, Junction City, Kans.; Samuel Brown, Charleston, S.C.; Charles A. Gates, Kansas City, Mo.; Richard W. English, New Orleans; Leonard P. Taylor, Atlanta; Warren F. Taylor, Philadelphia; James T. Baker, Indianapolis, Ind.; Joseph O. Kahoe, Chicago;

Second Lts. Kenneth W. Coleman, D.C.; James C. Lightfoot, D.C.; William R. Griffin, St. Louis; Lawrence R. Bagwell, Brownwood, Tex.; Jay E. Johnson, NYC; Richard A. Williams, Jr., Philadelphia; William E. Blake, Jr., D.C.; Edward E. Cannon, Brooklyn; Harold B. Cary, Abilene, Kans.; Thomas E. Bruce, San Antonio, Tex.; Harold Kingsley, Chicago; Robert C. Hammond, Jr., Cleveland, Ohio; John P. Hariston, Columbus, Ohio; Leroy A. Bell, Minneapolis, Minn.; Charles A. Guess, Topeka, Kans.;

Warrant Officers Clarence Godbold, Yonkers, N.Y.; James E. Williams, Detroit; Mark Henderson, Mt. Vernon, N.Y., and William A. Bruce, Winston-Salem, N.C.

Among the enlisted men I talked to, who had not let bad weather nor Germans dampen their spirits, were S/Sgt. John N. Winbush, Cincinnati, platoon sergeant, who saw action the first day; Sgt. Henry L. Jackson, 5008 Foote Street, Washington; Cpl. Aaron Jordan, Los Angeles, who is tank gunner and accounted for a pillbox Armistice Day.

The following want their folks at home to know they're in there slugging:

First Sgt. Emmett W. Parker, Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Pvt. Henry Ferguson, Pittsburgh; Pvt. Cornelius Herring, Dayton, Ohio; Pfc. John Rowland, Waterbury, Conn.; Cpl. Leroy Slater, Cairo, Ill.; Cpl. Elmer Washington, Warrensburg, Mo.; Pfc. Afra Brazil, Shreveport, La.; S/Sgt. Bradley Byrd, 210 E. Upsal Street, Philadelphia;

Pvt. Harold Warren, Los Angeles; Cpl. Tommy Colding, Little Rock, Ark.; Sgt. Albert Carr, Columbus, Ohio; Cpl. Ernest Cameron, Sarasota, Fla.; Cpl. Lawrence Edwards, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Sgt. Charles Young, Youngstown, Ohio; S/Sgt. Frank Landers, Jr., Owensboro, Ky.; Pvt. Jake Martin, Cleveland, Miss.; Pvt. Samuel Barbour, Cleveland, Ohio; Pfc. Jack Tenver, Seattle, Wash.; Pfc. James Gill, Brooklyn.

Performs Hard Missions Across France

Liberated

Fires From Spot Just Over Hills From Germany

ALONG THE SIEGFRIED LINE—Nestled among majestic hill rising from beautiful valleys are the well-camouflaged guns of a Negro 155-mm howitzer battalion which has hurled nearly two million pounds of steel into German defenses since July 10 when it fired first round at Nazi installations on the Normandy Peninsula.

In its initial action, in support of the 82nd Airborne Division, the battalion suffered its first casualty in the person of Lieutenant Colonel Hubert D. Barnes, white, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, who was wounded in the leg by a shell fragment.

FIGHT ACROSS FRANCE

These guns are now firing again, from a spot where "just over those hills, lies Germany." From their successful missions on the Brittany Peninsula, the Crozon Peninsula, and that formidable German defensive fight at La Haye du Puits, which changed hands four times before the Americans finally took it for keeps, these troops have fought their way across France, leaving behind them amazing stories about the deadly accuracy of their weapons and of individual heroism U. S. Doughboys like to tell how First Sergeant Joseph Hamilton, of Brooklyn, New York, erroneously reported as being in another outfit by starry-eyed war correspondents, cleaned up a nest of four German machine-guns, single-handedly, and won the Silver Stars.

The battalion was activated at Camp Gruber, Oklahoma on August 5, 1942, and was part of the 333rd Regiment. It was redesignated in March 1943, and Colonel Barnes, then a major, assumed command. After maneuvers in Louisiana in September 1943, the unit came overseas, arriving on March 7, 1944. On July 8, 1944, it sailed for France, landed on a beach on July 9, and moved into position on July 10, at 1855 hours (6:55 p. m.). Three hours and ten minutes later, it opened fire, beginning a record which runs like a movie thriller.

The first firing action saw 28 rounds fired, "Able" battery fired at 2205, Charlie at 2210, and Eaker at 2240. It was harassing fire and interdiction missions. This was in the area of La Haye du Puits, and the next day battlion fired 240 rounds, 15 harassing missions, and 8 counter-battery missions against German artillery positions. The count moved up the next day, as the battle grew warmer and 263 rounds, with 17 counter-battery missions, zoomed into enemy emplacements. From July 10 up to July 28 the battalion fired 3384 rounds, (each shell weighing 95 pounds) for a poundage of 321,480. An La Haye du Puits fell!!

On July 31 they were strafed on the road, while moving to a new position, at 10 p. m., and then bombed at 11:15. Battalion report: no damage. They went into position against La Haye Pesnil, joining the 8th Division as a support unit, firing with the 33rd (Rommel Count your men") group. In three days 1228 rounds were expended, and La Haye Pesnil fell. The battalion liaison officer did duty as an air observer for these three days.

On August 1 the unit went over to the Fourth Armored Division, doing what was most unusual for a field artillery battalion: acting as support for an armored unit with absolutely no protection for themselves, other than their .50 calibre machineguns. It was a unit which used the 155s, and it followed the Fourth Armored Forces across France, and won the highest commendation of Major General John Wood, chief of the division.

On a Transport Loaded with GI's

By DANIEL A. PAYNE

AN EASTERN PORT—We have been on board ship only several hours and are seemingly lining up for a convoy. Spread across the way, we can see a number of ships about our size, carrying troops and standing by as if waiting for the opportunity to get into formation.

Most of the men have expressed a kind of controlled joy. It seems as if they want to be completely happy and "let themselves go"—but they don't know just what to do at this early stage; so they are "holding their cards close to their faces," so to speak, and looking the situation over.

Officers seems to be in a rather jovial mood and already experiences of the past week are forming themselves into entertaining bits of humor. The one narrated by Lt. Edgar B. Felton, 727 Harvard Place, Washington, D.C., takes the cake. It actually happened.

Guard Leaves with G.I.

One of the men in his company had shown AWOL tendencies. Being busy with other details, Lieutenant Felton put a guard on the man with instructions to "keep this man in the area." Later, he noted that both the guard and the prisoner had "cut out."

Just before we got on ship, the guard and the prisoner reported to the company with the explanation that "we wanted to have a ball before we got on the ship. We are willing to take whatever punishment you give us."

There are surprisingly few men who actually wanted to miss the boat. About all they wanted was a few hours in town to "knock themselves out" and leave the country filled with last-minute exploits to chat about as the days go by.

Couldn't Stand It

A striking example of their attachment to one another and to their unit was brought out recently at the Base Hospital. A soldier had complained about a physical ailment which sent him to the hospital.

A number of friends accompanied him there, lingered around until he was processed, then left. Shortly, the sick man returned with the explanation: "I just couldn't stand to see all those fellows leaving me. I had a talk with the doctor and here I am."

Lieutenant Felton, company commander, is credited with having a cracker-jack outfit. Several months ago, back in garrison, he took a fifteen-day leave, went home and married Miss Catherine Middleton, graduate of Howard University's School of Medicine. She is now working in a Harlem Hospital, New York.

The boys, kidding him the other day, asked: "If we want to send you and your wife an invitation, how would we address it, Dr. and Lt. Felton or Lt. and Dr. Felton?" He has two brothers in the Army.

Doctor or Minister

Only other person officially assigned to this cabin is Capt. Bruce McDonald, of Sumpter, S.C., ship's surgeon. He is an old friend of mine and our arguments on medicine vs. religion or the Doctor vs. the Minister have caused quite a stir.

Once when I wrote an article in the AFRO concerning our discussions, fifty rather disturbed souls wrote letters encouraging me to "hold on to the Faith" and denouncing the captain in no uncertain terms.

He came right out of school into the service. His father and three brothers are physicians. While on ship, he is looking after the physical welfare of soldiers, merchant marines, and civilians. So far, there are only minor headaches— and the doctor has one of them.

Crew Confident

One thing that seems to drive fear from the minds of the troops is the calm expression on the faces of the crew members. They go about their jobs as an every-day occurrence, unconsciously spreading confidence to us.

The men are still leaning on the rail of the ship—out on the upper deck—getting a final, fading view at the land of their birth. Almost every man thinks he knows where he is going. Estimates are that the trip will take from 9 to 28 days.

Once in a while someone will yell "Get a good look; your won't see it again until 1949," or perhaps "Hey, Sarg, what about a pass tonight," or "There won't be any AWOL's tonight." There is laughter.

The crew of this ship is accommodating our quarters were without life-savers. We requested them that is filled with long wooden tables. They eat at those tables and at night sleep in white canvas hammocks slung from hooks when their buddies kid them from

MP's on Job

Already MP's are on the job, with Lt. Alfred (Larry) Savoy, of Washington, D.C., in charge. They are sporting new bands and night sticks and give a shy grin when sleep in a compartment afar.

my fancy, but no soap. Our cabin accommodates two; a double-decker bunk, two lockers, lights conveniently placed, a desk, an electric fan, wash basin with cold water, and a few drawers for personal junk.

Some officers are bunked in rooms in larger numbers. There is a convertible dining room, recreation and reading room just out side the officers' quarters. The men

Furniture Stationary

We mapped out a program of boxing, talent night, stunts, shows, etc. There is a wealth of material on board to use for prizes. He also informed me of the large stores of Special Services equipment overseas that the men can use.

The first thing I noticed on ship is that the furniture is stationary. I tried to move the desk to suit

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Negro Soldiers In Belgium Treated Like Enemy Troops

The following letter, received this week by The Call from a group of Negro soldiers serving their country in Europe, shows how U. S. prejudice against Negroes has been taken abroad by members of the United States Army. The letter speaks for itself. It has not been edited but is printed below just as it arrived from overseas:

The Call, Missouri

Nov. 3, 1944
U. S. Army
Belgium

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.
12-1-44
Dear Editor:

As a service unit, we hit the beaches of France in July with and a part of one of the greatest offenses in military history. Struggling and working for the cause of only one thing, "democracy."

Time has gone by for a long while since then. But somewhere along the way that same old "thing" that most of us are familiar with has been brooding concealed. Now that the war is going somewhat in a smoother way, "it" has begun to unleash itself all over Europe wherever there are white and black U.S. soldiers.

Now for a small picture of it:

A group of five soldiers on passes and seeking some sort of amusement or clean entertainment are visiting a small town in Belgium. Now certain parts of this town are "off limits" which was found out later but only by the crudest way possible. There were no signs.

Bear in mind, dear reader, these are full-blooded American Negro soldiers, born in the States and drafted into the U.S. Army.

After having spent some time in town, they are approached by Military Police, also of the U.S. Army. After being treated somewhat as enemy soldiers and manhandled at the point of guns, to their great disgrace and embarrassment, they were walked six blocks with hands over head, in front of an auto at the point of guns.

En route to the station-house, the military police were encouraged by such remarks from other U.S. soldiers as "Shoot them, get rid of them, we never did like those dark guys."

What we would we like to know is, are we in the same great Army that we heard so much about and knew so little of as civilians? Or are we in the right Army at all?

We write this little episode to you, dear editor, because of your having such a responsibility of editing such a great and famous paper. We are sure that as far as your paper is concerned these five Negro soldiers will receive an honest and true judgement.

Sincerely,
UNSATISFIED SERVICE UNIT

"Soldier, Where's Your Foxhole?"

Journal and Guide

Wonderful Friendship Develops Between Private And Lt. Colonel

Norfolk Va.
12-9-44

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Guide War Correspondent

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY—"Soldier Parks, where's your foxhole?"

The big, husky major scowled down on a nervous private who was seated in front of his tent on a training field somewhere in the United States.

"Well, sir, er—er—I was just about to dig it now . . . sir," the soldier stammered.

"That's right soldier, you're about to dig it right now—along with six other foxholes," said the officer. "That'll teach you that digging a foxhole is the first thing you do when you set up in combat."

The soldier dug seven foxholes, as ordered. He was very tired that evening when the officer came back to inspect them. That was back in the summer months of 1942.

DIGS MORE FOXHOLES

Shortly afterwards the outfit moved again. When the camp had been set up, the same officer appeared again: "Soldier Parks, where's your foxhole?" And, again, Pfc. Parks spent the rest of the day digging foxholes.

The officer's name was John J. Phelan, who today is a lieutenant colonel, serving as regimental executive officer in the 92nd Division. The soldier was Troy J. Parks, of 1231 Carrollburg place, S. W., Washington, D. C., who is now a master sergeant at regimental headquarters, in the same office with Lt. Col. Phelan.

In the good old days, when the division was training for its present assignment, Major Phelan caught Pfc. Parks on a number of occasions in that same old situation: "Soldier Parks, where's your foxhole?"

And, that was the start of a wonderful friendship. Major Phelan and Pfc. Parks was later to become one of the smoothest-working teams in the U. S. Army.

Then came the day when an overseas infantry division needed an executive officer, and Lt. Col. Phelan drew the assignment. He came to the Mediterranean Theater and fought with his outfit through the toughest battles of the Italian campaign, including the Anzio Beachhead classic. For his heroism and leadership he had been awarded the Silver Star and the Bronze Star.

WOUNDED IN ACTION

Lt. Col. Phelan was wounded in action near Pisa last summer. Meanwhile, elements of the 92nd Division joined the Fifth Army in the bloody Italian campaign. When the executive officer of the 92nd outfit was killed in action early in September, the commanding officer put in a request that Lt. Col. Phelan, then in the hospital, be assigned to his unit when he recovered.

Before long, the headquarters section of the fighting 92nd elements buzzed with the news that Lt. Col. Phelan was to join them. When he finally showed up that bright September day, the first to greet him with a snappy salute was M/Sgt. Parks. The officer snapped sternly to attention.

"Soldier Parks," he scowled, "Where's your foxhole?"

Sgt. Parks smiled broadly and pointed to a freshly-dug hole in front of headquarters building.

Negro GI's Keep Gasoline Flowing

12-20-44
Atlanta Daily World

WITH U. S. FORCES IN FRANCE — In a vast gasoline, oil and lubricant dump stretching over five big fields here, as much as 200,000 gallons of fuel a day are pumped into 5-gallon Jerricans, loaded on tremendous "red-ball" truck convoys, and sent speeding forward to keep the wheels of our huge mobile Armies turning without a hitch.

Soldiers of this Negro unit have frequently worked 17 hours at a stretch to keep gasoline flowing out of the 100 nozzles of hose lines in their depot alone. The lines into this fuel dump are tributaries of the vast pipe line system which spider-webs across northern France from huge storage tanks constructed by United State Army engineers.

15,000 GALLONS DAILY

Approximately 15,000 gallons of gasoline daily are necessary to service a division that is standing still. When it moves, the gasoline demands sky-rocket. A division in high gear consumes more than 35,000 gallons of fuel every 24 hours.

Atlanta, Ga.

German General Staff experts calculated that our lunge on to the Continent would founder on the problem of supply. Civilian conservation through rationing in the United States and the gruelling achievement of depots like this one, have sent the enemy reeling across Europe.

A bulk break-down point, this immense decanning area is filled with thousands of Jerricans, the Army's familiar 5-gallon fuel jugs, some full, some being filled, others hauled away in trucks. At the entrance are depot headquarters and control points, directing endlessly incoming convoys from "red-ball"—highest military priority — highways. Vehicles range from standard American 2½-ton trucks to gargantuan trailer type machine.

WORK 'ROUND CLOCK

All day and night, Quartermaster Gasoline soldiers unload empties pile on full and send 65-vehicle convoys lumbering out of the depot packed with the life-blood of mobile warfare.

"The men here have cheerfully worked under the severest schedule. This job and the ability of our Armies to move, are so closely related that no soldier needs to be told about it. They DELIVER," commented First Lieutenant Harmison E. Hale, Depot Street, West Prestonburg, Kentucky, the unit's commanding officer.

The fields adjacent to the depot area are usually covered with 100,000 Jerricans, in five enormous lines, each one 20 cans deep. Gasoline hoses extend down the length of the columns between the giant formations of containers.

"Our work is made doubly tough by the mud," stated First Sergeant Theodore M. Crutchfield, 20 Union Street, Woburn, Massachusetts. "Nothing we've ever seen before can touch the ankle-deep goo that passes for mud.

OFFICERS HELP

When red-ball convoys pile into the situation existing here, he declared.

The letter containing the order, was directed to be published and the commanding officers were directed to take appropriate measures to avoid misconduct of this nature, the sailor stated.

The definition of the violation of the order is that any one caught associating with Australian Aboriginals or traveling with one who is of the opposite sex shall be presumed to be cohabitating with him or her; the penalty of which is 100 pounds or not more than three years

Aussies Don't Like Negroes, Sailor Says

12-2-44
Amsterdam News

HOUSTON—According to an allegation made by a sailor whose name is withheld for obvious reasons, segregation dogging the heels of the Negro troops, has penetrated into Western Australia and the United States Navy has issued an order dated September 21, 1944 prohibiting personnel association with the natives. The sailor, who made known the facts, has been stationed in Western Australia and has first hand information concerning the depot, even officers join in the loading job. First Lieutenant Clifford A. Smith, Jr., Dedham, Mass., and Second Lieutenant Fred A. Moore, Salt Lake City, Utah, spark their platoons to record performances.

Prepared for any emergency, a fire fighting company is attached to the gasoline dump. Its sole function is to prevent fire hazards, safeguarding the lives of the sol-in prison.

The order was issued to all personnel, but only enforced where a Negro was intimated. Whites continue to associate with natives.

The Sunday Mirror, weekly newspaper that is published in Perth, is used, the sailor said, as a race-baiting organ urging Negroes to abstain from associating with white women. But if white women had to associate with the Negro personnel of the Navy, they should do it in darkness in order not to offend decent whites.

The sailor recalled an instance where a Negro was caught in a compromising position with a white Australian, and the Sunday Mirror gave a very literal description of the whole affair, and pointed to the shame of the situation.

Suggestive of the slave patrol was the statement made by the sailor concerning the Natives who are not allowed to go into town without a permit and unless they know some white person there.

Gen. Almond, 92nd Commander, Given Tribute As Fighting Man

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Journal and Guide War Correspondent

(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, Italy—When people talk about Major General Edward M. Almond, commander of the 92nd Infantry Division, they always get around to paying him one of the greatest tributes any military man can get. No matter what the trend of the conversation may be, they all say, "He's a soldier!"

And a soldier he is, this dashing officer who was one of the brightest heroes of World War I. He believes in strict discipline and he expects every man to do well the job assigned to him. General Almond seems determined to make his division one of the truly outstanding outfits of this or any other war.

He looks for courage and ability in his officers, and he shifts and transfers them around until he gets what he feels is the maximum efficiency from the available personnel.

SETS SHINING EXAMPLE

When it comes to courage, the general sets a shining example. It is not unusual for him to shift seats with his driver, and drive his own jeep up to the front lines. On more than one occasion General Almond, and all hands aboard, have had to abandon their vehicle and dive for the nearest hole to dodge Jerrys bullets in the icy Apennines.

He likes to get first hand information on the activities of his units. He insists of personally tailed for duty on the War Department General Staff in Washington.

He enrolled in the Air Corps Tactical School, Maxwell Field, Ala., in August, 1938, graduating in June, 1939. One year later he was graduated from the Senior Course of the Naval War College, Newport, R. I., and then returned to his assignment in Washington.

General Almond became assistant chief of staff for operations and training, G-3 of the VI Army Corps, Providence, R.I., in January, 1941 and was appointed chief of staff in January, 1942.

WITH THE 93RD

In March, 1942, he was assigned as Assistant Division Commander of the 93rd Infantry Division upon activation at Fort Huachuca.

In August, 1942, he was named to command the 92nd Infantry Division, being activated in October, 1942.

Under his guidance this division, with its all-Negro enlisted personnel and its mixed officers, has been thoroughly trained and efficiently equipped so that today it is considered one of the top combat outfits in action.

As the 92nd Division fights on to new glories with the famed Fifth Army in Italy, General Almond marches proudly at its head. They all say: "He's a soldier!"

Crack Negro Fire Fighters Stand Guard Over Biggest Captured Philippine City

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY FORCES AT LEYTE—Armed with 10,000 feet of hose, a crack team of Negro fire fighters stand guard over the tinder-box city of Tacloban.

Tacloban is the largest and most important city yet recaptured by American forces in the Philippines.

The Negro fire fighters are constantly on the alert because of swarms of Jap planes, from not too distant fields, ready to drop incendiaries on the crowded, flimsy thatched cottages of Tacloban.

Commanded by Lt. John Sites of Nampa, Idaho, the men are keenly alive to the importance of their role in the protection of thousands of civilians. They are ready to make any sacrifices to justify the confidence placed in them by the army.

While Sites has been designated as fire marshal for the city, S-Sgt. Spencer Sheffield, former Cardozo high school athlete of Washington, D. C., is the city's fire chief. He takes full charge when the outfit goes into action. The unit, officially known as an engineer fire fighting section, consists of twenty-eight men and one officer.

It is one of twenty such Negro outfits in the army, most of which are in Europe. The one in Tacloban is the only Negro outfit of its kind in this theatre. Its equipment includes more than 10,000 feet of hose and pumps capable of throwing water at the rate of 1000 gallons per minute.

To Teach Civilians

The section occupies quarters in the Tacloban municipal building. Within a few days the scope of the outfit's operations are to be extended to include the establishment and operation of fire stations at a nearby airfield and at Palo, a smaller city about ten miles away. In addition to fighting fires, the outfit, working under the Philippine civil administration unit will train civilian personnel, which will be a part of the permanent civil government now being reestablished here.

With men drawn from anti-aircraft and airport security outfits the fire fighters were activated in 1944 in Louisiana. Overseas seven months, the section has fought a total of twenty-five fires, most of them in Finschafen, New Guinea.

Battle Gas-Loaded Ship

Their two most memorable battles with flames occurred two days apart last August when after spending eight hours extinguishing an oil dump fire, they were summoned to combat a blazing Liberty Ship loaded with gasoline. From 7 p.m. Wednesday until 6 p.m. Saturday, they continuously battled the stubborn fire.

It was the longest and most difficult assignment they've had to date, but not the most dangerous. They spent four hours another time combatting flames in the middle of an ammunition dump. "War itself can't be any worse," Sheffield said; "it's a miracle that with all that ammunition about us we all came out alive."

For their work in New Guinea the unit received several commendations. Their most recent encounter occurred as their ship entered the harbor here on November 6, following a strafing and bombing attack by enemy aircraft. Several fires broke out in the holds of the ship and except for the presence on board of the expert fire fighters the damage might have been greater.

No Losses

Sites, who dotes on the efficiency of the men, pointed out that in spite of their hazardous work they have not lost one man. The outfit is small enough for a strong personal relationship to exist between the commanding officer and each of the men.

As a result he has come to know their individual abilities and has unbounded confidence in them. Much of their exceptionally high morale might be attributed to the fact that Sites has transferred the whole burden of responsibility to the shoulders of the men. They appreciate this expression of confidence and strive to live up to it.

Working directly under Sheffield, who as chief drives a red jeep fitted out with spotlights and other flashy accessories, are four sergeant team leaders. They are Eugene Barry, Beaumont Texas; James Coleman, Greenville, Ga.; Willie H. Williams, St. Louis, and Turner C. Stancil, Tarboro, N. C.

Each team is a complete fire fighting unit of itself and can operate independently of the rest of the organization. The competition among them is keen and they loll about the fire house almost praying for an alarm that will send them into action.

Others in the outfit are Cpls James E. Jenkin, Baltimore; Oscar L. Brannon, Ewiberi, Ala.; John W Bumbray, Orangeburg, S. C.; W. C. Dozier, Albany, Ga.; Hayward L. Ferguson, Fitzgerald, Ga.; Condola Frazier, Vicksburg, Miss.; Grover C. Moore, Jr., Newbern, N. C.; Jeff Monroe, Dunleith, Miss.; Fred Rogers, Beltin, S. C.; J. T. Seay, Lebanon, Tenn.; Charles G. Taylor, Oxford, N. C.; Pfc. Richard Allen, Leland, Miss.; Sam Du Pree, Jr., Greenville, N. C.; Arthur Reeves, Jr., Greenwood, Miss.; Joseph L. Shockency, Louisville, Ky.; Felix Stinney, Manning, S. C.; Privates Timothy Dixon, Clenchfield, Ga.; J. C. Doss, Houston, Miss.; Charlie J. Gathright, Memphis; Charlie D. Ivy, Houston, Miss.; John Miller, Detroit and William Smith of Savannah, Ga.

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Finds Samar Isle Big, Dangerous

Atlanta Daily World 12-20-44

Atlanta, Ga.

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(U. S. War Correspondent)
(For Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

SAMAR ISLAND, PHILIPPINES — By Courier—Captain Edwin James, Army public relations officer, had opposed the idea of me trying to find Major Frank Merritt alone. Samar island was big and dangerous. In addition to Jap forces there were mountains and rivers to cross. And nobody was quite sure where Merritt was. The general information was that "he's in the north somewhere."

"We can't let our correspondents just go roaming around, not definitely knowing just where they're roaming," he explained. "Merritt is a good story, but I'll be damn if you can write it laying somewhere dead."

A week later he telephoned saying that I could join a guerilla band operating on Samar. The guerillas were under the command of an American colonel. He was to direct operations in the push on on Taft, minor enemy stronghold on the east coast of Samar.

MEETS OFFICER

I met the officer the day of departure. He was short, slightly bald, and reminded one of Jimmy Gleason of the movies. The Texan was very likeable. Constantly and nervously puffing a cigarette, he said:

"Sure, I know Merritt. I should, he's my chief of staff. But I'll tell you before we start, you're going to have a hard time locating him."

He pulled down a map from the wall and pointed out a wide area in northern Samar.

"He's somewhere in that area. Just where, I don't know. I can give you a guide and a rifleman. It'll take you a week, probably two, or a month to find him. And I may as well tell you this, there are Japs over there, and the darndest mountains to cross you have even seen. I can't claim responsibility for you."

HAD CAN RATIONS

He advised me to go along on the operation with him, and there was the possibility that we might round into Merritt somewhere around Taft.

I had two boxes of Ten in One rations together with battle gear. There were five correspondents and one Army photographer in the party including Frank Hewlett of the United Press. In the days to come I was to learn that Frank was to be more than a brother when things got tough. We boarded a truck and headed for the dock. It was a beautiful morning, bright and sunny. The green hills glistened under the sunlight, the sky was cloudless.

Our ship was a small rocket ship. Called 'Rick's Raiders' and having two Jap planes to its credit, it was the flag ship of a flotilla of gun boats. We loaded our supplies and made ready for a voyage which was to skirt the southern tip of Samar and land us somewhere on on the east coast.

Among the first fellows I met aboard were Negro seaman, Stewards John Harvey Branson, of Salem, Virginia; Willie Smith of Richmond, Virginia; and Robert Lee Parker, of Memphis, Tennessee. They were veteran seamen and loved Rick's Raiders like a father. Lt. Comm. R. S. Richsbaugh, of Altoona, Pennsylvania, was in command and made us very welcome, as did other members of the crew.

Life aboard the craft was pleasderful food, and coffee anytime, -uon enough to addition in uon there was a giant phonograph and plenty of relatively new records. We played them hour after hour. There was one record the boys liked best. Jimmy Lunceford's 'I'm Going to Move on the Outskirts of Town.' Listening to the music, it didn't seem that we were slowly moving into an adventure of a lifetime.

Seven bunks were put up on the gun deck for our sleeping. Nice clean white sheets, pillows, air mattresses and the cool night air. Around midnight it started to rain and continued until dawn. Several of the correspondents spent the early hours below deck near the coffee pot. It was pitch dark outside and quiet as we eased out of view of Leyte and steamed south.

SEE CONVOY

At dawn we anchored and in the still gray morning we saw a convoy of small skiffs headed in our direction. The ship was alerted. The armade proved to be native borotas. Borotas are small boats resembling much those used in the early days by American Indians, only these had side riggers. Filipinos had come out to meet the ship. Sailors started throwing cigarettes overside and our friends reacted as though cigarettes were manna from heaven.

We unloaded all gear onto borotas and started shoreward, 200 yards away. Although a little crowded the ride was delightful. The small boats skimmed through the water and the moist air was invigorating. We were able to get within fifty yards of shore when the convoy struck the coral reef. I felt quite embarrassed as one of the native men slung me over his shoulder and carted me off as though he were packing a sack of flour.

The whole village turned out in one big welcoming party. Five Americans including Staff Sgt. William Richardson, of Pittsburgh, Pa., had warned us that the native population would move in "and just stare at you—for hours." He advised that we should pick out one man or one woman and stare him or her down until they were shamed into leaving. Then immediately proceed on to another. We later found that we were so outnumbered that the Filipinos easily won the 'battle of stares.' And they gloated over the victory by following us everywhere we went — staring every second.

FEEL ALONE

We put the gear in one of the houses which proved to be a one room job with bamboo floor, and little else. Our hostess, Mrs. Grezoria A. Fabula was just wonderful. She fluttered around the room making things comfortable for the "good American soldiers." Many of the sailors had come ashore, one borrowed a guitar and was entertaining part of the mob with "You Are My Sunshine."

Our photographer to whom I'll give the name Dave (official name withheld) said:

"Isn't this wonderful. What pictures I'll get."

Maybe Dave didn't know that this would be one of his last evenings on earth. He was a slight built New Yorker who had done some work for me in Brisbane. And his constant conversation aboard ship was that he had a can of bacon in his bag and we could have bacon and eggs for breakfast.

At dusk Lt. Comm. Ricksbaugh and his people pulled out, talking two correspondents back with them. We felt alone because that was the last ship we would see for a long while. The American flag flew proudly. We stood ashore with the Filipinos and waved good-bye. Rick tooted his whistle. The sun was fast sinking as the raider gradually disappeared. We turned to go back with just a little choking feeling in the throat.

Negro And White Marines Unite To Subdue Japs

Daily World—Atlanta Ga. 10-13-44

Supply Units Rapidly Turned Into Combat

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the Atlanta Daily World And NNPA)
(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR—By Courier—On July 10, 1944 organized resistance ceased on Saipan and the American flag fluttered over the former enemy bastion. American troops had won the decision of a great battlefield. Another step had been taken toward the coast of China and the prize of Japan proper.

News stories poured into Pacific Fleet headquarters of the intensity of the struggle and sacrifice. One concerned the combat mission of several units of colored marines. Depot units (quartermasters), they took up the cudgel during moments when potential enemy breakthroughs seemed inevitable. They fought, killed and were killed. Although casualties were incredibly light, those who did fall fell as fighting troops of America's prized branch of the service.

HANDLED MATERIAL

10-13-44

These Negro troops were a part of the D-Day assault force and were commissioned to handle material. However, due to capable enemy counterattacks, it became the essential mission of all troops present to help push back the onrushing Japanese infantry. Day after day machine guns and mortars layed fire into the crevasses and caves of the rotten coral. It was primitive warfare. Men fought thru the caves, over maggoty dead, each foot of ground heatedly contested.

Some of those marines have returned to Pearl Harbor. They tell the story of their participation in the campaign. And it is not so much the tale of superhuman endurance and ability as of men sent to do one job and who stayed on to do several—and did them very well.

"We went in on the eighth wave, said solidly-built Pfc. Jeff Smith, of New Orleans "My platoon moved to shore on alligators (amphibious tractors). They had told us to keep ammo cleared off the beachhead. When we ran onto the beach, mortars were exploding. I guess every man knew he was in for it."

10-13-44

FIGHT TOGETHER

Jeff said the various units dispersed as the barrage grew heavier. Black and white men advanced cautiously together. There was not much time to man supplies as the stubborn and fanatical enemy threatened each movement.

"We opened fire along with the others," the peacetime carpenter explained. "An explosion sounded near our position. Two marines were killed outright. All five of us were hit by shrapnel. I felt as if my hip was paralyzed. I couldn't get along any further."

He must have passed out, Jeff added. When he came around he saw a white marine bending over him and slapping a bandage on his hip. The wound was bleeding profusely and aching.

10-13-44

"Just stick here mate," the medic advised. "They'll come for you." Jeff said he smiled and added, 'this is a hell of a war. One hell of a war." The aid man moved on, crawling along the ground as explosions continued. It was growing dark, artillery thundered. The beach quivered as the battle raged on the strange island where the plants, the animals and the way of life are all foreign to the American soldier.

CHALLENGE STATEMENT

This correspondent did not hear related the incident where several of our troops did not know the simple function of handling a grenade. In fact, the statement was questioned as to its accuracy. The incident was contained in a story written for a weekly news magazine.

10-13-44

"That statement is perfectly ridiculous,' said First Sgt. Aussie McBeth, of Jackson, Mississippi. "We are taught in basic about grenades. And anyway, when a man knows it's him or the other guy, he's going to use when they learn that we can handle our weapons and what we expected to do with them—eat 'em." If it can be termed charming, for that?"

some people seem to say, 'well, have what do you know? Negro marines can shoot. What do you know about

GETS PURPLE HEART

Jeff Smith said he was taken when the information comes back abroad ship. Later evacuated to be able to be able to shoot. And when it can be trained. It is more alarming, for us to be any soldier he's prised when we ex- been trained. And another thing, and, what we ammunition ed the Purple Heart, one of the first colored marines in this area to be wounded in action. His mates went on to occupy positions in the forward wall.

Today, it is said, that snipers still dwell in the caves of Marpi Point, the north tip of the island. Infantry continues to completely stamp out the remnants of the defeated garrison. And in the town of Garapan where once lived 10,000 "there is nothing much left but the white corners of the blown-to-bit buildings. Starways stand without buildings, leading a short distance into the air. The Catholic church is nicked with bullets and the front steeple was blown-to-bit buildings. Stairways altar carvings and mosaics are scratched and chipped."

Their mission completed, most of the marines have withdrawn. It has not been revealed to this correspondent whether or not elements were used in the Palau operations but we learned that Negro troops were there and are thought to be still there."

DO SALVAGE WORK

Since Pearl Harbor is one of America's largest supply depots in the Pacific, serving the domain ruled by Admiral Chester Nimitz, much of the work here has to do with supplies. In a tour of the immediate area, we found Negro troops (including marines) doing this type work. Ordnance units servicing heavy field pieces and light artillery. The salvage and repair of shoes and clothing, building crates for ammunition, handling a multitude of machinery. Here the earth is covered with aircraft, lumber, gasoline—days and nights are filled with the multiple singing of engines of heavy machinery, as was expertly put by one observer.

Somewhere in the Central Pacific there is another group of colored marines—defense units. At one time they were bivouacked in the Ellice Islands, approximately 1000 miles east of the Solomons group. An antiaircraft force, they stood radar watches, and manned automatic weapons. The enemy did not penetrate our areas of security, thus these troops saw very little, if any action.

Point System to Keep Negro GI's Overseas

Non-Combat Units Will Be Kept In Service

For Longer Period

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — Negro soldiers serving in non-combat outfits and who have been overseas just as long as, or longer than, combat soldiers will not enjoy the same opportunities for being demobilized, the war department revealed on Thursday.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson told his news conference that discharges will be affected upon the basis of a system of points earned through service in combat. The system is one, he said, which was developed "in accordance with the feelings of the troops themselves. The man in the combat service has an advantage," he added.

Combatants Out First

Patterson had been asked how this system will affect men who, without choice, have been required to serve in the service units, who will have spent an equal length of time overseas, and who as a matter of choice would prefer being in a combat organization.

"On the adjusted service rating card credit is given for combat service," he stated. "I think it is indicated by the campaign ribbons. That is a reflection on combat service that is clearly credited on the service cards. The man who wins that credit by service in a combat unit gets credit other soldiers do not get."

The war department announced its demobilization plan early in September. First priority in this readjustment program will be the transfer of elements from theaters no longer active to the Pacific war zone, or from the United States to the Pacific war zone.

The plan developed after months of study takes into account all possible variable factors. The plan for the return of non-essential soldiers to civilian life will start with the assembly in the United States of men declared surplus to the needs of each overseas theater and to the major commands in the United States.

New Ruling After Nazis Quit

As part of the plan adopted, an "adjusted service rating card, will be issued to all enlisted personnel after the defeat of Germany. On this card will be scored the following four factors that will determine priority of separation:

1. Service credit—based upon the total number of months of army service since Sept. 16, 1940.

2. Overseas credit—based upon the number of months served overseas.

3. Combat credit—based upon the first and each additional award to the individual of the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, Legion of Merit, Silver Star, Distinguished Flying Cross, Soldier's medal, Bronze Star medal, Air medal, Purple Heart, and Bronze Service stars (battle participation stars).

4. Parenthood credit—which gives credit for each dependent child under 18 years up to a limit of three children.

Race Seabee Unit Doing Heroic Work On Battle-Torn Peleliu

By T/Sgt. DONALD A. HALLMAN, Sr., Marine Corps Combat Correspondent

PELELIU, PALAU ISLANDS—(Delayed)—Two hundred Negro Seabees, grimy and weary from two days of unloading ships under enemy fire, were lined up on the beach here.

"I want volunteers for stretcher bearing on the ridge tonight," an officer was telling them. And 200 Negro Seabees sepped out as one. The incident is typical of the record chalked up by the Seabee battalion, that landed immediately behind assault waves of Marines here and has been working night and day since. They unload ships, wrestle ammunition and heavy supplies to the beach dumps, carry ammunition to the front lines, and bring back wounded. On occasion they have filled in as frontline troops, and for more than a week they have been going forward to drag in wounded Marines.

FIRST ACTION

These Seabees had seen no action until Peleliu. Then they joined the assault. They had more than 100 casualties in the first week, many received during the landing when Japanese artillery and mortar fire was ripping the coral reef, others from mortar fire on the beaches and among the supply dumps, and still more from enemy fire at the front.

RESCUE WOUNDED

When a shell burst on the beach, injuring 15 men, the Negro Seabees reached the scene first. They pulled out the wounded.

When a mortar shell set fire to a large ammunition dump, 50 Seabees started moving the shells. They had to be called off when the exploding ammunition pinned down everyone on the entire beach.

When a stretcher detail was needed to go down into a draw in front of a heavily fortified ridge to bring out wounded at midnight, 16 Seabees volunteered.

The Negroes are enormously proud of the record their unit has made. Individual feats are generously recounted by others. The battalion is high in morale and excellent in achievement.

Seaman 1/c Edward Scott, Freemont, Ohio, was on the lines four times as a stetcher bearer. The second night he was in a foxhole with a Marine officer when four Japanese started moving in. When the Marine fired, one Japanese fell and played dead for a time. Then he attempted to flank the position while the other three came on. Seaman Scott got two of them, the Marine officer accounted for the others.

Seaman 1/c Lemon Jackson, Florence, Ala., was pinned down in his foxhole near the front lines. He had ammunition to get forward and he was irked. He deliberately showed himself to draw Japenese fire (this is the story of others—not Jackson).

Then "I just shot up in a tree and there he was," said the Seabee.

Seaman 1/c Henry Hall, St. Louis, Mo., thanks an unidentified Marine for saving his life. A Japanese was moving in on Hall, and the Seabee's rifle jammed. A passing Marine knocked off the Japanese, but shrugged away the Negro's thanks with "That's okay, you guys have been saving us with the ammo you're carrying."

Seaman 1/c James Key Nichols, Chicago, has a souvenir of one trip across the exposed airport. He was carrying one end of a stretcher when a Japanese machine gun killed the Seabee on the front end Nichols' canteen was pierced by two bullets.

"Left me without water," he moaned at the dressing station where he delivered the wounded Marine by himself two hours later.

Seaman 1/c George E. Jenkins, Chicago, was carrying ammunition across the airport when he saw a Marine fall, hit by a sniper. Seaman Jenkins brought in the wounded man. Moving an inert victim several hundred yards by yourself is a difficult task.

Seaman 1/c Leo McDowell, Chicago (a neighbor of Jenkins), was another Seabee who had his companion shot while carrying a stretcher. McDowell simply placed his buddy on a stretcher with the wounded Marine and dragged it to the first aid station—an ordeal lasting more than an hour.

Machinist Mate 3/c Emory L. Jennings, Altus, Okla., heard there was a wounded man on the edge of the airport. Despite continuous sniper fire, he went and got him.

Recruits Eager To See Isles

By CHAS. H. LOEB
Representing The Informer and Combined Negro Press
Copyright, Reproduction Prohibited

SAN FRANCISCO. — By plane and train, daily, over-burdened carriers, air and rail, bus and boat, disgorge into 'Frisco eager young recruits, who like me, look forward to the adventure of the islands; and battle-scarred veterans who know to well that most of the adventure is buried out there beneath the grim reality of a worthy foe and the ever-present menace of tropical fever.

There was not much time between the multiple details of embarkation to permit extensive research, but here are some of the typical fighting men one meets on the streets of San Francisco.

A veteran who has participated in five battles in and around the islands of New Guinea, Guam, Saipan and the Gilberts, is Officer's Cook 2/c Ernest James Sampson of Alexandria, La. I ran into Major William McKinley Thomas of the Medical Corps at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., who I believe was primarily interested in post-war possibilities for practice in San Francisco which boasts only two Negro physicians for its rapidly swelling Negro population.

Natives here declare that in the years, prior to our entry into the war, San Francisco prope had less than 3,000 Negroes. Now estimates range in the neighborhood of 35,000. Major Thomas is a former chairman of the executive committee of the American Medical Association. His home is in Bryan, Texas.

For the furloughing GI, San Francsico is not such a bad place. The city is replete with amusement sports, theatres and bors, which next to the "creep house" are first on the lists of the men who return from the islands of the Pacific. If he's busted, GI Joe needn't feel too downcast for the color line has not as yet made too deep a dent in the USO program in the far west.

In charge of the USO at 1430 Buchanan street, located in the center of San Francisco's Negro migrants, is Director Ray L. Vaughn former Colgate university track star football star, and a capable staff which includes Miss Eleanor Coleman, assistant director, who is from Alexandria, La., and Miss Bernice Inman of San Antonio, Texas, staff assistant.

Vaughn and his staff carry on a well-organized, almost continuous program of activities for the incoming GI's. Many white servicemen join in, but they are in the minority. The center offers a gymnasium, shower, photograph darkroom, information service, public telephones, letter writing, free stationary cards, ping pong, pool, billiards, library, radio, movies, latest newspapers. voice recordings and a record library containing everything from barelhouse to the classics.

47m-1944

Afro-American Balt., Md.

Football Training Aids GI in Wiping Out Nazis

5-27-44

By OLLIE STEWART

BALTIMORE—Are you guessing about D-Day? Do you have invasion jitters? Well, when you read this story told me by a white officer, you will, I hope, be even more jittery—but you will probably have a better appreciation of what thousands of American boys must face when D-Day comes.

"My outfit," the officer related, "had just been put ashore in Sicily. We quickly dug in on the beach so as to have some measure of protection from the dive bombers and strafing planes that kept getting in our hair.

And then, when we had a chance to stop watching for death from the air, the Jerries and Eyeties from their entrenched positions in the hills started opening up with mortar fire and machine guns.

"They had our range down to within a few feet. If we lay flat we were safe, but every time a man lifted his head, the stream of bullets took his head off.

"A few boys tried sneaking off to one side but the enemy in the hills soon drove them back to cover with a blistering hail of .50 calibre stuff.

Scared to Move

"So we kept our noses in the dirt for a couple of hours, scared to stay where we were and scared to leave. One machine gun nest, in particular, gave us hell. It was a concrete affair, with the machine gun turret about three feet from the ground, and was covered with brush and dried twigs.

5-27-44

"We knew it was there, but it was too far for a man to hit with a hand grenade, and trying to pick the gunner off with a rifle was no good. We couldn't see him.

"But he could see us, and he kept us pinned down so long that one of my boys squirmed over to me and whispered:

"'Lieutenant, I'll bet you $20 I can get out of here and get close enough to that bastard to toss a grenade in his lap.'

"'Don't be silly,' I told the soldier, 'and keep your goddam head down before you lose it!'

Was Football Player

"He kept quiet a few minutes. Then he was by my side again.

"'Lieutenant,' he begged, 'we can't stay here all day. It's just about a thousand yards—well, maybe a quarter-mile to that little hill. I used to play football and I can run broken-field like nobody you ever saw. I'll get there.'

"I shook my head, but I was thinking. We couldn't stay here all day like he said.

"'I'll make it across that ol' field like I used to do in a game back home,' the boy kept insisting in my ear. 'And when I blow that Nazi to hell, you'll owe me $20. I need twenty bucks to buy my wife a present.'

"Maybe I shouldn't have let him do it, but by this time the bullets were kicking dirt in our faces and all around us. Something had to be done. And I couldn't order all those men to certain death by telling them to attack that gun.

Broken Field Run

"So I let that boy try a broken-field run across that flat stretch of sand.

"He was on his belly one minute, and the next he was in a half crouch, like a ball carrier, streaking straight at the hidden machine gun. He swayed and swerved and side-stepped. And the gun began a frenzied chatter, as the muzzle tried to follow his erratic course.

"'Lord God Almighty,' I prayed, 'please let him make it!'

"I was never so anxious to hand over $20 in my life.

"He was still running, the most beautiful running you ever saw, and the most important touchdown anybody ever tired to make. Suddenly he spun half around and one foot was lifted from the ground, as a heavy slug stopped him for a heartbeat right dead in his tracks. But he crouched lower and went forward at a slow trot.

5-27-44

Threw 3 Grenades

"Sweat was pouring off me like a shower, and a couple of men near me swore deliberately and hoarsely.

"Our soldier was near the gun now and still on his feet, but he was staggering drunkenly. I saw him draw back his arm and pitch—once, twice, three times—and then he just stopped and fell flat on his face. He was probably dead on his feet when he threw the grenades, but his aim was perfect.

"Rocks, dirt and concrete flew in every direction, and the crazy chattering of the gun was unbelievably stopped. I yelled to my men to follow me and we raced across that sand in almost nothing flat.

Both Gunners a Mess

"Our boy was torn almost in half by the bullets he had stopped, but the two gunners were nothing but a mess of arms and legs and guts scattered all over the place.

"That's all the story, except that when that boy's wife received his posthumous medal, she also received a nice sum of money which the boy was supposed to have saved. Actually, the money came from the men whose lives he had saved.

"He had bet me twenty he would make it. I put fifty in a hat and passed it around to show how I felt. And every man in the group added something so that his wife would get her present. She got it, too."

Foreign Service

Commercial Appeal Memphis, Tenn.

NAZI ATTACK IN ITALY SMASHED NEGRO LINES

12-29-44

Fifth Army Troops Give Up Two Towns—Planes Hurled Into Fierce Battle

By The United Press

ROME, Dec. 28.—The German surprise offensive in the Ligurian coastal sector of Italy against Fifth Army troops has driven more than three miles through American lines, communiques disclosed Thursday, and fighting on the "forgotten front" reached a greater intensity than had been seen in this theater since the assault on the Gothic Line.

Driving southward through the Serchio River Valley, 13 miles inland from the west coast, in the direction of Lucca, the Germans drove American negro troops from the villages of Barga and Gallicano. The Nazi offensive was supported by concentrated artillery barrages.

12-29-44

Planes Rip Into Foe

Taking fullest advantage of good weather, the Allied Tactical Air Force for the third successive day made an all-out assault on German battle area strongpoints, gun positions and troop concentrations in close support of Fifth Army ground forces. American and British fighter-bombers attacked Barga, Gallicano and Castelnuova, causing fires in occupied buildings and cratering roads. Medium bombers attacked heavily enemy troop concentrations near Aulla, 10 miles northeast of Spezia, and in the immediate rear of the German offensive.

The German attack, mounted along a six-mile front on both sides of the Serchio and in the adjoining mountain terrain, opened Wednesday and its suddenness enabled the Germans to break through the forward American lines. The Germans, in a radio report of the drive, said Italian Fascist forces also were participating in the attacks.

Area Had Been Quiet

The German radio claimed that most of the American prisoners taken in the attack were negroes, and Thursday Allied Headquarters confirmed that the defending troops were of the 92nd Negro Division.

12-29-44

The Ligurian coastal sector, where negro and Brazilian troops have quietly moved northward for the past two months, has been subordinated to the Bologna and Adriatic sectors in headquarters news releases.

Fighting Fierce Here on Armistice Day

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH 92nd DIVISION—Today was Armistice Day back in the States where solemn rites were being held in commemoration of those who gave their lives twenty-six years ago for peace and democracy.

Battling in bloody, muddy Italian mountains, elements of the 92nd Division were punching forward along the Western sector front, having cleared half a dozen small towns in the past three days.

But the battle was much the same as in World War I—as rugged and tough as the Apennines over which it is being contested.

2 Divisions Wiped Out

Though the success of the fighting cannot easily be measured in miles gained, the stubborn fighting has had its advantages for the Fifth Army as the division has virtually wiped out two divisions which had been battling against them.

Torrid fighting last week not only ripped enemy units but was helping rid the division's prisoner of war cage as prisoners trampled

Sniper's Mistake... Fired Too Many Shots

Miami Soldier Riddles Japanese Gunner As 24th Stalks Enemy

5-27-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN, NNPA War Correspondent

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS ON BOUGAINVILLE—(By Courier-Webster says, "One who shoots at detached men of an enemy's forces especially when not in action." The famed lexicographer failed to add his presence he camouflages himself to blend with the terrain—and waits patiently with murder in his heart. In the case of the Japanese snipers, their marksmanship is considered below par by many, but flying steel peppering the sand, or chipping brush, around the objective adds little to his comfort or well being.

When the 24th Infantry began the push that flung a beruddled enemy beyond the Moy river, enemy snipers were found in the abandoned area.

FOLLOWED JUNGLE TRAIL

Two ammunition carriers started from our command post to an observation post 75 yards away. In order to get a better view of action down the beach, your correspondent joined them. We followed the jungle trail rather than the beach-line, thinking our fatigues blended with the green foliage. Fifteen yards were covered before the enemy opened fire. Dropping to the earth, we slithered toward a fallen coconut tree. The sniper fired twice more, kicking up dirt 10 yards away. The tree offered excellent protection, but staying pinned down was out of the question —ammunition was needed forward.

"Hey, what's wrong with you guys?" Sgt. Howard Hall, of Trenton, N. J., ambled up swinging a submachine gun. He had crossed the point, but the enemy refused to take a shot. Evidently the sniper was close enough to see that Hall carried automatic fire capable of chopping down a tree. We started forward again, leaving Hall, almost reaching our point when the rifle barked again.

FIVE FAST ROUNDS

Evidently, another sniper. He fired several rounds in the gun pit of Sgt. William Richardson (Miami, Fla.) and Cpl. Hazer Walton (Lumpkin, Ga.) who operate an anti-tank battery. The 37-mm. gun pointed toward the Mavavia river, was swung around toward the jungle. We waited—studying the trees with binoculars. The sniper fired five fast rounds which whacked against the emplacement. His first and last mistake. He, too, realized his error —shooting five times in succession.

his position when Hall started descending.

Sgt. Richardson fired twice. His first shot was too high. The second cut the tree in half—blowing the Japanese almost in two pieces.

"Got him dead to rights," his companion answered. The barrel of the gun was left of the tree. The gun was raised. What was left of the Japanese fell like a melon. The coconut tree floated to the ground. Sergeant Richardson started cleaning the gun.

Also Takes 5

AFRO-American

Italian Towns

Bz 24-44

Prisoners Tramp in 12-29-44 at Fifty Per Day in at the rate of 50 per day, many of them deserters.

MANY DESERTERS

5 Towns Taken

The prisoner bag was reported at more than 250 as elements of the division captured in succession five small villages—Bassano, Terrinea, Levigliana, Fabriano, and Nasati—while other elements advanced as far as Azzano and were proving enemy positions.

Clear weather prevailed over the week-end but the battle was much the same—hills and more hills with the Germans controlling the best observation points making fierce fighting strictly an infantry show.

There was little mention of Armistice Day as the fighting men were too busy battling for it. They are battling with a determination to destroy the enemy, hopeful that peace, when it comes, also brings the democracy for which they fight.

Searchlight GI's Resent Transfer to Stevedoring

AFRO - American Balt. Md.
5-27-44

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE ON NEW CALEDONIA—(Via Air Mail)—They've got enough wind in their jaws to huff and puff and blow the island of Yokohama right out of the Pacific and they would probably do just that if they got the chance.

The unit was originally made up of searchlight and gun batteries. The men were thoroughly trained to put their powerful lights on enemy aircraft 30,000 feet in the sky, and they had above-the-average firing records on 50-calibre machine guns, .37 and .40mm. anti-aircraft guns and 105-mm. heavy guns.

Now, however, after having had not a single opportunity to show their mettle under fire, the battalion has been redesignated quartermaster service and put to work stevedoring on the docks.

Want Action, Not Safety

On suggestion of the unit commanding officer, this correspondent talked to small groups from the battalion.

I told them how lucky they are to be located where they can have Coca-Cola, beer and regular movies . . . about the rugged life of combat units in battle areas . . . . about ack-ack troops who sit for months atop hills and just wait and fight the mosquitoes and flies.

I told them I envied them and the men in the front lines do, too, then I told them what a treacherous enemy the Jap is. I tried to explain how every man's job is important in the big job of winning the war.

The boys nodded, asked a few questions, told me they appreciated my efforts to boost their morale.

Belittles "Lifting Boxes"

With but few exceptions, these men want a crack at the Japs. One soldier explained his desire for front-line action thusly:

"You see, when we get back home and the flyers will be talking about what they did, the infantrymen about what they did, and the marines about what they did . . . well, I will be wanting to talk about what I did and I don't want to be telling them I lifted boxes."

"You may get back and have to use half an arm to help you explain what you did if you get up front," I told him, but I lost the argument, and knew it when he said:

"I'm willing to make whatever sacrifice is necessary — even to die, to prove I am a man."

49 Win Chance at Combat

Some members of the original unit are getting a chance to see action, however. These men, some selected because of special abilities and others because of luck in a lottery conducted when volunteers were sought and the whole unit stepped forward, number forty-nine.

A Philadelphian, who soldiered with three hometowners in the old outfit said T/4 Enoch Saunders and T/5 John E. Gardner and Elgin Woodward are carrying the banner for the City of Brotherly Love.

Among "Lucky 49"

Others of the "Lucky 49", whose hometowns were not available, are:

Sgts. Henry Perry, Harvey Moses, Richard Parker, Deir Richards, Clarence Napper, Nathaniel Cutts, Oscar Green, Robert Loury, Billie W. Miller, and S/Sgt. John Pleasant.

Cpls.-Walter A. Ratliff, Warren G. Christian, Luther R. Williams, Anthony Johnson, Jesse C. Thompson and Joe Baldwin. T/3rd John W. Henson; T/4ths Leon Bledsoe, Thomas A. Wilson, Julius W. Bacote, and Thomas E. South; T/5ths James D. Pounds, Earl I. Jackson, Foster Westbrook, Samuel Taylor, Willie J. O'Connor, Henry O. Johnson and George House.

Pfcs. Francis L. Sewell, Jerry M. Goodwin, Venus A. Jarrell, Thomas Mason, Willie Pritchett, Haven Jones and George Smith. Pvts. Buster Scales, Henry Taylor, John C. Hood, Howard Haywood, Freddie Pierce, Roy E. Thierry, Alfred C. Williams, Alphonse Watts, Herman Baskett, Theodore Green and Eddie R. Gary.

Reward Heroism Of 'Buffaloes' Over In Italy

Atlanta World Ga.
12-14-44

Memphian Tries To Save Wounded Man Under Fire

Atlanta, Ga.

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, ITALY — Bronze Star Medals now decorate the breasts of five more heroic members of the 92nd "Buffalo" Infantry Division, now in action with Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army in Italy, the War Department reported today.

The honored Doughboys are Staff Sergeant Mandy James of Newport News, Virginia; Sergeant Clarence M. Palmer, of Durham, North Carolina; Corporal Floyd Jones of New York City; Corporal Richard A. Warr of Memphis, Tennessee and Private Matthew Rabland of Buffalo, New York.

LED HIS MEN

Sergeant James, "when his company commander was wounded, gathered a group of men and led them forward under intense machinegun fire to rescue the officer. With the aid of another enlisted man, he succeeded in dragging the officer from under the line of machinegun fire and to a place of cover and shortly thereafter to a place of relative safety. His heroic action, under heavy machinegun fire, at grave personal risk, was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service."

When a reconnaissance party of which he was a member was forced by intense enemy shelling to abandon their vehicle and seek shelter, Sergeant Palmer made a brief reconnaissance, improved the shelter and assumed the responsibility of the other enlisted men with him.

For three hours, Sergeant Palmer acted as runner and messenger for his commander, who proceeded forward on foot to the frontline, executed orders and transmitted messages over difficult terrain although constantly exposed to danger. His cool initiative and personal devotion to duty were an inspiration to the officers and men of his unit.

RECOVERS VEHICLE

While he was with a reconnaissance party, Corporal Jones was forced to abandon his vehicle because of intense enemy shelling. He accompanied his commander to a sheltered spot nearby where he remained during the heavy shelling, awaiting an order to remove his vehicle.

Ordered to evacuate the vehicle, Jones found the tires had been destroyed. He secured spares and changed the tires although it was hazardous to remain in the area, then recovered the vehicle.

His effective execution of orders and coolness under shellfire, and his high sense of duty were an inpiration to officers and men who were present.

Corporal Warr, then a private first class, voluntarily moved forward, accompanied by another soldier, in an attempt to rescue a wounded man. Although subjected to heavy enemy artillery fire, Warr disregarded personal danger and kept on until he reached the man.

BROUGHT BACK BODY

Finding the wounded soldier dead, Warr and his comrade brought the body back to a position of cover where evacuation for a decent burial was aranged.

"His heroic action, at grave personal risk, is indicative of the finest traditions of the military service," read the citation with the award.

12-14-44

Private Ragland voluntarily moved forward, in the face of heavy enemy fire, accompanied by another soldier, in an attempt to rescue a wounded man. Disregarding personal danger the two men crawled through a tunnel and across 30 yards of completely exposed terrain.

Finding the wounded man had died, Ragland and his comrade brought the body back to a position of cover where evacuation for a deecnt burial was arranged. His citation asid, "His heroic action at grave personal risk, is indicative of the finest traditions of the military service."

-1944

700 Tan Yank Students in S.P. "Foxhole University"

AFRO-AMERICAN

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE ON NEW CALEDONIA—(Via Air Mail)—The South Pacific "Foxhole University," currently in session, has almost 100 Tan Yank students enrolled in courses ranging from the three R's to engineering mechanics.

The Foxhole University is one of the many beneficial facilities offered Uncle Sam's fighting men by the Special Services Division and is more accurately called the Army Institute.

It offers instruction by correspondence to all enlisted personnel and includes, beside elementary education, over 700 high school and college courses designed to make GI Joe "a better soldier," help him get ready for promotion," "prepare for officer training," "qualify for a better job" or "continue his education."

Entrance Requirements

Only prerequisites for enrollment are at least four months' active service and willingness to pay $2 for each Army Institute course and or half the cost of any university or college extension course costing up to $40. In the latter case, the government pays half the text and tuition fee.

At Noumea recently a study center was opened where enrollees in the Foxhole University may consult with tutors holding master and doctorate degrees. Forty per cent of those in attendance were Tan Yanks who have since been regular callers at the center.

Most Popular Course

Most popular course among colored enrollees is electric welding, with algebra, machine shop practise and carpentry following closely.

Other courses the boys are studying include water works and sewerage plant operation, Diesel engines, aviation engines, airplane maintenance, plumbing, gas welding, elementary electricity, automobile repairing, refrigeration, mechanical drawing, trigonometry and English.

Highest number of enrollees are members of an engineer construction regiment. Others are members of a port battalion, a quartermaster service battalion and an MP company. They include: Sgt. Bradley Brittain, Arlington, Va., studying arithmetic; T/5 John D. Bullock, Frederick Hall, Md., bookkeeping an daccountancy; T/4 Israel Butler of Smock, Pa., grammar.

T/5 George Sweatt, NYC, arithmetic; T5 Henry White, Cleveland, shorthand: T5 Walter Harper, Atlanta, grammar; Cpl. Hearthel Johnson, Mississippi, bookkeeping; Lieut. E. L. Derry, Ardmore, Pa. traffic movement; Soldiers L. D. Haynes, Cornelius Hill, Fancy Lee, Bruce Saunders and Dannis Thomas, radio telegraphy bookkeeping, carpentry and electric welding.

Members of an MP outfit, recently arrived overseas after doing a long tour of duty in and near Philadelphia, and now studying courses ranging from shorthand to engineering mechanics, the latter a basic course for structural engineering are:

Lester Sanders, Whitney Cameron, Aliza Bowser, Wayne Kirk, Caryle Black, Alvin Ryan, Willie Bell, Jimmie Rowe, Joseph Kirkland, Joseph LaFleur and Wayman Wave.

70 Engineers Enrolled

The seventy members of the engineering regiment enrolled in the Foxhole University are:

Ted Embry, Herbert Andrews, William Gatling, Joseph Harris, Levin Purnell, Freeman Caradine, Sumner Martin, Jacob Jones, Dewey Hughes, Robert Thomas, Arthur Johnson, August Phelps, Vermal Hill, Luke Harris, W. B. Washington, James Juniel, Albert Evans, Paul Hunter, Paul Wells, Clarence Pheonix, Sam Belcher, Thomas Cassom, Chester Walker Samuel James;

Lawrence Broadnax, John McIntyre, Benjamin Danforth, Reese Morgan, Edward James, John Hicks, James McGhee, William Seals, Essex Morris, Wm. M. Henson, Lester, Jackson, John Johnson, Amos Jenkins, Henry Tillie, John Feagins, Alfred Ragin, George H. Brown, Shelby Johnson, Junius Fininen, James Mims, Millegde Mitchell, Raymond Teal, Denon Allen;

William Mayfield, Dewitt McClain, Fred Osby, Louches Powell, Milton Hall, John Tonsall, Solomon Davis, Leon Brown, Alex Everett, Charles Gowens, James Valentine, William Moses, John Leonard, Clinton Pickett, James Dyson, Ora Osborne, Ernest Fannin, Pheme Turner, Roy Cameron, Alfred Jefferson, William Green, Albert Martin and George A. Martin.

Negro Troops Credited With Assist In Air Blitz

Defender—Chicago, Ill.

By EDWARD B. TOLES

(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH A COMBAT SUPPORT WING OF THE EIGHTH AIR FORCE IN ENGLAND. — From last February to D-Day a great and decisive air battle was fought and won by Anglo-American air forces all over Western Europe from the Zuider Zee to the Danube. American bombers broke the back of German airpower and cleared Europe's skies for invasion.

Untold has been the Negro's contribution to these great sky battles even though there were no Negro members in those columns of Flying Fortresses streaking through the substratosphere advancing on Germany.

But Negro units compose many of the Combat Support Wings supplying bombs, ammunition, and gasoline to 8th Air Force planes and last week they were still a vital part of the air service command supplying the bombers.

Endless Supply

Said Lt. Theodore "Ted" Lawson, 6345 Rhodes avenue, Chicago, "The principal job that this battalion has accomplished has been an endless supply of the necessary materials that successfully blasted the Luftwaffe from the air. Our men of this outfit have worked 24 hour shifts keeping these fortresses well supplied with bombs. There are several battalions doing this same work and three of them have been made up of our boys with their own officers."

I walked with Lt. Lawson one cold, raw morning to the trucks where a large convoy was proceeding to move off. The trucks were headed for a nearby port where they would receive ammunition and bombs just off the ships.

From the ports these bombs would be transported to the many fields that dot Britain. Sometimes the need was so great that when these trucks speeded in, the great fortresses would be roaring ready to go, and while the trucks stopped bombs were loaded from trucks to fortress.

Vital to Bombing

One trucker anxious to be under way stopped however to tell me some of the other things that this unit has been doing since D-Day He was Pvt. George A. Gaines, 5652 South Parkway, Chicago, Ill., and nephew of Joseph Brice whose Chicken Shack on 55th street made us both wish for home.

"Not only have we been hauling bombs but we have also transported paratroop divisions during and after D-Day on all of their missions. I'll say that trucking can be a vital part of this bombing of Germany for if you had been here during those important days when there was split second timing you'd see some action.

"Imagine, a convoy of some 40 trucks speeding to the airfield where fortresses were taking off and some waiting to take off. The only holdup was our bombs that we used to them fresh from the ships' holds. As fast as our trucks got to them, they moved on off down the runway headed for Germany. It was a pleasant sight to watch and to feel too, for we truckers knew that we had one assist to our credit in the bombing of Germany."

27 Negro Officers

Thirty-three officers are with this unit and 27 are Negro officers. An officer accompanies each convoy on its mission and during the hectic days of D-Day when 8th Air Force was working over duty even enlisted men were pressed into duty as convoy commanders.

For his excellent work during the Normandy invasion days Sgt Johnny Patterson of Greenwood Miss., was commended by Col. Robert M. Goodall, commanding officer of the combat support wing. Sgt. Patterson headed a convoy hauling bombs and was out on the road for 12 days keeping the combat stations well supplied.

"All missions were performed without delay and there were nine men with trucks under Sgt. Patterson's direction," said Lt. Frank W. Morris, 1519 Page street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Besides Lt. Lawson, another old friend and former classmate at the University of Illinois turned up when I made the rounds of Nissen huts where the men were keeping fires going.

He was Sgt. Willis Brown, 1815 Emerson street, Evanston, Ill. Sgt. Brown even had a picture of us both taken during our days in Champaign.

Many Chicagoans

A goodly number of Chicagoans were seen wishing for the old days back home. They were Sgt. Floyd H. Cavins, 3712 South Parkway; Cpl. Albert Fooks, Pvt. Roy L. Tate, 2940 Lake Park avenue; Pvt. Clarence L. Shular, 643 E. 67th street; Sgt. Chester L. McCullough, 5738 Calumet avenue; Cpl. Cecil J. Fleming, 5228 State street; Sgt. Edgar L. Briggs, Pvts. Charles Larterbuck, Albert H. Thomas, Charlie Richards, Walter Williams, Junius Johnson and Sgt. John Fisher, Evanston.

In a nearby town a Chicago Red Cross worker is the director of a club which is one of the homiest clubs that I've seen. She is Miss Olive Blackwell and has as her assistant Miss Majorie Sills.

A huge farewell party was being planned for Lts. Theodore Lawson, Chicago; Hugh DeLeon, Brooklyn, N. Y.; David C. Womack, Detroit, Mich.; James A. Shields, Detroit, Mich., and Kenneth M. Glenn, Detroit, who by this time are somewhere in France.

There's something about leaving a unit where you know so many guys. Although I had stayed only one night with these fellows I hated to leave for they were such grand fellows.

Former Chronicle Man

Lt. Louis Miles, Monroe, La., Special Services officer guided me over the entire camp. I met Sgt. Clifton Moble, Detroit, Mich., who has done work with the Michigan Chronicle. Lt. William A. Perry, 224 McDonough street, Brooklyn, N. Y., saw to my transportation to another unit.

Ranking officers are Captains Walter T. Lewis, Cleveland, Ohio; Bruce S. Thally, Washington, D. C., and McDawson L. Burton, Glen Jean, W. Va., who is married to the former Jane Wickliffe of Fort Wayne, Ind.

Other officers are: Lts. William Dunn, Baton Rouge, La.; Henry K. Holmes, Columbia, Tenn.; Edward J. Putte, New York City; Phillip L. Burton, Kansas City, Mo.; George R. English, Mobile, Ala.; John F. Smith, Phoenix, Ariz.; Daniel H. Turner, Muskogee, Okla.; Louis F. Martin, Princess Anne, Md.; Ronald Mordicai, New York City, and Warrant Officers Clarence E. Mitchell, Walterboro, S. C.; Benjamin F. Travania, Claremore, Okla., and John H. Finley Jr., Tuskegee, Ala.

Sur Seille and soon after lunch had advanced almost three miles to Morville.

Guns, Tanks, Planes Busy

Our artillery had laid down a barrage and our planes had bomped the enemy directly ahead of them, but the tankmen still met considerable German artillery and small arms fire.

In one of the leading tanks was Sgt. Herbert Hayes, Cpl. Landy Scott, St. Louis, tank commander; Pfc. W. J. Turner, Austin, Texas, loader and Pfc. Riley Hill, Texarkana, Ark., machine gunner.

Cpl. Aydis Grahan of Boston and his crew soon after the attack began, shot up a Nazi pillbox camouflaged like a haystack and captured a jerry officer and two men. That particular pillbox had been causing many headaches and had to be knocked out before any advance could be made by the infantry.

Describes Jerry Surrender

Battle Germans in Blinding Snowstorm

AFRO-AMERICAN—Balt. Md.

11-18-44

Crew Knocks Out Camouflaged Pillbox; Captures Officer, 2 Men

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Five Baltimoreans fighting with a tank battalion in France are mentioned in this story.]

WITH THE THIRD ARMY, France.—(By Cable)—A blinding snowstorm was raging when I finally caught up with the first colored tank battalion fighting against the Germans on the front.

I arrived by jeep the day after election day and found the tankmen so busy leading one sector of General Patton's assault between Nancy and Metz that they did not know President Roosevelt had been re-elected.

Uusing Sherman mediums and lighter scout tanks, elements of the battalion, Wednesday morning, roared out of the vicinity of

With Graham were Cpl. Arthur Williams, Arkadelphia, Ark.; Pvt. Lawrence Belcher, West Virginia; Cpl. Coleman Simmons, Detroit, and Cpl. Johnnie Holmes, Chicago, tank commander.

Said Graham: "We poured lead into the haystack until it blazed and the Jerries ran out with their hands up. They were the first prisoner our outfit took after going into action."

Major. Gen. Willard Paul commands the Yankee division to which the tankers are attached.

Cold, bone-chilling rain that had been falling for days turned to snow an hour before I reached a mud puddle where several tanks were waiting to go up front. Turning into the area, our jeep ploughed and sank in hub-deep mud and passing vehicles drenched me in gobs of mud.

Everybody Miserable

The area in which the men ate and slept for two days was dotted with foxholes, filled with water, which looked like open-air, square bath tubs. Here and there a sagging pup tent indicated that another GI had been driven out of his home by the downpour.

Everybody looked miserable because everybody was damn cold. Faces were pinched, eyes and nose were running water and all the while the snow and wind made you brace yourself to keep erect.

I found one group nursing a tiny blaze, among them Cpl. Jerome Forbes, 916 W. Mulberry Street, Baltimore, tank driver. He said, with a muddy smile: "Got any papers from home?"

I skidded back to the jeep and gave him three AFRO's published in September. A young riot started as dozens tried to read them at the same time.

Wear Clothes for Weeks

Some of these men had not been undressed in over a week nor dry in several days. When water flooded the tents and foxholes, those who couldn't get into tanks or trucks crawled under the vehicles and snoozed in the mud.

Pfc. Eugene Henry, 2127 Pennsylvania Avenue, Baltimore, tank gunner, hoped to bag a Nazi when they got his tank out of the ditch. I found him in the mess tent while I was thawing out.

Other Baltimoreans seen include Pvt. Leonard Shoultz, 741 Harlem Avenue; Sgt. Lindsey Edwards, 837 George Street, and Pvt. Robert Thorne, 303 Myrtle Avenue.

Lt. Lawrence Bagwell, Palestine, Texas, explained to me between the rumble of artillery what other platoons were doing and where they were fighting, but I was too cold to remember anything he said. He and Lts. John Hairston, Toledo, and Edward Cannon, Brooklyn, waded cheerfully in mud almost to their knees to show me around.

2 Unforgettable Incidents

Two things happened that I'll ean never forget. One was the moment when General Paul showed me on the may where forward elements of the tankers were fighting, then the rattle of guns not far away made the old building we sat in tremble violently.

If he reads this, he will know that I wasn't anxious to go any farther toward the front at the moment.

The other memorable thing was the lunch which consisted of C ration stew and tepid coffee. Not knowing conditions, I asked for a niece of bread, but there was nothing else in the way of food for these fighting men that day. And until more rations were delivered there was nothing on the menu but stew and coffee.

11-18-44

WITH TANK BATTALION, THIRD ARMY, France. — (By Cable) — After expressing gratitude for being alive and mentioning the fact that on Armistice Day I had my most narrowest escape of the entire campaign, I will try to give a part of the picture of the first three days of terrific fighting by the tankers who helped move the Third Army right up to the border of the Reich.

The battalion has had its baptism of fire now and so have I. As I write this from the comparative safety of the bivouac area to which the tank crews have been withdrawn for a breathing spell, I still have a vivid picture of the terrific shelling we went through Saturday which cost us one tank and made everybody fighting mad.

The first 88-mm. shell whistled over while I talked to Sgt. Albert Word, East St. Louis, Ill., tank commander, who, with his gunner, Cpl. Javan Council, Dayton, Ohio, Thursday, knocked out two 88 guns and a pillbox in a tank named "Baby Evelyn." We paid little attention because the shell landed 400 yards away.

Sixth Shell Hits Tank

The second, third and fourth landed much closer and the fifth or sixth hit the tank and set it afire. The tanks were well dispersed over an area a mile long, but after the enemy got our range, no place was healthy. I crawled under a tank with Cpl. James Grissom, Indianapolis, tank mechanic, and for forty minutes sweated out quite a nasty bit of shelling.

Later, leaving the area for two in the rear, we tried to cross a bridge, zeroed in and were shelled spasmodically. The soldier sitting in the car beside me was hit in the cheek by shrapnel when a shell exploded twenty yards away.

However, on the two previous days our lads did much more damage to the Germans between Vic Sur Seille and Hamport.

"Colored tankmen don't know when to quit fighting. You knock out their tanks, but they got underneath and keep shooting. My company was good enough to go all through Russia, but these men left me nobody, so I surrendered."

11-18-44

Sing Captain's Praise

The whole outfit is singing the praises of Capt. Irvin McHenry, Leavenworth, Kans., company commander, who with a minimum loss of men and tanks spearheaded the attack that resulted in the capture of one town and gained his objective of the outskirts of another. His outfit's batteries played an outstanding part in repulsing the week-end fierce German attacks near Chateau Salins.

Slugging in there with the 26th Division which protected the snow-blanketed and rain-drenched right flank of the Third Army, the whole battalion hung on grimly more than once when the Nazis hurled all their might into the line, but for each yard yielded two more were gained before the smoke of battle had cleared.

11-18-44

Fight Germans, Elements, Too

It is brutal, rough, fighting against the elements as well as the Germans, but the tank lads faced death with tight-lipped, eager efficiency when the going was roughest.

Said Cpl. Melvin Bird, 111 S. Bond Street, Baltimore, gunner: "We had a hell of a time and lost some men, but we learned a lot those first few days."

S/Sgt. William Kitt, Tuskegee, commander of a tank called "FDR of War," knocked out [illegible] some pillbox with his crew composed of Cpl. Cecil Garlington, 21840 Vernon Street, Northwest, Washington, gunner; Sgt. Killard Neely, Hickman, Ky., driver; Pfc. Lawrence Wooden, 1224 Maryland Avenue, Northeast, Washington, cannoneer; Pfc. Emmet Williams, Muskogee, Okla, radio man.

Baby Hazel Wrecks the Town

The tank called "Baby Hazel," commanded by Sgt. James Justice, Dallas, Texas, shot up half of a town to rescue the crew of another tank hit at a road block, and commanded by Sgt. Roy King, Detroit. A tank shell caused a huge building to collapse upon score of Germans.

Cpl. Linwood Hicks, Portsmouth, Va., gunner, and Pfc. Odell Williams, Dayton, Ohio, assistant, accounted for two pillboxes, one armored car and a machine gun nest.

11-18-44

An assault platoon, which has special guns for clearing up stubborn resistance by the enemy, is commanded by First Lt. Charles Gates, Kansas City, Mo. On the second day of the fighting, the platoon wrecked two Mark IV tanks and four other vehicles. Chief of section is Sgt. Joseph Tates, 702 Brune Street, Baltimore. His buddies are:

Many Baltimoreans

Pfc. Raymond Burrell, 1128 Laurens Street; Pfc. Nathaniel Batts, 1008 W. Franklin Street; Pfc. James Cole, 522 Brune Street, all Baltimore; Sgt. James Ballard, 4466 Douglas Street, Northeast, Washington; Cpl. Leon Hopton, Corona, Long Island; Pvt. George Goines, 2418 N. Twenty-fifth Street, Philadelphia; Sgt. Raymond Gaffney, S.C., and brother, George; Cpl. Buddy Branch, Dayton, Ohio, and Sgt. Isaah Parks, Charlotte, N.C., who came out of the escape hatch after the tank was crippled, and slaughtered Jerries from beneath.

11-18-44

Then there is the reconnaissance platoon, commanded by First Lt. William E. Blake, Atlantic City, which did better than all right over the week end. The job of this section is to scout in advance of the main column and draw the enemy's fire to locate his position.

Most Dangerous Job of All

Pvt. Harry Jones, Bloomington, Ind., radio operator, told me: "Our job is perhaps the most dangerous of all when Jerry is really dug in. We have to be always on the alert to keep from being ambushed or knocked out by mines, but we are crazy about the job.

I talked with the men just after a reconnaissance mission. Lieutenant Blake was shaving and Cpl. Erwin Fry, Cincinnati, half-track driver, was trying to build a fire to keep us all from freezing.

S/Sgt. Dexter Fuller, Chickasha, Okla., ranking non-com, was full of praise for his men. They are:

11-18-44

Pfc. Eugene Matthews, Kansas City, Mo.; Clinton Harlson, Sacramento, Ky., both gunners; Pfc. James Hughes, Berkeley, W.Va., scout; Cpl. Horace Johnson, Rockville Center, Long Island; Pvt. Wilbur Denson, Brooklyn; Sgt. William Baker, Cleveland; Cpl. Charles Shartward, Chicago; Pfc. Thomas Paulete, and Pfc. Jerome Lampkins, Memphis; Pvt. James Corbin, Detroit; Pvt. William Fuell, Kansas City; Pvt. Sidney Dickason, Berkeley, W.Va.; Sgt. Jay Johnson, Dutch, W.Va., and Pvt. Hardy Gaynes, Chickasha, Okla.

Goes on Secret Mission

While we shivered, Captain McHenry took five tanks out on a secret mission. We all stood up and yelled good luck as the mighty Shermans groaned through mud and clattered down a narrow road where machine guns were barking in a frenzied manner and the screams of enemy shells made us hug vehicles and ditches for protection before the tanks were out of sight.

It was late afternoon Sunday, with occasional snow, but between flurries Thunderbolt fighter planes peeled off just over the hill to dive bomb the Germans.

Maybe we gained a mile, maybe a hundred yards. All I could think of was the fact that the Germans must be as cold as we were in mud over our boot tops, which would be our Sabbath bed.

Captured Nazi Captain Fears Our Tank Men

A captured German captain paid the following tribute to the colored tank battalion on duty at the front in France:

"Colored tankmen don't know when to quit fighting. You knock out their tanks, but they get underneath and keep shooting. My company was good enough to go all through Russia,

Soldiers Demand Voting Right If They Are Expected To Fight

Pittsburgh Courier 5-27-44

ATLANTA, Ga.—(ANP)—Asserting that "if we are good enough to fight and die for the cause of democracy, our loved ones and friends are certainly entitled to reap the true benefits of it," 24 Army officers of a combat unit now serving in the South Pacific last week addressed a letter to Georgia's Gov. Ellis Arnall, urging him to seek revision of the State's soldier vote bill and allow all Georgians in the service and out irrespective of race, full participation in American armed forces scattered the primaries and other elections, throughout the world. We are and die on the battlefields of the world. We feel and believe that

Released to newspapermen, Governor Arnall's letter in reply simply stated: "The white Democratic primary in this State is unAmerica proper have stood and are Americans only. der the exclusive control and authority of the State and county Democratic executive committees I am not a member of any Democratic party committee."

"Governor Arnall," the letter read, "we have for the officers read, from the officers been taught to believe that we Americans are fighting for the four freedoms of the Atlantic Charter, and that we are fighting for the preservation of democracy. We believe that it is our constitutional right to vote as qualified citizens of Georgia. Surely, this war is not being fought for Negro Georgians and the Negroes of Georgia the right to cast his ballot in all elections.

"ONE CAUSE . . . DEMOCRACY"

In other letters received only with whether or not mack, 2nd Lt. William H. Perry, 2nd Lt. George M. Shuffer, 2nd Lt. James Francis, C. Battle, 2nd Lt. James Ralph G. Brooks, 1st Lt. Fields, 2nd Lt. E. M. Gardner, 1st Lt. Milton C. Lewis, 1st Lt. Warren K. Hook, 1st Lt. Thomas O. Diggs (chaplain), 1st Lt. Noah Armstrong, 2nd Lt. Luther R. Wood, 2nd Lt. Clarence T. Hendon, 1st Lt. Coleridge, Capt. Clarence A. Ridgely, 1st Lt. Cecil W. Davis.

America, Please Copy! Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mixed Unit In France Proof Two Races Can Live, Work Together

Pittsburgh Courier 11-25-44

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE—(ANP)—I was immensely pleased and gratified when I visited one of the strangest units on the western front, called "quartermaster effects company" and composed approximately of an even number of white and colored soldiers who work and live like a large family. I would not have known of this outfit had I not paid a visit to the "Silhouette" in propaganda.

Paris, a little cabaret on Rue-Notre-Dam-de-Lorette, where I met Pvts. Ed. Warner of East Chicago, Ind., and Conway Butler from New Orleans. These two GIs presented an air of happiness and contentment, and their eyes were sparkling like the champagne cocktail they were sipping. They asked me to have a drink with them, which I readily accepted.

WANTED TO SEE FOR SELF

"How are they treating you?" I asked. "Swell," said those boys. Here Warner interjected, "We couldn't expect anything better. I am the driver for our commanding officer, Major MaCormick, and I can truthfully say that he makes no distinction in the company." With this information I decided to visit the company the very next day and see for myself.

I met Maj. F. R. MaCormick from Florida, who was evidently pleased to see me and tell me about his work and his men. He said that his primary function was the efficient execution of the important task assigned him and secondly, he was interested in the welfare and happiness of each man in his company.

I had lunch with the officers—Capt. Joseph Minetti from New York, who is in charge of the warehouse; Capt. Henry H. Beck from Oshkosh, Wis., Capt. W. Freeman Sharp, Jr., Lt. S. Maurice Pool, Lt. Joseph Vogl from New York City, and 2nd Lt. Thomas F. Flannery from Springfield, Mass., who is in charge of the colored soldiers in the outfit. All of these officers have expressed sincerely their pleasure of their association with this mixed team.

AND THEY EAT TOGETHER

"We exercise justice in small things, and would avoid all cause of offense, not by seeking merely to please all, but to give all their due." These were the words Captain Minetti said to me. Capt. Henry Beck said that there is always an amicable adjustment of disputes if there are any. At lunch I saw the men sitting together full of geniality, humor, conversation, and cheerfulness of nature which make men agreeable. Those people who repeatedly say that white and colored soldiers cannot associate amicably are creating a distortion of right and justice, by imputing defects of character on the part of the Negro. Here is another unit that has given the lie to such unjust

These are the names of the colored boys in the outfit:

Sgt. A. G. Newton from Manhattan, Kans., Sgt. Marvin A. Wortham, Cpl. Charles Albertson, Philadelphia; Cpl. W. Earl Grimes, Detroit; Cpl. Robert Jones, Palm Beach, Fla.; Cpl. Numa Barnabe, Opelousas, La., and Pfc. A. Richie Carter, Houston, who writes more love letters than any other member in the company. Here is the list of the Pfs.: Clarence Dominguez, New Orleans; Robert Franklin, Arizona; James Hennings, St. Louis; F. Julius Lissimore, Valdosta, Ga.; Ike Perry, Atlanta; W. John Robertson, Cleveland; A. Joseph Willis, Atlanta, and Robert Winter, Jacksonville Fla.

Here is the list of the Privates: Frank Collier, Houston; Trellie Culbreath, Monroe, Ga.; Robert L. Giddings, Houston; N. Ambrose Johnson, West Virginia; Walter Latham, Kinston, N. C.; Joseph Lobo, Nantucket, Mass.; James Maxwell, Savannah; William McCall, North Carolina; A. Arthur Nash, Hope, Ark.; Brazee Robinson, Miami; L. Hubert Sanders, St. Petersburg, Fla., and William Wilkerson, Chicago.

'Coon' Story Not True, Declares Gen. Somervell

Defender—Chicago, Ill. 12-9-44

Lt. General Brehon B. Somervell's ideas on the disposition of Negro troops are not what rumors say they are.

The Army's Chief of Service forces, wherein are located some 70 percent of all Negro soldiers, denied this week having called them "coons" or having said the desert was the proper place for them.

General Somervell was quoted recently by a Washington White House correspondent as having said when asked concerning the use of Negro troops for combat purposes: "I would like to take all of the coons and drop them in the middle of the desert.

Contacted here by the Chicago Defender, General Somervell appraised the report, said: "There is not a word of truth in the story."

Race Soldiers Operate Rail Head Near German's Border

12-15-44 Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

First Army Is Kept Supplied By Quartermasters

WITH THE FIRST U. S. ARMY IN BELGIUM — Amid the huge mountains of supplies of all kinds intended for use by front line units of this Army, now across the German border, the all-Negro 3170th QM Service Company is one of the two companies of a QM Group assigned to the operation of a large railyard, which was recently used by the Germans as a marshalling center.

It now serves the First Army as one of its distribution points, receiving freight by rail from the French coast over routes opened by the Army's Transportation Corps.

In the distance can be seen the ridge which separates this part of Belgium from the present-day borders of Germany. Once this same station was actually in Germany, but the area was divorced from the Reich after the World War. It is now a Class III depot.

The QM Group is under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Kenneth E. Keverin, white, of Twin Falls, Idaho.

Two Negro warant officers operate in Group Headquarters. They are warrant officers, junior grade Robert E. Gayle, of 1418 Eagle St., New Orleans, Lousiana, a Dillard University graduate, and who also studied business administration at Atlanta University and Henry G. Crockett, of 1303 East 4th Street, Waterloo, Iowa.

Along Jungle Roads Toward Tokio, Negroes, Whites Build Friendship

Northwest Herald—Seattle, Wash.

Eyewitness Relays Story Of 'Great Job'

11-21-44

By DOUG WARD

Along the jungle trail of smashed equipment, bleaching skeletons and rotting corpses which leads toward the eclipse of the Japanese Empire, American Negro troops are making a powerful contribution to victory, and a foundation of friendship and respect upon which post-war unity can be built, is being created between Negro and white Americans in uniform.

For four months, as I write this article, I have lived in close daily association with both white and Negro troops, in Australia and in British and Dutch Guinea; from Milne Bay northward through Oro Bay, Buna, Finschhafen, Hollandia, Maffin Bay and Biak.

My observations and conclusions are drawn from contact with men of the Army Engineers, Quartermaster's Corps, Transportation Corps, white infantrymen, and Navy Seabees. There were Negro combat units in the area, but I was never fortunate enough to contact them.

New and Growing

In the Australian city of Sydney, "liberty-town" for servicemen on war-fatigue leave, conditions surrounding Negro soldiers on leave revealed that which is old and passing slowly but surely away in the relations between Negro and white Americans.

After first seeing this, I was better able later, in the Guineas, to see and appreciate that which is new and growing.

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

BOUGAINVILLE, (By Cable, Censored) — A few miles inside here is one of comparative calm, of the U.S. peremiter, elements of the 93rd Division have set up only occasionally when the machine-guns of a bivouac area of a maze of pup tents where they chatter is a throwback to what they can lie around on the ground and soak up the warmth of the morning sunshine dured on the front lines. A few while resting from the soldiers may grab their rifles and But they are not entirely idle, get on the alert, but then they lay for a new training cycle has been launched and there are short spells of close-order drill, study of gun nomenclature and the articles of war.

Your correspondent joined outfit this week and the tacks by either side, but there doubtful luxury of a tent was wasn't a moment when the men where rain flow weren't under the strain of constant vigilance through like the Grand Rapids.

War Not Far Off

Up there they lived in foxholes we are constantly and dugouts, surrounded by dense aware that the war is not too far jungle in which the Japs spied away. Every few minutes the on them very closely. Patrols went out daily — as bang of one of our heavy artillery many as four a day — for ten days when the unit garrisoned and fought on Hill 65 and the Numa Numa Trail.

There were other jobs, too, for the unit ferried up its own rations and those of several other elements and some of the boys nicknamed themselves the "Swift Packing Co."

Patrols Lost 10

Some of the patrols got into fights and there are ten dead and eight wounded to attest to the 100 JAPS KILLED 2-3-44 Easterners Tell Tubbs of Experiences.

93rd Getting More Training Afro American Baltimore, Md. Bivouac Area Set Up Near Front Lines

toughness of one scrap. The Japs lost an estimated 100 men in tackling the boys, however.

Nightmare memories lurk in the minds of Sgt. Edward Hall of Parole, Md., and Sgt. Carey Woods of St. Louis, for they stayed in the jungle all one night with wounded comrades. Sergeant Wood smeared the blood of a pal on his face and played dead while a Jap rolled him over, searched him and took his pistol. The two men were outnumbered so they didn't start a fight.

From time to time little groups get together here in our camp and relive their experiences.

Junior officers conduct classes in gunnery. Among these are First Lieuts. Aaron Jackson of Eufala, Ala., and James Shelton of Nashville, Ark., recently promoted; and Second Lieuts. William McZeal of Chicago, Hilary Moore of Cairo, Ill., and William Scruggs of Brooklyn. 6-3-44

Rains Come Daily

The rains come in the middle of each afternoon and as we lie under shelter halves the boys talk to me, mostly about war correspondents.

"We were scared and we moved up because Lieut. Scruggs told us to dash, and we killed because we wanted to save our hides," Pvt. Clarence Johnson of Wilmington, Del., said.

When the rains stop the men go back to their drilling or studying. Among them are: 6-3-44

Pvts. Theodore Smith, 1911 Seventh Street, Northwest, Washington; Walter Young, 733 Saratoga Street, Baltimore; Robert Strickland, Rock Hill, S.C.; Wilbert McLean, Rowland, N.C.; Robert Thompson, Cheraw, S.C.; Pfcs. Curtiss Pitts, NYC; Rudy Johnson, Bluefield, W.Va.; Pedro Ocampo, NYC; T/Sgt. Roy Jenkins, Pittsburgh; S/Sgt. Henry Middlebrooks, Atlanta, mess sergeant, who is to become a father next month and is wanting a picture; S/Sgt. I. W. McNear of Phoenix, Ariz., father of a boy born May 9, and S/Sgt. John Harris of Detroit, who guards some of unit's equipment.

Segregation Disappears at Celebration on Transport

afro American 12-9-44 Baltimore, Md.

ARC Workers from Philly, D.C., and N.Y. Among Those Arriving in New Guinea

By CONRAD CLARK

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA — Old Man Jim Crow was forgotten here recently as newcomers from the States — colored and white, — celebrated together their safe arrival in New Guinea.

The celebration took the form of dances on a transport which had docked for a short while at this base for refueling before going to its destination farther north.

6 ARC Workers Arrive

Two Red Cross workers, Miss Evelyn (Pat) Sutton of Philadelphia and Ellen Torrence of La Grande, Ore., were the only colored women on the boat.

Other ARC workers were John C. Ballard, Washington, D.C.; Chappelle Glenn, NYC; Ralph Long, Atlanta, Ga.; and Wilson Berry, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Among those at the dance were colored and white ARC workers, white Wacs, nurses and army officers.

GI's Celebrate

In the enlisted section of the boat, both colored and white soldiers united in celebrating their safe arrival in this theatre of war.

Also on the transport was Capt. J. H. Clanton, a chaplain, whose wife is the former Miss Josephine Moore, head of the home economics department at Washington High School, Raleigh, N.C.

A former teacher, social worker and newspaperwoman, having worked for the Philadelphia AFRO, Miss Sutton is the daughter of Mrs. Charlotte Sutton, 4051 Aspen Street, Philadelphia.

Mr. Ballard, a former member of the National Capital Housing Authority, is the husband of Mrs. Dorothy G. Ballard, a Washington teacher. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Ballard of Lumberton, N.C.

Before accepting his present post, Mr. Glenn did social work in New York and also was employed at the Raritan Arsenal in New Jersey. His wife is Mrs. Claudia S. Glenn of Plainfield, N.J. 12-9-44

H.U. Grad Ranking Non-Com

Among enlisted men on the boat was a unit organized two months ago at Indiantown Gap, Pa. The ranking non-com in the group was a Howard University graduate, S/Sgt. James P. Harris of Richmond, Va., who was acting first sergeant.

Other Easterners in the outfit were:

S/Sgts. Russell Hawkins, Washington, D.C.; King R. Hodges, Bennettville, S.C.; and Ralph Yates, W.Va.; Sgts. Matthew Carter, York, Pa.; James P. Grant, NYC; Leroy C. Nelson, Charleston, S.C.; and Ralph S. R. Thomas, NYC; T/4 James Lawrence, NYC; Pfcs. Walter L. Floyd, Tazewell, Va.; and James F. McIver, Charleston, S.C.; Scott L. Harris, 263 S. Twenty-second Street, Philadelphia; Clarence Brownlow, Greenville, Miss.; Pvt. Pelvin J. Matterson, NYC; Cpls. John D. Spencer, Chicago; W. G. Ashford, Memphis.

La. Sgt. Uses Nazis' Gun to Repel Attack: Honored

Afro American — Baltimore, Md. 12-16-44

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY — Back on September 16, when a motorized patrol was attacked by enemy snipers at the front-line village, S/Sgt. Fred D. Rhodes of Gibsland, La., disregarded his own life in an attempt to save his comrades by exposing himself as an enemy target until the others had scattered for cover.

His gallant action was recognized with the award of a Silver Star on Friday as Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, commanding general of the division, decorated nine enlisted men during appropriate ceremonies.

Bronze star awards were presented T/Sgt. Richard A. Simmons, Jefferson City, Miss.; Pfcs.

Let Men Take Cover

When the truck was scattered Rhodes leaped to the street and opened fire, forcing the enemy to scatter while his own men dismounted and took cover with light casualties.

Later, he moved to the doorway of a building and continued with a harassing fire on the enemy while the wounded patrol members were evacuated.

He was hit by shell fire but, in spite of his wounds, he exhausted his own supply of ammunition and obtained an enemy automatic weapon which he used until all its available ammunition was gone inflicting three certain casualteis on the enemy and probably many others.

Administered Aid to Self

He spent the night in the field administering first aid to himself and then returned to his company next day unaided.

Sergeant Simmons, who participated in the same action with Rhodes was cited for evacuating the wounded under shellfire. Pfcs. Harris, Brownlow and Pvt. Materson are members of a mortar platoon commanded by Lieut. A. Julien, NYC, who discovered that a mortarman's life consists of much more than just lugging the weapon around, dropping in shells and holding the ears.

Go to Aid of Riflemen

Called upon for mortar fire by a rifle company under attack on November 8, the unit became an enemy target itself shortly after shooting its first rounds. One section received five immediate casualties and was forced to abandon to a nearby house.

Notwithstanding the contiruous shelling, the trio took turns running from this spot to the mortar and remaining for five-minute intervals each, firing on the enemy and eventually breaking up the artillery and mortar attack from the Germans.

"Between us, we threw 100 rounds at them," said Pfc. Harris. "The first ones fell short, but we got their mortar and the company moved up," added Matterson, a former shipyard welder.

Repair Wires Under Fire

Corporals Ashford and Spencer are members of an artillery battery which lost communication with its fire direction center when the lines went out. They volunteered to leave the gun position under hostile shelling and repaired the wires successfuly, re-establishing communications.

A dozen shells dropped within twenty yards but they restored communication in time to let the battery execute counter battery fire and check the enemy attack.

Some 4,000 Colored Soldiers Serve Persian Gulf Command

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va. 10-14-44

By FRANK E. BOLDEN

U. S. WAR CORRESPONDENT

(Representing the Journal and Guide and the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)

(Copyright, Repro

CAMP AMIRABAD, TEHERAN, IRAN—(Delayed)—There are two large military installations located here at Teheran, making this area somewhat of a "Pentagon of the Persian Gulf." General headquarters of the Persian Gulf Command are located at Camp Amirabad while on the other side of Teheran is Camp Atterbury, the railroad transportation center of the entire command. All final orders, directives, and clearances stem from this nerve center and business is quite brisk seven days a week.

No colored troops are stationed at Camp Atterbury, but there are a few at Camp Amirabad. Most of the colored units, numbering some 4,000 soldiers, are serving in the central and southern sections of the command. 10-14-44

Here there is Company "C" of the 352nd Engineer Regiment, the 519th QM Car Company, and a unit of the 153rd QM Bakery Company, Company "C" and the 519th Car Company are serving as chauffeurs and truck drivers, while the unit of the 153rd handles the baking for the Post. All take their turn at guard duty.

CAROLINA SOLDIER

Company "C" was the first unit that I had the opportunity of visiting. Their First Sgt. David R. Hilton, of 1107 E. 14th street, Winston-Salem, N. C., is a soldier's soldier, and would certainly do well as an officer. He has the confidence of the men and they respect his leadership. 10-14-44

The unit has had its problems and seen some dark days since landing here in March 1943, but with Hilton's guidance the company has pulled through magnificently. He has assumed the role of leader and morale builder—which was a tough job during those early days when homesickness was chronic.

Shy and amiable Lonnie Hill, 4607 Evans street, St. Louis, Mo., serves as the personnel sergeant and is so meticulous about the company records that he has been dubbed the "sgt. adjutant

Toll Of Troops 10-14-44

...y of the chauffers for the Hardy Anderson, Marquez, Tex-...hicles, and among thoseas; Alfonso Washington, Pres-...in such capacity whomton, Okla.; Louis Daniels, ...t and who wish to be re- Streetman, Texas; Roscoe Law-...red to the folks back ...re: T/5s Peter S. Gilbert, ...d, Calif., and James S. ... Pittsburgh, Pa.; T/4 J. ...rence, Chicago; Jesse J. Brooks, ...don, S. C.; Sgts. R. C. Lafayette, La.; Richard N. Ecles, ...ell, Berine, Ark., and Los Angeles; Albert King, ... Rogers, Starkesville, Sheridan, Ill., and Levi Milond, ...Cpls. Vernis M. Byrd, St. Pittsburgh, Pa. ...Mo., and Clarence Sea- ...Detroit) Mich.; and Pfcs. ... Lawson, Pittsburgh, Pa.; C. Gordon, Campbell, Carl J. Rogers, Miss.; Cpls. Louis, Mo., and Clarence Brooks, Detroit, Mich.

CHAUFFEURS 10-14-44

...Sgt. Olious Hightower, of ...Philadelphia, has the distinction of being the best heavy equipment operator in the outfit. This company furnishes the

Dysentery Takes Largest

Roly-poly Pfc. Whit Virgin, ...

Foreign Service

Eisenhower Blasts Slander Against Negro Troops As Harmful To War Aim

12-2-44

By MARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON. — (NNPA) — Gen. Dwight C. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander, this week wrote a lowly Negro staff sergeant agreeing with his protest against derogatory remarks about Negro troops appearing in letters to Stars and Stripes, servicemen's paper.

Eisenhower wrote: "I agree with you that the publication of statements that are derogatory to the accomplishments in this war of any American group or race is harmful to the war effort."

The original article appeared in a column called "The B Bag" of the Stars and Stripes. In this column, GI's are given the opportunity to express their thoughts on any subject. One signing himself "S-Sgt. H.L.W., Inf." wrote the following:

12-2-44

'Too Much Credit'

"Our outfit is composed of boys from North and South. We have been fought the Civil War over and over again in friendly arguments, but on one point we are agreed. The Negro soldier in this war is getting more credit than he deserves.

"He is, in the majority of cases, a rear-echelon cowboy who never saw the front lines. We have been on the front lines since shortly after D-Day. Never have we seen a colored soldier on the front lines.

"We, the fighting doughboys, give credit where it is deserved. Even the medics get their share of credit. It makes us mad to see a bunch of rear-echelon cowboys grabbing credit where they have done nothing to deserve it."

12-2-44

Staff Sgt. George Woods, Jr., attached to an Engineer Regiment took exception to the piece and wrote a letter to Gen. Eisenhower. He cited the last two sentences of an official letter on the "Treatment of Negro Troops," which read: "The United States troops, either white or colored, must be considered as conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline and offenders must be promptly punished. In the interest of military efficiency, if for no other reason, isolated incidents of friction must be eliminated."

Sees Motive For Riots

Sgt. Woods then told the general that the article referred to was detrimental to the morale of a group of fighters "who are putting forth every effort in their power to play their part as good soldiers where they are assigned to perform their duty, regardless of whether it be on the front lines or in the 'rear-echelons'."

Woods said such statements as those of the sergeant who wrote in Stars and Stripes have been the prime motives of recent race riots in America. "It is my sincere hope that our full military strength may be continued directed against the German forces, rather than stop at this point of success and debate on the issue 'which race is playing the more important part in this war'," he told the general.

12-2-44

In reply, nine days later, the general wrote the sergeant saying: "Thank you very much for your letter of the 14th. I agree with you that the publication of statements that are derogatory to the accomplishments in this war of any American group or race is harmful to the war effort. I also agree that it is the duty of the good soldier to perform well whatever task may be given him, in the front line or in the rear area.'

"I am glad you invited my attention to an article that apparently was written in disregard of these principles."

Editor Cites Record

The editor of the Stars and Stripes, in an editor's note immediately following the article to which Sgt. Woods took exception, said the following:

"Prejudice knows no state or national boundaries. Uncle Sam's men in the forces serve and fight where they're told to.

12-2-44

"The activity of Negro troops in this war includes landing with the first U. S. assault forces to hit the Normandy beaches on D-Day. Barrage-balloon men, port battalions, Duck companies and quartermaster truck units were in on the landings.

12-2-44

"Two of these units were commended by Gen. Eisenhower. One Negro infantry division, the 93rd, is at present in action on Bougainville in the South Pacific. The second Negro infantry division to see action in this war, the 92nd, is in there fighting right now in north Italy. Negro airmen have made a notable record in Italy as well as North Africa and Sicily where the 99th Pursuit Squadron and Col. Benjamin Davis' fighter group have been flying combat missions with the 15th Air Force."

Tank Unit Wins High Praise From Nazi Foe

Chicago, Ill.

12-16-44 Chicago Defender

WITH THE THIRD ARMY FORCES NORTH OF DIEUZE—A captured Nazi lieutenant who has fought against Russian soldiers in the East, met his waterloo on the Western Front when confronted by Negro tankmen.

Describing the skirmish in which the tank crew fought off superior enemy forces, the Nazi spoke admiringly of the Negro fighters: "Only once have I seen a tank crew as full of fight as that one and that was the crew of a Russian tank knocked out and in a similar situation," the prisoner declared.

The conduct of the tankmen he described as being "one of the real feats of bravery."

12-16-44

When their tank became disabled and while the Nazis, just 70 yards away were firing away with bazookas, members of the crew rescued two of their own men who were badly wounded while two others climbed out through the escape hatch.

Then lying on their sides close to the useless vehicle Cpl. Herbert Porter of Asheville, N. C., the tank gunner, who was the last to leave the tank, Capt. James Whitby, Detroit, the tank's driver, Pvt. John McNeal, assistant driver, killed the attacking bazooka team and knocked down or captured the remaining enemy troops.

This action the captured German said surpassed "anything I had seen during my four years on several fronts."

12-16-44

The crew which the Nazi praised was a part of the first U. S. Negro tank destroyer battalion to see action with the 95th Infantry division which figured in the capture of the German fortress city of Metz.

Commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Frank S. Pritchard, 2535 Forrest avenue, Lansing, Mich., and composed of four companies completely staffed by Negro officers, the unit completed its trek from the Normandy Peninsula, the day prior to the fall of Metz. It had been awaiting orders to move to the front since October 8, when it landed in France.

12-16-44

The tank destroyer battalion was activated at Camp Carson, Col., on July 25, 1942. and received its training there and at Camp Bowie, Texas, before it moved to Camp Hood, Texas, the home of battle training for tanks and tank destroyers in March, 1943. In August, 1944, the unit landed in England, and continued training while it awaited the call to action.

The battalion took its place with front line troops in the Metz area, not far from the sector in which the all-Negro Tank Battalion is fighting.

12-16-44

Typical of the crews and their aptness for their weapons is the range score turned in by the crew of gun commander, Sergeant Robert C. Garrett, of Route 1, Box 19, Tarboro, N. C. In range tests his crew did not miss the direct fire target a single time with the 3-inch anti-tank gun, which their vehicle mounts, in addition to its .50 calibre and .30 calibre machineguns. Crews are composed of ten men, including the gun commander.

It is a "towed" destroyer unit, meaning that the big AT guns are mounted on a separate chassis, with the M-8 half-track serving as the prime mover.

The staff of the unit includes three Negro officers, Captain Thomas M. Campbell Jr., of Tuskegee Institute, Ala., son of the noted agricultural expert of the institute, who serves as battalion surgeon; Chaplain (Captain) Harvey E. Johnson, 568 Auburn avenue, N.E., Atlanta, Ga., and First Lieut. Robert S. Williams, of 1909 Fourth street, N. W., Washington, D. C., a Howard university product who is the battalion reconnaissance officer.

Other officers of the staff are Major LeRoy H. Sample, of Mount Clemens, Mich.; executive officer; Captain Charles W. Ogelsby, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., S-2; Captain Robert J. O'Leary, of Glenburn, N. D., S-3; Captain Charles J. Richard, of Oklahoma City, Okla., S-1, and Captain Gordon P. Maloche, of Santa Barbara, Calif., S-4.

The all-Negro staffs of the various companies are composed of the following officers:

12-16-44

Headquarters company — Commander: Captain James H. Carr, 624 Gresham Place, N.W., Washington, D. C.; liaison, First Lieutenant Ormonde Forte Jr., Cleveland, Ohio; public relations and special services officer, First Lieutenant Leonard I. Burch, 5724 South Parkway avenue, Chicago, Ill. Other officers: First Lieutenant Serreo S. Nelson, 3014 R street, Omaha, Neb.; First Lieutenant Joseph L. Keeby, Chicago, Ill.; First Lieutenant Claude W. Ramsey, Ypsilanti, Mich.; Second Lieutenant Preston Helm Jr., 518 Browning avenue, Chicago, Ill.; Second Lieutenant Andrew J. Favors, 1339 South May street, Philadelphia, Pa. Two warrant officers complete the staff of this company—WOJG Arntie E. Hollis, of San Marcos, Texas, and WOJG Raymond Lamb, of Detroit, Mich.

Company A—Commander: Captain Beauregard King, born into the Army at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and a veteran of 15 years regular army service with the 24th and 25th Infantry regiments. Other officers: First Lieutenant Milton B. Deas, 4435 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill.; First Lieutenant Charles Robinson, of Long Beach, Calif.; First Lieutenant Edward J. Cary Jr., 2118 Montgall avenue, Kansas City, Mo., and Second Lieutenant Lloyd Gregory, of 98 Morningside avenue, New York City.

Company B—Commander: Captain Robert L. Finley, 6540 Stanford avenue, Detroit, Mich. Other officers: First Lieutenant Raymond H. Powell, 437 Breadon street, Youngstown, Ohio; First Lieutenant Ulysses W. Watkins, of Huntsville, Texas; First Lieutenant Charles J. Nelson, 26 Wilkes street, Battle Creek, Mich., and Second Lieutenant Forrest A. Walker, of 2420 North Sherman street, Kansas City, Mo.

12-16-44

Company C—Commander: First Lieutenant Charles L. Thomas, of 5877 Beechwood avenue, Detroit, Mich. Other officers: First Lieutenant George Mitchell, of 3446 Magnolia street, New Orleans, La.; First Lieutenant Thomas H. Shaw, 902 Fayetteville street, Durham, N. C.; First Lieutenant Walter S. Smith, 410 Parallel avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., and First Lieutenant Floyd J. Stallings, also of Los Angeles.

There are several veterans among the enlisted personnel who have had long periods of regular army service.

MEN AT FRONT BUSILY PREPARING TO HELP BUILD A BETTER WORLD

Pittsburgh, Pa.

11-25-44

By BILLY ROWE, Courier War Correspondent

WITH THE U. S. ARMY IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—From the bowels of the earth's foxholes and slit trenches, dugouts and pillboxes, muck and mire, scum and heat, new men have grown to face a future just around the corner of peace. Every one of them is aware of a changing world. All of them expect to be given a chance to participate in that new era. For that cause they came. For that cause some among them will forever sleep beneath the open terrain of a European battle front—some forgotten Pacific beachhead or the squamous undergrowth enclosed by a sightless jungle.

GETTING HOME IMPORTANT

The groundwork for that future is being laid daily in the minds and deeds of these men fighting for it. Their ideals fail to touch the lofty veneer found on the words of the politician negating the obligations of his party. Though some among these soldiers who live in the past, have, and must die in the present, their hopes are illuminated by the future. Strange as it may seem, there is little thought out here in regards to the Four Freedoms, the Atlantic Charter, or the vigorous new world. Getting home is the essence of thought. Those who lived a comfortable life, want to find America as was. Those who groped in the darkness of ghettos, want to be able to get away from them. Those who were discriminated against, want to see an end to it. In the main all these wants add up to the same and would be best realized with the aid of the other. These men hope, these men think, these men plan, but they are so busy working and fighting, they can't find the time to express their desires.

As this is a new army, its soldiers will become new citizens when the military flood gates are released and they flow into the channels of civilian life again. They won't be the same men who boarded an army transport ages ago. They won't think the same or feel the same, and neither will they expect to be treated in the same manner.

WILL BE BETTER MEN

In the main, however, they will be better men. Not necessarily physically so, for the rigors of modern war, will leave their marks on many of them. From a standpoint of mind and character, the biggest majority will be better, despite the fact that for many months they have lived in a man's world and have grown tough and tough. However, to the man with the basic background, the Army has done something else, it's safe to say, it made a man out of him. He's been taught to shift for himself, to think in terms of others, hold fast to a principle and do what he's told. More important, it has relegated him to the company of others, giving him a chance to meet and understand how the other guy lives. Many of them have discovered that Jefferson was right and that all men are created equal, mental and physical handicaps in no way altering that truth. 11-25-44

This isn't a story about the entire picture, because it's far too great a montage, with hypocritical selfishness and cold cynicism also a part. This is just about those guys who have never been, but want to be. And those who have been who want to see all men given a chance to emancipate their spirits, cultivate their hearts and minds and move forward. These are the men who are the groundwork of future world security. It is believed that they are the masses.

If you get right down to earth with these men and translate the meaning behind their seemingly unimportant sentiments, passions and ambitions, you come face to face with a tangible solution to the peace. Most of what's happening out in the free world is a reminder of a story, now twice told, about the diligent nurse who wakes up the patient to make him take a sleeping potion. All that's really needed is for him to be left alone.

Most of the Tan Yanks we have met in nine months overseas, hope to forget all the hate and greed of war. They want to live in peace, appreciate a home that wasn't too important before, become fathers and be successes. There are those among them who want to go into business, be doctors, lawyers, professors or embrace the arts. Few of them want to do what they were doing when they were caught by the big wind.

Up to 80 per cent of the men of the 93rd Infantry Division are working towards that end and have enrolled in the Army Service Forces Institution. Regardless of their educational background, they can take one or more of the courses offered by most of the leading colleges in America.

Enrollees for the various courses are from every section of the country and are a cross-section of the Division. Some are college graduates, others high and grammar schools, while others are those who never had a chance to spend 10 per cent as much time in pursuit of education.

Among those who have enrolled in the new institute are Tech-Fours, Henry J. Price of Danville, Va., a correspondence student in sociology at Virginia State; Allen B. Flynt, Fayetteville, Tenn., taking the Iowa State university's genetics and heredity, and also plant ecology from the University of South Dakota; Peter Williams of Sylvania, Ga., enrolled for Ohio university's course in English literature, sociology and history; Jason N. Calhoun, who came from Austin, Tex., did graduate work at the University of Michigan, is taking German at the same university and zoology at the University of California; Joseph L. Rousseau, Chicago, now studying the Army Institute course in residence architecture offered by the University of Washington; Carney Reynolds whose education was gained in his home city of Cleveland, is taking a correspondence course in photography from the University of Michigan; William R. Jordan, Fairfield, Ala., is taking a course in stenotyphy; Maceo Braxton, who attended LeMoyne college in Memphis, is now polishing up on reading and composition, and algebra; and Winifred Brice of Dayton, Ohio, who embraced bookkeeping and accounting while at Huntington High, Aberdeen, is continuing that course.

Sgt. Charles H. Peoples, Jr., of Toledo, Ohio, studying cost accounting; M/Sgt. Clarence E. Cummings of Los Angeles finished his pre-war education at Drexel Institute of Technology, where he majored in drafting. In the post-war world he expects to attend USC, taking a course in architecture; Sgt. David Sams, who completed his education at Allen university, Columbia, S.C., is now taking a correspondence course in history; S/Sgt. Leon A. Saunders of Eagle, W.Va., is taking the Army course in physics; Cpl. Tendrill H. Lavender, Vienna, Ga., is studying accounting under the army plan; Cpl. Woodrow Williamson of Detroit selected mathematics for his GI time.

Sgt. Bernard L. Johnson, New York, plans a pre-med course, University of Long Island; Pvt. Leon K. Richardson, Baltimore, is studying sociology through Ohio university.

Tech-3 Isaiah Burton, Washington, D.C., is taking a psychology course through the University of Illinois; S/Sgt. James E. Wallace of Chicago and has a B.S. in bacteriology from Virginia State, is embracing a medical career. Among the men taking academic courses and working towards a high school diploma are Sgts. Irvin P. Jackson, New Orleans, and Marion J. Davis, Social Circle, Ga.; Cpls. James Yates, Sumter, S.C. and A. M. Watson, Del.; Pvts. Arzie Chambers, Phoenix, Ariz.; Robert H. Clark, Thomasville, Ga., and Henry Speight, Jacksonville, Fla.

Tech 5 Lloyd Howard, Kenova, Ohio, is taking the course in auto mechanics. Others working along the same line are Tech-4 William Brown, Hopkinsville, Ky.; Pfc. Willis Curry, Jamaica, N.Y., and Pvt. Carl Matthews of South Carolina. Business courses are being embraced by S/Sgt. Manuel R. Maisonet, New York; Tech-5 Joe N. Roberts, San Diego; Tech-4 Wm. E. Pullin, Atlanta, was graduated from Morehouse before entering the service. Also Tech-4 Reuben Conner, Fulton, Ky.; Pfc. Nathaniel Williams, Fla., and Pvt. John McBride of Philadelphia.

Pfc. Melvin Jones, Robertville, Mo., is taking air conditioning; Tech-4 Clyde H. Powell, Hilburn, N.Y., is working on elementary electricity; Tech-3 Eddie Le Suer, Philadelphia, is taking the course in machine shop practice, and Pfc. Albert King, Louisville, Ky., is studying the fundamentals of typewriting. Taking the English course are Sgt. Ray S. Smith, Bastrop, La.; S/Sgt. Robert Coats, North Carolina; Tech-5 Henry Gage, Hempstead, Tex.; Pfc. Josh Jackson, Clarkville, Tenn., and Pvt. William D. McCree of Brooklyn, N.Y., among score of others.

While making war, these are just some of the men who are making plans for the peace, for the new world. For this cause . . . they came.

Pontoons Become Trucks, River Becomes Burma Road

Chicago, Illinois
Chicago Defender

CARRYING SUPPLIES TO CHINA

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender War Correspondent)

ALONG THE LEDO ROAD—If there can be compensation for being far away from home, it's the spine-tingling thrill of an unexpected meeting with old-time friends.

This happened twice in the past two weeks, when I chanced upon two prominent Chicagoans, Pvt. Matt Carey, grandson of the late Bishop A. J. Carey, nephew to Judge and Mrs. Patrick Prescott; and 1st Sgt. George "Dodo" Maxfield, wealthy young real estate operator. I was beating out a trip by land and water to be the first American correspondent to follow the ground supply route from beginning of the Ledo Road to the furtherest point to which American troops have yet advanced.

It was at the end of a ride down the swiftly-moving Mogaung River in an assault boat driven by Earlis Samuels (Roanoke, Va.) of a light pontoon engineer company, convoying combat supplies to Chinese infantrymen, that I ran into Carey.

12-2-44

Talk of Old Times

He was standing on the bank as the boat hit shore—tall and lean, and burnt brown from months in the hot Burma sun—when he spotted me. His mouth shot open as if he had seen an apparition from another world. I was equally surprised.

After our first shock of meeting we ate together and talked of college days and inter-fraternal basketball of a few years ago when Carey was an outstanding star of the local Omega Psi Phi team in its hotly contested tilts with Alpha Phi Alpha.

12-2-44

It was necessary for me to get to the town of Mogaung before dark, a distance of some thirty-five or forty miles, but we were reluctant to leave each other. So Carey made the jeep ride with me along a trail still littered with bones and uniforms of dead Japs.

We parted when I reached my night's destination—he to return to his station in order to be ready on the morrow to pilot his assault boat up river for more supplies.

This pontoon company of which Carey is a member was activated heat Fort Custer, Mich., in 1941 and trained at Fort Belvoir, Va., and it has done a magnificent job in getting supplies to combat troops during monsoon seasons when part of the road has been unpassable.

It's a dangerous tough business as the trip I took with this outfit showed. As we proceeded down river I saw overturned and partially sunk barges, the result of gashes torn in their hulls by obstacles lurking unseen under water. Three of the company have been drowned in these accidents, and two others were lost when a Jap patrol fired on them and they had to beach their boats and take to the jungles. They haven't been heard of since.

12-2-44

It was ten days later that I saw Maxfield on my way back from the front. Thanks to Carey I knew where to look for him, so when my jeep pulled into his area along the mountainside where he rules as first sergeant of an engineer company, only one of us was surprised.

12-2-44

Plenty Chicagoans

But I got as much kick out of it as "Dodo" who is as happy as a man can be. He's been overseas nearly two years and had to leave a beautiful young wife behind. Besides his business in civilian life, Maxfield has been a prominent member of the Chicago chapter of Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity for a number of years.

Among the group of pilots who weaved their motor-driven assault barges down the Moguang River the day I took the trip were a number of Chicagoans including 1st Sgt. Earl C. Barnett, S-Sgts. Edward K. Singleton, Charles P. Stone, T-5 John B. Stewart, T-4 Eddie Russ, and Pvts. Joseph W. Pippion, Leon V. Jefferson, Sam Hill, Ollie Lowry, Ferdie Kilgore, and Madison D. Corey Jr.

Colored GI's of a light pontoon engineer company convoy supplies down the fast-flowing Mogaung river for Chinese infantry up ahead. Careful watch must be kept lest an underwater obstacle tears a hole in the hull, sinking the boat and drowning the men.

Jerseyites Help Down 2 Planes

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

Quocko Reports How Japs Were Stopped

POET GAVE ALARM
Says Fire Kept Most of Enemies Away

Quockco, who was known as a poet when he attended Central High School here, writes the New Jersey AFRO-AMERICAN to supply a news story that no regular correspondent was on hand to obtain—a story of how his outfit downed two Japanese planes during an air attack.

Other Newarkers in the unit participated in the fight.

Pfc. Quocko, on duty in the Southwest Pacific with an anti-aircraft unit [illegible] of Jap planes approached their position, but the unit, firing under orders of Capt. Henry B. [illegible] of Christian, Herman Dawkins, Willie McJunckins, Woodrow Shipley.

[illegible] Guard Tiny Island [illegible] Avenue.

In his letter he told of his unit's arrival in New Guinea last September, and of moving in December to supply regular corps to a tiny island between New Guinea and New Britain, where they were assigned to guard the southwest strip of an airdrome being used by British pursuit planes. On December 20, he said, a force of Japanese planes approached their position, but the unit, firing under orders of Capt. Henry B. Chaptime without being able to reach the raiders. [illegible]

Two Shot Down

[illegible] duty at the command post, had [illegible] sounded the alert and the red signal.

Decem- [illegible]

[illegible] New [illegible] where [illegible] "The determined Japs returned [illegible] shortly and got the same hot recep- [illegible] be-tion," Quocko continued. "They [illegible] planes, turned tail again, but one of their [illegible] a force planes did not escape and we saw [illegible] their po-it plunge to earth. They made the [illegible] underattack a third, fourth and fifth [illegible] Chap-time without being able to reach

Negro GI's Link 3rd Army With Network of Phone Lines

Atlanta, Ga. Daily Atlanta World 11-23-44

WITH THE THIRD ARMY NEAR METZ — "This is Army headquarters" comes the voice over the wire, and another call is through to its destination, and nine times out of ten that call was made over the wires strung by the Signal Construction Battalion, a unit of companies of Negro communications experts, who have followed the Third Army drive, in its march across France, and have strung out most of the vast network of communications lines which link the forces of the Third Army.

The battalion landed in France on June 23rd, and has moved up to Luxembourgh border, stringing wire all the while. Recently when the Third Army was pushing its way to the outskirts of embattled Metz, the Signal crews were strung out right behind the Army armored units, and could be seen on hillsides, in valleys, in fields, in rain and mud, putting down their poles, putting in their poles, and putting up their wires. Their work has a decided aid to the maintaining of communications between the various Third Army units, and the headquarters. The unit has been commended by ranking officials for its performances.

11-23-44

Lieutenant Colonel Marlin S. Moody, of Fayetteville, Tennessee, is the battalion commanding officer, and Major Thomas W. Riley, of Pittsburgh, Pa., is executive officer. The personnel at battalion headquarters is all colored. Among them are:

Master Sergeant Parst Jones, Box 7, Bladenboro, N. C., sergeant-major; Technical Sergeant Anthony Brown, Jr., 255 Edward Street, Ridgewood, N. J.. personnel sergeant-major; Sergeant James Breason, 60 Howell St., N. E., Atlanta, Ga.; Staff Sergeant Benjamin Matthews, 320 W. 41st St., New York City; Technician 4th Grade Sinclair Careathers, Jr., 24 Sawyer St., Chattanooga, Tenn., personnel clerk; Technician 5th Grade Robert L. Cook, 415 E. Brainard St., Pensacola, Fla.; Private 1st Class James M. Myrick, 531 Third St., N. W., Atlanta, Ga., and Private 1st Class Henry Schuyler, Route 1, Box 132, Bowman, S. C.

Negro Troops Drop Supplies In Jungle

Atlanta (3) Ga. Atlanta World

Atlanta World 11-23-44

SOMEWHERE IN BURMA — (SNS) — A battalion of Negro troops in the Burma-India Theater is known officially and was trained as a Quartermaster Truck Battalion, but its vehicles are big Army planes, and its cargoes, kicked overboard or dropped by parachute over remote jungle areas run into hundreds of thousands of tons monthly.

The supplies delivered include a variety of items and range from 75mm howitzers and TNT to eggs for breakfast and medical supplies.

The battalion arrived in India late in 1943 and began delivery of supplies by air after receiving only ten days instruction. It had to improvise most of its equipment and devise its own methods of storage and safe delivery, including the dropping of such delicate material as highly sensitive wet gun cotton, and delicacies as live ducks and chickens, and even live pigs.

11-23-44

The outfit's job is to deliver virtually all of the supplies needed by American troops pushing the vital supply road through the jungle, as well as to American and Chinese troops helping to clear the area of Japanese.

Special packaging and packing methods were worked out — often by the trial-and-error method. For example, it was found that 55-gallon drums of oil and gasoline could best be delivered by lashing sacks of rice husks to the drums, to serve as bumpers, and using two or three chutes to drop them.

Fresh eggs were prepared for air-dropping by packing them in cases with cushions of rice hulls between the individual eggs for shock absorbers. Ammunition of many sizes has been dropped, and two-wheeled ammunition carts, too bulky and heavy to load and drop through the plane door by the kickout method, have been sawed into convenient sections, drilled and fitted with bolts and braces for quick reassembly and dropped in sections.

11-23-44

NEGRO SEABEES RETURN TO U. S.

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

11-11-44

WASHINGTON—Veterans of 20 months of jungle warfare in the South Pacific, and bearing a unit citation for many outstanding feats of construction completed under great difficulties, the first battalion of Negro Seabees to go overseas has returned to this country, the Navy Department announced this week.

The unit, the 34th Construction Battalion, indoctrinated at Camp Allen in Virginia, sailed outside the continental limts of the United States on January 7, 1943, and arrived in Noumea, New Caledonia, nineteen days later. Since that date, the unit has suffered casualties of five men killed in action and 35 wounded.

11-11-44

The first big job tackled by the unit was the construction of the Halavo Seaplane base at Halavo in the Florida Islands. Brigaded there with the Acorn (Red) Four, an air unit, the 34th Battalion helped carve its camp out of a deep jungle. During February and March 1943, the two outfits experienced two direct enemy bombings and were under almost nightly enemy air raids in the area for a period of five months. Casualties from these raids resulted in two killed and 28 wounded.

Construct Mountain Roads

The entire battalion was reunited in November 1943, in the Tulagi area, with approximately one-half of the battalion quartered at Halavo, and the other half scattered over the adjacent Islands of Tulagi, Savo and Phillips Peninsula on Purvis Bay. The construction tasks at Halavo varied from marine railways, fueling docks, and coastal defense gun mounts to harbor boat nests, dolphins, piers and considerable jungle and mountain roads for the Army defense. A unit at Tulagi took over and performed Naval Base maintenance, relieving the 27th Seabees until the arrival of the two CBMU's to release the battalion for assignment to Guadalcanal in March 1944.

Just before the men embarked for home, Capt. Mark L. Halsay Jr., USN, Commander of the Naval Base, sent them the following unit citation:

"On the occasion of the completion of your work in this area, covering a period of 20 months, I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate you and the officers and enlisted men of your command for the splendid record which you have made and the outstanding reputation which your Battalion enjoys. During this period your battalion has accomplished many outstanding feats of construction, too many to mention in detail, which will stand as a monument to your ability and efficiency for many years after the U. S. forces leave this area. . . 11-11-44

"The best wishes to this command for future success and continued usefulness to the Naval Service go with you and the personnel of your battalion."

After 30-day furlough, the 34th Battalion will be re-assigned to duty.

The Navy Department recently announced that, as of October 1, 1944, there were 12,337 Negro enlisted men in the Seabees, of whom 10,351 were assigned to special battalions.

200 Seabees Volunteer To Bring In Wounded

Tribune - Philadelphia, Pa.

11-18-44

(By Technical Sgt. Donald A. Hallman, Sr., of 51-01 39th avenue, Long Island City, N. Y., a Marine Corps Combat correspondent).

PELELIU, Palau Islands—(Delayed)—Two hundred Negro Seabees, grimy and weary from two days of unloading ships under enemy fire, were lined up on the beach here.

"I want volunteers for stretcher bearing on the ridge tonight," an officer was telling them.

And the 200 Seabees stepped out as one.

The incident is typical of the record chalked up by the Seabee battalion, that landed immediately behind assault waves of Marines here and has been working night and day since. They unload ships, wrestle ammunition and heavy supplies to the beach dumps, carry ammunition to the front lines, and bring back wounded. On occasion they have filled in as front-line troops, and for more than a week they have been going forward to drag in wounded marines.

These Seabees had seen no action until Peleliu. Then they joined the assualt. They had more than 100 casualties in the first week, many received during the landing when Japanese artillery and mortar fire was ripping the coral reef, others from mortar fire on the beaches and among the supply dumps, and still more from enemy fire at the front.

From the first they worked up to 16 hours a day, unloading supplies on the floating docks out at the edge of the 600-yard wide coral reef. They were under constant mortar and artillery fire.

11-18-44

On the beach they had to handle the heavy ammunition and vast stores of other supplies to the various dumps. Here they were also endangered by mortars, by snipers, and on occasion, by Jap machine gunners who came to life behind the front lines. Once, they were even charged by three enemy tanks.

When a shell burst on the beach, injuring 15 men, the colored Seabees reached the scene first. They pulled out the wounded.

When a mortar shell set fire to a large ammunition dump, 50 Seabees started moving the shells. They had to be called off when the exploding ammunition pinned down everyone on the entire beach.

11-18-44

When ordered to carry ammuni-

Nine Missing Pilots Return to AAF Base

Baltimore, Md. Afro-American 12-30-44

One Hid in Hills of Greece for 10 Days While Allies Took Athens

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE FIFTEENTH AAF IN ITALY—(By Cable)—Legend around this airbase is that fighter pilots will get back, somehow, someway, and after the experiences of Lts. Freddie E. Hutchins, Donaldsonville, Ga.; [illegible] Marshall, Bristol, [illegible]

S-1c Henry Hall, St. Louis, Mo.; S-1c Marine infantry officer told them, "Knock it off. We just want enough ammunition for the night. We don't need the entire dump."

When a stretcher detail was needed to go down into a draw in front of a heavily fortified ridge to bring out wounded at midnight, 16 Seabees vol-

James Key Nichols, Georgia; and S-1c Leo McDowell, Chicago, Ill.; Individual feats are generously re-counted by others. The battalion is high in morale and excellent; in lam W. Green, Jr., Staunton, Va., who were forced down in Greece and safely made their way back to their base, hope runs high for every flyer who meets the same difficulties.

S-1c Edward Scott, Freemont, O.; S-1c Lemon Jackson, Florence Ala.; Jimmy Shearard, Anderson, S. C.

Special mention must be made of achievement.

They are among nine members of the 332nd Fighter Group who have returned after being reported missing over enemy-held territory in the past month.

Marshall, who holds the distinction of being the first Allied soldier to land on an island off Greece and the first American to land anywhere in Greece, was forced down October 6, after flak bursts disabled his plane during a strafing attack on German airfields near Athens.

Celebrated with Greeks

After twelve days and several wild celebrations by Grocks, he

LT. ANDREW D. MARSHALL
(He came back from the dead)

hitchhiked a plane ride back to base.

Eisenhower Hits Criticism of Colored GI's in Letter

AFRO-American Balto, Md.
12-2-44

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — In a letter to S/Sgt. George Woods, Jr., of an engineer general service regiment, General Dwight D. Eisenhower agreed with the sergeant's protest of derogatory remarks about colored men appearing in a recent issue of Stars and Stripes.

A "S/Sgt. H. A. W., Inf." had written in the service men's paper: "The colored soldier in this war is getting more credit than he deserves. He is, in the majority of cases, a rear-echelon cowboy who never saw the front lines."

Woods, citing an official letter prohibiting the spreading of such remarks, told the general that the article was detrimental to the morale of a group of fighters who are striving to be good soldiers regardless of their assignment.

Hurt War Effort

In his reply, the general said: "I agree with you that the publication of statements that are derogatory to the accomplishments in this war of any American group or race is harmful to the war effort.

"I also agree that it is the duty of the good soldier to perform well whatever task may be given him, in the front line or in the rear area," he said, expressing thanks for the letter.

The editor of Stars and Stripes, moreover, in an editor's note, had criticized the article, citing the accomplishments not only of the service groups, but also of the 92nd and 93rd Divisions and of the colored airmen.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
12-24-44 47m

ALLIED WARPLANES RAIN BOMBS DOWN ON COUNTERATTACKING NAZIS

Yanks Destroying 1,800 Japs A Day On Leyte Island.

By the S.N.S.

The weather broke in Allied favor Saturday and hundreds of warplanes swarmed on the German counteroffensive. The American fighters, downing at least 84 Nazis planes. Railway centers were attacked in Germany, while supplies to troops in the Bastogne area of Belgium were dropped. Returning pilots said most targets were hit.

Meanwhile, it was officially disclosed that a Nazi armored force had struck to within 29 miles of historic Sedan by Thursday noon. Reports of action aground lagged under the Allied censorship screen. Enemy comment implied that a large part of Lt. Gen. George Patton's Third Army was striking to relieve the embattled First Army led by Lt. Gen. Courtney H. Hodges.

The German high command said that strong Nazi elements were "pursuing dislodged U.S. units" on both sides of the Ourtre river in Belgium.

Allied headquarters in the Philippines revealed early today that fleeing remnants of Japanese fighting units in the northwestern mountains of Leyte island faced destruction with the escape port of Palompon under American artillery fire while 77 77th U.S. Division doughboys advanced in the town. American air activity in the archipelago continued heavy It was indicated that 1,800 Japanese a day were being killed on Leyte.

Moscow reported that a Soviet extraordinary state commission investigating war crimes reported Saturday that 700,000 person, including an undermined number of citizens of the United State and Britain, had been killed by the Germans in three camps in Lwow province, Poland.

Negro Service Troops Engage Enemy Ground Forces In 3-Day Battle

Informer — Houston, Texas
12-30-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
Copyright Informer NNPA
Reproduction Prohibited

LEYTE BEACH — For the first time in the Pacific war, and on the third anniversary of the enemy's dastardly attack on Pearl Harbor, Negro service troops have actively engaged the enemy ground forces here, accounting for twenty-seven dead in a three-days running battle. The enemy force was reported to be over 200.

In the San Pablo area, colored aviation engineers were among those troops waiting as enemy para-troopers filtered down from the black seas. While others infilterated from the West. In a two prong attack, the japs vainly attempted the capture of any American air strip, but they were beaten back and finally annihilated by our forces.

First to spot the para-troopers were: Cpls. William McCall of Detroit, Charles Mumford of Baltimore, and Sgt. Winzer Alston of Rankin, Penn., who were working on vehicles at the time. They joined and fought through the night. The enemy ground troops were then attacking other elements of engineers and white signal corps units. Staff Sgt. James Martin of Newport News, Va., (a former school teacher), received the news first and spread the alarm, calling in First Sgt. Hugh Smith of Philadelphia.

Our troops led by Cpl. Samuel Johnson of Washington, D. C., Pvt. William Rumsey of Chester, Pa.; Cpl. Hubert Johnson of Winston Salem, N. C.; and Sgt. Leon Wilburn of Bryn Mawr, Pa., rushed to defensive positions, and opened fire on the running targets. Firing point blank, Johnson killed the first enemy Rumsey, manning a machine gun, received credit for four. The units of engineers had moved speedily into position and were constantly firing as the bewildered enemy troops weakly counter-attacked.

At 4 p. m., we lost our first man, who at the time was repairing a machine gun. Cpl. Herbert Johnson of Washington, D. C. stated that the enemy spotted the machine gun and moved in, Johnson whispered to his group, "We have only four rifles and there must be twenty of them, take good aim." Following the deadly fire, the enemy hastily withdrew after five Japs had fallen. Pvts. Silas White of Pittsburgh and Lenwood Gore of West Virginia carried the wounded man to a dispensary. He died enroute. 12-30-44

On the para-troops front, Sgt. Leon Welburn and Cpl. Milton Diggins of Cumberland, Md., manning an anti-aircraft weapon, received official credit for helping bring down one transport and assist on two probables. One parachutist was killed by the team. An enemy trooper, dressed in partial American uniform, was entering Sgt. Martin's supply tent when a Filipino yelled, "Jap." Hugh Smith and Martin opened fire simultaneously, killing the enemy, who is thought to have been an officer. 12-30-44

After the third day, our troops pulled back to their own area and set up guard, also patrolling the areas. Elements of the Infantry moved in to finish off the enemy.

Major Thomas Brown said of his troops: "They set up positions and fought like infantrymen. No one backed up an inch during the attack."

When asked how they felt about combat, Martin said that he would rather pursue a regular line of work, building and defending the strips we build. This time we were defending. A majority of our troops had the idea that they had to kill as many as possible. They knew that if the enemy succeeded in getting into camp there would have been widespread slaughter. Major Brown added: 12-30-44

"Tell that at home that whatever anybody thinks about these men who do heavy work, they've shown the fighting spirit America boasts of."

352nd Strafes Greek Airfields; Wise Freed From Bulgar Stockade

(BY JOE ROVER JORDAN-Guide War Corresp.

AN ADVANCED ALLIED AIRBASE IN ITALY--(Via Wireless)--Sparing with sure fluvies for an occasional break, the fighter pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group here were up to their old tricks last week. They struck out at Nazis in assorted directions from their base here, destroying an undetermined number of planes on three airdromes.

Meanwhile one of the Mustang pilots, a Virginian, returned to his base after several weeks interment in a Bulgarian prison camp. He is 2nd Lt. Kent Wise, of Cape Charles, Va. Lt. Wise is now however bound, having been relieved from any further tour of combat duty.

When Bulgaria capitulated before the onrushing Soviet armies, Lt. Wise was liberated from his Bulgarian prison stockade and he was brought back to Italy via Cairo, Egypt. He was one of several American aviators who were freed by the Russian advance.

LIVING CONDITIONS BAD

Lt. Wise reported good treatment at the hands of his captors but told his mates that living conditions were very bad.

One of the replacement pilots who recently joined the 332nd and who was assigned, by the commanding officer, Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., to the 99th Fighter Squadron, one of the units of the group, Lt. Wise was forced to bail out of his ship when his engine developed trouble during one of the long escort missions across Germany.

He landed near the Russian front and spent more than two years as a prisoner of war. Upon his return, he was released to go back to the States. It is a provision of international law that prisoners of war cannot be returned to combat. If they should be captured again, they may be shot as spies. Lt. Wise is a cousin of the Rev. J. T. Wise, of Norfolk, pastor of the Mt. Lebanon Baptist Church.

In last week's action, the 332nd strafed three airdromes near Athens in Greece in support of the British invasion of that nation. The Mustang pilots struck at Kalamaki, Tatoi, and Eleusis airports in the vicinity of the Greek capital.

Reconnaissance [illegible] that [illegible] undisclosed number of German planes were left burning and destroyed. No interceptors challenged the Mustangs on this fighter sweep.

The entire 15th strategic air force including the 332nd Group, was grounded by rain for a stretch of eight days before the recent action which occurred on October 4.

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. 10-14-44

VIEWS and Reviews

12-3-44

BY GEORGE S. SCHUYLER

Pittsburgh Courier, Pa

(This column represents the personal opinion of Mr. Schuyler and in no way reflects the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors)

From Paris, France, Roi Ottley has written of the growing resentment of Negro soldiers over their relegation to non-combatant service as laborers and truck drivers, and the resentment of white soldiers over the same thing.

The Negro soldiers want to really fight instead of being helpers on the sidelines, while the white soldiers want the Negro soldiers to do some of the hard fighting.

On the Italian front, where a division of Negro troops is actually doing some fighting (with most of the Negro troops in Italy doing laboring work), the general of the Negro division has flatly stated that he will not promote any Negro officers so that they will be superior to white officers.

On the Pacific front most of the Negro soldiers are also laborers, and report has it that the one division of Negro troops sent out there to fight are now doing laboring work.

* * *

All this was a foregone conclusion when the new army began organizing in 1940 with the same old traditional segregation system. Segregation always means discrimination. In this case it has meant that with segregation Negroes were placed largely in non-combatant services in separate units.

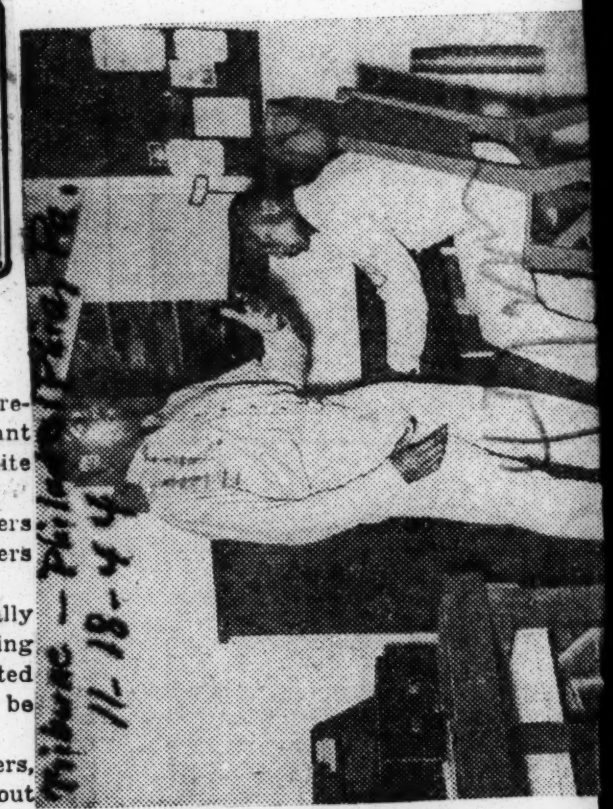
President Roosevelt knew very well that this would be the result of continuing the traditional jim-crow system. As Commander-in-Chief, he could have done away with a segregated army and his orders would have been carried out, but he absolutely failed to do so. Worse, he did not even compel General Hershey, his draft director, to enforce the non-discrimination clause of the Selective Service Act.

* * *

All the ballyhoo about Negroes serving in all branches of the military and naval service has been so much eyewash designed to cruelly fool Negroes into thinking they were making some progress. Real progress in building a democratic army and navy and a united America after the war could have been made by eliminating segregation in the very beginning when the President was hectically preparing for war while telling the American people "again and again and again" that he was not going to send American boys into a foreign war. It is not too late now to undo what has been done. The President, with a Democratic Congress at his disposal, can inaugurate this new policy tomorrow if he desires to do so and if he loves Negroes as much as his loud-mouthed followers believe that he does.

But Mr. Roosevelt does not desire to make a change. He wants changes in Europe and Asia, but he wants none where he can make them with the stroke of his pen. Because of his refusal to create a truly democratic army, the wind has been sowed and we are beginning to reap the whirlwind. Negro soldiers are rightfully resentful. So are Negro sailors. White soldiers are resentful because they are bearing the brunt of the fighting. When they come home they will be constantly throwing up to Negroes, whenever the latter demand their rights, that they do not deserve them because they did not help actively to defeat the common enemy. Of course this will lead to internal conflict, weakening America at a time when she should be strong, and increasing racial prejudice dangerously despite high-powered propaganda to the contrary.

When we see how amicably white and black Brazilians are fighting and winning the war together, it incenses us to see Americans divided because our President refuses to stand at home for the things for which we are supposedly fighting abroad.



Tribune Pittsburgh, Pa. 12-18-44

SOMEWHERE IN THE MARSHALLS — (Delayed) —They gave them classical music and Marines here not only liked it, but asked for more. The musicians were attached to an all-colored Leatherneck defense battalion. At the piano was Platoon Sergeant Charles P. Rhineheart, Jr., of Waterbury, Conn. Private First Class William A. Smith, of Philadelphia, Pa., furnished the vocal refrains.

The concert, which was held at the Red Cross shack, was advertised as strictly classical—no boogie-woogie—but the shack was filled to overflowing, some even standing outside, and the crowd kept calling for more. The repertoire consisted of everything from Debussy to Shostakovich, with a light sprinkling of Jerome Kern and a few semi-classical numbers.

Rhineheart received his musical education at the Yale University of Music, and has given numerous recitals before entering the service and after. Smith was service director of Gimbel's Department Store Choral Society in Philadelphia and broadcast over KYW, WCAU and WIP, all in Philadelphia. In 1942, he won the Marian Anderson Prize, given by Miss Anderson each year to enable talented Negro men and women to continue their studies. Smith is the son of Mrs. Ruth E. Smith, of 339 north Redfield street, Philadelphia.

Many Negroes Fight Within German Arena

N.Y. Amsterdam News

GI's Among Troops Taking Large Part In Big Invasion

N.Y., N.Y. 12-30-44

By JAMES A. SANDERS

WITH AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES IN FRANCE (ANP)—This might be it! This might be the beginning of the end. It is that unprecented surge of men and armor and air power which on the 1075th day of the United States' participation in World War No. 11 lashed out at Hitler's Germany along a 400 mile front, and in less than 48 hours, on the 741st day after the Allied landings at Casablanca and Oran, hurled four of its six great armies across the border into the crumbling defenses of the Reich.

From Cherbourg past Paris to Aachem; from Marseille to Nancy, into the battered fortress city of Metz and the once peaceful town of St. Die, colored troops of the service arms are throwing thousands of tons of impedimenta so necessary to such an all-out offensive. Other intrepid colored troops in the forward waves are knocking on destiny's door; one is a field artillery battalion, anothr a tank battalion.

Magnificent Men

There is somethting akin to magnificance about those artillery lads. Their ease and grace and self-assurance is the result of long, hard training, of native courage and the possession of the finest guns in the world.

For a long time the men of the tank battalion have "sweated it out on the bench." Now they have been given their chance, and there isn't a man in the 26th Infantry division to which they are attached who does not believe that they will vindicate the high trust placed in them.

It takes guts—a lot of guts—to throw one of those "rolling coffins" around. Incidentally you and Emily Post might have a silkier, drawing-room for it, but out here the only word one has for it is guts. It's the courage and stamina and what-have-you of all their ancestors that enables a man to push a tank into the most blistering heat of German lies, and the Kraut be damned.

Great Offensive

This great offensive called by expert military observers, "the most concentrated in the history of warfare," the sledge-hammer blows being delivered by seven Allied armies—four American, two British and one French—the devastation being wrought by heavy bombers of the 12th TAC with their fighter-bomber mates. didn't really begin that morning when the first flash came from SHAEF. It began weeks before on the docks of allied seaports, in the dimmed out address of ordnance shops, in the mud and mine infested rubble of blown bridges and wrecked rail facilities, and along the crater-pocked, water soaked highways loading up.

In this colorless off stage panorama Negro troops of Army and base sections worked 24 hours a day to get the stage set and insure the success of the operation. Engineers, ordnance men, port and quartermaster outfits all claim a piece of the glory being written into this breathless chapter of the war.

Crack Medic Unit Wins Praise Of Lt. General Lee

Atlantic Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

11-13-44

A U. S. GENERAL HOSPITAL, England — A crack Negro Medical Sanitary Company has received commendations from Lieut. General John C. H. Lee, Deputy Commander of the European Theatre of Operations, and Brigadier General Charles O. Thrasher, Base Section Commander, for meritorious services before D-Day in Northern France, the War Department reported today.

This unit aided in the evacuation of casualties suffered by our troops when they were attacked by German E-boats during pre-invasion maneuvers. On D-Day and for some time after these soldiers of the Medical Corps worked day and night with little food and less sleep, transferring battle wounded from the Normandy beaches to hospital trains and ambulances.

Staff Sergeant Henry C. Ray, 34 of 1344 Richmond Street, Memphis Tenn., remembers an amusing incident which occurred during these operations. An LST loaded with German casualties had arrived at a port in England. The litters bearing the wounded were secured with ropes to prevent them from shifting during the crossing.

"When I approached the first litter with knife drawn in preparation for cutting the ropes, a Nazi stared wildly at me and then recoiled in fear," said Ray. "He threw up his hands and began to edge away. I guess he thought that I was going to use Gestapo tactics on him."

Germans Cremate Negroes; Ashes Used For Fertilizer

Amsterdam News - New York, N.Y.

8-26-44

BY CHATWOOD HALL

(Only Negro Correspondent In Russia)

SOMEWHERE ON THE RUSSIAN FRONT, (ANP)—That Negroes were among the tens of thousands of victims brutally cremated by the Germans in the fiery ovens outside of Lublin, Poland, was the eyewitness testimony given by a Polish lawyer, Yedzek Bargolski, who was forced to work on the territory near his bloody concentration camp.

Where the Negroes came from, their background and nativity, is still unknown. Some suppose they may have been French Negro soldiers, captured behind the Maginot line in 1940, or African Negroes captured in the battles of North Africa, or Negro civilians living in France and Germany. Chinese, Turks and many thousands of Europeans of all nationalities were victims of cremation. 8-26-44

Many people in the vicinity of the Lublin ovens believe that the ashes of the cremated victims were used as fertilizer for the Nazis. This supposition is supported by finding a large experimental garden nearby. The soil of this garden is much richer and the harvest yields much larger than similar surroundings projects in this agricultural district. Furthermore, the garden area of the concentration camp is littered with blood-red poppies and other red flowers right up to the walls of "Death Factory," which labels the crematory building.

47m-1944

Foreign Service

These GIs in France Have Hot Rolls Almost Everyday

AFRO-American

Natives Haven't Seen Bread in Two Years, But Cooks in Engineer Unit Turn It Out by the Pansful

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Eastern France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH INVASION FORCES IN EASTERN FRANCE (Censored) — I have found an engineer unit, a company of Treadway bridge builders, which has buttered hot rolls EVERY day — well, almost every day.

Max Johnson

Not just biscuits, but rolls — made from honest-to-goodness flour and as light and fluffy as any you ever sank your store teeth into. Natives have had no bread in the past two years, and have recently seen their first white bread in some areas in five years.

Most of our troops have had nothing but a bread substitute since landing but the rationed graham-type crackers. Others are now getting the French brown bread being made in some liberated areas, and still others have managed to establish contact with some army quartermaster bakeries farther behind the front and get a fair share of the coarse white bread they make.

The whole thing came to my attention Tuesday morning when I stopped at the wooded area where this outfit was bivouaced. It was raining but here and there some men had open fires going under whatever protective covering trees can give in such instances.

I stopped at the fire where First Sgt. James A. Fields, of 310 W. 118th Street, New York City, head non-com, stood with several other soldiers, most of whom had mess kits.

In Time for Lunch

"You're just in time for lunch," Sgt. Fields told me. I agreed that a cup of hot coffee would go nicely.

Before we had traveled the 200 yards through the woods to the mobile kitchen, I caught the scent of rolls. It was mingled with that of damp earth, decayed wood, burnt wood, pan smoke and a half-dozen other odors found nowhere else under the sun perhaps than in a warfront area.

First things I saw when I climbed up inside the closed-in six-by-six army truck were a big pan of dough and a tough-looking little soldier giving it a good working over. His name was Pfc. James E. Twitty, of 112 Valley Street, Tarrytown, N.Y.

Standing there in scuffed combat boots, much-worn brown pants and shirt, with something that looked like a flour sack for an apron and at least a two-day growth of beard, all under a helmet cocked over one ear and eye, Twitty was the most perfect picture of an army cook in combat territory I have ever seen.

Four on Staff

Another of the four men around two stoves and two tables was S/Sgt. Samuel W. Dates, of Folly, Va., head cook.

Dates, whose brother, Henry, lives at 1137 N. Calhoun Street, Baltimore, was taking the dough from Twitty balling it into golf-ball size rolls and placing them in a big pan.

Now and then he would turn and pull a pan of golden brown rolls from the stove and T/5 Oatsey Lewis, of 1081 Dean Street, Brooklyn, N.Y., or T/5 James A. Rice, of 10 Lee Street, Union, S.C., would dump them in another pan.

Every-Day Event

"We have these almost every day," Sgt. Dates said in response to my query. "The men like them and we like to fix them."

His staff, of Pfc. James S. Tindall, of Sumter, S.C., and Pvt. Frank Johnson, of Troup, Texas, refused to divulge the secret.

Sgt. Dates said that his staff cooked the banquet dinners the men of his company gave some time ago in Casablanca for the contingent of colored army nurses on their way back to the States from Liberia and for Bishop Gregg during his visit there last fall.

"That spread for the nurses cost us about $300," a GI said.

While they were talking I had been attacking the meal of sausages, lima beans, spinach, butter, jam, coffee and HOT ROLLS. Other men of the outfit paraded past the doorway and another cook placed two rolls and butter or jam on their mess plates beside their portions of the same meal I had.

I had already eaten nine rolls when Dates pulled a fresh pan from a stove and offered me some more. "This is a little touch of home," he said. "At least it strikes us that way."

I agreed and accepted four more. Having repeated this visit to this kitchen on several occasions, Sgt. Dates and his staff are now my favorite army cooks.

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

Stewart Describes Triumphant Entry

9-2-44

First Americans in Paris Are Colored Truck Drivers

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

PARIS — The first time I saw Paris her heart was old, and she was not very well fed, but oh, how gay! The heart of France, in fact, was mad with joy because Americans had arrived.

I entered along Avenue De Fontainebleau Saturday morning at eleven with Cecil Carnes of the Saturday Evening Post, Tom Henry of the Washington Star, and Dave Baylor of Radio Station WGAR, Cleveland, Ohio. Our jeep was driven by Pvt. Arthur Holton of Lee, Mass. 9-2-44

Our arrival concluded three days and nights of camping on the outskirts of the city waiting the mopping up of the last pockets of German resistance.

Along the broad boulevards, we had used as barricades in their last stand on Friday, but in a few places where road blocks had been, we saw workmen already making repairs.

Hang Nazis in Effigy

Dummy Germans were hanged in effigy in two places but all signs of organized resistance had disappeared. Americans in armored vehicles in control of certain areas in other FFI (or Fighting French or the Interior) were in charge. 9-2-44

Beautiful women dashed into the streets to kiss dusty GI lads, to throw flowers and to offer wine and fruit.

Thousands of bicycles filled the boulevards and crowds lined the streets to wave and shout welcome.

We set out to enter Paris on Wednesday but were held up about fifty miles away and slept Wednesday night almost in the laps of the enemy. Thursday we tried again but had to turn back, so we took over a deserted chateau, bought chicken, eggs and had a feast. Friday we rushed the Seine south of the city but 88 shellfire forced us to retreat to the rear of an armored column storming strong-points outside the city, and just ahead of us 200 Nazis were captured after having been shelled into a daze. Friday night, we slept in the open country with our rations almost gone.

Early Saturday, we headed for Versailles but were cut off and rode into Paris without an escort. We found the greatest collection of correspondents in history from every part of the world. Many of them were veterans of former campaigns who expect to return home soon. 9-2-44

This is the city that they have waited for and this is the day that the French nation prayer for. After all, there is but one Paris.

My hotel room was just vacated a few days ago by a German officer who took the key with him. Signs in German still remain in many parts of the city but the gray Nazi horde is fast retreating toward Berlin which is the last stop on the liberation parade.

616th Bomb Squadron Sets Perfect Record In Flights

GODMAN FIELD, FORT KNOX, Ky.—Few large part in the daily routine organizations of checking, testing, and inspect- can boast ing the bomber prior to take-off. Army Air Force record set by Over 100 separate items must flying safety be checked each day, including Bomb Squadron, sta- the engines, instruments, pro- Field, Ky., peller, radio, lights and electrical Air Force. This system, armament, and other all-Negro auxiliary equipment. squadron, part of the Responsible for the condition Bomb Group, has flown of the plane is the crew chief. The over 300 days without an acci- crew chief must be a graduate of dent of any kind. Squadron Engineering Officer, an Airplane Mechanics school. When asked to what this amaz- First Lieutenant Clarence E. ing record could be attributed, Lewis, of Dayton, Ohio, replied: "You can give the credit to the entire personnel. It was their expert maintenance, thorough checking, and just plain perseverance that did the job."

Perseverance, indeed, plays a vital part in the evacuation of casualties suffered by our troops when they were attacked by German E-boats during pre-invasion maneuvers. On D-Day and for some time after these soldiers of the Medical Corps worked day and night with little food and less sleep, transferring battle wounded from the Normandy beaches to hospital trains and ambulances.

11-17-44

Staff Sergeant Henry C. Ray, 34, of 1344 Richmond Street, Memphis, Tenn., remembers an amusing incident which occurred during these operations. An LST loaded with German casualties had arrived at a port in England. The litters bearing the wounded were secured with ropes to prevent them from shifting during the crossing.

"When I approached the first litter with knife drawn in preparation for cutting the ropes, a Nazi soldier stared wildly at me and then rolled in fear," said Ray. "He threw up his hands and began to edge down from the litter. I guess he thought that I was going to use Gestapo tactics on him."

Memphis World

Crack Medic Unit Wins Praise Of Lt. General Lee

11-17-44

A U. S. GENERAL HOSPITAL, England — A crack Negro Medical Sanitary Company has received commendations from Lieut. General John C. H. Lee, Deputy Commander of the European Theatre of Operations, and Brigadier General Charles O. Thrasher, Base Section Commander, for meritorious services before D-Day in Northern France, the War Department reported today.

Tan Marines Played Big Role in Fierce Battle for Saipan, Now in U.S. Hands

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
11-4-44

Another Unit Took Part in Invasion of Palau, Still Others Stationed in Hawaii

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
NNPA War Correspondent

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR — (By Courier)—On July 10, organized resistance ceased on Saipan and the American flag fluttered over the former enemy bastion—American troops had won the decision of a great battlefield, another step had been taken toward the coast of China and the prize of Japan proper.

News stories poured into Pacific Fleet headquarters of the intensity of the struggle and sacrifice. One concerned the combat mission of several units of colored marines.

Depot units (quartermasters), they took up the cudgel during moments when potential enemy break-throughs seemed inevitable, fought, killed and were killed. Although casualties were incredibly light, those who did fall, fell as fighting troops of America's prized branch of the service.

Part of D-Day Assault Force

The colored troops were a part of the D-Day assault force and were commissioned to handle material. However, due to capable enemy counterattacks, it became the essential mission of all troops present to help push back the onrushing Japanese infantry.

Day after day, machine guns and mortars laid fire into the crevices and caves of the rotten coral. It was primitive warfare. Men fought through the caves, over maggoty dead, each foot of ground heatedly contested.

Some of those marines have returned to Pearl Harbor. They tell the story of their participation in the campaign. And it is not so much the tale of super-human endurance and ability as of men sent to do one job and who stayed on to do several—and did them very well.

Marine Tells Experiences

"We went in on the eighth wave," said Pfc. Jeff Smith of New Orleans. "My platoon moved to shore on alligators (amphibious tractors). They had told us to keep ammo cleared off the beachhead. When we ran onto the beach, mortars were exploding. I guess every man knew he was in for it."

Jeff said the various units dispersed as the barrage grew heavier. Black and white men advanced cautiously together. There was not much time to man supplies as the stubborn and fanatical enemy threatened each movement.

11-4-44

"We opened fire along with others," the peacetime carpenter explained. "An explosion sounded near our position. Two marines were killed outright. All five of us were hit by shrapnel. I felt as if my hip was paralyzed. I couldn't get along any further."

First to Get Purple Heart

He must have passed out, Jeff added. When he came around, he saw a white marine bending over him and slapping a bandage on his hip. The wound was bleeding profusely and aching.

Smith said he was taken back aboard ship and later evacuated to Hawaii. Recently he received the Purple Heart, one of the first colored marines in this area to be wounded in action. His mates went on to occupy position in the forward wall.

Today, it is said, snipers still dwell in the caves of Marpi Point, the north tip of the island. And in the town of Garapan where once lived 10,000, there is nothing much left but the white corners of wrecked buildings.

Stairways stand without buildings, leading a short distance into the air. The Catholic church is nicked with bullets and the frontton steeple was blown away by a shell. The rich altar carvings and mosaics are scratched and chipped.

They're on Palau, Too

Their mission completed, most of the marines have withdrawn. It has not been revealed to this correspondent whether or not elements were used in the Palau operations, but I learned that "colored troops were there and are thought to be still there."

Since Pearl Harbor is one of America's largest supply depots in the Pacific, serving the domain ruled by Admiral Chester Nimitz, much of the work here has to do with supplies. In a tour of the immediate area, I found colored troops (including marines) doing this type of work.

Ordnance units are servicing heavy field pieces and light artillery, salvaging shoes and clothing, building crates for ammunition, handling a multitude of machinery.

Here the earth is covered with aircraft, lumber, gasoline—days and nights are filled with the multiple singing of engines of heavy machinery.

11-4-44

Another Marine Unit

Somewhere in the Central Pacific there is another group of colored marines—defense units. At one time they were bivouacked in the Ellice Islands, approximately 1000 miles east of the Solomons group.

An antiaircraft force, they stood radar watches and manned automatic weapons. The enemy did not penetrate our areas of security, thus these troops saw very little, if any, action.

Representatives of this group are now at a rear base receiving specialized training in aircraft detection.

They are Sgt. Cyrus J. Hanna, Philadelphia; S/Sgts. John H. Boxhill, NYC; Charles G. Guillebeaux, Evanston, Ill.; Odell Crenshaw, Dallas, Tex.; Cpl. Frank A. Carroncejie, NYC; S/Sgt. William E. Johnson, Des Moines, Iowa; T/Sgt. John D. Lewis, Raleigh, N.C., and S/Sgt. Elmo Wade, Jr., of Detroit.

Easterners in Hawaii

Returned to the mainland for V-12 courses are Sgt. Herbert L. Brewer, San Antonio, Tex.; Cpl. Clinton Branch, Philadelphia, and First Sgt. Charles C. Johnson, of Des Moines, Iowa.

The depot units in Hawaii are from various sections of America. Most of the men are in the age group between 18 and 23. Among them are Pfc. Charlie Coles, Radford, Va.; Sgts. Ernest Cower and Eugene Cox, NYC; Cpl. Raymond Hobson, Lynchburg, Va.; Pfc. Richard Martin, Bostton; Pfc. Alonzo Mays, Isabelle, Pa., Pfc. Earl Miller, Baltimore, and Pfc. LaLois Bennett, Jamaica, L.I.

Negro Soldiers On Leyte Went Thru "Living Hell"

N.Y. N.Y. 12-30-44
N.Y. Amsterdam News

WITH THE 96TH DIVISION, SOMEWHERE IN THE PHILIPPINES (Delayed)—Negro soldiers have played an important role in the landings in the Philippines, the War Department revealed for the first time today.

Two members of an amphibious tractor unit attached to the 96th Division distinguished themselves by entering an ammunition dump which had caught fire and saved from destruction three huge amphibious trucks loaded with mortar and artillery shells.

Staff Sergeant Robert Jones, Roxbury, Massachusetts, says of the men, Sergeant Clarence Jackson, Washington, D. C., and Technician Fifth Grade Samuel Bryant, New York City, "They entered a living hell to save the ammuntion.

Sharing in the general praise given to their amphibious tractor unit which plowed through muddy roads and terrain thought impassable to bring up supplies and ammunition are Technician Fourth Grade Prince E. Anderson, 239 W. 138th Street, New York; Technician Fifth Grade William H. Holland, 10 E. 126th Street, New York; Technician Fifth Grade Leonard Ingram, 541 W. 124th Street, New York, Technician Fifth Grade Allen Smith, 233 E. 127th Street, New York, Technician Fourth Grade Daniel J. Evertz, Rams Inn, Bridgeport, New Jersey, and Private Everett Elam, 33 John St., Bloomfield, New Jersey.

Technician Fifth Grade Mayo L. Gentry, 2384 Champlain, N. W., Technician Fourth Grade Robert McCaney, 226 47th Street, N. E., and Technician Fourth Grade Robert Wiley, 3028 Park Place, all of Washington, D. C.

Private First Class David Mitchell, 926 S. 15th Street, Philadelphia, and Sgt. Samuel Binkins, 3869 Alabama Avenue, S. E., Washington, D. C., members of a Transportation Corps unit, killed a Jap sniper infesting their bivouac area. Later they narrowly escaped death when their jeep, carrying a casualty to the hospital, hit a mine, throwing them from their vehicle.

Negroes in the beach party landing in the vicinity of Dulag were warmly greeted by the Filipinos. Their admiration for Negroes arose from the heroic deeds of a Negro guerilla, Joe George, of San Francisco, who came to the Phillipines prior to the war Marrying a Filipino woman in Tacloban, he became a popular local figure. He set up a trucking service between the towns of Dulag and Tacloban on the island of Leyte.

After the fall of Bataan, he used his truck to supply Filipino guerrillas operating in the hills. Captured by the Japs and sentenced to be shot, he escaped and became a local hero by carrying out daring raids on the Japs.

NEGRO ARTILLERYMEN IN FRANCE BLAST NAZI THEORIES OF RACIAL SUPERIORITY

Age N.Y. 8-12-44

A.U.S. ARTILLERY COMMAND POST, France—Showing utter contempt for "master race" divisions facing them, U. S. Negro artillerymen, firing 155-mm howitzers, are blasting German installations and troop concentrations, pounding to pieces the Nazi theory of "inferior" and "superior" races.

First Negro combat artillery team to fight in this sector, this outfit is the howitzer member of a four-unit artillery group that includes a battalion of 105s and two of 155-mm long Toms.

They make music horrible to enemy ears, but to U. S. doughboys

Kelsey, the unit's commander, knows artillery, having been an artillery man himself. "I'll put them against any artillery outfit over here."

Accuracy Acclaimed 8-12-44

The battalion's uniqueness far transcends the fact that it's a Negro combat unit. Its firing record, accuracy and output are acclaimed from corps artillery headquarters to the foxhole-pitted ridges of Hill 122 where muddy infantrymen fight.

A fabulous amount of intricate mathematics—plotting and computing—precedes the sending of fire directions to the individual batteries. Armed with this data, computant Lawrence E. Iners Staff Sergeant Lewis, of New York City; Private Van Q. White, of East Orange, New Jersey; Private Otis B. Walker, of Passaic, New Jersey, and Technician Fifth Grade Joe Hodge, a survey section man from Detroit, "and we know those Germans up there don't like it a Lieutenant Colonel Harmond S.

White-Negro Soldiers Work In Harmony In Same Unit In France

Savannah Tribune — Ga.
11-16-44

SAYS ASSN. NEGRO PRESS CORRESPONDENT

Men Live Like One Big Family

A SAVANNAHIAN IN THE COMPANY

11-16-44

by Rudolph Dunbar

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE — I was immenseley pleased and gratified when I visited one of the strongest units ever to come under my notice on the western front, called quarter master effects company and composed approximately of an even number of white and colored soldiers who work and live like a large family. 11-16-44

I would not have known of this outfit had I not paid a visit to the "Silhouette" in Paris a charming little cabaret on Rue-Notre- Dam-de -Lorette, where I met Pvts. Ed Warner of East Chicago, Ind, and Conway Butler of New Orleans. These two GIs presented an air of happiness and contentment, and their eyes were sparkling like the champagne cocktails they were sipping. They asked me to have a drink with them which I readily accepted.

"How are they treating you, I asked." "Swell," said these boys. Here Warner interjected, "We couldn't expect anything better. I am the driver for the commanding officer, Maj. McCormick, and I can truthfully say that he makes no distinction in the company." With this information I decided to visit the company the very next day and see for myself.

I met Maj. F. R. McCormick from Florida who was evidently pleased to see me and tell me about his work and his men. He said that his primary function was the efficient execution of the important task assigned him and, secondly, he was interested in the welfare and happiness of each man in his company. 11-16-44

I had lunch with the officers, Capt. Joseph Minetti of New York, who is in charge of the warehouse; Capt. Henry H. Beck from Oshkoch, Wis., Capt. W. Freeman Sharp, Jr., Lt. S. Maurice Pool, Lt. Joseph Vogl, from New York city, and 2nd. Lt. Thomas F. Flannery from Springfield, Mass., who is in charge of the colored soldiers in the outfit. All of these officers have expressed sincerely their pleasure of their association with this mixed team.

"We exercise justice in small things, and would avoid all cause of offense, not by seeking merely to please all, but to give all their due." These were the words Capt. Minetti said to me. Capt. Henry Beck said that there is always an amicable adjustment of disputes if there are any. 11-16-44 At lunch I saw men sitting together full of geniality, humor, conversation and cheerfulness of nature which makes men agreeable.

Those people who repeatedly say that whie and colored soldiers cannot associate amicably are creating a distortion of right and justice, by imputing defects of character on the part of the Negro. Here is another unit that has given the lie to such unjust propaganda. The greatest injustice one can do to any honest man or race is to call his probity in question.

This organization is charged with the responsibility of receiving and storing. In addition, it must make proper disposition of personal effects of all U. S. personnel and people subject to military law in the ETO. For example, those wounded in action, missing, deceased and prisoners of war. When a soldier is ill in hospital and becomes well again, the executive department of the hospital communicates with the effects officer and the personal belongings of the soldier are returned to him. If he is deceased his effects are sent to Kansas City to be handed over to his next of kin.

Honesty combined with integrity and dignity of character are the outstanding features of this GI effects unit. The colored soldiers are the guards and upon them is placed an obligation of trust in the execution of their duty. 11-16-44

These are the names of the colored boys in the outfit: Sgt. A. G. Newton of Manhattan, Kan.; Sgt. Marvin A. Wortham, Cpl. Charles Albertson, Philadelphia; Cpl. W. Earl Grimes, Detroit; Cpl. Robert Jones, Palm Beach, Fla.; Cpl. Numa Barnabo, Opelousa, La., and Pfc. A. Richie Carter, Houston, who writes more love letters than other members of the company. Here is a list of the Pfcs.: Clarence Dominguez, New Orleans; Robert Franklin, Arizona; James Hennings, St. Louis; F. Julius Lissimore, Valdosta, Ga.; Ike Perry, Atlanta; W. Jno Robertson, Cleveland; A. Joseph Willis, Atlanta, and Robert Winter, Jacksonville, Fla.

11-16-44

Here is a list of the privates, one of whom, James Maxwell, is from Savannah, Ga.: Frank Collier, Houston; Trollie Culbreath, Monroe, Ga.; Robert L. Giddings, Houston; N. Ambrose Johnson, West Virginia; Walter Latham, Kingston, N. C.; Joseph Lobe, Nantucket, Mass.; William McCall, North Carolina; A. Arthur Nash, Hope, Ark.; Brazeo Robinson, Miami; L. Hubert Sanders, St. Petersburg, Fla., and William Wilkerson, Chicago.

Col. Howard Queen's Unit Assigned to War Front

Baltimore Md
Afro-American 5-13-44

African Segregation Much Like That Experienced in Dixie; Men Glad to Leave

By MAX JOHNSON

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA — A recently arrived infantry unit, under Col. Howard D. Queen, still intact with all colored officer and personnel, has advanced to a war front assignment. The men are in good spirits, due largely to their eagerness to leave this area, where they found conditions too similar to those in the Southern States.

Max Johnson

Entertainment, especially dancing, existed under segregated arrangements for the enlisted men at Red Cross Clubs. Mixed dancing was not allowed even at officers' clubs although other facilities were provided.

The men found the attitude of civilians colder than expected. The general belief is that this was due to forewarnings from some unestablished sources.

Personnel of this unit includes, in addition to Col. Queen, Lieut. Cols. Alonzo G. Ferguson, Washington and Oscar Randall, Chicago, Majors James H. Robinson, George P. Lawrence, and Clinton C. Burke of Washington; Willis D. Polk, Philadelphia;; Edward C. Johnson, and William H. Bowers, Chicago, Capt. James D. Fowler, Washington, a 1941 West Point graduate.

Baltimoreans in Unit

Baltimoreans in the unit include:

Lt. Leroy Boldin, S-Sgts. Ralph Boyd, Calvin Thomas, Horace Palmer, Jr., and John Pitts; Sgts. Casper Pigot, Jr., Martin Wake, Alexander Ross, Preston Watson of Sparrows Point, Everett West; T-5s Robert and Charles Evans, Cpl. Joseph Hines;

COL. HOWARD D. QUEEN

Pfc. Clyde Garnes, Henry West, Elmer Dennis, Melvin Fentress, Milton A. Holly, Elgin Butler, John O. Hill, Walter Montague, Alfonso Curry, Grady Nichols, William Jackson of Sparrows Point, Pvt. Arthur Crieglar, former AFRO composing room employee.

NEWS OF ITS VALOR SPREADS THROUGHOUT SOUTH PACIFIC AREA

Courier, Pittsburgh, Pa
4-1-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN, NNPA War Correspondent

BOUGAINVILLE—(Via Wireless from South Pacific)—Colored troops of the 24th Infantry and the 54th Coast Artillery, which is now doing artillery duty, are proving to even the most skeptical their effectiveness as combat units.

They are stopping the enemy in his tracks and have not yielded an inch of ground.

Their fire discipline has drawn many compliments. One general remarked that, considering their two years in the jungles doing other hard work, the men have taken to combat weapons like "naturals" and the base is "mighty proud of them."

Martin

News of the 24th having gone into action has spread throughout the South Pacific area. Major General Lehman, commander of a Negro combat force in this sector, visited our position. Whether this is an indication that colored reinforcements will be sent here in the future has not been authenticated as yet.

Brigadier General Arnold refuses to be quoted, but one official remarked, "Never can tell."

4-1-44

BLINDING FIRE STOPS ATTACK

Seasoned by preliminary skirmishes and co-ordinating efficiently, these elements of the American defense in this sector have successfully thwarted vain attempts by the Japanese to force a beachhead.

The 24th refuses to quit its muddy tract of jungles, stopping the enemy attacks with blinding automatic fire while artillery salvos thunder in the background.

The jungle reeks with the musty stench of dead Japanese bodies, which litter the boggy, bloody ground.

4-1-44

Twice the enemy tried infiltration tactics through our position, sergeant replied, "My God, let it go!" He did, and three Japanese, coming down stream in front of the position, were routed.

MACHINE GUNS SPRAY DEATH

Sporadically, machine guns spray the area with their message of death. They are a nemesis to the invader. Cpl. Joseph Luke, Atlanta, Ga.; Pfc. Dave Yancey, Rossville, Tenn.; Pvts. James Reynolds, Birmingham, Ala.; John Henry, Pittsville, Ala., and Freeman Jones, Oakland, Ala., to name a few, lie behind the pulsating monsters, discouraging any enemy advance.

Often the "long Toms" bark, and we know that our gunners of the 54th have been called back to duty in their sector.

The last few days of quietness can only mean that all hell will break loose in the near future. The Japanese usually attack us during rainy nights.

At our command post, when the rifle fire gets loud and close, those of us behind crouch lower in our foxholes which are very often filled with mud.

When periods of calmness occur, the falling leaves sound like boulders as they crash against the turf. Our breathing sounds not unlike a steaming locomotive.

Nights become centuries, and home a far-away place of the not too distant past. Sleep comes in jerks. Suddenly, shrieking shells pierce the air and start exploding, and the war climbs into the foxhole with you.

It is impossible to predict just how long an attack will last. God be praised! We have plenty of ammunition and sturdy men, who have been shooting straight.

4-1-44

and both times he left many dead and others dying. One brave son of Nippon surged through and his riddled body was later found—well ventilated.

In ever advancing waves the enemy attacks and in broken waves he dies, as our boys prove themselves to be masters of the situation. Our troops are keen of eye and steady of hand.

FOUR DIE IN ACTION

As we enter the second week of combat action, enemy resistance has quieted down. He may be licking his wounds. But we know that he is not through. His striking force numbers thousands.

During the interim our troops dig deeper into their lines and are waiting.

One desperate, though befuddled attack by the Japanese began on March 8. The enemy's losses numbered approximately 3,000, while those of the American defenders were under 300, among them four Negroes, who were killed in action. Our last death casualty occurred as the result of a sniper's bullet fired from ambush. Our troops aided by Fijiian defenders scoured the area in search of the enemy.

The morale of our troops soars despite the long hours spent in total darkness in jungles so thick with vegetation that it is difficult to use hand grenades. The strength-sapping heat in this area of operations must also be listed as a liability.

Our patrols continue to move into the bosom of the enemy's positions, not only reconnoitering, but engaging him when possible.

HIDE IN BUSHES

The soldiers of the Rising Sun have so far refused our challenge, and the few shots that have been fired by our accurate marksmen have been at the Japanese darting through the bushes.

Pfc. "Guns" Cheaton, Derry, La., remarked, "Each night we pray that they will come out instead of hiding like bushes." The enemy camouflages himself with bushes from the waist up and squats in waiting. However, shrewd eyes have caught the bushes running, and quite a few of these bushes have been rendered stationary by our men's unerring rifle fire.

The first blood has been drawn. The 24th is rocking in the saddle with little thought of withdrawal.

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Colored and White Engineer Units in Iran Build Highway in Record Time

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
11-4-44

Groups Gain Mutual Admiration for Each Other; Tan Yanks Tops in Repairing Vehicles

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA War Corerspondent

SABZ-AB, DESERT DISTRICT, IRAN—(By Courier, Delayed) — Few seem to remember the little cogwheels in the mighty Persian Gulf military machine when the subject of supplies to Russia through the Iranian corridor is discussed.

I visited with one such unit, the 436th Engineer Dump Truck Company and a detachment of Company E of the 352nd Engineer General Service Regiment, here at Sabz-Ab (pronounced like "Zab-Zab") in the heart of a torrid desert where the temperature remains between 150 and 170 all summer.

Arrived Here in 1943

The 436th was also one of the early arrivals here in the command, arriving in January, 1943. In the beginning the company performed general maintenance and hauling duties at Khorramshahr, and later at Ahwaz, which was their permanent station for quite some time.

It was on the road between Khorramshahr and Ahwaz that the beginning of the supply route to Russia that the 436th turned in one of the finest jobs ever performed in the Persian Gulf Command.

The construction of the road had been started by a New York civilian firm, but a manpower shortage and the continual floods which washed away much of the road as fast as it was built, were holding up the passage of materials through to the Soviet front.

Sets Record

Being the only dump truck outfit available, this company was thrown into the breach and proceeded to "dump" the entire road in record time.

On this job, the 436th was attached to the 334th, white, special service engineers, and this team set a terrific building pace that left the civilian contractors holding their mouths and eyes open in candid amazement.

Today, these two units have great respect and mutual admiration for each other, and feel mighty proud of their accomplishment.

New Yorker in Unit

Later, the 436th teamed up with the 352nd detachments in "blacktopping" the road between Ahwaz and Andimeshk, as well as operating the huge gravel pit located in the desert between the Shaur and Kharkheh Rivers.

Men like First Sgt. John C. Cammack of Chicago, T/4 Moses Roderick, Cape Cod, Mass., and Cpl. William Johnson of NYC, of the 436th, worked this section of the supply route in the early days on 24-hour shifts, and in temperatures which went as high as 189 degrees in the sun and 135 degrees in the shade.

Good Mechanics

These men have had to resort to all types of ingenious means and devices to keep their "ancient vintaged vehicles" in working order.

Although they were supposed only to grease and check the timing of vehcles, they can now perform any job, no matter how big or difficult, according to their commanding officer, Lt. Milton Krauss of Lock Haven, Pa.

I watched T/5 Benjamin Bard of Roxbury, Mass., and several other soldiers, supervised by Sgt. Willard Barnes of Detroit, welding broken axles, cutting out gaskets, and building up spark plugs by splitting 10-mm. and 14-mm. ones and then combining the two.

Average Age 35

The average age of the men of this unit is 35 years, and the effects of a life in this area, which has been quite rugged because of the heat, sandfly fever, dysentery, and malaria, shows quite plainly in most of them.

11-4-44

The majority of these GI's, whose homes are in the Midwest, spend their evenings attending the show, reading, or sitting around discussing the standard GI topic: "What Will There Be for Men of Our Age to Do in the Post-War Era?"

Jim-Crow Swimming

A mobile PX, operated by the Red Cross, moves up and down the line, thus giving these men, who frankly feel like exiles from home, the opportunity to do their general shopping.

When they feel like it, the men are able to drive in to Andimeshk for a swim on the days set aside for colored soldiers to use the pool.

47m-1944 Foreign Service

Harlem Hell Fighters Guard Pearl Harbor

By Fletcher Martin, INPA War Correspondent

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR--(By Courier)--Honolulu, a symphony of races, creeds, colors! To these islands, over a period of years, have come Occidentals, Orientals, and natives from the South Seas--all to mingle with native Hawaiians. A melting pot of multi-colored peoples living amidst the grandeur that is the Territory of Hawaii. Then came deep tanned Negro troops from America to complete the tapestry of color. Fine, sturdy men--representatives of all black men who have fought in America's wars. And America was at war again.

"Harlem Hell Fighters," they call themselves. Armed to the hilt with anti-aircraft field pieces, they arrived in early 1942. The embers of enemy treachery were still smoldering when these inheritors of the famed records made by the envialle "Black Regiment," the 15th New York infantry during the last war arrived.

10-21-44

UNIT READY TO FIGHT AGAIN

At this hour, the reorganized unit under Lt. Col. Wilmer J. Lucas of Brooklyn, N. Y., is ready to push forward again--to fight for the right to live as equals to any man, anywhere. And as former commander, Col. Chauncey M. Cooper, said, "Every man in the regiment is eager to match the record made by the unit during the last war."

Their tactical mission at this highly strategic command is the guarding of Pearl Harbor. An important cog in the Caribbean-air-or it defenses, this regiment of more than 1500 Negro officers and men help guard the harbor from mountain recesses. The first colored combat unit to reach Pearl Harbor following December 7, a prodigious amount of lor has been expended by the New York outfit.

WANT TO SEE ACTION

What of future operations out of American waters out where enemy inner defenses begin? Lt. Faulkner Watts, one of the battery commanders, summed it up:

"We would like to see some action. I can imagine all fighting units do. We would hate to go home without having fired at an enemy plane. But they tell us we are a part of the island defenses, an important part. It has been over two years now, and perhaps the chances of combat fade. But then you can never tell. As God, the American Army works in mysterious ways! You can never tell."

WOODRUFF COMMANDS BATTERY

Big Johnny Woodruff, great halfmiler from the University of Pittsburgh, is here, now Captain Woodruff, battery commander. And there are numerous other athletes. But perhaps better known than the runners, baseballers, and other athletic greats, is the array of known musicians. Cpl. Otis Johnson (Louis Armstrong); Pvt. Robert Ashton, Dick Thompson (Benny Carter); Ben Richards (Blanche Calloway); shy Reuben Reeves, formerly with Cab Calloway.

The most popular presentation of the group was the "Chocolate Soldier," a musical extravaganza. The curtains ran upon an audience that overflowed to the woods behind the beautiful outdoor theatre built by the regiment. All was under the direction of Major Marshall, who left his job as engineer in the Brooklyn Navy Yards and entered the New York National Guards with the rank of captain.

KEEP IT UP TO DATE

The unit is kept up to date on the Pacific situation. Orientation officer, Capt. Basil A. Lane, of Louisville, Ky., has been sent here by the war department especially to keep the unit tactically informed on current developments. Affable, lively Captain Lane is "just one of the fellows," but from all indications it goes a bit deeper than that. The men have recognized the former West Virginia state college lean as a scholar; his opinions carry weight.

Courier---Pittsburgh, Pa. 10-21-44

Negro Troops In Aleutians Eat Lunch With FDR

AN ALEUTIAN ISLAND BASE---Negro soldiers, sailors and marines were among the enlisted men who lunched with President Roosevelt when he visited this base two weeks ago.

Seated indiscriminately around the large mess hall, the colored service men ate with their commander-in-chief as he shared their simple meals. Earlier, thousands of sailors and soldiers, white and Negro, stood at attention as the President passed, waving and returning their salutes.

The President paid a surprise visit to this Aleutian base, arriving on a warship, by way of Honolulu. At the end of lunch, he made some impromptu remarks praising the members of the armed forces participating in the Aleutian campaign and construction program.

Defender--Chicago, Ill. 8-19-44

92nd Living Up To Its Tradition

World — Memphis, Tenn. 9-22-44

BY JAMES A. SANDERS

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY — (ANP)—The 92nd Infantry division which distinguished itself in the Argonne in 1918, is a new member of Lt. Gen. Mark Clark's

Fifth army storming through the battered Gothic line in Italy. The 92nd is the first such combat team of Negro ground troops to enter the siege of Hitler's Fortress Europe. If past performances is to be used as any measure of present or future accomplishments, the die is cast for those elements of the Hitler plague who are feverishly back pedaling out of Italy.

In the historic Argonne conflict elements of the 92nd remained in the line for more than three months without relief. So magnificently did they acquit themselves that France awarded them the Croix de Guerre, ranking French decoration. They were also among the first troops of the AEF to set foot on enemy territory.

DARING HERITAGE 9-22-44

It must have been of this that Gen. Clark was thinking when he told them on the eve of their first battle participation that they "have a chance to cover yourselves with glory fighting side by side with other allied Armies in Italy." These youngish men and officers are sons and brothers, some of them, of the heroes who put the 92nd in the niche of great war machines. Their courage and daring has come down to them as a heritage from their predcessoors, and they will keep that tradition untainted, these men who represent every segment of American life and come from every state in the union.

When Gen. Clark visited the wounded of the 92nd at an evacuation hospital, he awarded ten of them, nine infantrymen and one white officer, with the Purple Heart. The general talked a few minutes with each of them, and commended them and their outfit for their initial accomplishments.

MORALE IS HIGH 9-22-44

Courage and esprit de corps is very high, unlike their comrades of '18 they know what they are fighting for, they know what victory will mean to them and their posterity. They will tell you that they know that when victory is achieved every man in the arsenal of democracy will be accorded the dreams set forth in the bill of rights. That and the long waited chance to take a crack at the false "super-men" is all a part of the majestic dynamic that promises to give them a commanding place among the victors of World War II. 9-22-44

Their training and equipment is second to none which gives them an advantage over the enemy from the beginning. The 92nd was reactivated in the fall of 1942 at Breckenridge, Ky. Their later and more intensive training was carried on at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. The outfit is fortunate in that most of its colored officers are men who have been with the division since its reactivation. Also to their advantage is that many of these officers came up through the ranks, and later were sent of the infantry officer candidate school at Fort Benning, Ga. The non-commissioned officers have the command of the newest and most exacting techniques because most of them have come through army specialist schools, and have had special training for the job they have.

TIME IS SHORT 9-22-44

Only time will tell just how far this well-tuned machine will go in winning and writing a colorful chapter in World War II—and the time is short. From somewhere out in the heaven of these men who died at Argonne, those boys have caught and will hold "what it takes." Their's is just another example of the love for freedom, devotion to country, of training and the red badge of courage that has come down from the distant most prime of their race.

NEWS OF ITS VALOR SPREADS THROUGHOUT SOUTH PACIFIC AREA

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

4-1-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN, NNPA War Correspondent

BOUGAINVILLE—(Via Wireless from South Pacific)—Colored troops of the 24th Infantry and the 54th Coast Artillery, which is now doing artillery duty, are proving to even the most skeptical their effectiveness as combat units. They are stopping the enemy in his tracks and have not yielded an inch of ground.

Their fire discipline has drawn many compliments. One general remarked that, considering their two years in the jungles doing other hard work, the men have taken to combat weapons like "naturals" and the base is "mighty proud of them."

Martin

News of the 24th having gone into action has spread throughout the South Pacific area. Major General Lehman, commander of a Negro combat force in this sector, visited our position. Whether this is an indication that colored reinforcements will be sent here in the future has not been authenticated as yet.

Brigadier General Arnold refuses to be quoted, but one official remarked, "Never can tell."

BLINDING FIRE STOPS ATTACK 4-1-44

Seasoned by preliminary skirmishes and co-ordinating efficiently, these elements of the American defense in this sector have successfully thwarted vain attempts by the Japanese to force a beachhead.

The 24th refuses to quit its muddy tract of jungles, stopping the enemy attacks with blinding automatic fire while artillery salvos thunder in the background.

The jungle reeks with the musty stench of dead Japanese bodies, which litter the boggy, bloody ground.

Twice the enemy tried infiltration tactics through our position, and both times he left many dead and others dying. One brave son of Nippon surged through and his riddled body was later found—well ventilated. 4-1-44

In ever advancing waves the enemy attacks and in broken waves he dies, as our boys prove themselves to be masters of the situation. Our troops are keen of eye and steady of hand.

FOUR DIE IN ACTION

As we enter the second week of combat action, enemy resistance has quieted down. He may be licking his wounds. But we know that he is not through. His striking force numbers thousands.

During the interim our troops dig deeper into their lines and are waiting.

One desperate, though befuddled attack by the Japanese began on March 8. The enemy's losses numbered approximately 3,000, while those of the American defenders were under 300, among them four Negroes, who were killed in action. Our last death casualty occurred as the result of a sniper's bullet fired from ambush. Our troops aided by Fijiian defenders scoured the area in search of the enemy.

The morale of our troops soars despite the long hours spent in total darkness in jungles so thick with vegetation that it is difficult to use hand grenades. The strength-sapping heat in this area of operations must also be listed as a liability.

Our patrols continue to move into the bosom of the enemy's positions, not only reconnoitering, but engaging him when possible.

HIDE IN BUSHES 4-1-44

The soldiers of the Rising Sun have so far refused our challenge, and the few shots that have been fired by our accurate marksmen have been at the Japanese darting through the bushes.

Pfc. "Guns" Cheaton, Derry, La., remarked, "Each night we pray that they will come out instead of hiding like bushes." The enemy camouflages himself with bushes from the waist up and squats in waiting. However, shrewd eyes have caught the bushes running, and quite a few of these bushes have been rendered stationary by our men's unerring rifle fire.

The first blood has been drawn. The 24th is rocking in the saddle with little thought of withdrawal. They have enlarged their muddy tract. The enemy, who bounded in it was either bounced off or carried off by his comrades as hors de combat.

During one night on duty, First Sgt. Arthur Jones, Detroit, was testing a telephone line running to the front. A voice on the opposite end yelled, "I've got a grenade in my hand and have already pulled the pin! What do you want?" The sergeant replied, "My God, let it go!" He did, and three Japanese, coming down stream in front of the position, were routed.

MACHINE GUNS SPRAY DEATH 4-1-44

Sporadically, machine guns spray the area with their message of death. They are a nemesis to the invader. Cpl. Joseph Luke, Atlanta, Ga.; Pfc. Dave Yancey, Rossville, Tenn.; Pvts. James Reynolds, Birmingham, Ala.; John Henry, Pittsville, Ala., and Freeman Jones, Oakland, Ala., to name a few, lie behind the pulsating monsters, discouraging any enemy advance.

Often the "long Toms" bark, and we know that our gunners of the 54th have been called back to duty in their sector.

The last few days of quietness can only mean that all hell will break loose in the near future. The Japanese usually attack us during rainy nights.

At our command post, when the rifle fire gets loud and close, those of us behind crouch lower in our foxholes which are very often filled with mud.

When periods of calmness occur, the falling leaves sound like boulders as they crash against the turf. Our breathing sounds not unlike a steaming locomotive.

Nights become centuries, and home a far-away place of the not too distant past. Sleep comes in jerks. Suddenly, shrieking shells pierce the air and start exploding, and the war climbs into the foxhole with you. 4-1-44

It is impossible to predict just how long an attack will last. God be praised! We have plenty of ammunition and sturdy men, who have been shooting straight.

S-Sgt. H. A. W. In

been on the front line since shortly after D-Day. Never have outfit is composed of boys rth and South. We have ught the Civil War over r again in friendly argu- ments, but on one point we are cut on one point we are The Negro soldier in this Even the medics get their share rves. of credit. It makes us mad to see , in the majority of cases, a bunch of rear-echelon cowboys chelon cowboy who never grabbing credit where they have front lines. We have done nothing to deserve it.—

1-24-44

St. Louisans In France Give Views Of The G.I.'s

St. Louis Post-Dispatch
St. Louis, Missouri

St. Louisans, members of a war is getting more credit than duck company serving in the mighty drive against the German Siegfried Line, forwarded clippings from the U. S. service newspaper, "The Stars and Stripes," which asked people at home can have "you people at home can have first hand information about the thoughts of other people about us Negro men over here."

The group making the request are Warrant Officer John Andrews, 1708 Cora avenue; S-Sgt. Earnest Smith, 2744 Thomas street; S-Sgt. Fred Barker, 2716 Stoddard street, and Pfc. Harold Saunders, 4336 Cook avenue.

The lines in the official newspaper read as folows:

The Humans Should 11-24-44

"I'm in a hospital in the ETO. There are only three colored boys in this ward and we get along like humans should. We are treated well regardless of race, creed, or color. That's the post-war pattern!

—A regular Army GI., Franklin Lathan, Jr., 1-Sgt.

* * *

"Let's Set the Post-War Pattern" in your Sept. 9 issue crack-

* * *

"Our outfit is composed of boys from North and South. We often fought the Civil War over again in friendly arguments, but on one point we are agreed. The Negro soldier in this front line deserves. Even the medics get their share of credit. It makes us mad to see, in the majority of cases, a bunch of rear-echelon cowboys and over again. We have done nothing to deserve it.—

"He is, in the post-war pattern, a rear-echelon cowboy who never saw the front lines. We have done nothing to deserve it.—

COLONIALS PERFORM 'IMPOSSIBLE' FEAT

Pittsburgh Courier, Pa.

By RANDY DIXON, Courier War Correspondent

12-2-44

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCES—Last week it was the colored troops, comprising the French Fifth Army, who astounded the world with the epic breakthrough at Belfort Gap and shoved the very commendable deeds of the U.S. Negro tank, tank destroyer, artillery and smoke generator units into the background.

This week it is the spectacular lunge into Strasbourg of General LeClerc's Second Armored division, the same division that liberated Paris, which has further intensified the decisive aspects of the Allies' Southern salient and simultaneously relegated for to the rear the arrival in the battle zone of the first Negro combat engineers dispatched to this combat theatre.

EISENHOWER CONFERS

The significance of the situation on the Southern salient was reflected Sunday midnight, when the Algiers radio quoted Paris as stating that General Eisenhower, accompanied by Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley, had hastened to the sectors, where the French are fighting for important conferences, with Gen. DeLattre DeTassigny, commander of the French First Army.

New ordeals for the harassed Hun are being prepared with the black Frenchmen added to the full house General Eisenhower is parlaying along his far flung Western offensive. At this moment Gen. Jacob Devers of the U.S. Sixth Army group, to which the French are attached, is pouring tanks and artillery into Strasbourg to help seal the escape routes of 77,000 Germans in flight from the Vosges mountains through the narrowing gap between Strasbourg and the French First Army converging north from Mulhouse.

PINCER MOVE

When General Devers planned this pincer move, even the most optimistic Allied commander didn't expect such rapid and spectacular successes and although it is LeClerc's armored liberators, who today hold the forefront, it was the French First Army whose punch at Belfort was the key to the Allied successes. They achieved the impossible by forcing the Belfort Gap, a feat no one accomplished before.

Then General Patch, with LeClerc's armored spearheads, and American infantrymen, by one smash blow to Strasbourg split the German army, which is now fighting 30 miles behind the main front.

FRANCE IN RAPTURE

Incidentally France continues in rapture over the feats of its black soldiers and their commanders. When the news of the entry into Strasbourg reached Paris Wednesday, the debate in the assembly was suspended, while soldiers were acclaimed and assemblymen sang La Marseillaise.

On the next day DeTassigny and his divisional commanders were awarded the Cross of Liberation for their and their men's feats. Emphasis is being placed too on the rare achievement of LeClerc's unit in liberating both Paris and Strasbourg. It is an achievement which has befallen no other French General since the French revolutionary wars.

LeCLERC'S STORY

Long before the Allied liberation of France the legend of LeClerc and his men had begun with one of the greatest marches in military history. It was the expedition from Lake Chad, when as a colonel he led a motorized column across 1200 miles of mountain and desert to join Montgomery's Eighth Army in Libya and Tunisia.

In January, 1943, when they started out, the 40-year-old crippled LeClerc told his followers—a scratch lot of French officers, who had escaped the Nazi holocaust in France, with brown and black volunteers from Senegal and Brazzaville—"Our objectivet is Paris. We shall keep going until we get there and then we shall go on to Strasbourg."

TRUE PROPHECY

Never has prophecy been uttered with such devastating and piercing accuracy. During the days of Patton's great drive to Paris, the official communiques did less than justice to the men of LeClerc's army. Within a few minutes of landing in France at the beginning of August, these vets, who had received their Sherman tanks just a few days before embarking, began a non-stop march night and day through villages.

After three days, worn out and grimy, they assembled and went into action from a point near Avranches. They drove the German Panzer divisions back into the Falaise gap. In three more days they knocked out between 400 and 500 German armored vehicles, destroyed one Panzer division, and the best part of another.

FIRST IN PARIS

They fought a terrific three-day tank battle north of Alencon, after which they were selected to rescue Koning's beleaguered patriots in their precarious plight. After prematurely announcing Paris as liberated, LeClerc's men were the first Allied forces in Paris, setting up headquarters underneath the Gare Montparnasse, an overhead railway station, with a strong concrete roof. German snipers were firing spasmodically along the tracks, but LeClerc and his black heroes were up and down the platform and across the tracks, indifferent to the occasional crackle of machine gun and rifle fire.

LeClerc is slim, fair-haired, with brilliant eyes, in a tanned face. He is adored by his men who respond automatically to his familiarity, gentility and sterness in turns. His Paris achievements were phenomenal, but his feat at Strasbourg even more so, from a military standpoint. Strasbourg is a city of 180,000 people and was one of the most important communications centers seized by the Germans in January, 1942.

COMBAT ENGINEERS

The U.S. Negro combat engineers mentioned above were formerly an infantry battalion. They were activated as combat engineers last year at Camp McCain, Miss., and went on maneuvers with the 75th, the 44th and the 92nd divisions in Louisiana. They are under the command of Major Fuller, a West Point graduate, who says he is proud of their record so far, and is certain they will come through in combat.

Equally certain are Pfc. Theodore Hawkins and T/5 Calvin Scott, two members of the unit with whom I talked. Hawkins, from Asbury Park, N.J., where his wife, Mildred, now lives, is 40 years old, and attended Greenville college, Tenn. Scott, 20, is from Houston, Tex., the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Scott. He attended Fisk and Prairie View and is a dental technician with the battalion headquarters company. He has a cousin in the Navy and another in the Army.

The unit's chores include mine detecting, laying bridges, general combat engineering and fighting. Their weapons include 88 mortars, rifles, machine guns and bazookas. Three colored warrant officers: Max Mosby, Redbank, N.J.; another named Thompson, and a third named Mack, are with these engineers.

Tears Largest Hole In Gothic Line Defenses

Journal & Guide - Norfolk Va
10-14-44

Infantrymen Cross Serra; Threaten Port of La Spezia

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden.)

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN THE GOTHIC LINE—(Via Wireless)—One of the most significant gains made by Fifth Army troops in the last several days of slow, difficult fighting in mud and blinding rain was credited to the courageous units of the 92nd division.

These units crossed the Serra River on Monday and captured the town of Seravezza, 21 miles southeast of the big naval base of La Spezia. This sudden thrust northward by these Negro infantrymen was regarded as an outstanding contribution to the progress on the Fifth Army front. It was the biggest gain of any units on Monday. 10-14-44

During these operations, the 92nd combat team was flanked by the Brazilian Army which made limited gains further inland.

Despite intermittent cloudbursts, these infantry units had continued their pressure on the mountains near the west coast of the Italian peninsula south of Bologna throughout the past few days when the fighting here almost reached a stalemate. The German defenders of these Gothic Line fortifications have been throwing heavy artillery, mortar, and automatic weapons fire at these Negro troops in an effort to abate this pressure.

JORDAN

STAR FULLBACK 10-14-44

Marshall Kesselring's cramped Krauts are probably wondering where those Negro infantrymen will turn up next. They have been shifting around from sector to sector in the Gothic Line like a star fullback for the last several weeks. Just before their sensational drive into Seravezza, the combat team had pushed relentlessly forward along Highway One taking strategic heights just south of La Spezia which, when captured, will be an important prize for the Fifth Army. 10-14-44

FOUGHT 3 SECTORS

This is the third sector of operations for the 92nd unit in recent days. The infantry division fought a terrible battle with the Germans north of Lucca until the Nazis withdrew. Then they shifted to the sector north of Pistoia. Finally, these units shifted into the coastal sector where they are now driving toward the key Italian naval base. base.

Probing northward in rain and mud, the 92nd took Mt. Costa and Mt. Canala, about 20 miles north of the seaport, Via Reggio on Saturday of last week. On Sunday, the units fought their way into the town of Ripa. Other units crossed the Serra and entered Seravezza. 10-14-44

CHAPLAIN HERO

In a spectacular advance in the Gothic Line on Sunday, units under Captain Hurlon J. Dulan, of Oklahoma City, temporarily lost contact with the main body of troops.

92nd's Band of 67 Pieces Praised as Best in Area

Afro-American Baltimore, Md
12-2-44

By ART CARTER
U.S. Troops in Italy

AFRO War Correspondent with
[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—(By Courier)—Although a recent arrival here, the 92nd Infantry Division Band, a 67-piece unit, which has taken its music up to the combat zone, is already fast winning praise as the best in the theatre.

The band, directed by Warrant Officer Earl W. Madison, Chicago, and Hector [illegible] Hill, New York City, graduates of the Army Music School at Fort Myer, Va., serves not only for regular military programs, but also for division entertainments, hospital programs, and radio broadcasts.

2 Orchestras Formed

To take care of many of the requests, two orchestras have been organized, under the direction of M/Sgt. Robert Plater, composer and T/Sgt. Oscar Smith, Mineral Wells, Tex.

Years of music experience is scattered among the members of the band, as many were plucked from some music job in civilian life and cast in the role of soldier-musicians after the basic training period.

Among its members are:
Cpl. Frank A. Freeman, 1013 W. Lanvale Street, Baltimore, the only Marylander; T/Sgt. Laverne E. Newsome, Indianapolis, Ind., who taught music at Talladega College and In-

[illegible] graduation from Northwestern [illegible] University; Sgt. Joseph Simmons, assistant band leader, who has been in the army twenty-seven years, twenty-one in military bands, two of which he organized; Pfc. Warren H. Rooser, Trenton, N.J., trumpeter; T/5 William White, 6-foot-two-inch drum major, Pontiac, Mich.;

2 SETS OF BROTHERS

T/5's Eugene and Samuel Hicks, Albuquerque, N.M., and Pfcs. Henry O. and Marshall M. Penn, Chicago, the latter former member of Michigan University's band;

Sgt. James H. Suggs, Jr., Springfield, Ohio; S/Sgt. Oscar L. Cobb, Fort Worth, Tex.; S/Sgt. Clarence H. Gray, Champaign, Ill.; T/4's Frank A. Scott, Charleston, S.C.; T/5's Paul L. Miles, Boston; John A. Gordon, Fred King, NYC; Howard T. Murphy, Pontiac, Mich.; Earl C. Crawford, Ossining, N.Y.; B. Miller, Bridgeport, Ohio; Raymond Muskogee, Okla.; Clarence M. Petrie, Kittaning, Pa., and George and Clifford A. Love, Kansas City, Mo.; Walter Cox, Detroit, and Edward L. Brown, New Orleans; Kermit L. McFarlin, Tampa, Fla.; William J. Allston, Abraham L. Beckwith, Camden, N.J.; William Cumming, and Robert H. Washington, Newark, N.J.; Warren Ferebee, Philadelphia, Samuel Buren, St. Louis;

FROM ALL SECTIONS

T/5's John N. Hughes, St. Joseph, Mich.; Isaac J. Powell, Pittsburgh; Amos W. Wright, Jackson, Miss.; T/5's Joseph E. Rainey, Jr., NYC; Mills, John [illegible] Booker T. Brown, Pfcs. Lawrence E. Brown, Prather Flynn, Wallace Jones, Louis C. Luckett, Ernest Miller, Charles H. Porter,

Chicago; James N. Dupree, Indianapolis; James B. Gasley, John E. Imes, St. Louis; George W. Guines, John E. Franklin, Detroit;

Pfcs. Andrew D. Wilson, Dayton, and William Carter, Columbus, Ohio; John K. Burris, Clinton, Mo.; Charles S. Watson, NYC; Henry C. McKinney, Waycros, Ga.; Earl L. Morris, Los Angeles;

Pfcs. Leroy Lang, David W. Paschal, Miami; Warren Myers, Kittaning, Pa.; Henry R. Slaughter, Wheeling, W.Va.; Ernest Wiley, San Bernardino, Calif.; Eugene L. Collins and James R. Hughes, Austin, Texas.

PRIVATE GIVES LIFE IN GRUELLING FIGHT

Pvt. Conrad, Pa.

12-2-44

By HASKELL COHEN
(Courier War Correspondent)

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY—This battle story isn't being written to glorify Lt. Royal F. Bolling or the private who died by his side. Their deeds speak for themselves. This story is written rather to explain the weekly communique of the 92nd Division which continues to read: "The situation along the front remains generally unchanged."

During the past few weeks we have tried to point out that the terrain which the 92nd is fighting for is the hardest in the world to capture. One mountain peak after another is stymying the advance of the division in the toughest, most gruelling fighting imaginable.

CAPTURES HILL

Last Saturday afternoon a 92nd company in the fighting captured the hill designated as Georgia. Georgia is the lowest knoll in four graduated knolls. It has steep drops on both flanks commanded by enemy artillery from adjacent peaks, making it imperative to attack from the front. Midway up the hill is a stone wall with a break in the middle.

Two squads started up the slope intent upon rushing through this small gap. It wasn't a question of manpower. We could have a million men grouped for the attack, but only small groups in single file could attempt to scale and attack the Nazi stronghold in this sector.

HELL BREAKS LOOSE

As the two squads breached the gap, all hell broke loose. The Jerries above began to sock them with mortars and machine guns. Our heavy guns on surrounding flats poured artillery fire into these mortar teams intent upon destroying them before they took too great a toll of our attack squads.

Despite the intense enemy barrages, the boys of the 92nd sped to the left inside the broken wall where two Germans manned machine guns in an elevated outpost. When these two saw they were outgunned, they immediately hoisted white handkerchiefs. Just as soon as they began waving their kerchiefs, the German artillery trained their guns on the outpost and blasted away, killing their own men and dispersing our patrol, wounding five of our soldiers.

THREE-MAN TEAM

Lieutenant Bolling and his group of men continued climbing the knoll hand over hand, passing supplies and ammunition along as they wrestled their way toward the objective. Working in a three-man team, Bolling and two others—a sergeant and a private—tossed hand grenades to each other with the top man pulling the pin and chucking it upward toward the German dugouts.

The Germans, using a reverse slope tactic, merely dropped their grenades downward trying to knock the persistent trio out. Just as Bolling and the other two reached the crest of the objective, a blast killed the private, blowing off both his legs. Unable to take the hill by themselves, Lieutenant Bolling and the sergeant made their way back to the company.

A day later members of the operations staff showed me exactly how the battle site looked from the German side. With the aid of maps I was able to see clearly how the field of battle appeared to the Nazi entrenched on top of the knolls.

The four hills stand out boldly and outposts, guns and bunkers are pin-pointed on the map.

In addition they clearly revealed how the Jerries make use of the reverse slope for dugouts. These slopes drop precipitously down from the summit. After nine months of preparation they have carved out of the granite walls on the reverse side gun proof dugouts. Just as soon as we open fire on these summits, Jerry rushes into these dugouts and pulls his guns in with him, making the defenders impervious to our heavy gunfire.

And that is why the weekly communique continues to read: "The situation along the front remains generally unchanged."

Mystery-Veiled American Peaks Face 92nd

12-9-44

Bloody Battle Being Fought for Seaport

MEN JUST VANISH

Baltimore, Md.

Nazi Advantage Fails to Quell Courage

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—(By Cable)—There is a mystery about the mountains here which adds a strangeness to this front where rugged infantrymen of the 92nd Division are making slow, painful penetration against Germans in the hill defenses barring Allied troops from the seaport of La Spezia.

A gray tantalizing haze hangs over the brutal mountain-tops most of the time and one peak, which towers over the rest is now capped.

This is the German-held Altissimo appearing very near and easily accessible from this distance, but the path to that dominant height is being stained with blood of many men, just like the roads leading to already captured peaks.

12-9-44

Bloody Brawls

The tremendous struggle necessary to reach these enemy peaks is not marked by large-scale close-in battling but by calculating artillery duels and bloody brawls between small opposing bands of riflemen who drove through rocky hillsides and cross valley streams on patrols.

An unnatural darkness hovers over the valley and men walk into the shadows of mountains and often are swallowed up.

Hard to Evade Enemy

They sometimes vanish like leaves blown away by cold winds, as thumping reports of the enemy's unseen shellfire echo against the hills, sounding twice as loud to soldiers on flat ground.

In a steep-sloped terrace like this, it is extremely difficult to take cover from the enemy who is above you, as Jerries invariably are.

The advantage of altitude was clearly demonstrated on a recent attack when the Germans securely dug in and peppered the terraced mountainside with everything in Ammo book, as the infantrymen attempted to climb the slope.

Situation Tense

Only our mortar fire finally routed them from the spot but a draw which other men had to pass was still exposed to artillery and machine gun fire, curtailing any mass movement in that direction.

Artillery shells kept the situation tense. Lt. James H. Gillam, 1813 Madison Avenue, Baltimore, a platoon leader, was receiving a phone message from the leader on a flank when a voice said, "I am being shelled."

Simultaneously he heard the crash of a shell and the phone went out. He never heard the voice again and the man who made the call has never been seen again.

Tells of Narrow Escape

"Pure luck," is the way Lt. Gilliam described his own narrow escape when three mortar shells dropped five yards away from his foxhole leaving him unscathed.

That characterizes the kind of fighting in the coastal sector of the Fifth Army front where men like Capt. Robert Hough of Washington, William S. Banks, New Orleans; Lts. Edgard Felton, Jehu Hunter, Jr., both of Washington are among company commanders leading men into action.

12-9-44

There are also platoon leaders like Royall Bolling, Framingham, Mass., and James W. Parrish, Oakdale, La., who go forward at night with patrols to gain information, test rival defenses and locate gun positions, and wire barriers.

N.Y. Officer in Group

It is this kind of terrain that keeps determined infantrymen like Lt. Stanley Braithwaite, NYC; Pfc. Robert Saunders, Memphis; Cpl. James Grant, Cincinnati, busy directing 105-mm. fire against mountaintops.

It also helps soldiers like Cpl. Elvin Adams of Charlotte, N.C., lugging ammunition and supplies on their backs because pack mules cannot get over the trail which leads their unit's fighting line.

D.C. Soldiers on Alert

It is the kind of a war that keeps three Washington fellows like Sgts. Clarence Burke, 104 Massachusetts Avenue, Northwest, operations clerk; Robert Horsley, 3020 Arkansas Avenue, Northwest, and Samuel White, 1634 Fifteenth Street, Northwest, on the alert back at regimental headquarters.

Lts. Milton H. Curtis, 1824 S Street, Northwest, Washington, and Morgan C. Brown, Jamestown, N.Y., are kept busy jeep-racing back and forth up a long stretch of shell-exposed highway with liaison reports, while Lt. Taber DeCosta, Charleston, S.C., is constantly on his toes keeping communications in tact.

Smoke Screens Used

This war keeps all sections and all men busy as the 92nd continues to maintain heavy pressure against the Germans who have found it necessary to use smoke screens to protect their movements.

For three successive days, observers have reported smoke used in the extreme coastal area of South Massa, the last sizable town blocking the road to La Spezia, but there has been no let-up in the resistance by Jerries and no material changes in the positions.

Everybody is still dug in deep and no one dares move from his hole during the day.

At many points our positions are hardly more than 300 to 1000 yards apart from the enemy, which is always looking down our throats. The fog adds an eerie mystery to the scene.

American on Leyte Famed as Guerrilla Band Leader

12-17-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
NNPA War Correspondent

LEYTE BEACH, Philippines—(By Courier)—On Samar Island, northeast of Leyte, fighting with rare fierceness, is Capt. Frank Merith, an American and the leader of a Philippino guerrilla band, whose deeds have spread among American troops like wild fire.

The exact whereabouts of the giant captain, who was attached to General MacArthur's command, is still secret by military information. Captured by the enemy, he later escaped and was chosen by the guerrillas as one of their leaders.

Japs. American planes dropped some ammunition and American submarines smuggled equipment in. However, because of the intenseness of the operations, all has been too little.

Because the Japs took away the food, the population has suffered misserably from malnutrition. Now, however, five doctors and one dentist are at work patching up the ills of the populace, chief of which are sores, blisters, malarial cases and pneumonia.

Captain Merith, reportedly, has been in the Philippines for many years, making his home on Samar. He married a native woman and owned property. Three out of five Filipinos questioned on Leyte know or know of Captain Merith.

Few rifles were taken from the Armed with bolos, knives, even

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Guerilla Warriors On Samar Island Avenge

Philadelphia Tribune 12-30-44

Ruthless Jap Ravishing of Treasured Relics

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
Representing the Philadelphia Tribune and NNPA
(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

SAMAR ISLAND, PHILIPPINES—By Courier—The humanistic element in guerilla warfare is the fascinating element that differentiates it from general large scale battle. And as a results it is more exciting to observe. This fact is largely true because it represents war waged by people who, by the principles of war, are defeated, but refuse to accept defeat. It's the fight of the underdog against the hound in a backyard shrouded by obstacles of nature which gives the underling a chance at countering in his own surroundings.

On Samar guerilla fighting is swift attack in the darkness, and swift withdrawl. Its carrying supplies on back over mountain trails, down rivers by native borotas. Its marching by day, by night, ever watchful for ambush.

It's sleeping on the ground, eating dry rice, killing hogs for meat on the way. It's running, sweating. It's war on a small scale, but it reaches the maximum in intenseness. And the reason is obvious:

It represents a war of revenge. The fight is not one solely for principles, but the fulfillment of the Mosaic Law. It is waged by home folks who have seen a ruthless enemy level to ashes those things they hold dear.

For th past few weeks this correspondent has accompanied Filipino guerillas on the typhoon-swept island of Samar, northeast of Leyte island. The trip originated as a search for the black-skinned guerilla leader Major Merritt, Filipino of American Negro extraction. I did not find Major Merritt who at th time was elsewhere in the bosom of combat, but wound up in the midst of the battle for the city of Taft on Samar's east coast.

In the valleys and on the mountainside of this, the third largest island in the Philippines, we watched brown youngsters armed with rifles and bolos stalk and kill. We heard their battle songs, shared their food, helped care for the wounded. We saw them charge in a hail of fire and sweep Japanese before them.

The interior of the island is mountainous, most of the half million people live along the seacoast. There are few roads and its is very difficult to cross from one coast to the other. The whole of the island is subject to destructive typhoons which originate in the Pacific Ocean and sweep across the Philippines to the China Sea.

The islanders are childlike in simplicity. Most of them are farmers who know little save the care of their rice paddies and water buffaloes. Those who did not farm eked out a distilling the salt from ocean water. They weave their cloth from plants and go barefoot. The rice they grow they eat along with native potatoes and pork.

When the Japs came early in 1942 those who couldn't fight "buckwheated" into the hills. Buckwheation means evacuation. Major Merritt (then captain) and others who refused to surrender formed a guerilla army and carried on the fight—harassing enemy troop movements. Merritt made fighting equipment—grenades, rifles—out of scrap metal. But despite these weapons and those America was able to get in by submarine, it was not enough.

At the present there are arms—Garand rifles, Browning automatic rifles, mortars, and Enfield rifles. There is captured enemy arms. And best of all—there are men who know how to use them.

One young, grinning officer remarked, "There were times when we thought the General (MacArthur) had forgot us. And there were some of us who were weakening to Japanese stories that Americans would not return to the Philippines. They used to tell us, We are all the same color, why should colored people be fighting one another? The white monkey is the common enemy.'"

Evidence here proves that while the enemy spread this talk on one hand they mutilated Filipinos on the other. And now the table has been spun in the other direction.

We reached Samar under cover of da ness. The small rocket ship sailed around the southen tip of the island and we disembarked at a point almost halfway on the east coast. Twenty-one native borotas met us at dawn, laughing brown people stood ashore. The sight was almost unbelievable. The guerilla village turned out, and it was surprising to see soldier twenty-one.

Fires were started, pigs were killed—the feast was made ready which was to preface our trek over the mountains into enemy country. Long haired, beautiful girls said American songs. We didn't know what the future held in store, but the present was pleasant. We didn't know that we were soon to experience hairraising experiences, perhaps we did not care. The moon shone over the blue waters, the pigs roasted, the rice was steaming—and for the present, there was peace.

Battalion In Action Near Metz

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

12-8-44

Lt. Charles Gates Of Kansas City in Thick of Battle

12-8-44

WITH THE THIRD U. S. ARMY IN THE METZ AREA.—Spearheading a task drive of the 26th "Yankee" division which jumped off November 8, the all-Negro 761st tank battalion now in action with the U. S. Army captured four important towns, secured two bridge crossings and successfully battered its way through the strongly defended Forest de Bride, the war department announced this week.

The Negro tankmen were committed to action following the 26th Division's capture of Metz, which never before fell to direct assault in modern times. They lunged into the battle with such ferocity and courage that Captain Irvin McHenry of Leavenworth, Kas., received the nickname of "The Bronze Devil," and Staff Sgt Reuben Rivers of Route 1, Box 27, Tecumseh, Okla., received the Silver Star for routing nearly 300 Germans. A dozen members of the medical detachment were cited for heroism under fire.

German Praises Bravery

A captured German officer, after having had a taste of the Negro tankmen and their work, said: "So far as fighting is concerned, I have never before seen such bravery except once before, and that was on the Russian front."

It came when a German rocket gun knocked out a tank of the Negro unit. The crew dismounted, brought out the .50 calibre and .30 calibre machineguns, crawled under their tanks for protection, and continued to blast away at the enemy.

12-8-44

There was an occasion when Sergeant Warren G. H. Creecy, of Corpus Christi, Texas, a tank commander, climbed up on the rear of his tank which had been immobilized by anti-tank fire, and held an enemy force at bay with his own anti-aircraft gun, while protecting the advance of an infantry group.

The unit moved out from Athianville for its first action at six o'clock on the morning of Nov. 8, as part of a task force, which was operating in two columns.

Athianville is approximately 14 miles east of Nancy. This task force consisted of tank destroyers, infantry, engineers and medics, with units of the Negro tank battalion. It was divided into two colmuns, with their ultimate objective being a town some twenty miles away, beyond the edge of the dense Forest de Bride.

Take 2 Towns Quickly

The two columns moved out for the attack, and in short order captured Vic-sur-Seille and Moyenvis, two strongly defended towns which skirted a German rail supply route from the Saar Basin. They secured crossings over two canals. These towns were some fifteen to eighteen miles east of Nancy, and constituted the German frontline defenses at that point. Here the forces began to meet with stiffer opposition.

After securing these two towns, the next task was to move on to Morville, a town some four miles beyond Vic-sur-Seille. Splitting up here, one column moved toward Morville for the attack.

It was here that they ran into their most stubborn opposition of the drive, for here the Germans had constructed a two-mile-long anti-tank ditch in anticipation of the offensive. They had re-enforced this tank bearer with staggered concrete pill-boxes, completely covered with earth, and with rocket launchers and bazooka teams dug in strength.

Facing Morville, which was at the entrance to the Forest de Bride, the columns met these obstructions and Company B was halted by pill-box opposition at the edge of the woods. Company C, commanded by Captain McHenry, on the left flank, moved up the anti-tank ditch, where it encountered fierce opposition. With Company B halted, the German guns in the center were turned on Company C, and immobilized the unit for a while. Company C finally retired the position.

Kansas Citian In Command

During this action, the crack assault platoon, with 105-mm howitzers commanded by First Lieutenant Charles Gates of Topeka, Kansas, a Hampton Institute alumnus, moved up to support these two companies.

It shelled the German positions in the woods. The 8-mm mortar platoon, commanded by Second Lieutenant James C. Lightfoot of Washington, D. C., also moved into the action and pounded the Germans. Elements of the Fourth Armored Division, equipped with bull-dozer tanks and flame-throwers, also moved in, and the positions were finally taken.

12-8-44

Captain McHenry's company saw the hardest fighting.

All units gave a good account of themselves. Company C knocked out approximately 18 enemy anti-tank guns. Company P knocked out ten, and Lieutenan Gates' assault platoon knocked out six German armored vehicles and two pill-boxes.

After passing Merville, which they had practically destroyed, the columns moved on to Hamport, four miles farther east, where units of Companies B and C reached the town.

Meanwhile, Company A, commanded by Captain Dave Williams, of Pittsburgh, entered the action and helped to obliterate and capture Chateau-Salins, the first major town of Nancy. Following this, Company A also moved to Hamport. It was during these engagements that Staff Sergeant Rivers began to earn his spurs, for in almost every instance his tank was the first to enter a town and he was always in the thickets of the fight.

Heroic Under Fire

A platoon of Company D, commanded by First Lieutenant Richard W. English, of New Orleans, a former teacher at the Hoffman school there, moved up and took the town of Saliva singlehanded, with no infantry units along. Sergeant Creecy, who displayed heroism on several different occasions under fire, was a member of this platoon.

12-1-44

After the juncture at Hamport, Company B and C pulled back for a brief rest, maintenance and vehicle check. B Company came back up to relieve Company A after its check-up. Company D was doing screening and reconnaissance. Company C returned to action southeast of Saliva, operating a team with the 101st Infantry Regiment which cleared all Germans from the woods up to the edge of the forest just west of Harracourt.

Following this action, it retir-

MANY (By Cable)—Once upon a time there was a city in Germany named Ubach, with doctors, teachers, shopkeepers and happy children. On Friday I rode through piles of rubbish all that remained of the town, about fifteen miles inside the Reich border.

I saw not one civilian, only muddy doughboys standing guard over the ruins.

Less than an hour later I

12-2-44

Gunners Drive Off Nazi Strafing Planes

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in Germany

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

Tan Gunners Fire Afro-American Past Roer River

Stewart Hears GI's Sing About Foxholes

UBACH LEVELED

WITH NINTH ARMY IN GER-

Former Chicago Truck Driver Is Ace Triggerman

Takes Over After White Gunners Killed At Ormoc

BY FLETCHER MARTIN
(U. S. War Correspondent for Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

ORMOC BAY SECTOR, PHILIPPINES — By Courier — "Killing Moe" is as about a unique figure as can be found in this heated section of the world. And from what various members of the 24th division has to say, the Negro is one of the best machine-gunners in the Ormoc sector.

Chicago's Pvt. Ross Hueta was a truck driver who tired of driving his truck. Charged with taking supplies to the front, he had watched infantry continuously trudge by, dragging their guns behind them. He figured that things were pretty interesting up front, at least more exciting than mere truck driving.

TAKES OVER GUN

"Killing Moe" wanted to get in the tussle. Leaning against his truck November 5th, puffing a cigarette, Hueta again saw infantry troops push by. Things were very rugged up front, enemy had landed reenforcements, and frankly our side was catching hell. Someone yelled out at the tall Negro:

"Say fella, you want to fight?"

"That's what I joined up for," 'Killing Moe' answered. The former truck driver from Chicago's west side joined in. That has been over two weeks ago and Hueta has been handling a machine gun since. And the fighting in that sector is among the bloodiest in the world.

KEPT FIRING

During the second such charge four machine-gunners were killed. "Killing Moe" and three others volunteered to take over. Withstanding the third attack, the Negro and his crew kept firing for ten hours, with only water under their belts.

Despite heated resistance Hueta's unit was pinned. Withdrawal was effected by following a dry stream bed to the sea. Our forces were grossly outnumbered during the operation and suffered appreciable casualties. The Negro withdrew with his unit, carrying supplies as were the other troops.

When reinforcement arrived Hueta's people were back in the thick of the fight. And it's still tough up there. The enemy refuses to yield the Ormoc sector without making American troops pay in casualties. In addition, is is that sector where the enemy has been landing his reinforcements. That little southeast tip of Leyte has become doubly important.

In the bowels of it all is the lone Negro among thousands of Japanese and white Americans. Hueta has been adopted semi-officially by the Texas division, and his name has spread like wild-fire. Not only because he is a Negro, but one who left a good job in a quiet town to fight in the life-and-death struggle which has deevloped among the rice fields of the province.

WANT TO KEEP HIM

The story was told this correspondent by the unit commander. He also added that commendations were being drawn up for the Negro.

"Sure, we want to keep him," the Texan drawled. "The boys are crazy about him We never saw anybody just like "Killing Moe." Just keeps smiling all the time, and keeps the boys in good humor."

When asked how the Negro could be found, the officer pointed to a ridge five hundred yards away, and drawled:

Follow this little path, it'll lead you right on up the hill. It's just down the road a piece. I. you live you'll probably find Moe over there somewhere."

---

caught up with the first colored artillery outfit to fight inside Germany, with their guns laying down a barrage up to and over the Roer River, where the Ninth Army Infantry was fighting its way into Julich.

Firing Effective

Tramping in mud and shrouded much of the day in fog, these lads were pasting the enemy with continuous fire, so synchronized that it sounded automatic. The unit had spent a month in Germany, but the day of my arrival it made an exciting move that thrilled.

My genius for drawing enemy nregsaw to it that, even as I rode into the area, jerry planes zoomed up and down the roads strafing and machine-gunning, but our ack ack set up such an intense barrage of flak that the raiders became discouraged.

Casualties were negligible — mainly bruised shins from diving into ditches and foxholes.

The boys have a theme song called "Foxhole Boogie and Cellar Just Jump."

I am writing this from the depths of a cellar. Outside tanks clank by on their way to battle; our artillery maintains its steady pounding on enemy strong points.

The cold rain stings and bites one's face and the artillerymen stay at their posts day and night, bundled in heavy clothes and boots, but nothing stops their deadly fire. 12-9-44

I was met, upon my arrival, by Lt. James H. Robinson, Jr., of Cincinnati, a graduate of Wilberforce and Meharry, who is battalion surgeon and public relations officer. His wife, Lt. Rose Robinson, is a nurse in Burma.

2 Warrant Officers

Robinson is the only colored commissioned officer, although the battalion has two warrant officers, James Walters of Braddock, Pa., and Royal Elliott, of Pittsburgh.

The medical aid station is the center of the unit's activity. Colored and white troops with colds and cuts keep the staff busy. Assisting are:

Cpl. Robert Martin, Wharton, Tex.; Sgt. W. J. Hosky, Houston; Pfc. Brown L. Brackens, San Antonio; Pvt. Limone Collins, Gonzales, Tex.; Pfc. Willie Hoosier, Galveston; Cpl. Mitchell Brunson, New Rochelle, N.Y.; Cpl. Harold Lane, Cleveland; Pfc. Hartsell Pryor, Nashville, Tenn.; S-Sgt. Hilton Thomas, Jackson, Miss.; S-Sgt. Marion Collins, Saginaw, Mich.; and Pvt. Beerland Thompson, Newport News, Va.

Commended for Accuracy

All of the unit's gun sections have been commended for accuracy since going into combat, but one crew in particular, under Sgt. Sidney Gilmore of NYC, has already become known to infantry men in Germany.

Cpl. Herbert Jordan of Houston, Tex., is gunner, and the No. 1 man who pulls the lanyard is Pfc. Joe Preston, of Fort Worth. Preston broke the lanyard rope while firing Friday night, and before the end of the fire mission had tripped the switch by hand eighteen times in the dark. Others in the crew are:

Pfc. Eli Crawford, Dallas; Pvt. Pleas Ransom, Chicago; Pvt. Theodore Mitchell, Houston; Pfc. Jesse Davis, Lufkin, Tex.; Cpl. Aaron Jones, Macon, Ga.; Pfc. Robert Burns, Atlanta; Pfc. Solon Owens, Wilmington, N.C.; Pvt. Robert Crawford, Valdosta, Ga.; Pvt. Solomon Brock, Statesboro, Ga.

Tasks Dangerous

The lads who have the most dangerous job in the outfit belong to the wire section. They string communication lines from headquarters to the observation post at the front, often a few hundred yards from the enemy.

As fast as they string the wires, enemy guns destroy them. Wire breaks occur most frequently at night, when the crew has to work in the dark by feeling along the wire with their hands, usually under fire.

T-Sgt. James Brown, Chicago electrician, has charge of the wire crew, which also includes:

Cpl. Fred Hickson, Atlantic City; Cpl. Thomas Boleware, Karnack, Tex.; Cpl. Willie Fitzgerald, Alleyton, Tex.; Cpl. Alfred Montgomery, San Francisco, and Pfc. Harold Walker, Fort Worth, Switchboard operator.

Danger Ignored

Montgomery once scaled a pole in full view of the enemy to string a wire when ground troops were evacuating their positions. He told me simply, "It's my job and it had to be done."

Hickson said the hardest work is finding breaks at night when you can't use any kind of light.

The liaison section, which maintains contact between the air strip used by cub observation planes and the battalion, includes S-Sgt. Frank Hunter of Long Island as mechanic, Pfc. Eldridge Dregon, Cleveland, Ohio; Pfc. James Johnson, Cleveland, and Pvt. Thomas Wooldridge, Phoenix, Ariz.;

On my first day with the unit, its air strip was bombed, and a bomb blast blew several men down into a shelter when they rushed to the door.

U. S. SOLDIERS' QUARTET IN BURMA

Chicago Defender 1-29-44

When Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell walked quietly from his jungle basha on the North Burma front, and sat down under a tree to listed to a Negro soldier quartet who didn't even know he was around. They were members of an engineer unit that was passing down the Hukawng Valley toward the front. Their music was so excellent that the general listened for over an hour and requested some Hawaiian numbers which they sang particularly well. Left to right, are: Cpl. Joe Jacob, Plant City, Fla.; Frank Method, Rommey, W. Va.; Sgt. Albritton, Kinston, N. C.; Cpl. Frederick Barrow, Chicago, Ill. They call themselves "Four Notes in Harmony," and have been singing together for four months, mostly to Chinese and Kachin audiences. The photo shows them in the early morning for just as they were the night before, sitting on air dropping cushions in front of their jungle hammocks.

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Servicemen Find A Friendly Welcome In London, Enaland

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

12-8-44

By UNA MARSON

(Born in Santa Cruz, Jamaica, but now living in Britain, where she produces the West Indian program of the British Broadcasting corporation. She has lectured in Geneva, Turkey and the West Indies.)

LONDON. — (ANP) — Hello folks, this is Una Marson calling you from London.

That's how I started this story for you readers in America, through force of habit. I have come to the conclusion that broadcasting is not good for journalism, though to go from journalism to broadcasting is pretty easy.

I promised to write something about your servicemen and women over here. It didn't strike me then that I was setting myself a difficult task—but you over there have been hearing a mighty lot about your folk over here, so I'm pretty jittery about your saying, "For goodness sake, where has she been all this long while!"

Real Look at Men

You know what I would like to do is to give you a real look in on your own folks as they make their way about London, sightseeing, sitting in at the west end cinemas, mooching round the servicemen's clubs, and dawdling wistfully by the rather tame wartime shop windows.

Now today I've been talking to some of your servicemen over here. Being the morning after your election news had come through I thought it would be a good idea to crash in on the Liberty club and see how your men had taken it. Many of you will know of the big colored club in London,—it's an American Red Cross club, chiefly used by colored United States servicemen and run by colored American Red Cross personnel. I guess in many of your letters from London your men have told you they have been "putting up" or "hanging out" or stopping at the Liberty during leave in London.

I'll tell you something that perhaps you don't know. The club has its peak numbers at the first of the month and the numbers trail off as the month lengthens till towards the last days the staff can say, "Hey, It's not so hectic now." That sounds very English, but never mind, one day I'll master the bright and breezy American language!

Many Soldiers In

There were crowds of servicemen in today—sitting in the lounge, some reading, some dozing, some having a snack. In the recreation hall there was a lot of business going on—darts, table tennis; and the retailer of popular music, the juke box, was in power.

12-8-44

In the small lounge a few soldiers were coaxing as much heat as they could from the electric fire without getting their fronts scorched and their backs frozen. In another bright, spacious room used as an office I had a word with your Red Cross worker, Julie Johnson, and then went back to talk to a few of your men.

The thing that interested me most was that they were all so quiet. There was no air of excitement. Two men were standing by the window talking, but so quietly you couldn't hear a word they were saying. Even in the recreation room, where things were happening, there was no shouting and bantering.

A couple of men sat by the window looking out on the wet murky streets where the dreary mother-in-law drizzle had settled for the day and the cold and dampness seemed to rise from the ground to envelop the people who hurried alond. I didn't say "penny for your thoughts" to them: I know what they were thinking—they were back home with you

Sergeant Talks

I should have told you that as I came in at the door captured a large cheerful looking sergeant who seemed to be standing by, saying to himself, "To go out in this dripper or not to go out—that's the question." Well, I decided it for him and with a pleasant smile agreed to talk to me for a few minutes.

12-8-44

He was Staff Sgt. Austin Simons Jr., a platoon sergeant in one of your engineering outfits. Born in Philadelphia—for which he has a great affection—two and a half years in Uncle Sam's army, six months in England, looking forward to going to the continent any time now. Stationed in the south of England. Thinks English people pretty nice and sociable, though the chaps from the north of England said that was the place for kind and friendly English people. Morale of his particular crowd of men was pretty high. An odd fellow now and again looked a bit "browned off" but they soon cheered each other up. He was very interested in his platoon and made it his business to see that his men were as well and happy as posible. He struck me as being a nice sympathetic kind of guy—you know, someone to whom a fellow would gladly talk if he felt a bit down in the mouth.

12-8-44

London Nice

Sgt. Simons thought London a nice quiet city. I couldn't help feeling that there was a nice quiet happy confidence within himself that nobody could shake, not even war, so he was pretty O.K.

Election: He'd voted Roosevelt and know he'd get in.

Then I had to switch my mind over to North Carolina, for I got talking to a corporal with a nice cheery name—Charles Twitty. Engineering outfit, two and a half years' army life, six months in America, two years in Britain: been all over the British Isles People had been very friendly and kind, and he thought the scenery really beautiful.

People in small villages more friendly than in large towns because one get to know them better. The people of Britain loved to hear them sing, and he had sung with 30 others in many places and been given a wonderful reception. American sports interested the British too, and they had had lots of fun teaching enthusiastic school children how to play baseball and basketball. Some of the kids had got so good they could play a pretty tough game and loved it.

12-8-44

Had been to London many times on leave and passed the time in movies, sightseeing and dancing. He seemed to be doing pretty fine and feeling quite at home, this Cpl. Twitty of yours. Election— not a bit excited; was a staunch Democrat and knew Roosevelt was sure to get in, and thinks it's a good thing for America and the war.

Glad F.D.R. Back

Over to Atlanta, as I talked to Pfc. Alvaron Bush. I couldn't help thinking how young, and homesick he looked. He cheered up and smiled a bit while we chatted. My guess was right, he'd been in Britain only six months and was on his first visit to London. About the election—he thought it was a good thing President Roosevelt was back. Soon Pfc. Bush was back behind his American paper. He'll be O.K. when he finds his feet.

Washington, D. C. I always get a thrill when I hear these words. Washington, D. C. I don't know why, maybe I will when i get there. Pleased to meet you, Cpl. Leroy Reynolds—and a Republican too. My first meeting with a Republican.

He figured that the persistanc of the war gave President Roosevelt his chance of a comeback, and anyway he's a good man. A nice-generous, soft-spoken youth, I couldn't help feeling that England has a way of moulding people who come to her into her own quiet, soft, restful ways. I wondered if you could walk into such a club in America and hardly be conscious of the numbers of people around.

First time in London. Leroy thought it quite as gay as Washington. He found the English very nice and friendly and helpful. Anyway, he was looking forward to the time when he would be back home in Washington at his job in the engraving bureau

12-8-44

Natural Charm

Time was closing in on me. It was getting nearly past the lunch hour break, and I had to be back at the office. I thought we should hear a man of the sea. In a corner a slight slip of a boy was dozing, and Leroy gave him a shake for me. He came over smiling disarmingly. You know, the longer I live the more I feel that our people are the nicest people in the world. There's a natural charm and ease and grace about them that springs from a fundamental generosity and goodness of heart that you can never miss.

Ammunition Is Salvaged From Destruction

Daily World—Atlanta Ga.

12-24-44

Amphibious Tractor Unit Receives Praise

WITH THE 96th DIVISION, SOMEWHERE IN THE PHILIPPINES — (Delayed) — Negro soldiers have played an important role in the landings in the Philippines, the War Department revealed for the first time Saturday.

Two members of an amphibious tractor unit attached to the 96th Division distinguished themselves by entering an ammunition dump which had caught fire and saved from destruction three huge amphibious trucks loaded with mortar and artillery shells.

Staff Sergeant Robert Jones, of Roxbury, Massachusetts, says of men Sergeant Clarence Jackson, of Washington, D. C., and Technician Fifth Grade Samuel Bryant, New York City. "They entered a living hell to save the ammunition."

12-24-44

TRACTOR UNIT PRAISED

Sharing in the general praise given to their amphibious tractor unit which plowed through muddy roads and terrian thought impassable to bring up supplies and ammunition are Technician 4th Grade Prince E. Anderson, 239 W. 148th Street, New York. Technician Fifth Grade William H. Holland, 10 E. 126th Street, New York; Technician Fifth Grade Leonard Ingram, 541 W. 124th Street, New York, Technician Fifth Grade Allen Smith, of 233 E. 127th Street, New York, Technician Fourth Grade Daniel J. Evertz, Rans Inn, Bridgeport, New Jersey and Private Everett Elam, 33 John Street, Broomfield, New Jersey.

Technician Fifth Grade Mayo L. Gentry, 2384 Champlain, N. W., Technician Fourth Grade Robert Wiley, 3028 Park Place, all of Washington, D. C.

More By Thompson.

chell, 926 S. 15th St., Philadelphia, and Sgt. Samuel Binkins, 3869 Alabama Ave., S. E. Washington, D. C. members of a Transportation Corps unit, killed a Jap sniper infesting their bivouac area. Later they narrowly escaped death when their jeep, carrying a casualty to the hospital, hit a mine throwing them from their vehicle.

12-24-44

WARMLY GREETED

Negroes in the beach party landing in the vicinity of Dulag were warmly greeted by the Filipinos. Their admiration for Negroes arose from the heroic deeds of a Negro guerilla, Joe George of San Francisco, who came to the Philippines prior to the war. Marrying a Filipino woman in Tacloban, he became a popular local figure. He set up a trucking service between the towns of Dulag and Tacloban on the island of Leyte.

After the fall of Bataan, he used his truck to supply Filipino guerills operating in the hills. Captured by the Japs and sentenced to be shot, he escaped and became a local hero by carrying out daring raids on the Japs.

Unit Kills 27 Japs On Leyte

Daily World—Atlanta Ga.

12-30-44

Enemy Driven

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
NNPA War Correspondent

LEYTE BEACH — (Delayed) — Negro troops on the morning of D[illegible] the third anniversary [illegible] the enemy's [illegible] on Pearl Harbor, [illegible] gaged enemy [illegible] here, accounting for 27 dead [illegible] in a three-day running battle [illegible] an American air strip, but were beaten back and finally annihilated by our forces.

SPOT PARATROOPERS

First to spot the paratroopers [illegible] paratroopers filtered down from the black seas, while others in [illegible] filtrated from the west in a two-prong attack. The Japs vainly attempted the capture of [illegible] an American air strip, but were beaten back and finally annihilated by our forces.

In the Pablo area colored [illegible] aviation engineers were among those troops who [illegible] waiting as enemy were Cpls. William McCall of Detroit, Mich.; Charles Mumford of Baltimore, Md., and Sgt. Winzer Alston of Rankin, Pa., who were working on vehicles at the time they joined a white depot unit and fought throughout the night. The enemy ground troops were then attacking other elements of engineers and a white signal corps unit.

SPREADS THE ALARM

S/Sgt. James Martin of Newport News, Va., a former school teacher, first received the news and spread the alarm, calling in F/Sgt. Hugh Smith of Philadelphia. 12-30-44

Our troops, led by Cpl. Samuel Johnson of Washington, D. C.; Pvt. William Rumsey, Chester, Pa.; Hubert Johnson, Winston-Salem, N. C.; and Sgt. Leon Wilburn of Bryn Mawr, Pa., rushed to defensive positions and opened fire on running targets. Firing point blank, Johnson killed the first enemy. Rumsey, manning a machine gun, received credit for four. Two units of engineers had moved speedily into position and were constantly firing as the bewildered enemy troops weakly counterattacked.

LOST FIRST MAN

At 4 a. m. we lost our first man, who at the time was repairing a machine gun. Cpl. Herbert Johnson of Washington, D. C., stated that the enemy spotted the machine gun and moved in. Johnson whispered to his group, "We have only four rifles and there must be 20 of them. Take good aim."

ENEMY WITHDRAWS

Following the deadly fire, the enemy withdrew. After five Japs had fallen, Pvts. Silas White of Pittsburgh, and Lenwood Gore of West Virginia carried the wounded man to dispensary. He died enroute.

On the paratroops front, Sgt. Leon Wilburn and Cpl. Milton Diggins of Cumberland, Md., manning an anti-aircraft weapon, received official credit for helping bring down one transport and assist in two probables. One parachutist was killed by the team. A trooper dressed in partial American uniform was entering Sgt. Martin's supply tent when a Filipino yelled, "Jap!" Hugh Smith and Martin opened fire simultaneously, killing the enemy who is thought to have been an officer.

TROOPS PULL BACK

After the third day our troops pulled back to their own area and set up guard. Also patrolling the areas, elements of the infantry moved in to finish off the enemy.

This is the first time in the Pacific war theatre that Negro service troops have helped engage so large a force, reported to be over 200. Major Thomas Brown said of his troops, "They set up positions and fought like infantrymen. No one backed up an inch during the attack."

When asked how they felt about combat, Martin said that he would rather pursue his regular line of work, building and defending the strips we build. 12-30-44

FIGHTING SPIRIT

A majority of our troops had the idea that they had to kill as many as possible. They knew that if the enemy succeeded in getting into camp, there would have been widespread slaughter, Major Brown added. "Tell them at home," he said, "that whatever anybody thinks about these men who do the heavy work, they've shown the fighting spirit Americans boast of."

92nd Division Hit By Nazis

12-29-44

Atlanta World

ROME — (S N S) — American Negro troops of the Ninety-Second Division battled Thursday against a German counter-attack along a six-mile front in the Serchio Valley at the Western end of the Fifth Army front.

Allied headquarters confirmed an earlier German radio report that the surprise attack had been launched against the Negro units. The German radio said the shock of the first assault in a sector that had been quiet for more than a month carried German and Italian troops through the main American fighting line.

The Americans were forced to yield the town of Barga, 15 miles north of Lucca, headquarters announced, indicating that the Germans had advanced up to three miles.

Units of the Eighth Army made contact with the enemy on the outskirts of the German stronghold of Alfonsine on the Ferrera Road in further progress along the east bank of the Senio River.

Elsewhere action on the Italian front was confined to patrols and artillery exchanges.

Engineers Study French For Invasion

Journal and Guide — Nov. 18 — Col. Ed.

ENGLAND—When the Allies storm the beaches of Hitler's Fortress Europe, there will be at least twelve Negro soldiers who will be prepared to use the French language against the enemy. They are members of an engineer battalion stationed in England, and devote one evening a week of their own time to the study of French.

Photographs, furnished by the Army Special Services Division to troops throughout the United Kingdom, are used by two officer instructors to facilitate the instruction.

3-11-44

Among those attending the classes are Corporal Thomas J. Trower, Philadelphia, Pa.; Corporal Oscar L. Prince, Sumter, S. C.; Corporal Marshall P. Auguste, Sunset, La.; Pfc. Arthur Dudley, Gurdon, Ark.; Pfc. Albert Ross, Philadelphia; Pvt. Walter Henry, New York City and Pvt. James B. Henderson, New York City.

Danville, Va.; Samuel G. Patton, Indianapolis, Ind.; Andrew G. Roberts, Los Angeles, Calif.; Hugo V. Tallaferro, Washington, D. C.; William W. Walton, Salisbury, N. C.; Leonard Kennibrew, Cleveland, Ohio, and Roger W. Johnson, Phoenix, Ariz.

Ledo Road Job By Negro Troops Key To Jap Defeat

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

11-11-44

By DETON J. BROOKS

(Defender War Correspondent)

ALONG THE LEDO ROAD. — Deep in monsoon-swept, malaria-infested jungles of central Burma, mud-drenched Chinese, American and British fighters slink forward to smash the Jap — all because of a road.

And behind them — also mud-covered and sloughing forward — are thousands of American troops, great numbers of whom are Negroes, building that road, maintaining it and carrying supplies over it.

That road is the key to grand strategy in the China-Burma-India theater. And unless this is understood, it is impossible to appreciate how great a contribution colored boys from the streets of Harlem or Bronzeville or the plantations of the deep south are making to successful operations in this area.

Supply Mission

Basic mission of the CBI is to keep China in the war until Germany is crushed and the combined might of allied land, sea and air power is free to move on the Jap hordes. 11-11-44

Thus it is essentially a supply mission — a problem of getting guns, ammunition, food, clothing, medical supplies into the hands of poorly equipped Chinese soldiers. Only if China gets these things can she be expected to continue her eight-year-old resistance, giving America and Great Britain a hard-hitting ally when they do invade the far-east in force.

With the closing of the Burma Road shortly after Pearl Harbor, all land routes to China were sealed. Nothing gets in, except by air over the Himalayan mountain peaks, highest in the world.

To increase supplies a new land route has to be opened. Thus combat strategy as well as logistics revolves around the dangerous and difficult task of building the Ledo Road. Every combat mission which has taken place through Assam and northern Burma for the past two years has been for the primary purpose of pushing the Japs back so road construction can go ahead.

Strategy Successful

With the recent capture of Myitkyina, strategic Burmese nerve center from which future operations will radiate and which had to be cleared before the road could be completed, this strategy has proven successful.

Starting at Ledo in upper Assam, India, the road winds up into the jungle-covered Patkai mountain range. At the Pangsau Pass about 44 miles from Ledo it crosses over into Burma, down into the Hukawng valley (miles 130-170) then over the foothills of the purple-hued Himalayas, down again into the Mogaung valley.

When completed it will either cross to Bhamo connecting with the Burma Road or go over the 9000-foot tailbone of the Himalayas into Tenchung, China. 11-11-44

Most of the Negro troops stationed in this theater are either engineer or quartermaster troops and are therefore here along the long route of the road.

In a recent jeep trip over the length of the road, I had an excellent chance to see the job they are doing. Over narrow mountain passes where monsoon floods have caused landslides, colored boys hatless and shirtless were driving huge bulldozers, clearing the road so traffic can go through. Others were supervising large gangs of Indian pioneer troops and contract laborers.

Better than 95 per cent of the trucks we encountered carrying supplies and construction materials up forward, were handled by Negro drivers.

Only if terrain and climatic conditions are taken into consideration can the difficulty of their task be fully appreciated. 11-11-44

"This is the only place in the world where earth pours like water," one engineering officer commented. And this is true. Daily cloudbursts during the monsoon season, averaging more rainfall in three days than New York averages in a whole year, causes earth to literally flow down hillsides.

These conditions make road maintenance work almost as difficult and hazardous as new construction at the "point."

The difficulty of keeping the road open has caused some pessimism as to its value when completed. But tough, stubborn Brigadier General Lewis A. Pick, who demonstrated that it could be built, when other engineers shook their heads, assured me in an interview, "that the road will carry enough supplies to relieve the pressure on China when finished." 11-11-44

In the meantime engineers and quartermasters battle jungles and rain, in carrying out a glamourless, tough and dangerous task — pawns in the chess game of far eastern grand strategy which can only be won when the Japs are checkmated as terms of unconditional surrender are dictated in Tokyo.

Names of Negro MPs assigned to the London district follow:

Acting First Sgt. Kenneth E. Washington, Philadelphia, Pa.; Sgt. Richard S. Williams, Washington, D. C.; Pfc. Booker T. Hills, Hamtramck, Mich.; Pvts. Albert J. Brown, Washington, D. C.; Elwood D. Brown, Ypsilanti, Mich.; William T. Brown, Ridge, Md.; Henderson E. Burton, troit, Mich.; Clinton R. Elmore, Montery, Ala.; George M. Fallin, Baltimore, ; Wardell Gooch, Jr., St. Louis, Mo.; Lee, Hamtramck, Mich.; Pvts. Albert J. Euro- skell O. Humes, Washington, D. C.; has nes P. Meige, Jr., Novata, Okla.; Nathan Morton, Bronx, N. Y.; Robert H. Penn,

White, Negro MPs Work Together In London

Pittsburgh Courier 9-9-44

HEADQUARTERS, EUROPEAN THEATRE OF OPERATIONS—In the streets, and operate the jeeps which ndon, the world's largest city, d patrol jeeps together in per- ite and Negro military police pa e exhibiting a fine spirit of Company A of an arrange- tioned here. vation, these Lon- ave handled many s involving racial ordinarily might confusion. And at this experiment John C. H. der of the Euro- Operations, has successful.

mraderie under the ent, as part of Com- battalion stationed ve resulted in con- has proved that this Lieut. Gen. John since their activation puty commander of n mixed MPs have h licate situations inv

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Senegalese Troops Again Help To Liberate France

ATLANTA DAILY World
Atlanta Ga
12-28-44

Gallant Africans Now Form Backbone Of Fighting Force

12-28-44

By NANCY CUNARD

LONDON (ANP)—France's Senegalese troops are much in the fighting again, playing an active role in the victorious drive to the Rhine. A French officer told me the other day here: "So many are to be seen in Alsace that our national soigan, Liberto, Egalite, Fraternity, has been changed in these parts to 'Liberto, Fraternite, Sen-egalite."

Behind this quip of the French soldiery are terse cabled facts such as: "French and Colonial troops form Senegal, Morocco, Algieria were under Gen. Bothouart in an attack which gained all objectives, freeing nine towns and vilages." That was just before the taking of Belfort. A few days later, French motorized Colonial Infantry reached the Rhine, advancing on Mulhouse.

12-28-44

What Gen. LeClere said to his offices and African volunteers from Congo, Senegal and other French African possessions in 1942-1943 during the great swoop up from LakeChad to the North African coast where he joined with Gen. Montgomery's forces, soon to enter Tunisia, has now come true. LeClere, a cavalry captain in 1940, is the great military French leader of ane of the most remarkable feats n thewar.

His army, very largely composed of Africans (as can be seen in all the pictures of his campaign), tarted from thousands-of-miles-distant Equatorial Africa tawards the freeing of France. His words were: 'Our aim is Paris. We will keep on till we reach it. Then, on to Strasburg." And this he and his army have magnificently done.

While French West Africans help drive the Germans out of France,

12-28-44

East African troops with British armies have cleared the Japanese fram a key port on the Chindwin in Burma. Another East African force linked up with them here at Kalewa. Press cables say this represents the East Africans' first big victory over the Japanese.

Officer Tells Journal + Guide—Norfolk Va. Jordan About Young Heroes

12-9-44

Wishes All America Could Have Seen Negro Infantrymen

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY—"I wish you could have seen those boys fighting and clawing their way up that hill. Every German up there had an automatic weapons. They had grenades and mortars. They threw all of the artillery they had at us. But that didn't stop those kids. I wish you could have seen them. I wish every-body in America could have seen them. . . ."

The officer, one of those toil-ing, fighting fellows who lives with frontline men of the 92nd Division, peeped up over a stone fence and squinted at the ugly mountain that rose not over a quarter of a mile away. A three-day beard bristled on his face and he needed a haircut. He looked to be about forty years old, but it was more likely that he was thirty.

"Some of our men made it to the top of that ridge. Everyone of them scrambled and fought their way as far up as they could. Not a single one of them lingered behind or even stopped, until they were ordered to withdraw. . . ."

CORRESPONDENT DUCKS

The menacing whistle of a Nazi shell punctuated his talk. He told me to duck, and I did. The shell exploded about fifty yards to our left. He went on with his story:

12-9-44

"On the map that mountain is just another dot. The plan of attack probably seemed quite simple. But somehow it didn't work out that way. . . .

"We jumped off at the appointed time. We had a certain number of minutes to make it across the draw and up to our objective. . . . Every man was on his toes. The Germans, holding the commanding heights around, had perfect observation on us. As soon as we started to advance, the jerries up front shot two red flares. That was their signal for the artillery. And, fellow, they really dropped that stuff in on us. . . .

MEN KEEP ADVANCING

"Then their mortars opened up. The whole valley seemed to rock with fire and thunder. But our boys kept on advancing. They opened up their machine guns and blurp guns. Every goi-durned Jerry on that hill had an automatic weapon. . . .

"Those kids continued to press on, clawing and scrambling up that hill. Some had to step over their wounded and dead buddies. But they kept on going. Not one of them stopped. . . until the order came for them to withdraw . . . ."

12-9-44

A couple of Nazi shells exploded not far from us. The officer did not seem to notice them. He looked about in the area where men were busily engaged in varied duties.

HEROIC DEEDS

"People should be proud of those boys. They fought their way right up into the worst the Germans could give. Take T/S Sam Knight, for instance. He's a Chicago boy. He was among the first to reach the top of that ridge. . . .

"And Pvt. Elmer Sussex . . . I believe he's from North Little Rock . . . and Pvt. Wallace C. Baker, of Greenville, Ky. . .he's in the mortar squad. They threw 300 rounds during that attack. . .

12-9-44

"And let's not forget the officers. For instance there's Second Lieutenant Roy Bolling who came to us from Washington, D. C. He led his platoon in the attack and he stuck right there in front all of the way. He doesn't send his men anywhere that he wouldn't go. . . .

"Then there was Pfc. Eddie L. Johnson, of Belzone, Miss., he's a radio man and he was right there with his radio every time he was needed. And Sergeant Curtis Scott, of Colorado City, Texas, fought his way up there and then brought down two wounded men with him in the withdrawal. You can't beat guys like them. . .

MEDICS PRAISED

"And don't overlook the medics . . . those fellows don't have guns, so they can't shoot back . . . but they're right there just the same, and they're just as brave as any. . . Take Pvt. Oscar Underwood, of Braddock, Pa., for instance . . . all night long he brought down wounded men. And the Jerries were shooting at him just as much as they shot at anybody else. That red cross on his helmet means only one thing to a German—a better target."

12-9-44

Shells from one of the 92nd division supporting artillery units were now dropping in the sloves of the big ugly mountain that frowned up before us. We could see the pattern of explosions, veiling a section of the mountain with smoke and dust.

"Those jerries are fighting from positions that are deliberate and carefully prepared . . . caves that have been dug into the marble of that mountain. Months of work went into the preparation. It will not be easy to drive them out."

One of the men came up and told the officer that the new maps had just came through. The officer excused himself and went into a motly building that was being used as an advanced command post. I looked over at that big ugly mountain. The bodies of some of our soldiers were still out there. They could only be evacuated at night.

609th Has Passed Shells for 3 Invading Armies

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt. Md.

11-18-44

Their Record Is 3300 Tons a Day

In this article are names of 8 soldiers from Washington, 12 from Maryland, 14 from Philadelphia, 7 from Jersey and New York, 17 from Richmond and Virginia cities.

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

AVERSA, ITALY—(By Courier) never rains in the army, it only rains in the army. Members of the 609th Ordnance Company worked in the rain many times during the Tunisian, Sicilian and Italian campaigns since their departure from the States, November 2, 1942, so a little mud and falling water couldn't deter the celebration of their second anniversary at Club Casa Mia—the camp club built from scrap lumber by their own off-hour labor.

11-18-44

Record Set by Unit

Since hitting the shore at Casablanca, November 18, 1942, the unit has passed the ammunition for every army that has participated in the three campaigns, handling an average of 1500 tons per day. Just before the Salerno

All Colored Officers

They have worked—rain and shine. One big factor in their success is the fact that the unit is staffed by all colored officers.

Capt. Kenneth H. Moore, Waukegan, Ill., graduate of the University of Illinois, is the commanding officer. Others on the staff are: Lts. Farris J. Posey, DuQoin, Ill., executive officer; George E. Rice, Havre de Grace, Md.; George H. Whitaker, Boston, Mass., and George B. Van Buren, Washington, D.C., former Howard University football star.

The quintet has proudly kept the company flag flying since the unit's landing at Casablanca on D plus 10, besides guiding the work of a 25-man detachment with a gas ammunition depot.

CLUB OFFICERS

Club officers at the Casa Mia, which is operated under supervision of the soldiers are:

T/Sgt. Wesota F. Valentine, Idabel, Okla., president; T/Sgt. Charles L. Smith, Birmingham, vice president; T/4 Wilbert J. Whitehead, Virginia State College graduate, 1500 Lakeview Avenue, Richmond, secretary; S/Sgt. Louis Dupra, 649 N. Fifty-seventh Street, Philadelphia, treasurer; S/Sgt. Henry L. Proctor, Cincinnati, Ohio; Pvt. Prentiss Johnson, Philadelphia, Pa., and T/Sgt. John Fairfax, 2137 Division Street, Baltimore, in charge of club facilities.

EASTERNERS

Easterners dominate the company's roster, but only seven Washingtonians are among them. They are: S/Sgt. Frank Richardson, 34 Q Street, Northeast, ex-Yellow Jacket grid star; Sgt. Robert T. Wilson, 1239 Waller Place, S.E.; Pfcs. Howard Stone, 84, I Street, S.W.; and William J. Blue, 330 U Street, N.W.; Pvts. James E. Spicer, William H. Stevenson, and Randolph Fitzgerald.

BALTIMORE

Sgt. William B. Bynum, 120 W. Hamburg Street, and Pfc. Carlton Brewer, 1117 N. Gilmor Street, head the Baltimore representation, which includes:

Pfc. Carroll Chesley, Pvt. Leroy Edmonds, Pfcs. Clifton R. Green, James E. Gregory, Cpl. John L. Manning, Pvt. Arthur G. Parker.

PHILADELPHIA

T/4 Lee R. Griffin, 2917 New Hope Street, Philadelphia, Pa., who secured ice cream for the two-year celebration in his capacity as mess sergeant, tops the Philadelphia colorbearers, among whom are:

Pvt. Thomas J. Brown, S/Sgt. Louis A. Dupra, T/4 John E. Dancy, Pfcs. Fletcher Finley, Robert L. Glenn, Pvt. Edward F. Harris, S/Sgt. Samuel Hawkins, Pfcs. Leander Mitchell, Latham Oliver, Pvts. Gerald H. Peterson, Hubert C. Rainey, T/4 William R. Smith, Jr., T/5 James G. Weinberg.

Incidentally, T/4 Griffin just took over the mess duties relieving S/Sgt. Milton Cooper, Nashville, N.C., who left for the States on rotation the day after the overseas party.

JERSEY AND NEW YORK

Pvt. Boris A. Williams, former Penn State College track star, Camden, and Pvt. John Shipley, Plainfield, N.J., uphold New Jersey's standards while Pfc. James E. Watt, 310 W. 153rd Street, and Sgt. Walter Rush, Sgt. John O. King, Pfc. Adolph Isaac, and Pfc. Frederick Curtis are New York Citians.

VIRGINIA

Petersburg, Va., is well represented by Pfc. William Barlow, T/5 George G. Cotton, Pvt. Thomas A. Dails, T/4 Everett Master, Pvt. Sterling A. Evans, Pfc. Norris Fields, Sr., Pvt. David L. Dill, T/5 James E. Jackson, and Pfc. Addison D. Lewis, while other Virginians include:

Pvt. Ernest J. Reed, Cpl. Roy L. Nelson, Richmond; Cpl. Jasper H. Kincaid, Chase City; Pfc. Oseadell Jones, Blackstone; S/Sgt. Clarence L. Carter, Ashton; Cpl. Terry Pollard, Covington; T/4 Russell E. Callahan, Hopewell; Pfc. George M. Blackwell, Chatham; T/Sgt. Willie L. Goodman, and Pvt. Vernon B. Eaton, Norfolk.

MD. AND N.C.

Other Easterners, located with the help of T/4 Whitehead, personnel section chief, were Pfc. Arthur R. Brown, Eastern Shore, Md.; T/5 James W. Gassaway, Cambridge, Md.; Pfc. Leroy Meade, Norristown, Md.; Pvt. Thomas L. Williams, Kisenton, N.C.

GI Receives Finest Care

11-18-44 N.Y. Amsterdam News

A U. S. ARMY GENERAL HOSPITAL, ENGLAND — Machine-gunned by enemy fighter planes while getting gasoline for a trapped armored division in the vicinity of Saint Malo, France, Private Joseph Corinth Harding, 25, of 2094 Madison Ave., New York City, machine-gunner on a troop-transport vehicle, is now convalescing at this United States Army general hospital in England. He received the Purple Heart.

Pvt. Harding, wounded in the right hand, sought cover, then bandaged himself with his first-aid pack. When the planes had gone he was driven by truck to the nearest field hospital. There the bullet was removed and the wound dressed. From this hospital the soldier was taken by ambulance to an evacuation hospital, given further treatment then evacuated by plane to England.

Captain Marie A. Luongo, of 1402 Woodbine Street, Pittsburgh, Pa., the soldier's Ward Officer, says: "Pvt. Harding is recovering rapidly."

Explanation may be found in the words of Lieutenant-Colonel Wayne G. Brandstadt of Chicago, Ill., who states: "Private Harding is receiving treatment here which compares favorably with that available in the most modern hospitals in the United States."

An electrician and carpenter before enlistment, the soldier has a wife, Daisy, and five-year-old daughter, Josephine. His parents, Richard and Rosette Harding, live at the same address.

Hang Soldiers in London for Rape

Afro American Baltimore, Md. 8-19-44

LONDON—Pvts. Willie Smith, 21, of Birmingham and Eliga Brinson, 25, of Tallahassee, Fla., were hanged August 11 for the rape of a 16-year-old girl, American Army headquarters announced here.

Their sentence was reviewed and confirmed by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, following their conviction by a court-martial April 29.

and lived to tell the tale, are typical of the type of men who made driving history here.

Others in the unit include:

Cpl. Julius C. Matthews, Newark, N.J.; Sgt. Frank Stanfore, Atlanta; Sgt. Uriah Summers, Larchmond, N.Y.; T/5 Rafael Novarro, NYC; Sgt. James Brothers, Philadelphia, and the only colored officers, CWO Joseph A. Meekins, Chicago, and WOJG Raylston N. Black, San Antonio, Tex.

Tan Drivers First to Work in Soviet Union Territory

Afro-American Balt. Md. 11-18-44

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
NNPA Pool Correspondent

CAMP ANDIMESHK, DESERT DISTRICT, IRAN—(By Courier, Delayed)—Motor Transport Service Stations with American personnel are now in operation at Mianeh and Tabriz, 306 miles northwest of Kazvin, marking the first time that U.S. Army units of the Persian Gulf Command have operated installations within the Soviet sphere of influence.

Temporarily discarding the Block System, MTS truck companies of the 114th Quartermaster Truck Battalion, colored, and the 516th and 517th QM Trk. Bns., white, are now operating test convoys all of the way from Khorramshahr to Tabriz, a distance of some 942 miles. Convoys are expected to complete the 1884-mile round trip in 17 days.

The supplies have to be taken over rough, dangerous roads which often find the drivers operating along the edges of 1000-foot precipices.

Story of "Driving Devils"

In addition to delivering certain types of cargo outside the command, as such, the MTS is also making deliveries to points inside the command which are not served by the railroad. Every Diesel in the command is now on the road and new transport convoy records are in the offing.

This is a partial story of the unsung heroes of the Persian Gulf Command, the crack 114th Quartermaster Truck Battalion Mobile, formerly the 26th QM Truck Battalion, whose rugged GI's are known over here as the "Driving Devils of Hell's Highway."

They were the first American troops to convoy Lend-Lease supplies from the Southern Gulf Ports to the Russians at Kazvin, in Northern Iran. The initial run was made in February, 1943, and since that time a steady stream of vital materials has moved through the Persian Corridor without interruption.

The deeds of this scrappy outfit are a legend in this command and veteran PGC soldiers will tell you that they will wager that there isn't another truck outfit in the army that can match the 114th in "skill, guts and physical endurance.

Unit a Living Monument

Pounding across dusty, scorching desert roads which were mere camel trails, shaking through tortuous mountain passes, some of the men cheating death, others falling before the Grim Reaper, stubbornly fighting temperatures from below zero in winter to 170 degrees or more in summer;

Beset with the ravages of dysentery, malaria and sandfly fever, but always getting the supplies through, has been and still is the daily routine which has made this gallant battalion a living monument to perseverance and endurance.

Dislocated vertebrae, sore eyes, hemorrhoids, respiratory ailments, the passing of blood during excretory processes and the after-effects of heat prostration are all part of the price these truck commandos have paid for serving on one of the roughest and toughest supply routes in the world.

Only 2 Colored Officers

M/Sgt. Will D. Bryant of Bridgeville, Del., First Sgt. Charles D. Hollingshed, Clayton, Ala.; Sgt. James Boone, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Pvt. Nelson Harris of Raleigh, N.C., who went over a steep embankment in a truck

Terrific Fight for Hill Waged by 92d Companies

Afro American 12-9-44 Baltimore, Md.

Forced to Retreat by Nazis in Defense Positions, GI's Plan for Final Assault

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY (By Courier) — On the huge map at divisional headquarters, "Hill 702" is just another objective that remains to be taken, but to members of Companies F and G, of one regiment's second battalion, it has been the scene of terrific fighting.

For not many hours before, on November 18, they had tried to take the hill but had been repulsed as the Germans threw everything in the book at them. It was suspiciously quiet as I talked with some of the blood-spattered survivors of the "Battle for Hill 702" the next day.

Emerging from the dimly-lit, dingy basement room of the battalion command post, First Lt. William A. Goodrum, Asheville, N.C., battalion S-2, commenced, "You should have seen those guys try to take that hill. It would have made all Americans proud.

None Retreated

"They caught hell all the way, but not one of them attempted to retreat until ordered to do so. They had to crawl all the way to the top," he continued, pointing to the peak of a mountain 400 yards away.

The only evidence of habitation was the remains of a shell-battered farmhouse, partially hidden by the heavy trees and green vegetation.

"We have some men up there now, but the Germans are only 300 yards away, and what is more, the Jerreis are dug in in deliberate defense positions," he added as two shells whistled overhead.

"Don't worry about those, they are going out," he explained as I started to take cover.

Nazis Couldn't Be Routed

Pvt. Wallace C. Baker, Greenville, Ky., chimed in with "We threw 300 rounds of mortar shells on them but couldn't rout them, but it won't be long for we are going back soon."

The lieutenant went on to say, "Private Baker is one of the heroes in the battle. Anyone could be pointed out, as all were heroes, but here are a few over here," he added, leading me to the company CP at the foot of the hills.

"Stay low," he cautioned as we edged along the narrow path amid the trees and wrecked farmhouses — all that was remaining of the little Italian town in which the unit was billeted.

Two Lost in Platoon

At the CP, T/Sgt. Sam Knight of Chicago, said, "It was a pretty tough time up there. They threw mortars, hand grenades and machine-gun fire at us." Knight's platoon, led by Second Lt. Royal Brown, Boston, lost two men in the battle.

Company F is commanded by First Lt. Charles H. Lancaster of Washington, who was up in the mountains with the men preparing for another attack.

Pvt. Elmer Sussex, Little Rock, Ark., rifleman; Sgt. Rene Leamont, New Orleans, communications sergeant, Pfc. Eddie L. Johnson, Belzone, Miss., radio messenger and S/Sgt. Alfred Richardson, Chicago, had nothing but praise for Lancaster's leadership.

2nd Washingtonian Praised

They also praised the leadership of Second Lt. Roy Boldren, formerly of Boston, but more recently of Washington, chorusing, "He's a good soldier."

The names of First Sgt. Isaac L. Wheeler, New Orleans; Pfc. Waverly Collier, 1823 Idawood Avenue, Richmond, and First Lt. William E. Cook, Boston, were then mentioned as the men talked about the work done by Company G.

Second Lt. James Janifer, liason officer from the anti-tank com-

511 E. Lee Street, Richmond, field artillery liason officer, and Cpl. Howie Mitchell, ex-Boston University football star, now a draftsman in the S-2 office, said:

"Yes, the boys have had a mess kits en route and making helluva time taking that hill, and the worst part is that as soon as they take that one, there is another on the other side."

Back at regimental headquarters, Second Lt. Frank Randolph party who had braved the jeep ride up "88 Avenue," a narrow, two-lane road under direct observation of the Germans, with me, declared, "Those fellows deserve a lot of credit."

Saved Comrade's Life

The talk next turned to Pvt. James Robinson, a South Carolinian, who pulled a dud out of a German observers were on the comrade's leg just in time to prevent him from bleeding to death.

Colored Unit Services Front Lines On Leyte

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
Representing The Philadelphia Tribune and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association

12-2-44

(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

ORMOC BAY SECTOR, PHILIPPINES—By Courier—Within rifle range of the Ormoc sector is stationed an all-Negro railhead unit serving the 24th and 1st Calvary divisions, infantry forces of the 10th Corps operating in southeast Leyte.

Commanding the unit is First Lt. Clarence A. Laws, former executive secretary of the Urban League in New Orleans. Other officers include Second Lts. Leon G. Weston, Columbia, South Carolina; Berry Sater of Los Angeles; and Joseph Kimbrough of Chicago. All are graduates of the Officers Candidate School, Brisbane, Australia.

Receiving, breaking down, colored and supplying rations to two divisions plus the administration of another colored service unit is the all-important mission performed by these troops. Immediately behind the line, work has often been retarded by bombings and long range artillery. The supply dump holds high priority on the enemy list of installations "to be immediately demolished."

Lt. Weston admitted that the work "has its moments" of exciting experiences, but the unit has not suffered any casualties. Men live in huts evacuated by natives who fled to the mountains when the enemy occupied Leyte. Surrounding the bivouac are countless acres of rice. Filipinos work these fields in the midst of shell fire.

Frontline observation proved conclusively that infantry men hunger for hot bread, fruits, canned vegetables, and beef not of the bully variety. And having the highest priority on supplies, this foodstuff is rushed forward.

The first night with the units revealed several important items. Tons of foodstuffs arrive preiodically and a type of inventory and daily record must be kept. However, such work is not strange to these men, sixty percent of them having served overseas for 32 months.

As Lt. Slater explained it is all a matter of organization. To hear various titles is amusing, for instance:

Vice president in charge of labor coordination, Platoon S-Sgt. Louis Sizemore, of Jersey City, New Jersey.

Vice president in charge of checkers, Sgt. Albrecht W. Ingram, of Detroit, Michigan.

Section chief, Sgt. Walter Edgehill, New York City.

General manager supervising stock records, Sgt. James Hillery, of Jersey City, New Jersey.

Breaking down stock are Cpl. Bradley Barbee, Jersey City, New Jersey; Cpl. Edward M. Lewis, of Indianapolis, Indiana.

12-2-44

Since landing on White Beach two days following the invasion, the unit has experienced 116 bombings, and a number of strafings. Their first job was to set up a ration dump on the beach. Time was divided for the unit; part time working; part time ducking.

Laws' unit was formerly commanded by one of the first Negro captains in the Southwest Pacific, Captain Edward Lowe, of Muskogee, Oklahoma. Later by 1st Lt. Elisha Burno, of Hartsville, South Carolina. Burno presently commands a port company on Leyte.

How Afro's Ollie Stewart Got to Sleep in Nancy

AFRO-AMERICAN Baltimore, Md.

12-2-44

By OLLIE STEWART
AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH TANK BATTALION, THIRD ARMY, FRANCE—All I have written about the tank boys seems inadequate when I look at the situation in retrospect. For instance, the Armistice-Day shelling I mentioned in a previous dispatch was much more thrilling than I made it; and this piece is an attempt to fill in some blank spots.

12-2-44

Before the fireworks started, I had made arrangements to ride back into Nancy with Warrant Officer Clarence I. Godbold, Yonkers, N.Y., at 4 p.m. The first 88-mm. projectile whined over at 3:30, and I was finished with my interviews as of that moment.

But to keep the tankers from knowing that I was scared silly, I put on a nonchalant air and decided to stick it out until four. Along about a quarter to four, when one tank had been hit and set on fire close to where I was hugging the ground under another tank, I was determined to get the hell away from the hot spot.

"Felt Silly as Hell"

The road was a quarter of a mile away, and in between was a solid sea of mud almost knee deep. I took off without saying goodbye to anybody and half trotted and slid about a hundred yards before a low shell made me sprawl head first into the slime. My helmet popped off and I felt silly as hell crawling on hands and knees to grab it.

I passed some white ack-ack boys who huddled about their gun and grinned sympathetically at me as I ploughed through. One yelled pleasantly: "Hope you don't draw that 88 fire this way, Mack."

I told him: "You and me both, Bud," and kept trotting. Soon I reached the road, after diving twice more when shells landed close, and yelled at a major in a recon car to give me a lift into Vic Sur Seille.

12-2-44

Plays Hide, Seek with Shells

He said okay and told me he was taking this road which led over a bridge, also being shelled, because the short road at the other end of the tank area was blocked.

The major and his driver were in front. In back with me was the radio operator, talking to his company by radio as we rode along, and it was this radio man who was hit by shrapnel a little later.

A five-minute ride brought us to the bridge, or to within a hundred yards of it. Just then a shell landed fifty feet away on our side of the bridge and almost immediately another exploded on the opposite side. The radio man rubbed his cheek and his hand came away bloody. I began to feel myself to see if I were hurt.

Listens to Heart "Thunder"

The driver leaped to the ground while the car was still in motion and started for a ditch. The major looked around grimly and yelled at the driver to get the hell back into the so-and-so car and back it away from the bridge. I just sat there listening to thunder that was my heart thumping like ten thunderbolts.

All the soldiers along the road were lying in the ditch as we turned around and headed back toward the tank area. "We can't chance the bridge," said the major. "We'll have to go through that road block."

That didn't suit me. The tank area was also being shelled even more heavily now, but this was my only chance to get out soon, so I crouched and mumbled that it was all right by me—which was a statement for which I shall have to be forgiven.

12-2-44

The radio man paid no attention to his slight wound and was talking like mad as the major dictated to him. Back to the tank area we went to find the road block still in effect. So we had to sit there like sitting ducks on a pond while Jerry did his stuff.

It was forever and always to me—but in reality only about five minutes—before we got through and hightailed it through some woods and into town. The town was within artillery range, but was not being zeroed in, so I climbed down and caught another ride into Nancy.

12-2-44

Nancy had an 8 o'clock curfew and anybody on the streets after that was liable to be shot. Several had been recently shot. The precaution was taken because the place was still a haven for Germans in civilian clothes.

Just before 8 I found myself completely lost, so I went to an MP station and had the boys take me to the outfit that had invited me to be their guest for the night. Ironically, they were billeted in barracks called the Rommel Caserne, or Rommel Barracks to you.

Negro Fighter Leads Philippine Natives

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

12-9-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. WAR CORRESPONDENT
Representing the Philadelphia Tribune and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association

(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

LEYTE, Beach. Philippines—(By Courier)—On Samar island, northeast of Leyte, fighting with the fierceness of an enraged American Negro and leader of a Filipino guerrilla band. Capt. Merith is one of the big stories to fight the enemy. Armed with bolos, of the war. His deeds and those knives, even sticks—these of his rugged men have spread natives, many clad in rags, ferociously defend among American troops like wild the homeland. Tales of superhuman courage and endurance have reached us here.

Exact whereabouts of the giant Negro is still secret military information, but this correspondent is pushing off in search of him. It is a search well worthwhile, because what Livingston meant to the natives of Africa, surely Merith means the same to the people of the Southern Philippines. And as the news of Livingston spread around the world, so should the deeds of this Negro be made known.

12-9-44

Capt. Merith is the story. He is one of the heaviest penalty of all worth walking a continent to find. Every attempt will be made to find him.

For instance, the total population of Basey and one dentist are presently at work the important town of Basey numbered 29,000 Sores, blisters, malarial cases, pneumonia. When the surrounding villages number are only a few of the before enemy occupation. of these people items which harass the population. enemy arrived most of there they fought Captain Merith. It was told the fled to the hills. There writer, was chosen as one of the leadthe enemy for over a year. ers. Under the Negro and others, their While women and children foragers. coconuts, and edible valor reaches daily new heights. for food-fruits, coconuts, in the heart of The story goes that Capt. Merith pith which grows in the able-bodied men has been in the Philippines for many coconut trees—all hard fight, and years, making his home on Samar. He fought. It has been the guerrillas are married a native woman and owned continues to be. The property. The enemy caught him as lacking in modern equipment others. The Negro was at- Few rifles were taken from the Japs well as the And American planes dropped some ammunition. American equipment in the form of smuggled equipment in to the Negro cause of the inhenseness of the situations, all has been too little. The enemy reached a maximum of ruthlessness on Samar. The said, "Ah, he is good man and friend. ar. The town was And he is very good fighter too." meager resources. Capt. Merith is the story. He is Only since Amer- stripped bare of its meagre have food, medical supplies begun to pour in. Five doctors

Britons Reward GI Who Lost Watch In Daring Rescue Of Drowning Girl

Pittsburgh Courier-Pa. 11-25-44

BARNSTAPLE, England—The heroism and gallantry of an American Negro soldier, Cpl. Rudolph Johnson, has won him the honor and love of this southwest section of England. Corporal Johnson, a few weeks ago, was lying on the beach at Croyde when he heard cries of help from a girl bather in distress. Johnson took off his gold wrist watch and gave it to a female bystander, plunged into the sea, and after a struggle in which he was badly cut by submerged rocks he brought the girl to safety. But . . . when he went to reclaim his watch, the woman had disappeared with it.

The North Devon Journal-Herold published the story and within a few days gifts of money started pouring in to help the soldier replace his watch. Maurice Prince, manager of a moving picture house, volunteered to serve as treasurer of the fund, and last week in impressive ceremonies in the Guildhall of Barnstaple, Corporal Johnson was presented a white gold watch and a check for more than 42 pounds.

MAYOR PRESIDES 11-25-44

Mayor Charles F. Dart and W. T. Buckingham, chairman of the Barnstaple Rural District Council, presided over the presentation ceremony. Mayor Dart expressed his regret that an Englishwoman could have stolen the watch, particularly from guests on English soil, but he pointed out that the spontaneity of the fund to replace the watch showed the truer feelings of the British.

Johnson, who was loudly cheered, replied, saying: "I have the greatest admiration for the British people and I shall always remember your kindness." Johnson's commanding officer said that he did not have a better soldier in his outfit than Johnson.

A. G. Doubt of Bristol, accepting an invitation to be present at the presentation ceremony, said that the incident "serves to show in a very striking way how desperately mean a white person can be and how nobly unselfish and persistently courageous a colored person can be, and also enables us to note with pride how true at heart and spontaneously generous our fellow-countrymen are."

Mr. Doubt said that the incident should serve to diminish color prejudice and that in Bristol as a result of the publicity of the Johnson case, two meetings had been arranged to be addressed by Sgt. Robert Turner, a Negro soldier.

Mr. Doubt concluded: "Two views of the color problem are commonly held. Some say the colored peoples are good for nothing but cheap labor. Keep him poor and helpless; others say preserve him in the tribe . . . Still others say the colored man must be educated and trained for freedom and self-government. Those active in the matter here—Christian-Socialists—support the latter view wholeheartedly, and the time is especially now, and the need urgent."

ENTHUSIASTIC CROWDS

The North Devon Journal-Herald described the scene following the presentation ceremony thus: "At the close of the ceremony the scene outside the Guildhall was reminiscent of Fair Wednesday at noon. Traffic was stopped by a huge concourse of people who cheered enthusiastically as Corporal Johnson and the mayor appeared on the steps of the Guildhall."

Negro Forces Of 92nd Division Fighting On Hard Front In Italy

News - Pittsburgh, Pa. 12-6-44

BY WILLIAM B. KING

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY, Nov. 20 —(Delayed—(AP)—Axis troops are getting no respite on the coastal left flank of the Italian front where American Negro forces of the 92nd Division are fighting in a sector which combines the swankiest of prewar beach resorts with some of the toughest mountain terrain in Italy.

American troops already hold long stretches of the Tyrehennian coast which Mussolini developed to complete with the French Riviera. Along the heavily mined beaches are sprinkled now useless blockhouses which invasion-fearful Fascists built to oppose a landing.

These fortifications, some camouflaged as restaurants or beach cabanas, lie in empty decay as American military vehicles ply the nearby highways in the never-ending stream necessary to keep the front in motion. Only a ghost of the vacation and resort atmosphere remains as military and civilian life goes on in the towns and villages, which are within easy shell-range of enemy guns. 12-6-44

* * *

A SHORT JEEP RIDE takes you into the actual battle area, where the fighting takes on the familiar Italian front feature. You climb into a jeep and start out on a series of roads under the easy observation by enemy troops in the hills above. On every side are crumbling buildings and gaping holes in the roads and fields, evidence of recent shellings.

Behind in another jeep, come three infantryment armed against any contingency, Sgt. Clarence M. Palmer, a former athletic coach at a Durham, N. C., playground. He rides with a rifle ready between his knees. With him are Pvts. Elmer Partrice and Oscar L. Mann, both of New York City.

We started up a snaky trail leading up a mountainside. The trail winds through terrace after terrace of gnarled but well-kept olive trees. The presence of Italian peasants with flocks of sheep grazing on the lush grass makes the facts of war seem almost impossible.

* * *

AT THE SUMMIT you join Lt. Stanley Braitswait, New York City, in an artillery observation post. You watch as he and Corp. James Gant, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Pfc. Robert Saunders, Memphis, Tenn., direct a concentration of shells against an enemy position on a ridge ahead. 12-6-44

Back in the jeep, you make your way to the foot of a forward hill atop which American soldiers hold front positions. You tuck your jeep under the covering of trees and start up beyond a rusted barbed wire entanglement which marks the outpost of a recent German defensive position. Up the steep mud track, you move with an ear cocked for the warning whine of enemy shells. When one comes, you lie flat and wait for it to crash.

Near the crest, Sgt. Coby Edmond, Wardell, Mo., a mortarman, tells of his pride in the work of his section. Pfc. Johnny Gibson, Monroe, La., and Corp. Alvin Adams, Charlotte, N. C., trudge up carrying ammunition across terrain no pack mules could negotiate. The ammunition, they say, is for their machine guns, which are in position a few yards away.

The 92nd is not fighting on an easy front. It is opposed by tough and determined German units who give no ground without a fight.

Negro Saves White Boy's Life; They Are "Like Brothers"

Informer-Houston, Texas 12-16-44

HOUSTON—Another story of the interracial comradeship being forged on the various battlefields across the seas was barred this week when Sergeant Bobbie Allen, just back from a 30-month stay in the South Pacific, recited how he and a white San Antonio soldier became "just like brothers" after he had saved the white youth's life.

Sgt. Allen said he was serving in New Guinea when early one morning he was coming through the jungles near the front and saw a white soldier prostrate on a jungle track, as a result of having been shot through the mid-section with a number two millimeter cannon shell.

The white soldier, Sgt. Allen said, was losing blood fast, and he tore his shirt off and bandaged him as best he could and rushed him to a first aid station.

Two days later the wounded soldier sent for the local colored sergeant and a close friendship was started. The white soldier was only 18 years old.

Came Home Together

Sgt. Allen and his white comrade received rotation furlough at the same time and traveled all of the way to San Antonio together. They occupied the same seat from New Guinea to California, and occupied the same berth to San Antonio, where the white youth's parents met them at the train.

After thanking the colored youth for saving their son's life, the parents carried both of them to their home and they had dinner together. The parents told the colored soldier to always feel free to call upon them for any favor that he might need. They are wealthy oil people.

Sgt. Allen is the son of Mrs Sarah Allen, 2420 Briley. He was induced to tell his story to The Informer by a cousin, Mrs. Lillian Prophet-Wake.

He entered the army in 1940 and after training with the 349th Field Artillery, was shipped to Australia April 6th, 1942. He served in Australia seven months and next went to New Guinea, where he was in the Battles of Buna, Leyte and Salalumua.

Buy Those Bonds.

Sgt. Allen urges all civilians to buy bonds, saying the men behind the guns feel mighty good when they receive letters from home saying how many bonds are being purchased in their respective communities.

He will report to Fort Sam Houston Dec. 19th, where he might be discharged due to an injury sustained when he was hit by fragments from a bomb during a Jap raid.

Marine Saves Wounded White Buddy, Then Downs Jap Sniper

By TECH. SGT. PAUL G. LONG. 11-25-44

A Marine Combat Correspondent, Formerly of the Chattanooga Times

PELELIU, PALM ISLANDS—(Delayed)—The Japs, entrenched on the ridge in the toughest fighting of this tough campaign, had all the advantages.

For two days the veteran jungle fighters of the First Marine Division had pushed solidly upward, seeing their comrades killed and wounded. Now they were dug in awaiting orders advance again.

"Want to come out for a smoke?" A colored Marine had crawled up to a white comrade in arms. He and the rest of his company of stretcher bearers were relieving men at the front, giving them a break in the tension of front-line combat.

In this campaign, the colored Marines have performed gallantly. Day and night they have carried wounded back to aid stations and returned to the front with ammunition and water. Rough, precipitous crags has made their job harder. One 200-pound wounded fighter apologized for his weight, but they only smiled and groped on down the tortuous trail with him. Often they went beyond the front in search of wounded Marines. But what they wanted most was a chance to kill the Japs.

This is the way it happened to Ramey—Private First Class R. L. Ramey, 21 of Bluefield, W. Va. A wounded rifleman fell forward from an escarpment into a gulch. Without hesitation and without command, Ramey jumped headlong to save him.

"Come out of there," ordered a captain. "You haven't got a chance." "I'm coming out, Captain, soon as I get this Marine," replied Ramey.

He brought back the Marine.

The captain recognized Ramey.

"Want to shoot a Jap, Ramey?"

The captain pointed out a sniper's nest. Ramey eagerly accepted his Tommy gun. So it was that Ramey got his first Jap.

Trained for combat, like all other Marines, colored Marines know how to use weapons. Their non-commissioned officers saw to that, just as they taught them to drill so well that the Secretary of the Navy and the Commandant of the Marine Corps commended them at their New River, N. C. training base.

First Sgt. Nolan Marshall, 20, of 3421 Baronne street, New Orleans, La., graduate of New Orleans' Gilbert Academy, helped organize this extraordinary "depot" company, systematically weeding out the less apt recruits and replacing them with the best men he could find.

Gunnery Sgt. Victor Kee, 21, of 15 School street, Newark, N. J., studied for three years at Morgan State College, Baltimore, Md., before joining the Marine Corps. He

British Women Express High Esteem For Negro GIs In Democracy Pleas

Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

12-30-44

c/o American Red Cross Service Club, 102/104 Whitechapel, Liverpool, England.

DEAR EDITOR: May I take a small amount of space in your paper to try to express my esteemed regard for the American Negro troops it has been my privilege to meet and work with during the year? When I first volunteered to work with the American Red Cross here in Liverpool my knowledge of the average Negro and his ways was very meagre, but working daily with these boys soon taught me that there was much more to them than just a Stepin Fetchit of the movies, or a Rochester of the Jack Benny radio program. Yes, here were men and boys from high schools and colleges all over the U.S.A., from many and varied walks of civilian life.

I met former waiters, lawyers, clerks, doctors, farm workers, yet all were now wearing the khaki of Uncle Sam's Army, each one with the same job to do and the same determination to see it well done. Except for a few members of the Army of the United States, the boys I met were not soldiers, they told me so themselves. They were, so they said, just civilians in GI clothing, but that did not make any less the significance of the job that they knew had to be done, so that they could return soon to their wives, mothers, children and girl friends back in the States. 12-30-44

The friendships I have made here in this Red Cross club are something which I know I will never forget and which I am going to cherish all my life. In future years should I be given the chance to visit the U.S.A. it is going to be a wonderful feeling to anticipate meeting once again Frank A. Carroll of Newark, N.J.; Adolph Reed of Chicago, Ill.; John Thurston, Arthur Fair and George Johnston, also of Chicago, Ill.; Nathaniel Oliver, whose sister lives in Detroit, Mich.; George Duerson of Indianapolis, Ind.; Len Floyd of Kansas City, or Johnny Perkins of Tupelo, Miss. It will be really great to see and speak once again to George J. Evans, Stanley W. Gale, Alonzo Sudler, Jr., Lazarus H. Goodwyn or Walter Brannon of Philadelphia, Pa. It's going to be nice ot hear George L. Jackson of Ohio playing his piano in the surroundings which I have no doubt he loves more than any other, to hear once again the singing of Bill Thompkins of Long Island. Yes, these and many others I am longing to meet again. I've mentioned these names not for desire to impress you, but just because I thought it might be nice for you who may read this paper to know that up to the time they left Liverpool these boys did not lack for friends, they had plenty friends who like myself will not forget them. 12-30-44

It's like that in a Red Cross club. Soldiers come and go and with each one my admiration for them increases. They've taught me about places and things which were once very foreign to me, but which I now understand well. They've given me something, these Negro sons of America, something which I can't quite explain; perhaps it is a broader outlook on life, perhaps it's just the feeling that my work with and for them has been every bit worthwhile. At any rate it's here inside me and it's a flame that is not diminishing but is growing stronger every day.

Well, I won't take up any more of your space now as I have no doubt that paper is just as precious in the States these days as it is in England, but just let me say once again that I mean every word of this small (yes, I say small for I have not said half I could have said) expression of regard.

MISS ANN RILEY

(Signed) ANN RILEY.
ARC Volunteer.

* * * 12-30-44

SOMETHING TO BE PROUD OF

"Park View," 110 Cliff Lane,
Ipswich, Suffolk, England.

Dear Editor:

I am a Volunteer Canteen Associate and hostess of the ARC club in town and I wondered if you would be interested enough to let all mothers, wives and sweethearts know that all the colored boys stationed near us use our club, we are proud to have had the privilege and honor of meeting, serving, and entertaining them. Through so doing I have met some of the most courteous, educated and grateful men I have ever met. You certainly have something to be proud of. To think I was brought up to give my pennies to help educate and civilize Negroes. I feel ashamed as to what some of these boys really think of our so-called Christianity and civilization, for their respect for mother, God, and home-makers, we wonder. Apart from the club where I worked for some time with a most wonderful personality, Miss Martha Stafford, Harvard place, Indianapolis, I used to chaperon a party of young ladies to a nearby camp for parties and dances. Miss Stafford was director of an Aero club there. We had some jolly times and all were astounded at the reception we received and the wonderful behavior of all the boys. Our very esteemed friend, Capt. Chaplain Perkins of Philadelphia, used to escort us to and from the camp as often as he could and they were indeed happy journeys.

MRS. ELSIE M. CATLING

12-30-44

Another dear friend, Alexander Jordan, Minnesota, conductor of the large Negro choir, has made a name that will long be remembered. He brought part of that choir to our church and they gave us some of their spirituals. We shall never forget that singing, in fact, when we know where they were singing, several of us would follow them around. My husband is just as keen as myself and believe me, is very disappointed if one or more of the boys does not come in each day. I have had about 40 boys home. The first outfit of boys we had moved off about five months ago; first North, then South about 300 miles each way and some have traveled all that way to spend their 48-hour pass with us. 12-30-44

I consider myself honored when they are coming home and call me Mother, because I realize what it all means to them. There is one thing this cruel war has in its favor, it has given all nations chance to know each other better and I trust that when real peace, freedom and democracy is won, all those who helped to win the same will be able to share and take an equal place in this world.

Trusting that victory is just around the corner, I am

Sincerely yours,
ELSIE M. CATLING.

* * *

HOPE NEGROES WILL GET THEIR WAR AIMS

12-30-44

Braeside Road,
Wentworthville.
Sydney, N.S.W., Australia.

Dear Editor:

I have just spent the evening reading The Pittsburgh Courier, which was sent to me by a young Negro soldier now serving in the S.W. Pacific. I sincerely hope that the Negro people will get what they are fighting for today. All men are born free and equal. I have had several Negro soldiers who were in camp here, guests at my home and I cannot speak too highly of them. They are all gentlemen. Two have since been down on leave and called to see my family. One stayed several days with us. You may publish this letter if you think fitting.

Yours truly,
(Signed) MRS. BERTHA REGAN.

* * *

PROUD TO KNOW "GUYS" WHO ARE "ON THE BALL"

The Unicorn Hotel,
Coleford, Gloucestershire,
England.

Dear Editor:

I cannot allow the letter from the hostesses of Hull American Red Cross club and printed in a recent issue of The Pittsburgh Courier pass without my saying my pretty piece.

As manager of a west country Red Cross club, I would like to express my appreciation for the firm hand of friendship which has been extended to hostesses, staff and myself by each and every one of the colored soldiers we have had the good fortune to meet since this club has been open.

My earliest and most memorable experience of the sincerity and feeling of these men occurred New Year's eve, 1943, when a handful of colored soldiers, Gladys Martin (at that time director, now in France), Red Cross staff including myself, gathered together that the chaplain might ask God's blessing for the New Year and all that it held for each and every one.

After prayers had been said and hymns sung, everyone joined hands to sing "Auld Lang Syne." Although more than 3,000 miles separated these Americans from their homes and their loved ones, they were "home" in thought for each and everyone of those brown eyes filled with unrestrained tears.

To the average reader this incident may seem rather a trivial thing to write about, but having known these "boys" for many months I realize that although many things disturb them it is seldom that they allow anyone to see them moved to any great extent. 12-30-44

Many of these boys are far away now, but wherever any of them go or whatever they do, there will always be a very warm corner in the hearts of all connected with this club for all the colored people who have made our task both easy and never-to-be-forgotten pleasure.

If fate decrees that these friends never pass this way again, then I thank God that I was privileged to know the "guys" who are really "on the ball." 12-30-44

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) MARY GREEN.

Home Address:
Three Oaks, Rushlake Green
Heathfield, Sussex, England.

Artillery Gets New Guns to Fire on Siegfried Line

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
12-16-44

By OLLIE STEWART

AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in Germany

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH NINTH ARMY IN GER... By cable — "They hi... what they shoot at." That's the... verdict of tank crews and infan... trymen in this sector who have... profited by the devastating fire of... the artillery battalion to which I... am now attached.

The battalion commander, Lt. Col. L. G. Witmer of Philadelphia, was more reserved. Said he, "I want this unit to be the best, and until it is the best I am not satisfied. Until they go overboard in the... of the... comfort in the cel... and we are forbidden to speak to the natives.

Find Co... My adopted... all know well, "Through these portals pass the fastest mortals." ... fire across ... We are not too uncomfortable. ... We seem to live ... We have wood and coal and plenty of heavy clothing. A few ... r own out here ... The little civilians, looking very pathetic, ... had most of its ... are coming back to live in the ... Everybody ... ruins, but this is enemy country ... before tries to find ... attained. lars.

The battalion has an unusually high IQ. At least half of the men are college graduates.

Work 60 Feet Underground

Sixty feet underground is the fire direction center. The chief computor is S/Sgt. Clarence McMichael of Nacogdoches, Texas, captain of the 1942 Texas College football team.

Assisting him are:

Sgt. Edward Evans of Prairie View, whose father teaches at Prairie View State College; Sgt. Thomas Cheatham of Fort Worth, a graduate of Texas College; Cpl. Marion Jones of Dallas, former foobfall star at Wiley College; Cpl. Leon English of Waxahachie, Texas, former Prairie View track star who did the 100-yard dash in 9:6 at the Drake Relays; Cpl. Walter Parks of Chicago, former Morehouse student; Cpl. James Turner of Tyler, Texas College graduate; Pfc. Melvin Staff of Grambling, La.; and Pvt. Eddie Carter of Houston, a Wiley graduate.

In order to hit the target, computing must be accurate with consideration for distance and wind velocity. The fire direction center is the brains of the battalion. Here instructions are given gunners who simply load and fire when told to.

The day I arrived, the target was an emplacement of heavy railroad guns that rose up to shoot then dropped back out of sight.

Once our gunners got the correct range, they waited until an observer spotted the German guns rising then they cut loose and knocked out all but two before the enemy had time to fire.

Cheyney Grad in Outfit

Interesting personalities here

Sgt. Rosmond Nelson, 1605 W. Butler Street, Philadelphia, a graduate of Cheyney and the University of Pennsylvania; S/Sgt. Leonard Morgan of Memphis; M/Sgt. Albert Darenbourg of New Orleans, Xavier alumnus; Pvt. Leroy Moss of Bellefontaine, Ohio, who played with Tiny Bradshaw's orchestra;

Sgt. Jesse Brown of Houston, who is so cool that he peeled potatoes for supper right through an enemy raid; Sgt. Ronall Tucker of Athens, Texas, 1943 graduate of Prairie View in 1943; S/Sgt. Richard Sands, 642 Bergen Street, Newark, N.J., who was track star in his high school days;

S/Sgt. Robert Sampson of Roanoke, Va., battery supply sergeant; and 1/Sgt. David Hayes of Logan, V.Va., a Morehouse graduate, who formerly taught school and was narrowly defeated when he ran for the House of Delegates from Logan County.

TALKS TO PA. CONGRESSMAN

Men who keep the battalion supplied with food, clothes, and ammunition include:

Sgt. Eugene Matthews of Brenham, Texas, a Prairie View graduate; Sgt. William Sims of Detroit, former recreation instruction; S/Sgt. Otis Montgomery of San Antonio; S/Sgt. William Owens of Greenville, Texas, a Wiley graduate; Sgt. Joseph McElroy of San Antonio; and S/Sgt. Joe Jackson of Versailles, Ky.

FLASH: Thursday night I saw one of a group of visiting Congressmen, John E. Sheridan of the Fourth District, Philadelphia, who bought me beer and said he recently bought a professional football team called the Giants, which has Brud Holland on the roster.

Two Soldiers Contest For Honors As First Ashore On Philippines

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

11-4-44

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

ON THE LEYTE BEACHHEAD —Two soldiers, Cpl. Harry Carter of Charleston, W.Va., and Sgt. Arthur DuPrees of St. Louis, Mo., contested claims this week of being the first Negro soldier to land in the new Philippines invasion.

Setting foot on the beach here two hours before the first port company platoons came ashore while Japanese fire raged around them, the two were definitely known to be first ashore in General MacArthur's historic comeback here. But who was first between the two was a hotly debated question.

They were part of an all-Negro port company that hit the beach at Leyte, six hours after the first assault troops had swept inward behind a barrage of rockets from landing craft.

When Jap machine gun fire ripped through his area, Staff Sergeant John Lindsey of Chicago was wounded in the shoulder and became one of the first casualties in his company. Sergeant Lindsey, however, was soon back into action and supervising the unloading of more invasion cargoes.

The soft sandy beach was teeming with men, truck, tanks, bulldozers, fuel rations, supplies and other equipment. Snorting bulldozers wrestled to extricate heavy vehicles mired deep in the soft sand.

The pair spent an hour traveling a quarter of a mile.

The first segment of the company arrived only shortly before the second and the whereabouts of the third was not known.

Only Negro Unit

No concern over the failure of the third platoon was expressed by Lt. Albert R. Bishop of Washington, D. C., commander of the company. He said that after unloading one ship it had most likely shifted to another where it spent the night so as to be handy for an early unloading Saturday morning.

11-4-44

The company is the only all-Negro outfit to take part in the Philippines operation. When the second platoon, commanded by Lt. Weaver A. Turner of Los Angeles, Calif., landed, infantrymen had driven several hundred yards inland so they risked no danger in landing.

The skill and experience of the Negro dock workers enabled the three shifts to which they were assigned, to be released more than an hour ahead of schedule. The men were disappointed in not being permitted to operate the winches, the navy preferring its own operators. The men, reputed to be the best winch operators in the theatre, had counted heavily upon their own operators in an effort to set a record as soon as the landing craft were launched.

With efficiency born of long experience, hatch covers were raised and the men began to hook up loads. Soon ammunition tanks and ration fuel were disgorged from the four holds of the vessels. For three hours and five minutes they worked continuously the unloading wasn't even interrupted when the ship moved from its original anchorage of about nine miles off shore to within three miles of the beach.

11-4-44

Beach Bombarded

The steady and unrelenting bombardment of the beach by destroyers, cruisers and battleships had been underway since dawn. It made the ship tremble and the holds reverberate with deafening sound. But that and the general air of excitement failed to disrupt the rhythmic and continuous operations of the Yonkers in the hold.

Captain Harold Baker, USN, Baltimore, commander of the naval transport division of which the ship was a part, commended the outfit on what he called a record. They unloaded three hundred and fifty tons of cargo in three hours and five minutes. The normal rate of unloading is at the rate of 100 tons per hour.

Not Glamorous But Vital

While their task is not nearly so glamorous as that of cambat troops, it is part of the huge task of logistics which show that modern warfare is not only a gigantic job but one of A-1 importance. The entire well - planned operation might have failed had these men not succeeded in speedily dispatching to the beachhead vehicles, tanks, ammunition and fuel.

Casualties would certainly have been greater and more serious had they not rushed to the beach medical supplies and equipment. They were the lifeline of the feeding to the advancing troops everything required for them to successfully carry out their objectives.

11-4-44

Gang foremen on the ship I saw unloaded were Sgt. Hiram Dudley, Mt. Pleasant, Texas; Sgt. Fred C. Ragland, Bowling Green, Ky.; Sgt. Theodore Hendley, Chicago, and Sgt. James Freeney, Chicago.

Staff Sergeant Lindsey, who was injured, later supervised the four gangs. And now, with our troops in posse[illegible] of Hill 522, an important strategical position, the airstrip, the city of Tacloban, the paved highway to Palo and Palo itself, th[illegible] men are still unloading s[illegible]ips and they'll keep on unloading ships until the Philippines are free

Tough Job Keeping Up, One Operator Asserts

Atlanta Ga.

12-16-44 Atlanta Daily World

CHERBOURG — The powerful, giant arms of their crawler cranes daily hoisting much of the world's highest priority military cargo, Negro crane operators here in this thriving Allied harbor are chasing port tonnage records ragged.

Ships loaded to the gunwale with subsistence, tanks, planes and every conceivable kind of war material needed by fighting Allied troops on the continent are packed into this immense harbor.

12-16-44

There is neither time nor space for quayside discharge of these vital supplies. The cargo is therefore loaded on barges and "ducks," the Army's famed sea-going truck, which waddles into the harbor water to receive equipment from ships often miles offshore.

WORK DAY AND NIGHT

Thousands of these 'ducks" travel between ship and quay day and night. Sturdy Negro crane operators taxi their huge derricks up to water's edge with the ease of jeep-drivers, manipulating the maze of pedals and levers around them, lifting cargo from barges to waiting trucks that often take off in direct "red Ball" military express deliveries to the advanced front lines.

"It's a tough job keeping ahead of the barges, but we try to have a net or sling always open," says Sergeant Julius Freeman, 25, 1114 East Washington Street, Wilson, North Carolina.

"Lots of times we handle stuff that we've got to be pretty doggoned careful with, but just the same we take a lot of short cuts in crane operation that are really sending our tonnage records up," points out 19-year-old Private James M. Sanders, Jr., 1512 7th Avenue, South Birmingham, Alabama.

GETS REAL COLD 12-16-44

Main growl of crane operators is the bitter cold that goes along with their exposed job in the crane cab. "It is not so bad when we're actually loading," says Corporal Alonza Rooks, 30, 342 Brush Street, Spartanburg, South Carolina, "but between loads, we turn off the motor and it gets pretty cold. We could keep the machine going for heat, but fuel is too precious around here for that." 12-16-44

"We know we've had thorough training back in the States," observes Corporal Nehemiah Gooden, 25, Fifteen Miles, Awendaw, South Carolina. "We used to practice working under blackout conditions. It sure has come in handy."

Men of the outfit have seen duty during air raids. Their crane operation continued even while the sky was lit up by the deadly yellow streaks of our antiaircraft fire.

12-16-44

"Sometimes we know that it has been less than a day between our handling of ammunition and its use up front where it belongs," points out Corporal Robert Walters, Jr., 19, 1406 Argyle Avenue, Baltimore, Maryland. "A good percentage of Allied supplies in France have dangled on the ends of our cranes at one time or another," he adds.

deeds and those of his ragged men have spread among American troops like wildfire. The exact whereabouts of the giant warrior is a military secret. However, this correspondent has been granted permission to find and join him.

My search should be well worthwhile because what [illegible] of Africa, this Negro means to the people of these islands. As the news of Livingstone was spread around the world, so should the deeds of this man be made known. He is worth walking across a continent to find, and every attempt will be made to find him.

BY FLETCHER MARTIN
War Correspondent, Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

ON AN ISLAND NEAR LEYTE (By Cable) — Fighting with the fierceness of an enraged animal is an American Negro leader of a Filipino guerilla band.

This man is one of the big[illegible] stories of the Pacific [illegible]

U.S. Negro Leads Filipino Fighters

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

The IOWA BYSTANDER
Des Moines, Iowa

Negro Tankmen Take Four Towns in Battle Near Metz

12-7-44

With the Third Army in the Metz Area—Spearheading a task drive of the 26th "Yankee" Division which jumped off November 8, the all-Negro 761st tank battalion now in action with the U. S. army captured four important towns, secured two bridge crossings and successfully battered its way through the strongly defended Forest de Bride, the War Department announced today.

The Negro tankmen were committed to action following the 26th Division's capture of Metz, which never before fell to direct assaut in modern times. They lunged into the battle with such ferocity and courage that Captain Irvin McHenry of Leavenworth, Kansas, received the nickname of 'The Bronze Devil," and Staff Sergeant Reuben Rivers of Route 1, Box 27, Tecumseh, Oklahoma, received the Silver Star for routing nearly 300 Germans. A dozen members of the medical detachment were cited for heroism under fire. 12-7-44

..'Such Bravery'

A captured German officer, after having had a taste of the Negro tankmen and their work, said: "So far as fighting is concerned, I have never before seen such bravery except once before, and that was on the Russian front." It came when a German rocket gun knocked out a tank of the Negro unit. The crew dismounted, brought out the .50 calibre and .30 calibre machine guns, crawled under their tanks for protection, and continued to blast away at the enemy. 12-7-44

There was an occasion when Sergeant Warren G. H. Creecy, of Corpus Christi, Texas, a tank commander, climbed up on the rear of his tank which had been immobilized by anti-tank fire, and held an enemy force at bay with his own anti-aircraft gun, while protecting the advance of an infantry group.

The unit moved out from Athianville for its first action at six o'clock on the morning of November 8, as part of a task force, which was operating in two columns. Athianville is approximately 14 miles east of Nancy. This task force consisted of tank destroyers, infantry, engineers and medics, with units of the Negro tank battalion. It was divided into two columns, with their ultimate objective being a town some twenty miles away, beyond the edge of the dense Forest de Bride.

The two columns moved out for the attack, and in short order captured Vic-sur-Seille and Moyenvic, two strongly defended towns which skirted a German rail supply route leading from the Saar Basin. They secured crossings over two canals. These towns were some fifteen to eighteen miles east of Nancy, and constituted the German frontline defenses at that point. Here the forces began to meet with siffer opposition.

After securing these two towns, the next task was to move on to Morville, a town some four miles beyond Vic-sur-Seille. Splitting up here, one column moved toward Morville for the attack.

It was here that they ran into their most stubborn opposition of the drive, for here he Germans had constructed a two-mile-long anti-tank ditch in anticipation of the offensive. They had reenforced this tank barrier with staggered concrete pill-boxes, completely covered with earth and with rocket launchers and bazooka teams dug in in strength.

Facing Morville, which was at the entrance to the Forest de Bride, the columns met these obstructions, and Company B was halted by pill-box opposition at the edge of the woods. Company C, commanded by Captain McHenry, on the left flank, moved up the anti-tank ditch, where it encountered fierce opposition. With Company B halted, the German guns in the center were turned on Company C, and immobilized the unit for a while. Company C finally retired the position. 12-7-44

Assault Platoon

During this action, the crack assault platoon, with 105-mm howitzers commanded by First Lieutenant Charles Gates of Topeka, Kansas, a Hampton Institute alumnus, moved up to support these two companies. It shelled the German positions in the woods. The 81-mm mortar platoon, commanded by Second Lieutenant James C. Lightfoot of Washington, D. C., also moved into the action and pounded the Germans. Elements of the Fourth Armored Division, equipped with bull-dozer tanks and flame-throwers, also moved in, and the positions were finally taken.

Captain McHenry's company saw the hardest fighting. 12-7-44

All units gave a good account of themselves. Company C knocked out approximately 18 enemy anti-tank guns, Company B knocked out ten, and Lieutenant Gates' assault platoon knocked out six German armored vehicles and two pill-boxes.

After passing Morville, which they had practically destroyed, the columns moved on to Hamport, four miles farther east, where units of Companies B and C reached the town.

Meanwhile, Company A, commanded by Captain Dave Williams, of wants."

"We have not yet faced the painful fact that whatever the problem is concerning white people and colored people, it will be found in the ideas and feelings which we white people have about ourselves and our color," she concluded.

NEGRO TROOPS SWARM OVER LEYTE BEACH

Defender-Chicago
11-4-44

Defender Scribe Lands In Philippines With Invading Soldiers

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN THE PHILIPPINES—Up and down the entire Leyte beachhead from Palo to Tacloban, thousands of Negro troops are hard at work consolidating the big push into the Philippines by General MacArthur's armies.

Coming ashore six hours after the first assault troops, the Negro soldiers have performed Herculean tasks under Jap air raids—and not without casualties.

When the first troop and freight-laden Liberty ship pulled into the dock at Tacloban, capital of Leyte, Wednesday afternoon, a Negro-officered company, commanded by Lt. Elisha Burno of Hartsville, S. C., from the Southwest Pacific's most famous port battalion, was on hand to unload it.

The scene on the dock, untouched by our bombers and somehow left intact by the fleeing Japs, was the strangest these veterans of almost three years' overseas service have witnessed in the Pacific.

Pretty Filipino girls in gay, print dresses, clean and stiffly starched, and men in shorts, white duck trousers and vari-colored open-neck shirts, carrying American and Philippine flags, were on hand to greet the vessel. 11-4-44

Color, Beauty, Laughter

There was color and beauty and laughter, there were cries of "Victory," and the universally understood "V" for Victory finger symbol. The reception was spontaneous and the enthusiastic Filipinos had to be forced off the dock to avoid an accident as ropes were tossed over the side and the 10,000-tonner made fast.

The holiday atmosphere, however, belied the great danger with which the atmosphere was charged. Just a few hours earlier, the strongest attempt yet made by the Japs to bomb this place since the Americans took over, had been successfully fought off by swarms of our fighters.

For almost an hour our strong anti-aircraft batteries and fighter planes staged a demonstration which spoke clearly of our determination to stay here.

Several Jap Bombers Downed

One of the several Jap bombers which went down under the furious American barrage, zoomed over a Liberty ship in the Bay where men from another port company, commanded by Lt. Elbert R. Bishop of Washington, D. C., were at work. The Jap aircraft crashed into another vessel, setting it afire. One officer and two enlisted men from the outfit were among the injured.

Simultaneously, another Jap dive bomber, which escaped, killed a Negro soldier in a strafing raid of a bivouac, and even while the ship was being made fast to the dock, our ack-ack guns opened up on another Jap plane hovering overhead. 11-4-44

Despite the danger of the situation, Lt. Walter B. Seagraves of Los Angeles, led his men aboard the vessel to begin unloading. It was correctly anticipated that the Japs would make an early effort to bomb the dock and knock out the ship.

A constant watch was maintained at the ship's guns and several hundred yards offshore a small, heavily armed vessel kept an alert watch up and down the beach Bofors, with their crews scanning the skies, stood ready for an enemy threat from the air.

Indifferent To Danger

The Negro troops went to work with an indifference to the lurking danger that bespoke their courage and long experience in similar situations. It was these same men who withstood the fire from Japanese cruisers and destroyers while they were unloading a ship at Milne Bay in 1942.

This is the same company which suffered more than a score of casualties when Jap aircraft strafed and bombed them at Finschafen in January of this year. Their heroism on that occasion resulted in a general commendation from the company and bronze stars for Lt. Hampson H. Field of Cleveland, Ohio, then in command, and for two enlisted men, T-Sgt. Eugene Stewart, 5314 South Parkway, Chicago, and Sgt. R. D. O. Cross of Sherman, Texas.

Japs Bomb Dock, Ship

But an even more daring thing was to be done this time, in spite of the almost assured attempt of the Japs to blast the dock, where unloading of the vessel was to continue throughout the night.

The bright lights required for the operation would make the dock and ship perfect targets for Jap airmen. In spite of nine alerts during the night when lights were turned off and work brought to a complete standstill, with a total loss of three hours—the men had unloaded 125 tons by daylight.

Lts. Robert L. Rimmer of Detroit, who was later transferred to Lt. Bishop's company, and Lt. Welton C. A. Biggs of Suffolk, Va., shared night shifts. 11-4-44

Thursday, however, the Japs really turned on the heat and three times within an hour they bombed and strafed the vicinity of the docks. One bomb tore a large hole in the dock and two more Negro soldiers were injured.

Right after the raid in which the two men were injured, S-Sgt Robert J. Hampton, Cincinnati, in charge of the detail unloading the ship and Sgts. Isaac McGee, Orange Texas, and Dehomer Moore, Paris Texas, said the men are taking the whole thing calmly.

"Not Going To Stop Us"

"We're not going to let this thing stop us," Hampton declared. "We have got a good record up to date and the boys are determined not to let Tojo mess up that record."

Since the arrival on D-Day of Lt. Bishop's company at White Beach, troops' equipment, supplies and rations have been pouring in at an inconceivable rate, and in goodly proportion, Negro troops are being landed.

Negro troops have been observed from Palo to Tacloban performing almost every conceivable service. Task ducks, driven by Negroes, are bounding over the waters of Baya Palo and Tacloban carrying out cans of beans, stew, soup, milk and army trucks are bouncing in the cities of Palo Bay officered by Lts. Clarence T. Laws; Leon Weston, Miami; ban and intermediate b over the rough roads. Negro truck New Orleans; and like the others, are drivers in the Joseph Kimbrough, Chicago, and theatre—are moving tons of sup- Berry Slaten, Los Angeles, has tak- share of sight-seeing, so plies. Negro ordnance companies en over the distribution of rations lecting and friend-makin are setting up ammunition depots at one point. Vehicle drivers are pitching in to help civilians lug to their homes with heavy gen- erosity, our soldiers are passing highly prized 50-lb. bags of rice which the Japs neglected to take with them and no Filipino need walk if there's an Army vehicle going in his direction.

An all-Negro railhead company. Troops Enjoy Sightseeing 11-4-44

The Filipinos are a very grateful and friendly people and so are the American soldiers. Between the two, it's like "old home week" as they saunter through the narrow, unpaved streets, admiring the smiling, bashful girls, acknowledging the salutes of the men with cigarettes and distributing chewing gum, candy, chocolate and coins to the children. 11-4-44

The soldiers are invited into the modest homes by hospitable householders for a cup of tea and a chat. The gesture is highly appreciated.

Strange to the Americans—who, by comparison with the small Filipinos, look like giants—are the thatched bungalows the bakyas which look like wooden shower shoes with embroidered velvet straps chenelas slippers, woven from palm leaves; straw hats which look like inverted funnels; two-wheeled, oxen-drawn carts; Filipinos balancing huge loads on their heads; Filipino flags; small, poorly stocked, dimly lighted shops and streets with odd names—like Padre Gomes, Avenida Rizal, Calle Real and Juan Luna.

But familiar to the Americans are innumerable beauty parlors, school buildings, Kolynos toothpaste ads; traffic signs, reading "Slow Down, School Area;" doctors' and lawyers' shingles, public buildings and American flags.

If it weren't for the persistence of the Jap fliers and the Army jobs which leave but little leisure time, the boys over here would be quite content to remain for the duration.

'Master Race' Idea Forgotten

Nazis Run From French Sengalese

COLUMBIA, S. C. — (ANP) — The "master race" theory of the German soldiers disappears like magic when faced with the daring and capability of colored Allied troops, T. Sgt. Walter Melichi Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Malichi of Bennetsville, S. C., and just back from France on furlough said while visiting in Columbia Wednesday.

"I have seen Germans, fully armed, run away like the devil upon being confronted with colored soldiers," Sgt. Malichi continued. Most feared by the Germans are Senegalese. French colonial troops who, the Germans contend, delight in cutting off their heads and ears as retaliation for brutalities inflicted upon their less fortunate comrades who fell into German hands in the ill-fated battle for France back in 1940.

World's Best Soldiers

"The Senegalese," the veteran said, "are beyond doubt the world's best soldiers. They are plenty tough and I am very glad we are on the same side."

T. Sgt. Malichi's outfit is the 320th AA Balloon battalion, the army's only such outfit. On D-Day, it was assigned to fly barrage balloons from the invasion convoy and captured areas on the beachhead to prevent strafing by enemy planes at an effective altitude. "We were the first all-colored outfit to reach Normandy on D-Day," Malichi boasts.

For its part in the invasion, on the Normandy beachhead, in Brittany and in Belgium, the outfit has been cited by its commanding officers, Gen. Timberlake and Gen. Eisenhower. It is back here for a few days of re-equipping before being sent into another theater of operation. 12-29-44

Superior To Germans

T. Sgt. Malichi believes the American soldier and his ally in Britain far superior to the German soldier. German soldiers are kept sogged in dope and alcoholic drinks, he said. When without the influence of these stimulants, they surrender in large numbers. "I have seen them slipping away from their own outfits with white flags or upraised hands over to our men to surrender," he continued.

T. Sgt. Malichi and his fellow soldiers have high praise for the reception tendered them by both the French and the British, the British going the French perhaps a fraction better in their treatment of colored soldiers. Both, he said, seem quite puzzled over our race question and try hard to make the colored soldier feel himself appreciated and loved.

92nd Given Brief Relief from Battle

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy 12-30-44

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY. (By Cable, Censored).—With the past week-end activities of the 92nd Division in this sector of the 5th Army front still limited to reconnaissance work, troops may get, in a measure, continued respite from battle for the holidays.

Outstanding among the recent patrols is one three days ago led by First Lt. William E. Porter of Lima Ohio.

T/Sgt. Howard W. Edwards of Bridgeton, N.J.; Sgt. Oscar M. Wilson, Avondale, Pa.; Pfcs. Isaiah Carroll, Watha, N.C.; Linwood M. Flowers, Newport News, Va., and Pvt. Nelson E. Durham, Greensboro, N.C., were members of it.

Called an Example

So successfully executed was its mission that Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, division commander, extended special commendation and termed the work of this patrol the type expected of others in his command during future operations.

Porter's patrol, operating in the vicinity of the town of Massa on December 14, encountered two machine gun positions before reaching its objective. The patrol destroyed one with hand grenades and silenced the other though both were dug in in positions between them and the objective.

For silencing this opposition and completing the mission rather than turning back after it faced heavy enemy fire, the patrol won commendation.

Elsewhere along the front, activity is quiet while all GI's await the promised turkey dinner for Christmas. 12-30-44

Civilians Laud Regiment

The infantry regiment I accompanied overseas last March was cited this week by the civilian population of the town in which it was once based. In a letter of commendation to Lt. Gen. Joseph A. Moore, commanding general of the theatre, the mayor of the town in the south of Italy told of the typical high esteem the officers and men have created among the civiilan populace in areas in Italy where they have served. The letter stated in part:

"Under the wise guidance of the commanding colonel, all components of the unit, officers and soldiers, have demonstrated the finest expression of human solidarity by giving aid and assistance, particularly of sanitary nature, to the whole civilian population.

Aid to Poor Cited

"These attentions and the medical care granted have left in the heatrs of all my citizens the most profound gratitude for their thoughtfulness, especially to the poor people who needed the most attention.

"Therefore, I desire to make known to you these expressions from our heart for such extreme solidarity and also to express the best wishes for victory by the Allies Armies."

Santa Claus came early to a 28-year-old Washington janitor, when he found himself the unexpected heir to $150,000 in cash and fifteen pieces of real estate this week.

Women Of Italian Town Fight By Side Of 92nd Infantrymen

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN

Guide War Correspondent

[Copyright. Reproduction (forbidden)

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN THE GOTHIC LINE IN ITALY — (Via Wireless) — The favor with which the 92nd division infantrymen have been received by the natives of Liberated Italy was never more graphically illustrated than in recent fierce fighting in the mountains north of Via Reggio when, in the quaint town of Gustigliano, the gallant Italian women volunteered to assist in getting supplies to our units when the terrain proved too tough for jeeps or mules. 11-4-44

Women of all ages — pretty senoritas and senoras, old women and young girls—daily assisted in the supply problem. They carried packs of ammunition and food to troops holding vital mountain points. The women seemed delighted and happy to help despite the fact that they toiled under the fire of German artillery.

When our troops occupied the town, the commanding officer was informed that German patrols were frequently seen at a point high above the rocky terrain. The women advised the 92nd officer to station troops in that sector to capture prisoners but the commanding officer explained that it would be difficult to supply the troops in such a position. 11-4-44

VOLUNTEERED TO HELP

Whereupon, the women volunteered to carry the necessary supplies up to these men in what is believed to be the first time in the history of the Italian campaign that native women actually worked with fighting troops.

As these women filed across the rocky terrain with these supplies, we saw a profound and amazing picture of cooperation which will become a significant part of the proud history of this famous Buffalo division.

The men of the 92nd will never forget the women of Gustigliano who fought beside them. 11-4-44

MOUNTAIN BATTLE 11-4-44

Meanwhile, a bitter battle for Mt. Strettoia, less than five miles south of Massa off Highway One, raged most of the past week with the 92nd combat units continually boring into fanatical Germans who are now aided by their strongest remaining ally, General Bad Weather.

A portion of the mountain objective was taken and held by a platoon under command of 2nd Lt. Horner and was later consolidated by the main body of our troops. The entire unit finally moved into this forward area and continued its attack on the mountain from this position. 11-4-44

Supply the forcers under the heavy fire laid down by Kraut artillerymen continues to be the major problem and some of the most exciting adventures of the war occur daily as men toil along the hazardous supply route in full observation of the Germans.

BLUEFIELD GRID STAR

Lt. John Flippen, of Bluefield W. Va., former Bluefield College football star, now an officer in an infantry cannon company with the 92nd, told this reporter that "Our Big Guns are steadily blasting those mountain positions. Those Nazi rats have got to leave their holes before long. Yes sir, something's got to break and I don't think it will be us." 11-4-44

However the Jerries continue to shoot back peppering the supply routes and dropping heavy shells into rear areas. We must be careful with trucks and even jeeps because the Germans start shelling when they observe the slightest movement. It is now evident that the Krauts will fight for every inch of road to La Spezia which the 92nd is determined they will capture.

STILL CARRY FIGHT

After three months of the heaviest frontline fighting, these heroic tan soldiers are still carrying the fight to the German supermen. Despite their casualties, our soldiers continue pressure on the fanatical Krauts as blistering fighting rages spasmodically in the mountains dominating Route One.

The combat infantrymen of this courageous outfit pau e now and then to lick their wounds and then wade right in and start slugging again. 11-4-44

On their right, the Brazilians recently secured two more strategic heights. Elsewhere on the Anzio stalemate. The Fifth Army front, mud and the Krauts are hoping to gain precipitous rampaging streams built up by a time in which to improve their defenses and install more heavy downpour of rain, have barbed wire and minefields. brought a virtual standstill to All evidence points to the fact offensive operations. that this forgotten front may

FORGOTTEN FRONT

Taking advantage of the bad continue providing the bloodiest weather, the Germans are firing battles of the war. more artillery than ever before in Italian campaign, including

NAZIS CALL LEADER OF HEROIC U.S. BATTALION "BRONZE DEVIL"

Press—Scimitar Memphis, Tenn. 12-8-44

WITH THE BRONZE DEVIL —WITH THE TANK DESTROYERS ON FRONT LINE IN FRANCE, WITH THE THIRD U. S. ARMY, Nov. 20—Here is the indirect fire team of Company A, of a Tank Destroyer Battalion, first, and, so far, only Negro unit of its type in front line action anywhere in the Army. The team was about to fire for the record at a range in England, just before sailing for the front line assignment it now holds with the 95th Division. In the picture, reading from left to right:

Pvt. Thurston B. Smith, St. Louis, Mo.; Pfc. William T. King, Memphis, Tenn.; Tec. 5 William A. Walker, Harlan, Ky., and Tec. 5 Levitus DeLoney, of Freeport, L. I., N. Y. All are now in the front lines in France. Company A is commanded by Capt. Beauregard S. King, of Birmingham, Ala.

Soldiers Disappointed in Liberian Yule Celebration

AFRO—American 12-30-44 132 Lt. Md.

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO Representative on NNPA African Commission

MONROVIA, Liberia — (By Cable)—Drums rolled in Liberia for Christ's natal day. They began at dusk on Christmas Eve, paused spasmodically for breathers during the daylight hours and resumed at nightfall.

The day itself began with the sun blazing hot as if to dissuade any ideas about a white Christmas. There were no toys for children. What's more, there are differences in customs anyhow.

Dances with Natives

In Krootown, we sat on benches and heard the Christmas story told twice at one time, for the minister spoke a sentence in English and an interpreter at his side spoke in the Kroo dialect.

It was a long and hazardous business, but God's purposes were served and the dual sermon was new to none except this correspondent.

In Bassatown, we danced around two drummers, singing in dialect and shuffling our feet in dust—mine were the only ones in shoes. We sang:

"All friends come for this happy time,
Who cannot dance let him drum;
Who cannot sing, let him dance;
In this happy time must everyone be happy."

The Women in Bandannas

Women wore bandannas on their heads and several yards of gingham pulled tight at the waist and dragging the ground — nothing more.

The men wore twill knickers or colorful muslin pants looking like pajamas. On their drums they beat figures that would make Cozy Cole put his sticks away in shame, while we shuffled on into the night beneath a moon so big and beautiful that it really should be censored. 12-30-44

After midnight, as we trudged homeward, footsore and weary, the glaring white office building of Ashmun Street made ghostly silhouettes against dark sky, and the singing of orthodox carols in a Catholic church on the edge of Mamba Point made a strange cacophony where sounds clashed with drums and native chants.

Thermometers Stay at 85

Then, at one corner were serenaders, a man, his guitar, and five women. One woman, 225 pounds if an ounce, wore a swallowtail coat and silk hat. Discordantly they sang "Joy to the World."

The town went dark at 1 a.m., when the power plant shut down but the thermometers remained static at 85 degrees while the drums continued to roll and natives sang their monotonous monosyliabic cants. 12-30-44

Soldiers Disappointed

During the day, GI Joe came to town, found a few idle lassies, sat on beaches and ate "Jolif rice." But he complained that the whole thing was a poor misrepresentation of Christmas.

White buddies kidded them about being over here so long that they will be eligible for citizenship papers soon. With thirty-two months to their credit, there was more truth than jest in the statement.

Seen in American uniform here are: 12-30-44

Captains Fred Douglass, Montclair, N.J.; William Cleland, Durham; Harry Williams, Martinsville, Va.; John Washington, Chicago; James Nicken D.C.; M/S Briscoe, D.C.;

Sgts. Craig Cleveland and John Garrett, Houston;

T/5's Earl Ware, Harrisonburg, Va., James Washington, Jacksonville; Frederick Williams, Newport News, Va.; Cleophas Walker, Joseph Long, and John Johnson, all of D.C.; Vincent Pierson, Chicago; Walter Hodnett, Danville, Va.; Ray Helm, Detroit; William Brown, Shreveport, La.; Odell Lipscomb, Chicago; Sgt. Richard Short, St. Louis.

Baltimoreans here are Albert Tatum, George Marshall and William Green, 1523 E. Fayette Street.

Have Kept Pace With Units Of More Experience

Daily World—Atlanta Ga. 11-18-44

Negro Officers Offer Problem

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—(A N P)—While the commanding general of this first Negro combat unit to meet the Germans in the European theater reports that their development and progress has been normal and satisfactory, the boys of the 92nd division let it be known that they object to special attention because of their race.

To a man, they wish their battlefield exploits to receive the same consideration as other units, no more no less. Aware of the great historical nature of their work as American Negro soldiers, the men who form the fighting vanguard of the 92nd division have been in the front-line for more than two months and have successfully kept pace with more experienced divisions in some of the more fiery sectors around Bologna.

All of this has been done, according to the testimony of the officers and men, with the same degree of fate and fortune that generally accompany and military unit. The 92nd has had its losses. On the other hand, it has its heroes. One of the men is up for citation for having killed 13 Germans with his damaged carbine. 11-18-44

While Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth army, will not admit that there is a problem of race relations within his army, the sinister hand of race prejudice overshadows the unit. It is there, although every effort has been made to push it out of sight. Its hand writing is on the wall in at least two places.

First, white officers are an issue within the 92nd division. At present, all officer replacements are white. There are many Negro company officers, captains and lieutenants, but according to the colonel, who is a native of Connecticut but recently of Virginia, the time is far distant when Negro junior officers will outrank white junior officers.

Secondly there is the question of MPs. The military police problem has been solved by having one white and one Negro MP patrol border areas together. The basic principle is that the white man handles white offenders and the Negro handles Negroes. Negro MPs do not carry concealed knives.

According to Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, Luray, Va., the 92nd division is a military and not a sociological problem. Negro officers are stressing that race is secondary to patriotism. They say that they want above all to be regarded as American fighting men, but some of the enlisted men confusingly place more emphasis on race pride than Americanism.

To Gen'l Clark

Army Point System Will Keep Negro GIs Overseas

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga. 12-9-44

Four Factors On Rating Cards To Determine Status

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—Negro soldiers serving in non-combat outfits and who have been overseas just as long as combat soldiers will not enjoy the same opportunities for being demobilized the war department revealed on Thursday.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson told his news conference that discharges will be affected by the number of points earned through service in combat, he stated. "On the adjusted service rating card" will be issued to all enlisted personnel after the defeat of Germany. On this card will be scored the following four factors that will determine priority of separation:

1. Service credit—based upon the number of months of army service in a total number of months of service since Sept. 16, 1940.

2. Overseas credit—based upon the number of months served overseas.

3. Combat credit—based upon the first and each additional award to the individual of the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service cross, Pacific war Service cross, Silver Star, Distinguished Flying cross, Soldier's medal, Bronze Star medal, Air medal, Purple Heart, and Bronze Service stars (battle participation stars).

4. Parenthood credit—which gives the United credit for each dependent child under 18 years up to a limit of three children.

The value of the point credits are to be announced after the cessation of hostilities in Europe. In the meantime, the point values are being kept under continuous study. The total score will be used to select surplus men from the theaters overseas and in the United States.

Patterson had been asked how this system will affect men who, without choice, have been required to serve in the service units, no longer active to the Pacific war zone, or from the United States. The plan developed after September. First, priority will be the basis of a system of points, earned through service in combat, service that is clearly credited on the service cards. The man who has been developed in accordance with the feelings of the troops themselves. The man in the combat unit gets credit by service, but the combat service has an advantage," he added

47m-1944

Foreign Service

NAZIS CALL LEADER OF HEROIC U.S. BATTALION "BRONZE DEVIL"

Negro—St. Louis Grp. 12-8-44

12-8-44

WITH THE BRONZE DEVIL—WITH THE TANK DESTROYERS ON FRONT LINE IN FRANCE, WITH THE THIRD U. S. ARMY, Nov. 20—Here is the indirect fire team of Company A, of a Tank Destroyer Battalion, first, and, to far, only Negro unit of its type in front line action anywhere in the Army. The team was about to fire for the record at a range in England, just before sailing for the front line assignment it now holds with the 95th Division. In the picture, reading from left to right:

Pvt. Thurston B. Smith, St. Louis, Mo.; Pfc. William T. King, Memphis, Tenn.; Tec. 5 William A. Walker, Harlan, Ky., and Tec. 5 Levitus DeLoney, of Freeport, L. I., N. Y. All are now in the front lines in France. Company A is commanded by Capt. Beauregard S. King, of Birmingham, Ala.

Soldiers Disappointed in Liberian Yule Celebration

AFRO-American

12-30-44

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO Representative on NNPA African Commission

MONROVIA, Liberia — (By Cable)—Drums rolled in Liberia for Christ's natal day. They began at dusk on Christmas Eve, paused spasmodically for breathers during the daylight hours and resumed at nightfall.

The day itself began with the sun blazing hot as if to dissuade any ideas about a white Christmas. There were no toys for children. What's more, there are differences in customs anyhow.

Dances with Natives

In Krootown, we sat on benches and heard the Christmas story told twice at one time, for the minister spoke a sentence in English and an interpreter at his side spoke in the Kroo dialect.

It was a long and hazardous business, but God's purposes were served and the dual sermon was new to none except this correspondent.

In Bassatown, we danced around two drummers, singing in dialect and shuffling our feet in dust—mine were the only ones in shoes. We sang:

"All friends come for this happy time,
Who cannot dance let him drum;
Who cannot sing, let him dance;
In this happy time must everyone be happy."

The Women in Bandannas

Women wore bandannas on their heads and several yards of gingham pulled tight at the waist and dragging the ground — nothing more.

The men wore twill knickers or colorful muslin pants looking like pajamas. On their drums they beat figures that would make Cozy Cole put his sticks away in shame, while we shuffled on into the night beneath a moon so big and beautiful that it really should be censored.

12-30-44

After midnight, as we trudged homeward, footsore and weary, the glaring white office building of Ashmun Street made ghostly silhouettes against dark sky, and the singing of orthodox carols in a Catholic church on the edge of Mamba Point made a strange cacophony where sounds clashed with drums and native chants.

Thermometers Stay at 85

Then, at one corner were serenaders, a man, his guitar, and five women. One woman, 225 pounds if an ounce, wore a swallowtail coat and silk hat. Discordantly they sang "Joy to the World."

The town went dark at 1 a.m., when the power plant shut down but the thermometers remained static at 85 degrees while the drums continued to roll and natives sang their monotonous monosyllabic cants.

12-30-44

Soldiers Disappointed

During the day, GI Joe came to town, found a few idle lassies, sat on beaches and ate "Jolif rice." But he complained that the whole thing was a poor misrepresentation of Christmas.

White buddies kidded them about being over here so long that they will be eligible for citizenship papers soon. With thirty-two months to their credit, there was more truth than jest in the statement.

Seen in American uniform here are:

12-30-44

Captains Fred Douglass, Montclair, N.J.; William Cleland, Durham; Harry Williams, Martinsville, Va.; John Washington, Chicago; James Nicken D.C.; M/S Briscoe, D.C.;

Sgts. Craig Cleveland and John Garrett, Houston;

T/5's Earl Ware, Harrisonburg, Va., James Washington, Jacksonville; Frederick Williams, Newport News, Va.; Cleophas Walker, Joseph Long, and John Johnson, all of D.C.; Vincent Pierson, Chicago; Walter Hodnett, Danville, Va.; Ray Helm, Detroit; William Brown, Shreveport, La.; Odell Lipscomb, Chicago; Sgt. Richard Short, St. Louis.

Baltimoreans here are Albert Tatum, George Marshall and William Green, 1523 E. Fayette Street.

Have Kept Pace With Units Of Ga

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

11-18-44

More Experience Negro Officers Offer Problem

To Gen'l Clark

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—(A N P)—While the commanding general of this first Negro combat unit to meet the Germans in the European theater reports that their development and progress has been normal and satisfactory, the boys of the 92nd division let it be known that they object to special attention because of their race.

To a man, they wish their battlefield exploits to receive the same consideration as other units, no more no less. Aware of the great historical nature of their work as American Negro soldiers, the men who form the fighting vanguard of the 92nd division have been in the front-line for more than two months and have successfully kept pace with more experienced divisions, as some of the more fiery sectors around Bologna.

All of this has been done, according to the testimony of the officers and men, with the same degree of fate and fortune that generally accompany and military unit. The 92nd has had its losses. On the other hand, it has its heroes. One of the men is up for citation for having killed 13 Germans with his damaged carbine.

11-18-44

While Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth army, will not admit that there is a problem of race relations within his army, the sinister hand of race prejudice overshadows the unit. It is there, although every effort has been made to push it out of sight. Its hand writing is on the wall in at least two places.

First, white officers are an issue within the 92nd division. At present, all officer replacements are white. There are many Negro company officers, captains and lieutenants, but according to the colonel, who is a native of Connecticut but recently of Virginia, the time is far distant when Negro junior officers will outrank white junior officers.

Secondly there is the question of MPs. The military police problem has been solved by having one white and one Negro MP patrol border areas together. The basic principle is that the white man handles white offenders and the Negro handles Negroes. Negro MPs do not carry concealed knives.

According to Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, Luray, Va., the 92nd division is a military and not a sociological problem. Negro officers are stressing that race is secondary to patriotism. They say that they want above all to be regarded as American fighting men, but some of the enlisted men confusingly place more emphasis on race pride than Americanism.

Army Point System Will Keep Negro GI's Overseas

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

12-9-44

Four Factors On Rating Cards To Determine Status

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—Negro soldiers serving in non-combat outfits and who have been overseas just as long as those in combat soldiers will not enjoy the same opportunities for being mobilized, the war department revealed on Thursday.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson told his news conference that discharges will be affected by the campaign ribbons upon the basis of a system of points earned through service in combat. The system is one, he said, which was developed in accordance with the feelings of troops themselves. The combat service has an advantage," he added.

Patterson had been asked how this system will affect men who, without choice, have been required to serve in the service units, no longer active to the zone. The plan developed after months of study takes into account all factors. The plan stars (battle participation stars).

12-10-44

life will start in the United credit for each dependent child under 18 years up to a limit of three children.

The value of the point credits are to be announced after the cessation of hostilities in Europe. In the meantime, the point values are being kept under continuous study. The total score will be used to select surplus men from the theaters overseas and in the United States.

"On the adjusted service rating card" will be issued to all enlisted personnel after the defeat of Germany. On this card will be scored the following four factors that will determine priority of separation:

1. Service credit—based upon the total number of months of army service since Sept. 16, 1940.
2. Overseas credit—based upon the number of months served overseas.
3. Combat credit—based upon the first and each additional award to the individual of the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service cross, the Pacific war Legion of Merit, Silver Star, Distinguished Flying cross, Soldier's medal, Bronze Star medal, Air medal, Purple Heart, and Bronze medal.
4. Parenthood credit—which gives credit upon the basis of a system of points earned through service in combat. The system is one, he said, which was developed in accordance with the feelings of troops themselves. The combat service has an advantage," he added.

Patterson had been asked how this system will affect men who, without choice, have been required to serve in the service units, no longer active to the zone. The plan developed after months of study takes into account all factors. The plan stars (battle participation stars).

12-10-44

life will start in the United credit for each dependent child under 18 years up to a limit of three children.

The value of the point credits are to be announced after the cessation of hostilities in Europe. In the meantime, the point values are being kept under continuous study. The total score will be used to select surplus men from the theaters overseas and in the United States.

General Clark Lauds Men Of 92nd; Awards Hero Medals

Pittsburgh Courier
Chicago Defender
Pittsburgh, Pa.
11-25-44

By HASKELL COHEN, Courier War Correspondent

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY—Comparing the Fifth Army to an unheralded football line that paved the way for its backs and the American and British troops in France to the stars who carried the ball over for a touchdown, Gen. Mark W. Clark lauded members of the Fifth Army highly in an impressive ceremony last Thursday at beautiful Montecatini, a bustling little center nestling at the foot of the Appenines.

The men were described as holding off the threatening line play of the best German troops in order to facilitate the broken field running of our fleet backs on the Eastern and Western fields of battle.

SIX WIN AWARDS

Among the numerous awards were six members of the 92nd division, including two Pittsburghers, Pfc. John S. Downer and T/Sgt. Joseph W. Fry.

Before presenting the awards, General Clark told the assembled men and women that he was glad to see colored troops of the 92nd among the honored. The variety of the Fifth Army troops, including colored boys, Japanese-Americans, Indians and Brazilians, only goes to show how harmoniously the unit is battling a common enemy, the general said.

FIVE COMMISSIONED

Five boys who had shown their mettle in battle were advanced from the ranks of enlisted men and promoted to second lieutenants in the field as natural born leaders who knew how to head a platoon.

In addition, Pfc. Downer and Lt. Cunningham C. Bryant received bronze stars for heroic service in action. Downer went to the rescue of a staff sergeant on September 12. Their platoon had been deployed in a northward flanking attack and had almost gained the crest of a hill when the sergeant was hit in the stomach by an enemy sniper. At the same time the rest of the squad was pinned down by machine gun fire. Despite this hazard Downer crawled forward to rescue the non-com and carried the sergeant to a point of evacuation.

Lieutenant Bryant, Clifton, Va., received the bronze star for meritorious service in combat, October 22, in Italy. As the leader of a platoon of combat engineers in support of an armored unit, Lieutenant Bryant was ordered to prepare a road with two blown bridges for passage of tanks. A bypass for the first bridge was accomplished. However, in starting with the armored bull-dozer for the second bridge, Bryant was subjected to heavy artillery fire. He refused to withdraw and despite the heavy shelling, finished the second bridge two hours before dawn.

The promotion of five sergeants in the field to second lieutenants marked the first time that the men of the 92nd have been so honored. The officers commissioned by General Clark are T/Sgt. Frank Whisonant, Washington, D. C.; First Sgt. Gilbert Boothe, Forsythe, Ga.; T/Sgt. Joseph W. Fry, Homestead, Pa.; T/Sgt. William Hicks, Cleveland, Ohio, and First Sgt. Joseph [illegible], Boston, Mass.

Warrant Officer Gayle in Belgium With Transportation Corps

The Louisiana Weekly
New Orleans, La.

Operate Railroad Near German Border

12-16-44

With the First U. S. Army in Belgium.—Amid the huge mountains of supplies of all kinds intended for use by front line units of this Army, now across the German border, the all-Negro 3170th QM Service Company is one of the two companies of a QM Group assigned to the operation of a large railway yard, which was recently used by the Germans as a marshalling center. It now serves the First Army as one of its distribution points, receiving freight by rail from the French coast over routes opened by the Army's Transportation Corps.

In the distance can be seen the ridge which separates this part of Belgium from the present-day borders of Germany. Once this same station was actually in Germany, but the area was divorced from the Reich after the World War.

The QM Group is under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Kenneth E. Keverin, white, of Twin Falls, Idaoo.

The Negro warrant officers operate in Group Headquarters. They are warrant officers, junior grade Robert E. Gayle, of 1418 Eagle Street, New Orleans, Louisiana, a Dillard University graduate, and who also studied business administration at Atlanta University, and Henry G. Crockett, of 1303 East 4th Street, Waterloo, Iowa.

Warrant Office Gayle is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Gayle, of 1418 Eagle Street. He has a brother, S/Sgt. Irving C. Gayle, somewhere in Italy.

12-16-44

WARRANT OFFICER
ROBERT E. GAYLE

Unit Removes 2742 Mines From Normandy Beaches

Bystander—Des Moines, Iowa
11-9-44

With U. S. Forces in France—Mine detector squads of a general service engineer regiment operating on the Normandy beachheads removed the amazing total of 2742 mines and booby-traps in eight days, August 4 to 12, the War Department announced this week.

The existence of these pernicious devices proved that danger and death lurked on the beaches for sometime after D-Day to hamper the work of Negro Quartermaster and port battalion units which worked furiously to keep supplies flowing to the First and Third Armies.

Make Beaches Safe

Making the beaches safe for the working groups was a big job, but the Negro engineers pitched in with all they had. The success of their efforts was reflected in the gigantic strides made by American forces following the break-through at St. Lo.

Now they are starring in another role in the great drama of this war as it is being unfolded over the rolling terrain of France, for this regiment has been doing its share in putting the French railroads back in shape for operations. Thus, the lengthy American supply lines are being further augmented by railroad rolling stock.

11-9-44

Modern Trail Blazers

Mile after mile of steel rails have been laid by these khak-iclad modern trail blazers. They have put tracks back in line and installed new heavy steel rails, manufactured in America, all along the excellent roadbeds on which French tracks were once used by Germans. The Nazis were unable to take full advantage of them because of the strafing tactics of Ninth Air Force planes which literally blasted them off the tracks. The precision bombing of the Eighth Air Force heavies also took its toll, and many water tanks, stations, and junction points, which were intended for marshalling points by Germans, were shot to pieces.

Two Negro officers are among the regimental staff personnel. One is Chaplain (Captain) James C. Myers, Augusta, Georgia. The other is Chief Warrant Officer Herman Williamson, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, who has been with the unit since its activation at Camp Pickett, Virginia, in July 1942.

12-16-44

Terrors of War Momentarily Forgotten As A Cappella GI Choir Sings at Front

AFRO-American—Baltimore, Md.

By OLLIE STEWART
AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in Germany

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH NINTH ARMY IN GERMANY—(By Cable)—I was in the medical aid station getting a typhus shot when a group began to assemble. When they started singing, I forgot the sting of the needle and quit rubbing my sore arm.

There were only nine men in the choral ensemble of the artillery battalion here, but never in my life have I heard more beautiful music.

Without a piano or any other musical instrument, these artillerymen, who formerly sang in college choirs, sang their hearts out for sheer joy of it.

Preparing for Christmas

The director, Cpl. Philip Woods, Charleston, W.Va., who learned music at Bluefield State College and was a member of the a cappella choir there for three years, was rehearsing the singers for a program for Christmas music.

"We hope to give a program for the soldiers here in Germany. Would you like to hear the song we sang in California when our battalion surgeon, Lt. James Robinson, got married?"

Unashamed of Tears

I said yes, and the group sang "Where My Caravan Has Rested." Maybe combat conditions have made me a softie, but when the music brought tears to my eyes, I did not feel ashamed. It was that Guns were chamming away out side and none of us were sure we would be alive next day, but for the moment we were able to forget the terrors of war. It occurred to me that men like these will be in post-war everything them.

The singers included:

Cpl. Langston Lewis, Huntington, W.Va., West Virginia State; Cpl. Donald Jacobs, Little Rock, Jarvis College; Pfc. Conaley Garret, St. Augustine, Tex., Prairie View; Sgt. Robert Pruitt, Huntsville, Tex., Bishop; Pfc. John Powe, New Orleans, Dillard; Cpl. James Turner, Tyler, Tex., Texas College;

Cpl. Walter Parks, Detroit, University

47m-1944

Foreign Service

GI Yarns In Burma Full Of Dynamite, Scribe Finds

Chicago, Ill.
Chicago Defender
11-25-44

FIRST WRITER IN FAR EAST

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender War Correspondent)

ALONG THE LEDO ROAD—Darkness had fallen and rain was pounding on the tent-top. One GI idly fiddling a "mosquito bomb" sent a stream of killer-fluid up toward the light bulb where insects kept buzzing about while the rest of us were lounging on anything we could find which resembled a chair.

We were in the quarters of a chaplain of an engineer battalion—a group of GIs, the chaplain and myself. These men have been in the jungles for over two years building and maintaining the worst stretches of the Ledo Road, so it was inevitable that their conversation turn to some of their hair-raising experiences.

"Have you ever been on a dynamite-loaded runaway truck?" asked Pfc. Harry J. Whitlow of Baltimore, Md. "Well, I have."

"I had been carrying Diesel fuel all day long up to the point of the road which at that time was about six miles from the Burma border. I hadn't been able to get through with an ordinary truck so I was using a tractor to which I had attached a carrier. It was my last trip back and the sergeant had loaded the carrier to the top with dynamite. Then seven of my buddies climbed on the tractor with me.

Clutch Goes Out

"It was about midnight—pitch-black—and the only light to guide me was the dim glare of my headlights which carried about 25 feet. Just as I started to round a curve through the mountains, the steering clutch went bad and the tractor was out of control.

"I yelled to my buddies to jump and they lost no time in bailing out. I stood up on the foot-brakes, but it was too late. Over the cliff we went—plunging crazily down at least a hundred feet—tractor, dynamite and me. Every moment I expected to be blown into oblivion. And when, with a final jar, we reached the bottom of the ravine, I lost no time in getting out.

"I started up the side of the cliff as fast as I could go. But when I looked back, I saw that the lights were on and the motor was still running. Reluctantly I went back down to turn them off. That's the most scared I've ever been in my life."

DETON J. BROOKS

Chicago Defender war correspondent in the Far East who is the first colored scribe to enter the China-Burma-India theater of war. Here he is in Myitkyina, Burma, recently recaptured from the Japanese.

Blast Mountain Road

Another GI spoke up, recalling another incident with dynamite that ended in a tragedy. "A large piece of rock about 20 feet high was jutting out of the side of a mountain and overhanging the road. Our officers were afraid that it would break off and kill someone. So my company was ordered to blast it out.

"Maybe you don't know, but dynamiting takes a lot of skill, but if properly handled accidents are kept to a minimum. The expert can almost pick his position where the object he is blasting will fall.

"M-Sgt. William F. Wright, of Washington, D. C., who was head of the detail, saw that the holes were properly loaded and warned each man where to stand. But somehow, William Allen, Manhassett, N. Y., became confused and didn't go where he was sent. As a result he was killed by rock fragments."

A Real Hero

Sgt. Dennis Oliver walked into the tent and someone introduced him saying, "Now here's a hero."

"We were standing in the noon day chow line recently when we noticed that a supply basha (bamboo shack) was on fire. A couple of officers and some enlisted men went in to try to put it out unaware of what was in there.

"Oliver suddenly remembered that this basha housed a couple of boxes of TNT. He rushed through the flames and pulled that stuff out before it had a chance to explode. Sergeant Oliver has received a battalion commendation for his bravery in this instance."

"The worst experience I have ever had occurred during a movie," another soldier recounted. "It was a beautiful night, the first time during the entire week it hadn't rained. So all of my company was taking advantage to see a good show. Just about the middle of it we were suddenly jolted back to reality by machine gun and rifle bullets whizzing overhead.. It seemed as if a big hand smashed us to the ground, we hit mother earth so fast.

"No it wasn't the Nips. Chinese troops on night maneuvers had filtered into our clearing shooting at random before they discovered that the place was occupied by American troops."

"We had almost the same experience," another soldier recounted. "We were ordered to place our mess tent in a certain clearing which was near the Chinese rifle range. We were sitting down to chow one evening when we heard the tell-tale zing of machine gun bullets. Looking up we saw holes in the top of our mess tent. We got out of that place in a hurry."

It was getting late and the men began filtering out to go to bed and be ready for the next day to continue their life of isolation and boredom, oftimes sprinkled with a big dose of danger.

Included in the list of GIs met at this camp area are some Chicagoans: First Sgt. John A. Marshall, Cpl. Harry Cladwell, Pfc. James Woodson, and Pvt. Robert Ryce.

From other states: S-Sgts. Wayne H. Bell, Wichita Falls, Tex.; Thomas Jefferson, Wabash, Ind.; Sgts. Ernest J. Barnes, Ensley, Ala.; William V. Scroggins, East Chicago, Ind.; Cpls. William J. Bowen, of Washington, D. C.; Osedena King, Greensboro, N. C.; Vincent E. Johnson, New York City; Pfc. Harry Robinson, Bluefield, West Virginia; Pvt. Albert Harvey, of St. Louis, Mo.

Takes Exception To Article In Stars, Stripes

Atlanta Daily World — Ga.

Smear Letter On Race Troops Is Deplored

11-25-44

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — A personal letter from General Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force, to a lowly staff sergeant of a Negro Engineer General Service Regiment, in which the general acknowledged and agreed with the sergeant's protest of derogatory remarks about Negroes in an article appearing in an edition of the Stars and Stripes, servicemen's paper, has come to the attention of the NNPA.

The article appeared in a column called "The B Bag" of the Stars and Stripes. In this column, GI's are given the opportunity to express their thoughts on any subject. One signing himself "S-Sgt. H. W. A., Inf." wrote the following:

RAPS OUR BOYS

"Our outfit is composed of boys from North and South. We have often fought the Civil War over and over again in friendly arguments, but on one point we are agreed. The Negro soldier in this war is getting more credit than he desreves.

"He is, in the majority of cases, a rear-echelon cowboy who never saw the front lines. We have been on the front line since shortly after D-Day. Never have we seen a colored soldier on the front lines.

"We, the fighting doughboys, give credit where it is deserved. Even the medics bet their share of credit. It makes us mad to see a bunch of rear-echelon cowboys grabbing credit where they have done nothing to deserve it."

WRITES COMMANDER

Staff Sgt. George Woods, Jr., attached to an Engineer Regiment took exception to the piece and wrote a letter to General Eisenhower. After commending the general on his success in coordinating the allied forces into one gigantic fighting machine to crush the Nazi military forces, he cited the last two sentences of an official letter on the "Treatment of Negro Troops", which read: "The United States troops, either white or colored, must be considered as conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline and offenders must be promptly punished. In the interest of military efficiency, if for no other reason, isolated incidents of friction must be eliminated."

Sgt. Woods then told the General that the article referred to was detrimental to the morale of a group of fighters "who are putting forth every effort in their power

11-25-44

DEPLORES TATEMENT

"I am glad you invited my attention to an article that apparently was written in disregard of these principles."

Commenting on the General's to you by the people of to the War effort. I also agree that States and the other al- it is the duty of the good soldier ons. Remember that we to perform well whatever task may ou 100%." be given him in the front line or y, nine days later, the in the rear area. 11-25-44 wrote the Negro soldiers that our full military strength may be continued directed against the United Stations.

you have my sincere that the publication of statements 14th. I agree with you derogatory to the accompublication of statements in this war of any derogatory to the accom- group or race is harmful in this war of any group or race is harmful prime motives of recent race riots will enable you to successfully accomplish the task that has been American in America. "It is my sincere hope letter, Sgt. Woods declared that the people of America should know that "our Supreme Allied Commander-in-chief of the European Theatre of Operation, General Dwight D. Eisenhower is a military officer, who pays as much attention to a non-commissioned officer of a Negro Engineer General Service Regiment as he does to the members of his staff in certain respects."

It should be added, however, that the editor of the Stars and Stripes, in an editor's not immediately following the article to which Sgt. Woods so bravely took exception, said the following:

"Prejudice knows no state or national boundaries. Uncle Sam's men in the forces serve and fight where they're are told to.

LANDED ON NORMANDY

"The actvity of Negro troops in this war includes landing with the first U. S. assault forces to hit the Normandy beaches on D.-Day. Barrage balloon men, port battalions, Duck companies and quartermaster truck units were in on the landings.

"Two of these units were commended by Gen. Eisenhower. One Negro infantry division, the 93rd is at present in action on Bougainville in the South Pacific. The second infantry division to see action in this war, the 92nd, is there fighting right now in north Italy. Negro airmen have made a notable record in Italy (as well as North Africa and Sicily), where the 99th Pursuit Squadron and Col. Benjamin Davis' fighter group have been flying combat mission with the 15th Air Force."

First Colored Nurses Begin European Duty

A U. S. ARMY STATION HOSPITAL IN ENGLAND—Sixty-three colored nurses, the first to arrive in the European Theater of Operations, are now on duty at the oldest hospital in the United Kingdom, according to a War Department report.

Among the nurses appointed by Captain Mary L. Petty, of Chicago Ill., are 1st Lt. Susan Harris, of Rochester, Pa.; 1st Lt. Jessie Glenn, of Columbia, S. C., 2nd Lts. Dorcas Taylor, Louise Hanley, Zola Long Thelma Caloway, Alice Ishmael, Alma Favors, Marion Ridgely, Lucy L. Akers, Anna L. Collins, Gussie Daniels, Phloy C. Frierson, Ruby Gill, Magnolia L. Harris, A. M. Hibbler, Sarah E. Johnson, Theresa J. James, Roberta Johnson, Lizzie V. Moore, Lydia M. Pinkett, Catherine E. Randle, Estella L. Smith and Aslan A. Shenard.

Engineers Provide Reilef For Fighting Troops; Set Up New Training Centers

A United Kingdom Base Engineer Depot, England—As part of the Allied "On to Berlin" offensive, Negro engineers, in an invasion port in England, help provide relief for fighting troops by work that facilitates the movement to the front lines of replacement units.

In a recent undertaking, one that required detailed planning, the engineers provided in three days the housing, bedding, and food for an Infantry ivision which stopped in England for a short time before moving to the Continent. It was a priority job. Some of the engineers were working cleaning and assorting used material for reuse as needed by the fighting troops on the Continent; others were doing maintenance work at rehabilitation and reception centers for the United States wounded at the time when word of their new mission was received.

Returning to the camp after a daily tour of duty, the engineers were informed that the new mission meant a change in locality. One of the units was assembled from a radius of 200 miles before work could begin. The men packed their baggage during the night and emptied their straw mattresses the following morning and were prepared to leave at eight o'clock for the new assignment.

Planned Every Detail

The reception party planned every detail that concerned the welfare of the incoming troops. Every department of the unit, including administration, supply, motor pool as well as cooks, bakers was organized with each man assigned his own responsibility. Space for lodging in the British Isles is a problem. Scores of barracks and manor houses, spread for miles over the countryside, were prepared for the new arrivals. But this was only the beginning. The engineers scrubbed floors and washed walls, polished brass, checked the water and pipe lines, fixed electrical wires and installed some 1500 light bulbs as their first assignment. Simultaneously, the carpenters were making thousands of braces and putting together 6600 double-decker beds. There being a shortage of beds the carpenters secured lumber from the depot and built more.

Under the direction of Staff Sergeant Charlie Edwards, 25, Wharton, Texas, and Staff Sergeant Elijah Tinsley, Jr., 24, at Penscola, Florida, details of men were organized to convoy the beds to the various camps and space them in the quarters in the manner prescribed for sanitation and health.

The engineers also used 2250 bales of hay, made mattresses, and placed one on each bed. From the depot 20,000 blankets were drawn and two of them were placed on each bed. In addition 27 tons of coal, to provide fire for warmth and cooking, were distributed among the various installations. There was also the problem of securing static personnel to prepare the food. And in addition to housing and bedding this was the number one concern of the reception party. When compared with the daily routine of a mother that is responsible for a family of five, an idea of the job before the group working against a three-day deadline in preparing for a family 3000 times larger can be seen.

Food Costs $5,000 Daily

Feeding such a family costs Uncle Sam approximately $5,000 daily. Warrant Officer Joe. A. Pattillo, 25, 310 W. 150th street, New York City, was responsible for this vital phase of the activity. He prepared menus for the men and organized the truck convoy to secure the rations from the depot.

British civilians, paid by lend-lease agreement, operated the depot from which the food was drawn. Drawing of the rations was a slow process even though this was a priority requisition.

At the depot, because of a shortage of manpower, two civilians did work that formerly required ten men. The ration detail checked with the depot subsistance officer to determine whether supplies for menus desired were on hand; ironed out differences between British and American measuresements and weight; convoyed it to a central location and broke it down according to the number of men in each camp. This was done to insure fair distribution.

The ration detail was among the most active groups on the project. The warrant officer with his assistant, Corporal Antonio Davis, 38, 510 Lowell street, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, secured 164,000 pounds of food, worked a straight 36-hour shift and delivered it to the various mess halls on schedule.

The infantry division ate in six mess halls that were organized under the supervision of Staff Sergeant Woodrow Foster, 25, Hub, Mississippi. Sergeant Foster also planned the outlay of the kitchens and the installations of huge British ranges. In addition he directed the work of 178 Negro and white cooks that were assigned to him.

Sergeant Foster, on the basis of experiences as mess sergeant, was able to avoid bottlenecks in his chow line. By running a double line he served 100 men every four minutes. This correspondent made a tour of the mess halls and found that the reception committee had done a magnificent job of organization. And the guests had nothing but praise for the royal reception that was accorded them. There was not a single complaint about the food and the cooks were singled out for special mention.

With these provisions made, the replacement unit had what it needed: time to relax and drop a line to the folks back home, before moving into action against the enemy on the European continent. The reception committee's work was directed by the battalion commander Captain Walker G. Stone, Chicago, Illinois.

Color No Issue When Our GIs Are Commended in England

By GEORGE GOODMAN
(From Common Ground)

One of the most impressive long-time demonstrations of good feeling between the English and Americans that I know about occurred in one of the largest cities in Great Britain and involved about 300 colored soldiers.

The type of work they had to do made it imperative they be located near the center of the city. They were therefore housed in the very center of the best residential section.

Familiar with Colonials

In this area resided any number of retired Naval, Army, and Civil Service officers of the British Colonials who had served in the Far East, India, Africa, and other parts of the Empire. Many of these officers lived in that community for approximately a year without any incident of expression of ill-feeling.

Didn't Mention Color

They conducted themselves so well that when it was announced they were being moved out to build a camp [illegible]

[illegible] Commander from [illegible] community organi- [illegible] extreme regret. [illegible] emphasized the fact [illegible] were the best [illegible] they had ob- [illegible] pression of opinion [illegible] and that Stars and [illegible] an editorial en- [illegible] ighbors," indicat- [illegible] contribution Amer- [illegible] would make toward [illegible] merican relations [illegible] ior. Only—no men- [illegible] of the fact that [illegible] ed soldiers.

[illegible] are familiar with the English colonies because they have spent a great part of their working lives there.

I mention this because it seems reasonable to assume that if there were a group in England that would be suspicious and prejudiced toward American soldiers it would be this group. They would know things the rank and file of Englishmen would not.

But this group of soldiers lived in that community for approximately a year without any incident of expression of ill-feeling.

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Martin Visits Shock Victim in Hospital in Philippines

11-25-44

Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

Large Numbers of Colored Troops With MacArthur in Invasion of the Islands

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
NNPA War Correspondent

TACLOBAN, PHILIPPINES — (By Courier)—While visiting our troops in an evacuation hospital in this area, this correspondent was assured by one patient who was recovering from shock:

"If you just say that everything is going to be all right, I will be all right. Just say everything is going to be all right."

Fortunately, in his case everything will be all right. He is fast mending from the shock incurred when an enemy plane crashed his ship and exploded. Bursting bombs injured many aboard, but only shook this patient helpless.

Lauded with MacArthur

With General MacArthur during initial landings in the Philippines were large numbers of colored troops who felt the enemy's poor attempt at counterattack. They spread fanwise along the beach, engineers, port units, quartermasters.

Amphibious quartermasters, who of late have been much in the limelight, were making repeated trips from landing barges to positions lately occupied by wave after wave of onrushing Americans. The area was hot, fire plentiful.

However, with the landings, day after day, of more troops and materiel, the enemy was forced to fight only rear-guard actions. The American fan grew larger and more devastating.

At this writing the offensive rolls forward down Leyte Beach and the casualty ratio as given by public relations shows eight Japs for every American. To date, the enemy has suffered over 24,000 dead and wounded. Our losses, 3000 of whom 1000 are known dead.

Anxious to Get Back into Fight

In several of the hospitals I found a number of our troops, most of them suffering from shrapnel wounds, and only a few considered serious.

They had come out of a bad situation on the credit side of the ledger and were eager to get back to the field. Bandaged heads, feet and legs had not dampened to a great extent a rare sense of humor.

The soldier who wanted assurance that "everything was going to be all right" grinned after being assured by no less an authority on medicine than a former sports reporter. He peeped through his bandage, explaining:

"The Nerve of Those Guys"

"Imagine the nerve of those guys. They couldn't get me with a bomb, so they threw the whole plane at me."

Walking from bed to bed, I found that what the men wanted most was somebody to listen to them tell about their part in the D-Day operation. Nursing a nasty wound in the leg, a lined-faced, bull dog-jawed technical sergeant talked on:

"I am with the amphib truck company, see. We move in along with the other guys, see. There are Jap planes and some mortar fire, but what can you expect?

"I don't know how I got it; sort of felt a sharp pain in the leg following a bomb burst. Doc thinks I'm scared to be told how badly the leg is hurt. But he don't know me. I can take it as long as the next guy."

"Hurts a Little, but I'll Live"

But there were other guys in bed who didn't say anything. Their eyes just watched every move you made. They're the soldiers to whom you try to say something cheerful, but fail miserably. I walked to the bedside of one soldier who had been shot in the leg, side, and groin.

He wore a look, not of pain, but unadulterated disgust. I sat down on the bed, didn't say anything—we just looked at each other. After several moments he grinned sheepishly, saying:

"Aw, it isn't as bad as all that. Hurts a little at times, but I'll live."

11-25-44

"Sure you will and we'll take in the Derby once we get back home," I said aloud, but thought his chances were very slim.

Another soldier kept saying, "Hey, count my fingers. Count my fingers. Hey, count my fingers." His fingers were all there, but shell shock had momentarily affected his mind. As the ward boy and I turned to go, the soldier repeated, "Hey, please count my fingers."

Ward after ward we visited. Sat on the side of beds, enjoying a cigarette with patients. These were the men who had helped to face it. And they seemed proud of what they had done. They were proud of the planes that had given them protection, the anti-aircraft.

Both Races Share Hospital

White soldiers as well as colored occupied all wards. A white member of a cavalry unit beckoned me over. His sides appeared to have been crushed in and, packed in plaster cast, he could move only his head. He refused a proferred cigarette.

"Got to lay off of them awhile, doctor's orders," he explained. "How's the war going? We don't hear much about it in here. How are we doing?"

Assured that the offensive was gaining momentum daily, he eased his head back and asked to be allowed to smell some cigarette smoke. I lit a cigarette, blew two puffs in his face, put it out.

"You didn't have to put it out. Go on and smoke if you like." He, too, wore a half grin.

A young, professorish-looking doctor came by, saw me taking a few notes, walked over, saying: "Don't pay too much attention to them. They want sympathy," he laughed. "Considering what some of them have gone through," he added seriously, "it's miraculous that we have so few real bad cases."

Yanks in Italy Salvage Everything on Wheels

Afro American

11-25-44

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

Baltimore, Md.

[Copyright. Reproduction of the whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

AVERSA, ITALY—(Censored)—Things ain't what they used to be around the Italian camp of a particular ordnance evacuation platoon working in the Peninsular Base Section. At Anzio, their job was to evacuate tanks under artillery fire, and the stench of the dead perpetually penetrated their nostrils. Two of the unit's platoons were sent to France, leaving the third, the only colored, among three such specialized outfits in Italy.

Art Carter

The big guns are now far away. The soldiers do a tremendous salvage job on tanks, trucks, jeeps and anything that moves on wheels, evacuating the wrecked ones from the forward areas, dismantling them nut by nut, and shipping the parts off to base section shops for reuse.

Derrick on Wheels

Pvt. William Thornton, former Armstrong High athlete, Washington, D.C., who drives the platoon "A Wagon," an improvised derrick on wheels, says: "We save the army millions. All this looks like junk but most of it will be in use again within a month."

Thornton was shifting gears in the huge truck as he hoisted wrecked jeeps preparatory to transfer to an imaginary assembly line where Italian civilians, under guidance of his platoon members dismantled them. "You can tell the ones wrecked in combat from the road wrecks," Thornton added; "they are bullet-riddled and often blood-spattered."

Six times in 15 minutes he made the trip to the assembly line, and just over the other side of the roadway stood "Anzio Express," "Betty," and "Doc C," three two-and-a-half-ton trucks waiting for evacuation.

A couple of German tanks were behind them, and scattered throughout the yard were every conceivable kind of tank and vehicle waiting for "treatment."

Baltimorean Takes Over

Once the vehicle is dropped on the assembly line, the real work begins. That is where Sgt. James E. Tripps, ex-Vocational High athlete, 704 N. Bruce Street, Baltimore, Md., takes over. Tripps was formerly in the anti-tank unit of the old Second Cavalry Division and knows tanks from A to Z, so to speak.

He supervises the tank dismantling and does the mechanical work on the wrecks. "Now it is just a job, but at Anzio we were frequently evacuating dead men as well as tanks," he recalled.

The salvage depot is under direction of Lt. Arthur C. Fergerson, Chicago, Ill., while Lt. John M. Couch, also of Chicago, is in charge of the 500 Italian civilians working around the entire ordnance battalion. Both speak the language fluently.

1000 Salvaged Vehicles

In two months the unit has handled nearly 1000 salvaged vehicles with First Sgt. Enos N. Cabell, Pittsburgh, Pa.; M/Sgt. Nemiah Queen, Brook Haven, Miss.; Sgt. George McWilliams, Omaha, Neb., and Pvt. Ellison Robbs, Washington, D.C., providing important factors in keeping the wheels rolling.

"When the men first started working with Italians, they could not understand each other," declared Lt. Fergerson. "Now the boys have a working knowledge of the language and there is little difficulty."

Mans Machine Gun With White Unit In Phillippines

Former — Houston, Texas

11-18-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
Copyright Informer-NNPA. Reproduction prohibited

WITH 24th DIVISION, ORMOC BAY SECTOR PHILLIPPINES—Manning a machine gun with an all-white unit, Private Ralph Hueca of Chicago became the first colored unofficial member of the Texas Division volunteering to fight because he considered truck driving monotonous.

Fighting side by side with white troops, Hueca manned his weapon in the midst of three enemy Banzai attacks, taking it ever after four casualties had been bayonetted to death. His company suffered heavy casualities when it was isolated, and the Negro stuck at the gun for an hour. Hueca has received two written recommendations.

Hueca was leaning against his truck as the infantry passed and some one yelled, "Hey fellow, you want to fight?"

He answered, "That's what I'm here for," and immediately joined the unit. He has been with the unit more than a week in which the division has seen the toughest fighting in the Pacific.

During the first night Hueca served in the rifle pit, and during the second night as enemy resistance grew with their suicidal threats, he took over the machine gun with three others and held out until reinforcements arrived. During the enemy Banzai charges, four gunners were killed. The unit finally withdrew and Hueca stayed on back to his ship. When asked why with the troops and at present is he wanted to join the infantry he replied.

"They're the guys who do the fighting."

At the sector front of the tenth corps, I found Negro units servicing the 24th and First Cavalry. Division units were commanded by colored officers including Leon Weston of Columbia, S. C.; Becro Flatter of Los Angeles; James Kimbrough of Chicago, and Clarence Laws, former Urban League secretary of New Orleans.

Enemy snipers attacked our party repeatedly as we got within 100 yards of the Front. We passed stiff bloated dead bodies along the trail. The intensity of the artillery fire signified that Japs were in the sector in large numbers. This

11-18-44

The commanding officer of the unit stated that he has nicknamed Hueca, "Killer Moe", and visited the Negro could remain with the promises to develop into one bloody scrap. 11-18-44

Killer Moe"

Despite the fact that most Negroes in the area are moving up ammunition, there is one somewhere in there slinging it out—"Killer Moe."

Gallant American Leads Filipinos Against Japanese

12-8-44

Memphis World

Memphis (Tenn.)

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the ATLANTA DAILY WORLD and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)
(Copyright — Reproduction prohibited)

LEYTE BEACH, PHILIPPINES — By Courier — On Samar island, northeast of Leyte, fighting with the fierceness of an enraged animal is Capt. Frank Merith, American Negro leader of a Filipino guerrilla band. Capt. Merith is one of the big stores of the war. His deeds and those of his ragged men have spread among American troops like wild fire.

Exact whereabouts of the giant Negro is still secret military information, but this correspondent is pushing off in search of him. It is a search well worthwhile, because what Livingston meant to the natives of Africa, surely Merith means the same to the people of the Southern Philippines. And as news of Livingston spread around the world, so should the deeds of this Negro be made known.

FIGHT WITH KNIVES

The guerrillas on Samar continue to fight the enemy. Armed with bolos, knives, even sticks — these natives, many clad in rags, ferociously defend the homeland. Tales of superhuman courage and endurance have reached us here.

For instance, the total population of the important town of Basey and surrounding villages numbered 30,000 before enemy occupation. When the enemy arrived most of these people fled to the hills. There they fought the enemy for over a year.

While women and children foraged for food — fruits, coconuts, and edible pith which grows in the heart of coconut trees — all able-bodied men fought. It has been a hard fight, and continues to be. The equipment.

TAKE JAP RIFLES

Few rifles were taken from the Japs. And American planes dropped some ammunition. American submarines smuggled equipment in. However, because of the intenseness of the operations, all has been too little.

The enemy reached a maximum of ruthlessness on Samar. The town was stripped bare of its meager resources.

Perhaps the heaviest penalty of all was that the Japs took away the food. The population suffered miserably from malnutrition. Only since American troops entered have food and medical supplies begun to pour in. Five doctors and one dentist are presently at work patching up the ills of the populact. Sores, blisters, malarial cases, pneumonia — these are only a few of the items which harass the population.

MERITH LEADERS

Captain Merith, it was told the writer, was chosen as one of the leaders. Under the Negro and others, their valor reaches daily news heights.

The story goes that Capt. Merith has been in the Philippines for many years, making his home on Samar. He married a native woman and owned property. The enemy caught him as well as the others The Negro was attached to General MacArthur's command.

Every three out of five Filipinos on Leyte know or knows of Captain Merith. And many have said, "Ah, he is a good man — our friend. And he is a very good fighter, too."

Captain Merith is the story. He is worth walking a continent to find. Every attempt will be made to find him.

Ready And Willing To Take Positions On Pacific Fronts

Courier - Pittsburgh, Pa.

12-23-44

By BILLY ROWE, Courier War Correspondent

WITH THE ARMED FORCES IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—The supreme test of the 93rd as a fighter division is yet to come. In the Pacific sector for over ten months, it has not yet seen action as a whole. Its elements have saturated the area and held some of the most advanced and strategic islands along the road to the Philippines. In such a position its men have been well trained in jungle warfare, and are now ready for come what may.

The fight against the Japanese forces is at last well under way. American and Allied troops have over-run Japan's outer perimeter and are now striking telling blows at her inner defenses. The ultimate outcome of the gigantic struggle is assured, but any guess is as good as another as to the length of time it will take to crush this enemy.

PLAYED GLORIOUS PART

From Gaudalcanal to Leyte, Tan Yanks have played a glorious part in the victories which have been ours. They have loaded the ships, passed the ammunition, delivered the supplies, driven and worked on the trucks and amphibious ducks, built and maintained roads and bridges, fought when they had to and died in action also. Part of a highly specialized army, these men served side by side with fighting white Yanks under various designations, but in few cases have they been men of the infantry.

With the crucial hour of the war in the Pacific having already struck, Tan Yanks are ready, willing and able to take their positions on the battle line. With the exception of the Marines, the only combat Negro Infantry in this sector is the 93rd division.

The soldiers of that outfit, or any other, have a definite feeling about the war. It is a universal one and need not be described in glowing words. "If it will get this thing over, and get me home quicker, I want to fight every step of the way."

No speech makers are needed to make them hate the enemy they are fighting against. What Japan has done and continues to do, keep our men in a perpetual state of seething indignation. There is no secret to the personality of these men who are in this thing up to their eyes. Yet, it never fails to fascinate one standing on the side lines watching the passing parade. If you piece together the fragments of their conversation you will wind up with a tangible biography of what the masses really want.

CIVILIANS IN UNIFORMS

These men out here, in the main, are not really soldiers as such, but civilians in uniforms. They have laid aside their books and pencils, typewriters and adding machines, shovels and plows, wagons and trucks, shears and needles and all other implements of modern labor to man a gun. They are the minute men of our generation. Their interpretation of what they are fighting for is different from that of the politician. Their democracy centers around a mother, a wife, a sweetheart, a home and all that goes with it. A chance to get away from the squalid ugliness of poverty and be fully integrated into the American form of life.

It was Major General Robert McClure, commander of the American Division, who said: "The Negro soldier is best equipped for jungle warfare, but he serves well wherever he is put." The one fighting element of the 93rd division which was attached to his command during the final stages of the Northern Solomon campaign, proved that assertion.

Now under the command of a new general, the entire outfit is being revived and has improved greatly inspired by his understanding and constructive plans.

Stewart Nurses a Cold on 3d Thanksgiving Overseas

American - Baltimore, Md.

By OLLIE STEWART
AFRO War Correspondent with Invasion Forces in France
[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

PARIS (By Cable)—My third war time Thanksgiving overseas was spent in Paris nursing a cold. Allen Morrison telephoned. Cpl. Trezzvant Anderson came to see me.

12-2-44

Corporal Anderson is just back from visiting a tank battalion and the tank destroyers on the Third Army front, bringing the latest news that the entire company of tankers under Capt. Irvin McHenry, Leavenworth, Kans., has been cited for heroic efforts near Metz and the assault platoon, commanded by 1st Lt. Charles Gates, Kansas City, has blasted its way into Dieuze despite fierce enemy resistance.

Having talked with Gates recently and heard him say "We are the guys they call on when somebody is needed to strong-arm the Jerries," I was not surprised.

Colored Men Command Tanks

The tank destroyers have colored company commanders, including Capt. James Carr, 624 Gresham Place, Northwest, Washington; Beauregard King, Birmingham, Ala.; Robert Finley, Detroit, and First Lt. Charles Thomas, Detroit.

Among staff officers are Capt. Thomas Campbell, Tuskegee, battalion surgeon; Capt. Harvey Johnson, Atlanta, chaplain; First Lt. Robert Willims, 1909 Fourth

12-2-44

Cigarettes for 2 Weeks

...dy is thankful for the cig-
...shortage. It is now the sec-
...eek since the troops in Paris
...received any and most of
...like me, are forced to go
...t. Yesterday a Frenchman
...me two from his last pack.
...dy can explain why the cig-
...rations have stopped com-
...with production at home
...than ever.
...e are no cigars or pipe to-
...either.

...Stowe, ...arriving in ...casts.

...My table ...plained, the ...

...ping up Metz and getting plenty of action.

...Tank destroyers are with the 9th Division which is now mop-

...Northwest, Washington, re-connaissance.

...street, Northwest, Washington, replenty turkey for all Americans on the continent.

...Well in advance a refrigerator ship loaded with Thanksgiving birds was undoaded and distribution was made to some units a week ago. My own dinner was there was no holiday for troop complete with dressing and cran-

...on front-line duty, but those i...

Fighting Negro Depot Units Killed And Were Killed In Battle Against Japs On Saipan

Amsterdam News

U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the Amsterdam-News and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association.
(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN

PACIFIC BASE HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR —By Courier—On July 10, 1914, organized resistance ceased on Saipan and the American flag fluttered over the enemy bastion. American troops had won the decision of a great battle-rier—On July 10, 1940, organized field. Another step had been taken toward the coast of China and the prize of Japan proper. 10-21-44

News stories poured into Pacific Fleet headquarters of the intensity of the struggle and sacrifice. One concerned the combat mission of several units of Negro marines. Depot units (quartermasters), they took up the cudgel during moments when potential enemy breakthroughs seemed inevitable. They fought, killed and were killed. Although casualties were incredibly light, those who did fall fell as fighting troops of America's prized branch of the service.

Were Part of "D-DAY"

These Negro troops were a part of the D-Day assault force and were commissioned to handle material. However, due to capable enemy counter-attacks, it became the essential mission of all troops to help push back the onrushing Japanese infantry. Day after day, machine guns and mortars laid fire into the crevasses and caves of the rotten coral. It was primitive warfare. Men fought through the caves, over maggoty dead, each foot of ground heatedly contested. 10-21-44

Some of those Marines have returned to Pearl Harbor. They tell the story of their participation in the campaign. And it is not so much the tale of superhuman endurance and ability as of men sent to do one job and who stayed on to do several—and did them very well.

Snipers in Caves

Today, it is said, that snipers still dwell in the caves of Marpi Point, the north tip of the Island. Infantry continues to completely stamp out the remanants of defeated garrison. And in the town of Garapan where once lived 10,000 "there is nothing left but the white corners of the blown-to-bits buildings. Stairways stand without buildings, leading a short distance into the air. The Catholic church is nicked with bullets and the front steeple was blown away by a shell. The rich altar carvings and mosaics are scratched and chipped."

Their mission completed, most of the marines have withdrawn. It has not been revealed to this correspondent whether or not elements were used in the Palau operations, but we learned that "Negro troops were there and are thought to be still there." 10-21-44

Largest Supply Depot

Since Pearl Harbor is one of America's largest supply depots in the Pacific, serving the domain ruled by Admiral Chester Nimitz, much of the work here has to do with supplies. In a tour of the immediate area, we found Negro troops (including marines) doing this type of work. Ordnance units servicing heavy field pieces and light artillery. The salvage and repair of shoes and clothing, building crates for ammuntion, handling a multitude of machinery. Here the earth is covered with aircraft, lumber, gasoline—days and nights are filled with the multiple singing of engines of heavy machinery, as was expertly put by one observer.

A marine officer commented that his men are doing the mission they have been trained to perform. But in addition, he added that "it is also our task to see that these marines in addition to bringing their best into the Corps, will get the maximum out of the training. We are going to stick by them. Those who want the training in industrial arts, we are going to see that they get it. They've go a life ahead, a life in which to help rebuild the world on democratic lines!" 10-21-44

Another Marine Group

Somewhere in the Central Pacific there is another group of colored marines—defense units. At one time they were bivouacked in the Ellice Islands, approximately 1,000 miles east of the Solomons group. An anti-aircraft force, they stood radar watches, and manned the automatic weapons. The enemy did not penetrate our areas of security, thus these troops saw very little, if any action.

It is thought in some quarters that they were sent into the Ellice group to become climatized to the weather and jungle conditions of the South Pacific. On the other hand, since the enemy's aircraft has been appreciably reduced to a fraction of its former strength, maybe there is little need for defensive strategy, as it were, but the stressing of offensive. The war is moving into the inner circle at an accelerated pace, and the distances between islands are of such great length, the enemy seldom penetrates our less favored reas. 10-21-44

Representatives

Representatives of this group are now at a rear base receiving specialized training in air craft detection. They are Sgt. Cyrus J. Hanna, Philadelphia; S-Sgt. John H. Boxill, New York City; S-Sgt. Chas. G. Guillebeaux, Evanston, Illinois; S-Sgt. Odell Crenshaw, Dallas, Texas; Cpl. Frank A. Carroncejie, New York City; S-Sgt. William E. Johnson, Des Moines, Iowa; T-Sgt. John D. Lewis, Raleigh, N. Carolina, and S-Sgt. Elmo Wade, Jr., of Detroit.

Three men have returned to the mainland for the Corps V-12 courses. The letter is preparatory training for officer candidates. They are Sgt. Herbert L. Brewer, San Antonia, Texas; Cpl. Clinton Branch, Philadelphia; and First Sgt. Chas. C. Johnson, of Des Moines, Iowa. 10-21-44

Men In Hawaii

The depot units in Hawaii are from various sections of America. Most of the men are in the age group between 18 and 23. Among them are Cpl. Wm. H. Bell, Gadsen, Ala.; Pvt. Oscar Brown, Chicago; Pvt. Willie Dix, Jr., Louisville, Ky.; Pfc. Charlie Coles, Radford, Va.; Sgts. Earnest Cower and Eugene Cox, New York City; Pfc. Chester Givens, Detroit; Cpl. Nathaniel Harvey, St. Louis; Cpl. Raymond Hobson, Lynchburg, Va.; Pfc. Lloyd Hogan, St. Paul; Sgt. Joseph Jacques, Chicago; Pfc. Richard Martin, Boston; Pfc. Alonzo Mays, Isabelle, Pa.; Cpl. Tin Newborn, Newton, Kan.; Pfc. Earl Miller, Baltimore; Pvt. James B. Warren, Louisville, Ky.; Pfc. LaLois Bennett, Jamaica, L. I.

Lt. Col. Phelan, Personable, But Daring Leader

Journal & Guide Norfolk Va. 11-18-44

By JOHN ROVER JORDAN
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden.)

FIFTH ARMY, Italy — Forceful and aggressive is Lieutenant Colonel John J. Phelan, a regimental executive officer of the 92nd divisin, who is the son of John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Boxing Commission.

Although his duties hold him principally at headquarters, it is not unusual for Lt. Col. Phelan to work with troops in the front lines—personally directing operations and at times leading the men in attacks on stubborn krauts in the Gothic line.

On October 17 Lt. Col. Phelan marched at the head of 92nd troops in an assault on a mountain position. It was a successful operation with very light casualties, thanks to his leadership.

He is what the troopers call a "soldier's soldier," as tough as they come and as personable as any. His clever sense of humor has eased battle pressure on hard-pressed troopers on many occasions.

Lt. Col. Phelan is a West Point graduate and was an outstanding athlete in college. He was with the 92nd Division during early training days in the United States, but another infantry outfit asked for his services and the transfer was ordered.

He fought on the Anzio Beachhead and later on up coasta Italy in the Fifth Army's triumphant drive to the Arno. He was wounded in fighting aroun Pisa. 11-18-44

It was while he was recovering in the hospital that a commanding officer of fighting elements of the 92nd asked for his services as regimental executive officer.

Japs Return Fire As 24th Advances In Bougainville

Amsterdam News—New York N. Y. 5-13-44

Infantrymen Cross Mavavia River Without Loss; Hot Steel Severs an Enraged Enemy

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(NNPA U. S. War Correspondent)
(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

BOUGAINVILLE—(By Courier)—Again elements of the 24th Infantry crossed the Mavavia river, this time to stay. Supporting tanks and flame throwers, the infantrymen hunted out the enemy, bayonetting, lobbing grenades—a decisive decision was carved without the loss of a single man. Partly used as protection for lumbering tanks, our units thwarted enemy attempts to annihilate the monsters. Other troops spread fanlike combed the area, grenading emplacements, shooting stragglers.

The new beach action was considered by military officials as "highly successful" which not only secured the area around the Mavavia, but pushed the enemy beyond the Moy river, several miles east of the perimeter. However to the 24th Infantry it was more than a military operation,—a chance was presented to avenge the death of six men killed in action four days ago. Their feeling was exhibited by one soldier who with an automatic rifle riddled a charging Jap. The hot steel not only severed an enraged enemy, but set off his grenades blowing what remained into little pieces.

LCTs struggling under their immense load of tanks and men pushed hard, momentum carrying them several yards upon the beach. As the ramp was lowered—attack, attack without mercy. Troops scattered, running almost parallel with the ground. Jap return fire was spasmodic and inundated by the clamor and air-slicing noises of our shells and small arm fire. Flame throwers moved ahead scorching the earth, leaving denuded sprigs, camouflaged pill boxes, rifle pits with brush coverings. 5-13-44

The operation was scheduled for dawn. Clinging mist enveloped the entire beachline. The sun peeked over the Pacific, disappeared, leaving a still greyness — calm, misty. Soon the low mumble of exploding mortars. Hunks of dirt clouded the air as projectile after projectile tore into the enemy bivouac area. Immediately artillery opened—37 mm. cannons, 155 mms., 75 mms., 50 cal. machine guns. The beach ripened for plucking by the infantry.

Attack Without Mercy

Each offensive was an epitomy of coordination. Tanks pushed ahead at great speed, infantry followed, more Negro troops securing each foot of ground gained. What few of the enemy who refused to die in their holes, died in befuddled attempts to escape deadly fire by mad flights down the beach. In less than four hours 500 yards had been gained, the Moy River being less than fifty yards. More troops were pouring into the area—fresh troops, litter bearers, communication men, combat engineers, souvenir seekers. Above circled two observation planes. Off shore lay the LCTs, small crash barges, and a corvette. Means of escape for the enemy were nil. Awful stench of burned bodies permeated the air. It was becoming very difficult to keep up with the tanks—now having a field day.

Pace Kept Up

Until dusk this pace kept up. No prisoners were taken. Japs perished in their emplacements. One clutched onto a package of American cigarettes. At this writing enemy dead had not been counted—and they were still being killed. We have not suffered a fatal casualty. Shrapnel had wounded an officer and an enlisted man—superficial wounds, nothing serious. 5-13-44

Near the Mavavia River mouth lies one of our dead—killed four days before. The body had washed ashore, evidence of a grim encounter. Today all was victory and our troops had dug into the newly-won territory before total blackness settled over the area. Soon the beach wallowed in silence.

Negro air troops drop supplies over jungle

Pittsburgh Courier 11-27-44

WASHINGTON—A battalion of Negro troops in the Burma-India Theater is known officially and was trained as a Quartermaster Truck Battalion, but its vehicles are big Army planes, and its cargoes, kicked overboard or dropped by parachute over remote jungle areas, run into hundreds of thousands of tons monthly.

The supplies delivered include a variety of items including the dropping of such 75mm howitzers and TNT to eggs delicate materials as highly sensitive wet gun-cotton and such delicacies as live ducks and chickens. The battalion arrived in India late in 1943 and began delivery of supplies by air after receiving only 10 days of instruction. It had to improvise most of its own methods of storage and safe delivery, as well as to American jungle, as well as to American and Chinese troops helping to clear the area of Japanese.

Special packaging and packing methods were worked out—often by the trial-and-error method. For example, it was found that 55-gallon drums of oil and gasoline could best be delivered by lashing sacks of rice husks to the drums, to serve as bumpers, and using two or three chutes to drop them.

As combat activities increased, so did the necessity to care for wounded personnel. The medical corps found that additional supplies were needed at places inaccessible by motor transport. The battalion has dropped packed medical supplies in glass and similar fragile containers, bulky operating tables, lights and generators, as well as special rations and blood plasma, for the use of medics far up in the forward areas.

Fresh eggs were prepared for air-dropping by packing them in cases with cushions of rice hulls between the individual eggs for shock absorbers. Ammunition of many sizes has been dropped, and two-wheeled ammunition carts, too bulky and heavy to load and drop through the plane door by the kickout method, have been sawed into convenient sections, drilled and fitted with bolts and braces for quick reassembly, and dropped in section.

Some of the other types of supplies packed and dropped—in addition to clothing, ammunition and rations — are blankets, tentage, field ranges, rifles, machineguns, motors, typewriters, U. S. mail, fresh vegetables and meats, as well as tank and truck parts, radios and radio parts. The battalion's base has become virtually a sub-depot for all types of Army supplies.

Martin To Search For Him

American Negro Fighter Compared To Livingstone

By FLETCHER MARTIN
War Correspondent in Pacific

ON AN ISLAND NORTH-EAST OF LEYTE.—(By Cable)—Fighting with the fierceness of an enraged animal is an American Negro leader of a Filipino guerilla band.

This man is one of the big stories of the Pacific war. His deeds and those of his ragged men have spread among American troops like wildfire. The exact whereabouts of the giant Negro is a military secret, but this correspondent has been granted permission to find and join him.

My search should be well worth while because what Livinstone meant to the natives of Africa, this Negro means to the people of these islands. As the news of Livingstone was spread around the world, so should the deeds of this man be known.

He is worth walking across a continent to find and every attempt will be made to find him.

Negroes Fighters For Free French

Colonials Throughout All French Sections Fight Beside Others

By NANCY CUNARD

LONDON (ANP) — Negroes from France's African colonies have been met with here, there and everywhere in the great liberating wave that has set France on her feet again.

There is a fine shot in the film that several camermen of resistance made on the spot during the six-day rising in Paris. An African, in the uniform of the French Forces of the Interior, is seen grasping a German prisoner firmly by the arm. The street-fighting was very violent in places. Another shot taken, with tanks blazing, grenades being flung and snipers shooting from roof-tops, is of another Negro, a grenade-thrower in France's Army of Liberation, being hurried off badly wounded.

Various war correspondents have come across Senegalese and other African soldiers from Normandy to Paris. One reporter tells of the 120 Senegalese just freed from a German prison camp outside Rennes in Brittanny after four years of captivity. He saw a few of these: "Down the road, round a sullen corps of German prisoners, leading the column and bringing up the rear, erect and military, strode some Senegalese. They appeared formidable rather than joyous and carried their German weapons and wore their uniforms as neatly and proudly as if on parade."

Fighting side by side with the Americans were the Fighting French Forces under their Cross of Lorraine, said another correspondent. This was the famous Second French Armored Division of Gen. LeClerc. Among the French came Senegalese and Moroccans who wear their red fezzes and turbans into battle. Eleven days later another reporter described this same division triumphantly entering Paris. Armored cars, Senegalese and French troops advanced up the Champs Elysees, only just cleared of enemy forces. The people of Paris sang, danced and shouted with joy, embracing every soldier they could get at.

George Slocombe, one of the British ace-reporters, landed in France with the first French fighting troops to return. They were entirely American-equipped, "American even to the proportion of colored soldiers in their ranks." He saw a colored U. S. soldier trying to talk English to a French African in American uniform become more and more puzzled at not being understood.

Nazi Wonders Avoid Battle

3 Groups Seen on Mission over Reich

NO HITS SCORED

Historic Flight Led by Washingtonian

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright, Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

FIFTEENTH AAF BASE IN ITALY (By Cable) — Pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group had their first encounter with German jet-propelled fighter aircraft Saturday, but no victories were scored, for the Nazi pilots offered little resistance.

The encounter came during the group's mission of providing penetration escort for 15th Army Air Force Liberators and Flying Forttresses which attacked military objectives in Germany.

D.C. Capt. Leads Flight

Flight leader on the mission was Capt. Andrew D. Turner, 25, of 1000 Westford Place, Northeast, commander of one of the group's squadrons. The group is under the command of Maj. George S. Roberts during the absence on leave to the States of Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr.

Several of the ME-262 jet-propelled planes were first sighted and encountered by Turner and his flyers near Munich, Germany. One lone ME-262 made a pass on one of the P-51 Mustangs in Turner's formation, then darted away without scoring a hit or being hit.

Thirteen Others Seen

Later, near the 15th AAF bombers' targets in the Regensburg, Germany, area, five ME-262's tried an attack on the P-51 formation but were quickly driven off. Several of the group's pilots fired bursts at the Nazi jet planes but no visible hits were claimed.

Another section of the formation later saw eight ME-262's in the same area, but the Nazi planes made no attack on the Mustangs or the bombers under their protection and in turn were not bothered.

No other German planes were encountered during the mission on which the bombers struck at important German targets through heavy clouds.

Effectiveness Questioned

The effectiveness of the Nazi jet-propelled fighter planes against top-notch Allied fighter planes is still undetermined. It is conceded that the jet-propelled job is speedier and able to strike and move out from its target more quickly.

This greater speed, however, is believed to make for a proportionate amount of less accurate shooting by rocket pilots.

One air authority, an official in the Allied high command, said recently that the enemy jet-propelled planes and the present Allied fighter aircraft are not suited for combat against each other, and that their encounters would be a question of one's striking at the target and the other's striking his.

These latest German fighter planes are, nevertheless, appearing in increasing numbers on this front.

Drive Through Fire And Hell Against Seigfried Defenses

WITH THE THIRD U. S. ARMY IN THE METZ AREA —Spearheading a task drive of the 26th "Yankee" Division which jumped off November 8, the all-Negro 761st tank battalion now in action with the U. S. Army captured four important towns, secured two bridge crossings and successfully battered its way through the strongly defended Forest de Bride, the War Department announced.

The Negro tankmen were committed to action following the 26th Division's capture of Metz, which never before fell to direct assault in modern times. They lunged into the battle with such ferocity and courage that Captain Irvin McHenry of Leavenworth, Kansas, received the nickname of "The Bronze Devil," and Staff Sergeant Reuben Rivers of Tecumseh, Oklahoma, received the Silver Star for routing nearly 300 Germans. A dozen members of the medical detachment were cited for heroism under fire.

A captured German officer, after having had a taste of the Negro tankmen and their work, said: "So far as fighting is concerned, I have never before seen such bravery except once before, and that was on the Russian front." It came when a German rocket gun knocked out a tank of the Negro unit. The crew dismounted, brought out the .50 calibre and .30 calibre machine-guns, crawled under their tanks for protection, and continued to blast away at the enemy.

All units gave a good account of themselves. Company C knocked out approximately 18 enemy anti-tank guns, Company B knocked out ten, and Lieutenant Gates' assault platoon knocked out six German armored vehicles and two pill-boxes.

After passing Morville, which they had practically destroyed, the columns moved on to Hamport, four miles farther east, where units of Companies B and C reached the town.

First To Enter Town

Meanwhile, Company A, commanded by Captain Dave Williams, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, entered the action and helped to obliterate and capture Chateau-Salins, the first major town east of Nancy. Following this, Company A also moved to Hamport. It was during these engagements that Staff Sergeant Rivers began to earn his spurs for in almost every instance his tank was the first to enter a town and he was always in the thickest of the fight.

A platoon of Company D, commanded by First Lieutenant Richard W. English of New Orleans, Louisiana, a former teacher at the Hoffman School there, moved up and took the town of Saliva single-handed, with no infantry units along. Sergeant Creecy, who displayed heroism on several different occasions under fire, was a member of this platoon.

After the juncture at Hamport, Companies B and C pulled back for a brief rest, maintenance and Following this action, it re- Company B then again. the 104th Infantry and pushed forward to Lidrequin, a town approximately twelve miles beyond the initial point of action. All these events transpired during a period of 72 supremacy until the rest of the world takes it from him."

Released by U. S. War Department, Bureau of Public Relations

"WE ARE PROUD THAT YOU ARE FIGHTING FOR US."—Queen Elizabeth talks with 2nd Lieut. James G. Bowman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Bowman, of 6520 Evans Avenue, Chicago, as she visited in an American hospital somewhere in England. "All of you are so very brave and we are so proud that you are fighting for us," she said. Lieut. Bowman, member of an Engineer Service Regiment, was wounded near Valognes, France.—(U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

Work Of Negro Engineers Hailed As 'Secret Weapon'

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

WITH U. S. SUPPLY FORCES IN BELGIUM — (S N S) — The work and skill of the 375th Engineer General Service Regiment was one of the American "secret weapons" behind the armored sweep across France which sent the Nazis reeling back to the borders of the "Fatherland."

The headlines were full of news of General Patton's armored forces which rushed dramatically across France and Belgium to the borders of Germany, but the story behind those headlines was one of the Army Service Forces which brought supplies to the Army in a campaign just as dramatic and rapid as that of General Patton's tanks.

BUILT RAILWAYS

When American forces broke thru at St. Lo and started the big push which was to carry them all the way to Germany, supply lines jumped from 50 to 60 miles in length to two, three and four hundred miles.

The haul was too long for trucks. French railways had to be put into operation to keep ammunition, food, arms and clothing flowing to the advancing fighting men.

As the Germans retreated they dynamited remaining railway bridges and placed demolitions along rail lines and beside switches. Some of the bridges and yards already had been destroyed behind the Nazis lines by the Allied Air Force. All had to be repaired or entirely rebuilt before American supply trains could pass.

When this Negro engineer regiment landed on a Normandy beach six days after the invasion, they were assigned the task of repairing roadways and bridges over which GI trucks were carrying supplies to the forces fighting along the beachhead perimeter.

REPAIRED TRESTLES

With the break-through at St. Lo, supply officers called this regiment to follow immediately behind the advancing First Army and repair the rail lines and trestles.

Time, as well as the Nazis, was the enemy. To defeat it these men living in pup tents and foxholes, worked day and night to get the trains running.

First major task assigned the regiment was the repair and rebuilding of 700 feet of bombed-out rail lines, numerous dynamited switches and a bridge. A mile-long train, loaded with more ammunition and gasoline to keep the Nazis running, was already feeling its way down the Cherbourg peninsula. The bridge and railyard must be ready to handle it when it arrived.

MEN COMMENDED

The men of the 375th took only two days and nights to complete the task, and received the commendation of Brigadier General Ewart G. Plank, commanding the Advance Section, Communication Zone, for their unusual performance.

During this period the men were never bivouacked in one location more than a week. Then they packed up their tents and move ahead behind the advancing army.

When rail lines were opened the regiment was assigned to a new task. Now platoons of men go to the front line in Germany and transport captured engineer equipment and materials to a warehouse near a city in Belgium. Here the lumber, hardware, glass, building materials, and electrical appliances are sorted, classified and stored for re-issue to American troops.

"The harder we work and the faster supplies get to the Army, the quicker we're going to get home," said Sergeant Harold B. Smith, 1463 E. 58th Street, Los Angeles. "We know we have to go home by way of Berlin and we want to get started."

Negro Drivers Rush Bridges For Crossing Of The Rhine By Allies

Age — New York, N. Y.

SOMEWHERE NEAR THE GERMAN BORDER — Having swept down from a Normandy beachhead all the way across France to territory which still smells of the enemy, Negro drivers of a Quartermaster Truck Company, operating over the now famous "Red Ball Highway," have delivered a Bailey bridge large enough to span the Rhine, the War Department reported Monday.

After delivering the bridge, the veteran invasion drivers left the Red Ball route and returned to the beachhead by way of Paris, with every town turning itself into a welcoming committee as the U. S. vehicles rolled through. It was "Bon Jour" from the Marne to the Channel.

The smiling soldiers gave away much of their precious rations to French urchins and pretty lasses who lined the streets, waving to them and throwing kisses.

This was one of the regular trips of this unit in its work on the newly inaugurated "Red Ball Line", over which many Negro and white trucking companies operate round-the-clock. This route is the outgrowth of the swift pace set by the First and Third Armies in their drives toward German territory, and became necessary in order to maintain the lengthening supply line now stretching more than 300 miles from the beaches and the great port of Cherbourg. It is a super-highway, with one way traffic on a road over which nothing but "Red Ball" ctled by the group commander.

In its functioning on the new "Red Ball Highway" the unit had made two trips since the route was begun a week ago, and totalled, approximately one thousand miles of hauling in those two trips.

The outfit arrived in England in February, 1944, following its activation and basic training at Camp McClain, Mississippi, and came to France in June.

10-14-44

10-14-44

10-14-44

12-1-44

10-14-44

First Sergeants Hold Conference At Depot In England

Guardian — Boston, Mass. 12-16-44

Released by U. S. War Department, Bureau of Public Relations

First Sergeants of a U. S. Quartermaster depot in England pictured at daily conference. Left to right: Master Sgt. Fred W. Klotz, Philadelphia; First Sergeants Emery L. Hopkins, Detroit; Walter G. Atwood, Madison, Wis.; James C. Drumm, Lancaster, Pa.; John J. Devancy, Harrisburg, Pa.; Leonard J. Preston, Baldwin, L. I., N. Y.; Walter S. Roseboro, Winston-Salem, N. C.; William O. McKee, Jr., Stamford, Conn.; Will A. Hassed, Lusk, Wyo.; Captain Woodrow S. Giordano, Vineland N. J., and Staff Sgt. George L. Howard, Salisbury, N. C. (Signal Corps Photo from BPR.)

GIs IN A SIGNAL CONSTRUCTION company in Cherbourg, France, test a cable preparatory to splicing it. They are, left to right: Tech. 3rd Grade Jesse C. Brookins, 25, of Oklahoma City, Okla.; Tech. Sgt. Joseph W. Danforth, 25, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Tech. Sgt. Winston R. McLemore, 25, of Little Rock, Ark. (U. S. Signal Corps Photo).

93rd Unit Cited For Service In Building Canada-Alaska Highway

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va.

FORT LEWIS, Wash.—There was plenty of spit and polish for the 93rd general service engineer regiment recently, when its members, dressed in their finest, stepped out smartly on the Fort Lewis Army Service Forces Training Center parade ground in cadence to martial airs, and were honored with a presentation from the War Department of their own unit battle streamers.

Maj. Gen. Joseph D. Patch, commander of Fort Lewis made the presentation. He was assisted by Col. Frank S. Besson, engineer commander, Colonel Charles F. Baish, commanding the 12th group and the 93rd regimental commander, Col. Walter W. Hodge.

The famed Negro regiment, now stationed at Fort Lewis, was cited along with 16 other units in War Department general orders for meritorious conduct in the construction of the Canadian-Alaskan military highway during the period from March to October in 1942.

GENERAL CARRIES STREAMERS

General Patch personally carried the streamers to the regiment's color standards and attached them.

"I have knowledge of your fine record in Alaska," he said to the soldiers lined up in formation before him, "and you have made a fine record here with us. Good work. Keep it up," he concluded.

The order, published by the War Department and circulated throughout the Army, states the Alaskan project had to be completed "with all speed within the physical capacity of the troops." The route selected for the highway lay across "vast areas of almost impenetrable wilderness vaguely mapped and but little known."

HARDSHIPS ENDURED

A suggestion of the hardships endured by members of the regiment in carrying out their assigned job is contained in the regimental historical annals. Men lived in tents. The temperature was usually around 60 degrees below zero. Tents had to be chopped up from the frozen ground with hand axes when moved.

Some of the areas through which the road was to go had never been traversed except by dog sled or on foot. The engineers were forced to overcome great difficulties imposed by mountainous terrain, deep muskeg, torrential streams, heavy forests—and always bad weather.

The War Department citation concludes by declaring that "remarkable engineering ability, unsurpassed devotion to duty," ingenious improvisation, and enabled the units to complete their mission in one short working season, and "thereby opened a supply road to Alaska that is of inestimable strategic value to the war effort of their country."

Before the battle streamers were presented, Colonel Besson awarded Good Conduct Ribbons to 108 men of the regiment, and congratulated each personally on winning the government honor.

After the streamer presentation, the entire regiment passed in review before General Patch, his staff, and other high-ranking Fort Lewis officers. Music for the occasion was provided by the 32nd Army Service Forces band.

ACTIVATED 1941

The "Ninety-third" was activated at Camp Livingston, La., in February of 1941. Selected Negro troops were picked from inductees and volunteers from the southern states. The unit, originally an engineer battalion, completed basic training and participated in the Louisiana-Texas maneuvers.

The battalion moved to Camp Claiborne, La., and was assigned to assist with the construction of the Camp Claiborne-Camp Polk railroad. On April 6, 1942, the outfit was redesignated as the 93rd general service engineer regiment, received overseas orders and by the end of the month had arrived in Skagway, Alaska. Work on the highway started immediately after arrival.

The regiment set a record of building a strip of road 69 miles long in one month and 12 days, or slightly more than a mile and a half a day. After four months about 240 miles of highway across some of the worst country in Alaska had been completed.

Brig. Gen. Clarence L. Sturdevant, assistant chief of engineers in Alaska said it was "the best section of road on the Alaskan highway."

The Aleutian Islands were the next stop on their trip ticket. Here, members of the regiment tackled even more difficult construction projects under equally trying conditions.

Early last summer the crack outfit returned to the United States, and is now undergoing additional training designed to further its usefulness. It awaits America's call to any part of the world.

47m-1944

They're Not Americans; Photo Fooled You

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. July 29, 1944
Foreign Service
7-29-44

These are Dutchmen from Surinam (Dutch New Guinea), en route to fight the Japs. Note the cigar. Regulations permit the Dutch troops to smoke on duty.

"372nd" ON MANY BATTLEFRONTS BUT REGIMENT STILL TORRID TOPIC

Guardian — Boston, Mass.

JIM CROW SYSTEM ALL WRONG, REMEDY NEEDED FOR POST WAR ARMY

12-16-44

The Status of the 372nd Infantry Regiment, recently transferred to Fort Huachuca, Arizona, is gaining more and more comment which has lately been snow-balling into giant proportions. Ever since the once famous "Red Hand" battle-decorated regiment was reorganized at Fort Dix, March 10, 1941, nearly four years ago, the subject of the 372nd has been a red-hot topic that is positively futile to suppress.

REPLACEMENT POOL

If this were a case of saving some mother's boy from the hell and hate of battle, this reporter might ignore entirely whether the 372nd remained at home for the duration or not. But although the 372nd "in name" has been nearly four years in this country, our 372nd officers and men have been rationed out to help organize and strengthen many outfits that have been fighting on the battlefields for months. This is verified by a recently publicized ANP report stating that on April 1944 the 372nd was transferred from Fort Dix to Camp Breckenridge, Kentucky, where it began serving as a "replacement pool for combat troops". Actually then, the 372nd has already assigned possibly thousands of men to other outfits. It is very doubtful if the outfit is the same trigger trained, polished regiment that we in Boston gloried in, a few years ago. Just why the 372nd had to sacrifice so much of its hard earned achievement in officers and men is a sad question indeed to those who worked and sacrificed to create the regiment. To see these hard, painful gains lavishly assigned to other outfits is not an easy pill to swallow.

12-16-44

PRIDE OF BOSTON

The people of Boston have already felt that they owned the most choice interest in the 372nd simply because the nucleous of the entire regiment appeared to be centered in famous Old Company L and later the smooth efficiently drilled Third Battalion and Band. Of course the records show that both Washington, D. C., and Ohio share in the early growth and development of the 372nd as well as New England during the first world war. This has not been an exclusive .Boston local enterprise even though the local outfit has been the best and unquestionably provided the best commissioned and non commissioned officers and men. For some reason certain weeklies have played down this fact about our New England sepia soldiers and played up less qualified boys living in their surrounding towns. At the outbreak of the present war there wer eonly two 372nd regiments; the Third of Massachusetts and the Second from Ohio. These two outfits had to pool their talents to build up the rest of the regiment. And the commander today is Colonel Edward O "Ned" Gourdin of Boston.

12-16-44

LOSING IDENTITY?

If the people of Boston have particular pride in the 372nd as a fighting outfit having its own historic traditions, I can see why they hav eevery right to be disturbed over any threat of the 372nd losing its own particular men of achievement and identity to other outfits. Of course, if the 372nd is to be a "training school" for replacements on the order of a sepia West Point, the people are entitled to know more about it and it would appear that this national guard outfit (remember) should be classified as "regular army," along wih the 24th and 25th. But to those of us who have always been led to believe that the 372nd was a national guard infantry combat regiment the present situation is most puzzling to say the least. Every Bay State Colored military unit, from the Fighting Fifty-Fourth to Old Company L has been a great combat team.

12-16-44

LEAVE OLD OUTFIT

There are about 800,000 Colored troops in the U .S. Army of which more than half are serving overseas at this time. This is a large percentage of our manpower in action compared to many other races and the figures seem to show that the colored lads in uniform are doing their full share, with more and more adding to the total rapidly. Many of these men now fighting overseas are former 372nd men and reports indicate they are suffering casualties, which is to be expected, with other outfits. True, war plays no favorites but it is fair enough to ask why men trained and long steeped in the traditions of a famous combat infantry shouldn't much prefer to remain and take their risks and contribute their honors with their "old outfit". In the case of draftees men have little choice; but the 372nd, like other famous outfits has long been an enlisted man's pride of volunteers.

12-16-44

"CROW" MUST GO

Colored people have seen famous colored combat units "changed" and even broken in the past and this subject, therefore, is nothing new to the general public. Since it can be directly attributed to Jim Crow policy which has long restricted the number of colored combat units (making it always necessary to "borrow" from the few that do exist) this problem will never be solved until present policies are eliminated. No other reasons can disguise this fact. If we are going to have jim crow (and we're not) we should have had two or three colored divisions before the war and kept each combat unit intact under high ranking colored officers and men from top to bottom. The hypocrisy of it is that such a system never truly did exist—and never will. What we need now, and in the postwar military set-up is a complete elimination of this jim crow evil and create a system wherein brothers in Democracy can fight and share their commands side by side. Is not this the Democracy we are fighting for? Let us face the facts.

12-16-44

Negroes Hunt Nazi Snipers

Amsterdam News — New York, N. Y.
6-17-44

Our Boys Are Integrated On French Beaches; Gain Glory

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, Allied Expeditionary Forces, London—American Negro troops under the command of Capt. Samuel S. Broussard, of Breauxbridge, La., were active in the advance units of the expeditionary forces in France over the weekend, and have pushed forward to continue mopping-up operations in several towns. American troops have driven more than 18 miles inland from the invasion beaches of France and have undergone vigorous training in the assault troops as well as those now are believed to be participating in the battle areas. common action batteries of Befors and anti-aircraft Germans are being machine guns, are laying smoke screens to cover the advancing been none too de- fighters and are laying field wire where Negroes are vital messages through. has filtered It was reported that elements of censorship to reveal the Allied Expeditionary Force had been deployed throughout a typical 300 mile area contiguous to the French coast which was to be the point of initial contact. Negro soldiers, it was said, had already established a new system of telephone exchanges and lines were set up in this area. In one section alone, they laid down three new landing fields and extended seven more for the air force.

6-17-44

The French Cherbourg peninsula line was cracking wide open at its center, reports from the front declared Monday night and it appeared that Nazi defenses at Caen hinge of the line to the east, were in danger of collapsing. American troops Monday had by-passed Montebourg, which is 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg, and were hammering their way up the peninsula toward the great French port. Montebourg was still holding out.

In Thick of Battle

Meanwhile, in the thick of the fighting Negro quartermaster, air force ground crews, service troops and some anti-aircraft units were said to be operating under severe shelling of American positions by the retreating Nazis. In the mopping up operations in small French villages and towns, Negro soldiers were said to be particularly effective in ferreting out German snipers.

When H-Hour arrived June 6, airborne troops were flown over the English channel and a heavy bombardment by naval guns was laid down to knock out enemy installations. Gradually heavier weapons were brought in by Negro quartermaster outfits and service troops, after Rangers and Commandos began going ashore from landing barges. Engineers went in almost simultaneously to start cleaning up the mess.

6-17-44

Supplies in larger quantities are pouring into the battle zone and Negro soldiers, operating Bulldozers, were reported "moving in and out like ants" as they cleared beaches and surrounding areas of debris and other obstacles.

Gallant American Leads Filipinos Against Japanese

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

12-6-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the ATLANTA DAILY WORLD and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)
(Copyright — Reproduction prohibited)

LEYTE BEACH, PHILIPPINES — By Courier — On Samar island, northeast of Leyte, fighting with the fierceness of an enraged animal is Capt. Frank Merith, American Negro leader of a Filipino guerrilla band. Capt. Merith is one of the big stores of the war. His deeds and those of his ragged men have spread among American troops like wild fire.

Exact whereabouts of the giant Negro is still secret military information, but this correspondent is pushing off in search of him. It is a search well worthwhile, because what Livingston meant to the natives of Africa, surely Merith means the same to the people of the Southern Philippines. And as news of Livingston spread around the world, so should the deeds of this Negro be made known.

FIGHT WITH KNIVES

The guerrillas on Samar continue to fight the enemy. Armed with bolos, knives, even sticks — these natives, many clad in rags, ferociously defend the homeland. Tales of superhuman courage and endurance have reached us here.

For instance, the total population of the important town of Basey and surrounding villages numbered 30,000 before enemy occupation. When the enemy arrived most of these people fled to the hills. There they fought the enemy for over a year.

While women and children foraged for food — fruits, coconuts, and edible pith which grows in the heart of coconut trees — all able-bodied men fought. It has been a hard fight and continues to be. The equipment.

12-6-44

TAKE JAP RIFLES

Few rifles were taken from the Japs. And American planes dropped some ammunition. American submarines smuggled equipment in. However, because of the intenseness of the operations, all has been too little.

The enemy reached a maximum of ruthlessness on Samar. The town was stripped bare of its meager resources.

Perhaps the heaviest penalty of all was that the Japs took away the food. The population suffered miserably from malnutrition. Only since American troops entered have food and medical supplies begun to pour in. Five doctors and one dentist are presently at work patching up the ills of the populact. Sores, blisters, malarial cases, pneumonia — these are only a few of the items which harass the population.

MERITH LEADERS

Captain Merith, it was told the writer, was chosen as one of the leaders. Under the Negro and others, their valor reaches daily news heights.

The story goes that Capt. Merith has been in the Philippines for many years, making his home on Samar. He married a native woman and owned property. The enemy caught him as well as the others. The Negro was attached to General MacArthur's command.

Every three out of five Filipinos on Leyte know or knows of Captain Merith. And many have said, "Ah, he is a good man — our friend. And he is a very good fighter, too."

Captain Merith is the story. He is worth walking a continent to find. Every attempt will be made to find him.

12-6-44

92nd Div. Soldier Kills 15 Nazis in Day; 10 Decorated

Afro-American

Balt. Md.

11-18-44

By ART CARTER
AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION (By Cable) — Killing fifteen Germans in one day was the feat accomplished by Pfc. Ollie V. Ammons of Lonoke, Ark., who was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action Friday as 92nd Division soldiers received two silver stars and eight bronze stars.

During hot action near Seravezza on October12, Ammons used his Browning automatic rifle to infiict heavy casualties upon enemy forces. Defying six counter-attacks by the enemy, he stood his ground until the last man was behind him as our forces withdrew to a better position, killing nine Germans. Earlier in the day he had plucked off six enemy soldiers while holding a mountain sector against advancing enemy forces.

Another Gets Silver Star

The other Silver Star award went to a first lieutenant who bravely led his platoon to accomplish a mission in spite of wounds received in battle. He continued his leadership for three hours though wounded, refusing to leave his men for medical aid until so ordered by the company commander. The latter award was made posthumously.

Bronze stars for meritorious service in combat were awarded to Capt. Clarence Brown, Jr., of Philadelphia; S/Sgt. Mandy James, Newport News, Va.; Cpl. Richard A. Warr, Memphis; Pvt. Matthew Ragland, Buffalo, N.Y.; Cpl. Carroll James and three white officers, Capt. Elmere F. Reedy, Woodstock, Va.; and First Lieuts. Jessea Wooten and Josepha Corsaro.

Captain Brown's citation and award was based on the October 12 action when he masterly led his company through a difficult night advance, notwithstanding repeated enemy counter-thrusts. Throughout the night, heavy machine-gun, mortar and rifle fire harrassed the company, but in the morning it reached its objective and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

Sergeant James defied machine-gun fire to rescue a wounded officer, dragging the injured man to a place of safety, while Corporal Warr and Private Ragland were cited for advancing under fire to rescue a wounded comrade, going first on the back of a tank, then crawling through a tunnel and finally crawling thirty yards over exposed terrain to reach the wounded soldier.

Corporal James was awarded the bronze star for work with Lieutenant Carsaro who convinced seven enemy soldiers that it was best to surrender after going through exposed territory to talk with them.

HEADLINES Footlights

By FREDI WASHINGTON

THE DAY THE ENTIRE WORLD waited for for more than two years arrived suddenly and swiftly and now it is seven days past D-Day. The day that brought a nation which is primarily interested in making money, to its knees and the realization that it matters not what their military strength is or will be, an invasion of a continent cannot be successful without the help and guidance of the invincible power of God.

Peoples Voice 6-17-44

NEGROES IN FIRST LANDINGS

This day, the greatest in the history of the world for all freedom-loving people, we have been privileged to live through bloody though it be. The inventions of modern science, mainly the radio, brought into our homes the happenings of the first landing of our troops and equipment on the beaches of France. Among these fighting men were Negroes who came from every civilian profession including the theatre. They were not on that beachhead in the capacities which we would like to see them in, but by God, they were and are there equally brave and efficient as any man in the invasion. They too are giving their blood in order that men who have been reduced to slavery, might be free.

Those Negroes who are attached to the Medical Corps are not concerned immediately with killing but the saving of lives. What a great source of satisfaction it must be to them when they are able to get their wounded to shelter and medical care in time to save their lives. Perhaps there is no glory or medals to be derived from their operations but their heroism is mute testimony to their beliefs in the ideals of democracy.

D-DAY DOUBLE MEANING FOR NEGROES

To Negroes on the battlefronts in France or a defense factory at home, D-Day has a double significance. It means also the liberation of Negroes wherever they might be who live under home-grown systems of fascism and tyranny.

These are a few of the reasons why every Negro church in the country held special prayer services on D-Day—the sale of War Bonds took a decided spurt upwards in Negro communities and Negro artists got out on street corners to sell bonds. Almost simultaneously with an announcement on the radio that Great Britain had put her secret weapon, the Hamel Car (the largest glider in the world) into operation landing tanks and troops in France, the regular Sunday program, "New World A'Coming" was dedicating its full half hour to D-Day and what it means to the Negro. This program which is sponsored by The City-Wide Citizen's Committee of Harlem, brought to the microphone Dr. Channing Tobias, secretary for the National YMCA; Walter White, executive secretary for the NAACP who recently returned from the battlefronts; Dr. Shelton Bishop, pastor of St. Phillips Episcopal Church, and Marian Anderson. The Hall Johnson choir sang spirituals which aptly told of the woes, struggles and hopes of the Negro.

The program was timely, fitting and carried the kind of impact that should make those of us who are different, aware of the fact that the winning of this campaign is twice as important to us as to the whites. And to those whites who are determined to keep the Negro in the place he has designed for him, it should have served to make them re-evaluate the meaning of the word democracy.

D-Day was but the beginning of a long hard bloody battle which will bring sorrow, suffering and strife to the entire world. Our men are in that fight. Some will return whole, some wounded and others not at all. That is the price of war. These facts we must face but in facing them we should ever keep in mind that a one day prayer system is of no interest to the Divine Maker nor will good intentions without material action give to those boys fighting, the moral assistance or the equipment to win this war that is needed.

Instead, prayer must be changed from lip service to right, charitable and just thoughts and deeds and our intention to buy those stamps and bonds put into weekly action. It is unfortunate that we have to fight a war and to lose our loved ones but the job has to be done and the sooner every man, woman and child realize it takes a constant concentration in time, energy and money to finish it, the sooner will all the Hitler's be dethroned and we can get on with our "New World" where all men will have freedom of life and opportunity.

The theatre managers of Harlem's movie houses combined their resources to get the 5th War Bond Drive under way in this community last Friday with a rally and show at Dewey Square. A bandstand was built and bond and salvage booths manned by ladies of AWVS took care of sales and collection of waste paper.

Bill Robinson, the king of benefits arrived in New York in time to give his assistance to raising our quota of sales, and was on hand to not only conduct a jitterbug contest between the tiny tots and juniors but to buy $75 worth of stamps as prizes to the winners. Tiny Bradshaw brought his entire band out to furnish the music. Willie Bryant acted as m.c. Vivian Smith played some tempting boogie-woogie which had the spectators jumping and Warren Evans sang a'la Frank Sinatra. Bud Harris helped to handle the crowds until the Army arrived for their demonstration.

LIFE

YANKS IN ENGLAND
It took Mrs. Hopper a long time.

PERSONNEL
Time—Chicago, Ill.
10-30-44

Report on the G.I.

Few weeks before Invasion Day, the south England village of Chandler's Ford awoke one morning to find it had become a concentration point for U.S. troops. None watched them more appraisingly than a British soldier's wife, Mrs. Joan Hopper, who had previously found that Americans seemed "just like us" (TIME, July 31). After they had left for France she wrote this report:

One night we were disturbed by the din of wheels and tracks for hours, and next morning we saw we were "invaded" by the American Army.

After then, we never knew when the roads would be empty or full. Some [troops] stayed twelve hours, others two weeks, others three days; we just didn't know. The first crowd was a shock. They were untidy, insolent; their "pin-ups," which they plastered all over their lorries and guns, were pretty hot, and the remarks painted underneath, and the names of lorries, gave offense. We thought "So this is the American Army."

The next batch was duly snubbed, poor fellows, and although they were well-behaved we refused to thaw. The third batch was a fine example of military efficiency and good behavior, and they soon won our friendship. Their lorries, equipment, uniforms were spotless; they nailed tins to every post and tree for the rubbish, dug pits to burn it, swept the roads to keep them neat, were courteous and never rowdy or rude.

The Welcome Guests. From then on they all the batches who came were decent, and enjoyed having them around and felt very sorry they couldn't accept the hospitality of our homes, as the majority were ordered to stand by their equipment.

Outdoor Housekeeping. We saw washing on little lines strung up anywhere, on the wire fence, between two bumpers, two branches, across the pavement. During the briefest days they wore trunks of the briefest style, looked very healthy and brown, and they really behaved like boys, playing ball, wrestling, and all sorts of games, and how they loved harmonicas, banjos and guitars.

My most embarrassing moment, when I was walking along a houseless stretch, was to spot a soldier on the top of a lorry colored troops. What we had heard of them had not been favorable, but although we had hundreds in the area at odd times, and although I see them every day out here, I have never heard of any unpleasant incidents. They seem to get quite a lot of fun out of life without annoyance to anyone. They're very well-behaved, polite and quiet, in fact, good Americans.

When your men are back home once more, I do hope they'll remember us kindly. We're a conventional little island, slow to accept changes, slow to make friends. It's taken us a long time to appreciate and like the Yanks, and it's taken the war to bring about that change.

10-30-44

A Special Word. May I just add a special word of praise in favor of your

Reporter On Foray Counts 25 Dead Japanese

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. 4-29-44 Foreign Service 47th Div

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(NNPA War Correspondent) ..

BOUGAINVILLE — (Via Wireless from South Pacific) —I have just spent a night with the forward echelon of a detachment of the 93rd Division—and I have felt the hot breath of death close at hand.

I listened as men cursed and prayed . . . I saw five tight-lipped men who had suffered the night through in silence, their clothes saturated by caked blood.

I counted 25 dead Japanese soldiers . . . grim toll exacted by the detachment in its push across the Torokina river in hot pursuit of fleeing enemy forces.

LED BY DARING D. C. BOY 4-29-44 ..

The group, led by 1st Lt. Conway Jones of Washington, D. C., moved into position atop a jungle crag several thousand feet ahead of the main contingent.

During the inky blackness of night in the jungles . . . with pelting rains adding to the dismal gloom . . . the enemy attacked with knives, hand grenades and rifle fire. In the sinister darkness on the suicide mission, their blood-chilling and bestial yells, plus exploding "fire-crackers," rent the air—given double exposure by rebounding echoes.

WE FLIRT WITH DEATH

Your correspondent, a member of Lieutenant Jones' party, felt death's hot breath very close. Only those officers and men who stare death in the face know their feeling when life depends on quick thinking and the mercy of God Almighty. 4-29-44

Our troops fought with viciousness and valor, meeting steel with steel. Jones' party, with heavy packs — accompanied by Medical Captain Dunbar Gibson of St. Louis, Mo.; Lts. Paul Taylor of San Mateo, Calif., and Claude Jones of Wichita Falls, Texas, as well as litter bearers—moved cautiously along the crooked trail flanked by Kunai grass, clinging underbrush and tousled trees, and our men waded through swift yellow streams.

Winding up hills, the party often cleared the trail as noises indicated enemy troops. The foliage was so dense one could not see five yards. Spasmodic firing would have revealed our positions.

UNBURIED BODIES

Once while crossing the plateau we noticed unburied bodies of enemy soldiers, their arms outspread. Lieutenant Jones led the silent column, alerting when necessary against possible ambush. With their temperature boiling over under the mental pressure, the men sweated profusely.

After four hours, we reached the desired position. Fiji scouts, occupying the bivouac, pushed ahead, leaving as their handiwork nine dead enemy bodies.

New Zealanders had warned Lieutenant Jones to expect attack in this region surrounded by Japanese, when the night is blackest and the rain is hardest. But the defense perimeter was secured as dusk fell like a pall and rain started. Shelter cover was spread over foxholes and the men bedded down after a quick "nature shower." 4-29-44

GRUESOME EXPERIENCE

Captain Gibson made hot cocoa from the stream below, but it tasted awful even after the water was chlorinated. Darkness hit suddenly at 6:30 o'clock in the evening with the only sounds coming from insects and the soft rain patter.

Five of us, including Lieutenant Jones, had herded into a dugout. Each man was given a two hour watch through the night. After a half hour, a machine gun blast was heard, followed by womanlike, unearthly yells. Two grenades exploded. Another grenade was heard, this time exploding near our foxhole, a former Japanese command post.

Lieutenant Jones, in a coated voice, whispered, "That was my man yelling. He's hurt."

"You can't get to him," Gibson warned, "You can't go out there. You'd be shot before taking five steps." 4-29-44

Outside, it was total darkness. To move around meant sudden death, even from our own men. Somebody breathed, "This looks like it." Another swore, "The devils will never take me alive."

COMMOTION BREAKS OUT

A grenade exploded, ripping our shelter in half. A voice called out, "They're jumping in holes—there he goes—stop him." Another grenade burst. Lieutenant Jones, breathing fast, said, "My rifle's choked, Claude, let me have your trench knife."

A machine gun blast burst out. Gibson pulled the handle on his rifle as we huddled close together, awaiting a possible charge. There was sudden quiet after three hours, but intermittent fire. The insects continued their chorus. Frogs croaked and lightning bugs resembled searchlight batteries.

PRAYER IN ORDER

There were groans and, this time, Gibson said prayerfully, "I can't get to them, God keep them until morning." Somebody moved through the brush. Fire started again and Jones warned, "It's better to lie on the flat of the back, then when you look over the rim of the foxhole any approaching figure is silhouetted against the sky." 4-29-44

A Japanese .25 caliber rifle sang out. Taylor, breathing loud in a corner, said, "Somewhere out there, people are singing, laughing and dancing." There was silence again and Jones, lying next to your correspondent, said, "There is something moving in front of us." It proved to be palm leaves swaying, looking like giant waving arms. Gibson snorted on being punched softly and said, "Sorry, I'm not asleep," and added, I saw my wife."

Somebody fired a machine gun. Breath for us came hard and heavy. Claude Jones said he had to go to the latrine. But that was impossible, so a ration can was passed from man to man.

Gibson's stomach growled. It sounded like a lion roaring. He grabbed his stomach, keeping it quiet, because we did not know who was moving about. The noise was so bad sleep was difficult.

FIVE CASUALTIES

There was more rifle fire and dawn finally came. When we heard our own mortar barrage from within the perimeter it sounded like jingle bells on Christmas morning. A soldier crawled toward the foxhole, telling Captain Gibson, "You'd better come fast. Five men have been hurt—two cut." 4-29-44

We crawled over, finding tight-lipped men suffering in silence. They had lain wounded all night, their clothes saturated by caked blood. After an examination, Dr. Gibson said that all would live as their ailments were mostly flesh wounds.

The number of enemy attacking was undetermined, but 25 were found dead.

92nd Wins Praise For Success At Lucca

Journal + Guide Norfolk, Va. 9-23-44

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY — via wireless — (DELAYED)—Fighting way about 2 miles inland over rough mountain trails, after crossing the Arno River, units of the 92nd division blasted their way into the walled city of Lucca in a drive which won for them the praise of the top officers of this theatre.

At Vorno, in the valley south of Lucca, the 92nd met stiff resistance from the Germans who threw everything, including machine guns, mortars, and heaviest artillery at the advancing infantrymen. The Buffaloes had to attack towards Lucca in the face of a blistering fire.

JORDAN IN DANGER AGAIN 9-23-44

This correspondent, who was in Vorno with these units, was pinned down by heavy enemy artillery fire for four days, but finally managed to get out by leaving with a motor supply convoy on the night of September 5. We used a back road without lights and even then ran into heavy artillery barrages which were intended to render the road impassable. But it was necessary for this writer to take this dangerous trip in order to get out of the lines so that this dispatch could be filed.

The Germans were fighting desperately to hold the gun positions commanding the Lucca area. Ambulances and medics worked heroically under constant, deliberate fire to tend the wounded.

EROIC FEATS

The Negro troops performed many feats of heroism that would have probably been regarded as sensational in other branches of the Army but which were all in a day's work for the infantry.

Natives in the towns which the Buffaloes have liberated instantly cheer these troops despite the German propaganda that Negro troops would murder children and the aged and would rape women. I saw men and women weep for joy as these troops entered their towns driving out the brutal Nazis. Natives threw flowers and gave these men wine and fruit. They were all very cordial to the 92nd troopers. 9-23-44

AIDED BY PARTISANS

Italian Partisans have given valuable aid and information to the 92nd as these men battled northward. These victories by the Negro infantrymen have had a vital influence on the strategy of the Fifth Army by pushing the Germans out of eight towns on the march to Lucca.

A prisoner, captured by the 92nd, gave the Fifth Army high command valuable information affecting the entire front.

NO LONGER GREEN

In a statement to this reporter, the commanding officer of the 92nd said: "These men are no longer green troops. They are now battle-hardened fighters equal to any in the world."

The unit's first battle casualty was a popular sergeant who was killed on August 24. His death stunned and angered the combat troops and they are now fighting harder because of the inspiration they get from the death of their beloved buddy.

Among the company commanders who led the men in the battle for Lucca are: Lt. Donald L. Counts, St. Louis; Captain Charles F. Gandy, Washington; Lt. James F. Murray, Steubensville, Ohio, and Lt. Raymond H. Montgomery, of Washington. The last named is the commanding officer of a heavy weapons unit. 9-23-44

Meanwhile to the west, other units of the 92nd moved up from the Arno to a hill above Pisa where they contacted units of the Japanese-American infantry division. In still another sector, a combat team column smashed straight forward driving the Germans back into the Gothic Line where the Nazis are fighting a desperate but a hopeless battle.

The company commanders who had charge of the units which advanced on the hill over Pisa were: Lt. Jesse E. Jarman, Indianapolis, Ind.; Captain Clarence H. Brown, Philadelphia; and Captain Julian Miles, of New York City.

"ANZIO EXPRESS"

Everywhere it is the same story. The troops are having to advance under heavy artillery fire while supplies are moved in quietly at night because the roads are heavily shelled. 9-20-44

The Germans have moved in their famous "Anzio Express" gun. This gun became famous during the Anzio beachhead operation because of its size and its range. It is one of the largest artillery weapons ever used.

GERMANS STIFFEN

Lt. Reuben Horner, of Tucson, Arizona, a platoon leader, broke the tension recently with a subtly humorous crack. He said: "The Germans may be hopelessly trapped in Italy and may be fighting a losing battle, but somebody ought to tell them so. Those we meet are fighting harder than ever." 9-23-44

That aptly sums up the situation. Our troops are advancing but every yard of this advance is made in the face of withering fire.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This dispatch was filed by Mr. Jordan some time ago but was delayed because it was lost somewhere between the censor's office and the RCA at AFHQ PRO in Italy.)

92ND DIVISION DRIVE TAKES 2 MOUNTAIN TOPS

Defender—Chicago, Ill. 10-14-44

All-Negro Outfit Pushes On Toward Big Italy Naval Base

ROME—Driving through rain and deep mud, Negro troops of the 92nd Division advancing along the western end of the Italian front which has been widened to 12 miles as the Americans in the 5th Army's drive on Bologna, 12 miles from their front lines. 10-14-44

In spite of the stiffened German resistance all along the front, the captured two mountain tops of Mount Canala fell before the withering fire power of the Negro soldiers of the 92nd are forging re-Sunday, making the first sig-infantrymen, who are now men-nificant gains in the lentlessly ahead in their sector, push on Bologna. cing the La Spezia naval base 20 miles away.

The twin peaks of Mount Costa and Mount Canala fell before the withering fire power of the Negro infantrymen, who are now men-lentlessly ahead in their sector, cing the La Spezia naval base 20 miles away.

Troops of the 92nd Division are making their gains through the dreaded rains.

47m-1944

Versatile Marksman Bags Two Japanese

Daily Worker - N.Y. - 11-13-44

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12.—Pvt. Luther J. McNair's regular infantry job was in a 60-mm mortar squad of the 93rd Infantry Division.

But the two Japanese he bagged on Bougainville were killed with other weapons, the Browning automatic and M-1 Garand rifles.

"Most every man in my outfit could handle all the Infantry weapons," he said in an interview at Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco, released today by the War Department. "For months before we went overseas, we had been through intensive maneuvers, and we were well trained and tough."

The 26-year-old doughboy, whose home is in Los Angeles, joined the 93rd, a Negro division, after completing his basic training at the Infantry Replacement Training Center, Camp Wheeler, in the spring of 1943.

"We were ready when we went overseas," he said, "and we didn't waste much time going into action. The division split up after we landed in Guadalcanal last February, and my regiment was fighting on Bougainville within a month.

"That first battle, for Hill 260, was some fight, too. Our first job was to push across a river where the Japs were firing at us from concealed and dug-in positions about 50 yards from our bank.

"That was where I got to kill my first Jap. We had come up to the river late one afternoon and this sniper kept firing at us all night long, giving us the very devil. I finally located him the next morning and let go a BAR burst into the tree he was firing from. His body hung from the tree the rest of the day.

"The other Nip I got was several days later when we were advancing. I was carrying my M-1 and saw him using a telephone in a hole about 35 yards ahead. It would have been hard to miss him, and I didn't."

Pvt. McNair got through those weeks on the front line without a scratch, he said, but he wasn't so fortunate when he went back to the rear for a rest.

"I was standing about 25 yards from a bulldozer just as it scraped across a land mine or an unexploded shell," he related. "The blast knocked me about 10 feet. That was the last of May, and I've been hospitalized since then."

Pvt. LUTHER J. MacNAIR

NEGRO UNIT PROUD OF GAINS IN ITALY

Times—New York N.Y.
11-1-44

But Men of the 92d Division Object to Special Attention Because of Race

By MILTON BRACKER

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Foreign Service

WITH A REGIMENTAL COMBAT TEAM of the United States Ninety-second Division on the Italian front, Oct. 30 (Delayed)—The progress and development of the first Negro combat unit to meet the Germans in the European theatre has been "normal and progressively satisfactory," their commanding general said yesterday.

Aware of the great interest in their work and its extreme importance in the future Negro share in American military history, the men who form the fighting vanguard of the Ninety-second Division have been in the front line for as many as sixty-eight days and have kept their advance at least up to the pace of more experienced divisions in the more active sector around Bologna. 11-1-44

The Negro outfit has killed Germans—one man is up for citation for having killed thirteen with his damaged carbine—and has had its losses.

Object to Special Attention

Negro GI's and officers—the former predominantly from Southern States—deplore accounts that play up their achievements along lines which they feel point more to color than to the accomplishment itself and this fact is extremely important in any presentation of the present role of the outfit.

The situation in which the Negro soldier here finds himself thus grows out of a situation that applies to all minority groups. The men want to do well as a matter of group pride and at the same time they do not want to be singled out for attention that they feel is based more on their color than on their work. 11-1-44

Japanese-American members of the celebrated 100th Battalion, which is no longer in Italy, objected to special publicity on awards and citations on the grounds that it overemphasized the "hyphenated" quality of their Americanism. Negro officers say they want above all to be regarded as American fighting men. Yet they admit their men want to do particularly well as a matter of race pride.

The overall principle of race relaions, established by Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond of Luray, Va., who brought the Ninety-second Division overseas, was that the development of the new infantry outfit was a military and not a sociological problem. This approach was bound to cut corners, but one result has been that Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, commander of the Fifth Army, feels that there is no problem of race relations within his forces.

White Officers Are in Issue

This combat team has a white colonel and lieutenant colonel and although there are many Negro company officers, captains and lieutenants, none ranks white junior officers. Moreover all current officer replacements are white. The colonel, who is a native of Connecticut but has lived long in Virginia, does not foresee the time when his outfit will include Negro junior officers outranking white junior officers. 11-1-44

In rear areas certain considerations have arisen out of race, which the division first encountered in training at home. Negro GI's are not permitted to carry knives of any sort except the regular issue knife or bayonet, which is not concealed and is as much a part of front line equipment as rifles or grenades.

Then the military police problem has been solved by having one white and one Negro MP patrol border areas together. The basic principle is that the white man handles white offenders and the Negro handles Negroes. All Negro MP's are more than six feet tall. They do not carry pistols but use a short club.

There is no official segregation in forward or rear areas at messes or latrines or in sleeping accommodations although every Negro in the dvsion, having trained in at lease one Southern State, has had his share of it in the Army.

At the officers' mess here there is only one table. But at divisional headquarters, the night I messed there, Negro officers went to one table. 11-1-44

The divisional general reiterated that his outfit was administered on "military rather than racial lines" and added: "I don't try to choose an officer's friends for him."

Some white officers said some Negro infantrymen tended to "panic" more easily than whites and that the superstition and ignorance of some Southern boys could not be ignored. But more responsible officers said the greatest problem of Negro combat troops was inexperience against a foe as tough as the Germans.

ling about this lefields of Italy.
eld and we are the next one.
ud, Mother?

learned of the death of his brother in Normandy soon after the invasion.

Both brothers were leaders in their union. They stood for everything wholesome and progressive, and were Communists.

"Dear Friends," he wrote, "you guys who worked and fought side by side with Bill, my brother, and with myself:

"Perhaps you were informed before I was about his death, yet I feel it my duty to let you know that my brother and friend, and your friend and brother, too has fallen in battle.

"For some years prior to the war a group of us in the union were able to recognize the growing menace of fascism. We studied its every shape and tried to warn others, but were often looked upon as crackpots or even worse. Among those who saw the light and pitched in to help us fight for democracy was my brother Bill. 10-16-44

"Because of previous experience in army life, he and I felt we could do more for American ith my Italian

l friends among you could see eating spaghetti aking wine with ater in Boston.
dance—it is a nd. A friend of e, and I rode all
r ever rode one.
ad it up to 80
ry. The boy has verybody, Hello,
all, Your loving gating the blood plasma.

"I could go on forever telling a wonderful meeting on the battlefield
Future meetings are to be held ar going over to their tents for the Doesn't it make you feel proud, M

"I am coming along fine with m and have made some very swell frien the good people here. I wish you me sitting down at the table eating with the whole family and drinking them—it is consumed like water h
Next Sunday I am going to a danc festival, and they insist I attend. A mine has an English motorcycle, and day yesterday, the first time I ever
I am crazy about it, and had it miles, but Mamma, do not worry. Th already sold the bike. Tell everybo and that I am thinking of you all, Y son,

"P.S.—Did they, or didn't they have a Race Riot in Boston?"

10-16-44

A MEMBER of a New York tr sends us a letter from a fellow-member

"BROTHER.

they, recently

Red Cross and their former policy about segre

Change the World

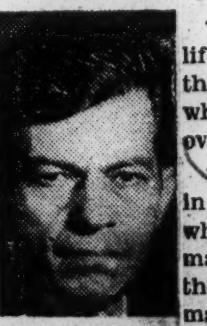
White and Negro GIs Talk Things Over in Italy

By Mike Gold

Daily Worker — New York, N.Y.

A NEGRO soldier from Boston whose mother is a reader of this column recently wrote her from Italy, where he has seen some heavy fighting and she sends the letter on. 10-16-44

The boy's letter contains an interesting flash of some spontaneous attemps by white soldiers to break down the Jimcrow evil.



"I really have good news to disclose to you this time," he writes. "We are affiliated with some white troops here, and they have shown a bit of true interest in us. Last night we had an interesting meeting between our boys and theirs. It was a great success; and maybe the first of its kind in the history of the armed forces.

"The meeting was sponsored by a white boy from the west, who is champion of minority groups, especially ours. He is an active trade unionist, also, I assume, a Communist. I was appointed chairman of the meeting by our C.O.

"This white soldier gave a good talk on the life of George Washington Carver. I gave them the history of our regiment, and just what our boys were doing for Uncle Sam all over the world. 10-16-44

"We discussed our problem in the States, in the Army, and what we expect will happen when we get back home. There are a great many southern whites in the outfit, but even their first Sergeant, who hails from Texas, made a very fine speech. Our lieutenant was present, and gave an excellent speech on the democracy in the army than in defense work. So when war broke out we signed up, leaving behind our wives and children. As you know, it was not done on the spur of impulse, but after careful thought and discussion.

"Bill's letters to me showed he knew the score. His desire to help exterminate fascism and all its beasts caused him to select a branch of the service that was exceedingly dangerous. He proved his merit there by being promoted to the rank of Sergeant.

"According to the reports Bill was killed in the first week of July, which means he got to doing some of the work he longed for so much—the extermination of Nazis. Now we are short a good soldier in our ranks. It is our job to learn and study harder to recognize evil and in recognizing to stamp it out. Tough days are still ahead. We are traitors if we ever grew complacent before the evil of fascism. Best of everything to all of you. Your friend and Fellow Fighter, David."

Attitude of Australian Press to Soldiers Changing

Call — Kansas City, Mo
The Call Kansas City Mo.

By FLETCHER MARTIN
NNPA War Correspondent

GENERAL MAC ARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS—(Delayed)—The attitude of elements of the Australian press toward American Negro soldiers has changed greatly during the last four months, however periodically it blows cold, and cutting statements disparage them in banner lines. Especially has this been true with the nationally read weekly "Truth." At times the latter publication has reached heights gained by former Governor Leigret last December when he issued for world publication foundationless charges against Negro troops stationed in New Caledonia.

7-28-44

In southern Australia Truth's former crusade against Negro soldiers caused army officials to openly protest. Military records substantiated army claims that charges made were out of proportion to actual misconduct. Truth's trend of thought was similar to that held by Ex-Gov. Leigret, "It is unsafe for our women to walk the streets alone."

From their section some Australians have chosen to believe Truth's charges, while others, including the majority of newspapers, have cried out in protest against the treatment of Negroes here.

Soldiers Are Human

Dr. C. V. Pilcher, co-adjutor bishop of Sydney, in addressing an international women's day committee, was quoted as saying, "We have a duty to treat the colored soldier as a human being with brains, character and personality the same as our own."

In continuing, he pointed out that he had been told that colored servicemen were better behaved than white, but mistakes made by them were publicized and played up by certain people. The bishop meant that when the word "Negro" appeared in papers owned by these "certain" people, it connoted something evil thriving on rape and bloodshed. If such attacks through the press had continued, it no doubt would have resulted in total embarrassment for all concerned. Although the American army has no jurisdiction over the civilian Australian press stories, it seems logical that it could not stand idly by and watch a portion of our forces here persecuted. Truth's treatment of Negro news is the exception rather than the role of Australian newspapers.

The Call Kansas City Mo

Friendship Developed

At this writing, it alone speaks out periodically, but its occasions are widening. To counteract such propaganda, other papers have printed stories on Paul Robeson and complimentary phases of Negro life in America. Daily Telegraph's correspondent in America cabled the following lead from New York on Independence day:

"In the state of Georgia Negroes tried to exercise their constitutional right to vote in the Democratic primary elections. They were refused — because their skin is black."

7-28-44

Generally the Negro is treated fair in parts of Australia. In many instances the Aussie has gone far afield to be nice to our troops. Friendships have developed and will go far in making these two Allied nations remember pleasant hours together while fighting in a common cause. And the conduct of Negro troops has done more good in cementing these friendships than any statements by Truth in what looks like an attempt to imperil them.

From all indications there it is only a small element of the population believing the published false indictments. At Sydney university this writer heard students voice opinions and attack elements attempting disunity. Several days later they visited the Negro Red Cross club and promised to continue doing so. And the conduct of our troops was above reproach during those few hours as young Australians got to know young Negroes who were lone for interesting friends. who were not afraid that they would draw a razor on the slightest provocation.

Call — Kansas City, Mo.
10-20-44

BAPTISMAL SERVICE IN THE SOUTH SEAS.— A mountain pool on a remote Pacific Island serves as a baptismal fount for servicemen, some about to undergo their baptism of fire against the Japs. Here, Chaplain Harold G. Sanders baptizes Coast Guardsman Farley Arches of Los Angeles. Approximtely 30 servicemen are baptized each Sunday in this picturesque setting while voices of the base choir add impressiveness to the service. Chaplain Sanders was formerly pastor of the Norwood Baptist church, Birmingham, Ala. In Los Angeles, Coast Guardsman Arches' home is at 1624 N. Serrano St.—Coast Guard photo, from OWI.

Call — Kansas City, Mo.
10-20-44

Want Combat Duty, Negroes Cry in Vain

Most of Them Still Toting Bales and Resentment Grows

By Roi Ottley
Staff Correspondent

PM Exclusive

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Despite neatly-handled ballyhoo, the Negro soldier in France still is doing little else than most Negroes do in civilian life—they are heavin' bales and totin' bags.

Until an anti-tank unit arrived in France recently, not one Negro division had had actual physical contact with the enemy. Most observers here feel that this is no accident. The almost exclusive use of Negroes as service troops is an open scandal in this theater of operations.

This situation has caused resentments among Negroes. It has caused tempers to mount among white troops.

The Negro is in a dilemma not of his own making.

Issue Is Dodged

In recent days Stars and Stripes, the GI newspaper here, has been receiving letters from white soldiers complaining that Negroes are being "overplayed" in the news. They contend that Negroes are behind the lines and therefore not exposed to danger. Gen. Eisenhower's praise of the Red Ball Express, the supply line which contains more than 70 per cent Negro personnel, swelled the numbers of protesting letters.

Negro soldiers anticipated this attitude from certain white GIs. Moreover, they feel that on their return home this charge will be thrown in their face and reduce their chances of sharing the social benefits to come with victory.

No member of the High Command will comment on this situation. Nor will they explain why Negroes have been concentrated in the service divisions regardless of their ability and qualifications to do other tasks. The issue has been dodged repeatedly at press conferences.

Some observers here feel that the encomiums of praise Negro service divisions have been receiving, is an attempt by the High Command to allay criticism at home and to improve the morale of Negro troops here.

Wants Combat

Everywhere I've gone in England and France, Negro soldiers have asked me, "Have you seen any Negroes fighting up front?" They avidly read the Negro newspapers for information about the Negro aviators fighting in Italy. They have been buoyed up a little by the recent recruiting of a Negro paratroop unit. This, they feel, will give them an opportunity to come to grips with the enemy.

"I want combat duty," Lt. Ben Johnson, former Columbia University track star, told me in forceful language. He is in a trucking unit, attached to the Red Ball Express, which was one of those anti-aircraft divisions converted into a service unit. His attitude is typical of the Negro soldier here.

"Psychologically," he said, "I do not feel in a strong position to demand better treatment after the war, because I'm not up there trading punches with Jerry.

"I guess certain officers fear the Negro may become cocky after the war.

"The men who oppose Negroes doing combat duty, know that when a white man and a Negro are in the same foxhole day in and day out, it breaks down barriers. And they don't want that to happen."

"There still are officers," he continued, "who believe that the Negro can't be made into a first-class soldier. They don't even give him a chance.

14 POINTS ON NEGRO TROOPS ABROAD GIVEN WAR DEPT. BY WHITER

Report to Washington Lists Recommendations as Result of Fifteen Weeks Observation Overeas

Washington—Fourteen recommendations, ranging from lectures to American white soldiers to a special Board of Review for courts-martial cases, were made by Walter White in a report to the War Department, it was revealed here last week.

The report was based upon White's 15-week, 20-000-mile tour of military installations in the European Theatre of Operations, in North Africa, Italy and the Middle East as an accredited foreign correspondent for the New York Post newspaper. The fourteen points included:

Off Limits—That General Eisenhower's directive to abolish "off limits" to towns and pubs (taverns) be enforced in all areas. Negro soldiers were found to resent bitterly the limits orders, or orders setting "odd" and "even" nights for white and colored troops to visit towns and places of amusement. White observed that some commanding officers who took a positive stand for fairness had very little trouble in their localities.

Courts Martial—A special board of review of courts-martial cases was recommended by White who said "great unhappiness" has resulted among Negro soldiers "because of their belief that they are punished more quickly and more severely than white soldiers." After citing a number of cases detailed to him by Negro prisoners with whom he was permitted to talk freely, White urged that the special board of review include an eminent Negro lawyer, who would be brought in to serve with appropriate rank.

Combat Troops—The department is urged to send Negro combat troops to England. White said stories were being circulated that there are no Negro combat troops in England because "Negroes are afraid to fight." White termed as "unfortunate" the fact that, with the exception of some anti-aircraft units, only Negro service troops had been sent to the European theatre. "The Negro troops in the ETO," said his report, "have little or none of the excitement of war necessary to raise the spirits and to give a sense of participation to men engaged in waging war."

Also recommended was that Negro medium bomber crews be sent to England "to fly in non-segregated units," and that Negro service troops now stationed there be given refresher courses in the use of combat weapons, as "many of these troops will closely follow the assault waves of invasion, will be under fire, and need to be made competent in the use of weapons."

Supporting his recommendation for more combat troops, White cited the improved atmosphere in the Mediterranean as a result of the exploits of the 99th Pursuit Squadron. He recommended that Negro and white fighter squadrons function in the same group; and he also urged reconsideration of the conversion of the 2nd Calvary division into service troops.

In connection with the moral value of the presence of Negro combat troops, White also urged that more Negro officers above the rank of captain be sent to England.

Anti-Negro Rumors—Some Negro soldiers abroad have taken the spreading of vicious and fantastic rumors about Negroes as a joke, but some have resented these stories deeply, said White, in recommending that G-2 (Army Intelligence) try to track down and scotch morale-sapping stories.

White reported less anti-Negro propaganda in the Mediterranean than in England, but suggested that Army Intelligence run down the people who were issuing leaflets, placards and other material seeking to poison Italians against Negroes. Upon inquiry one such placard was found to have been issued by a non-existent organization and signed by a fictitious person.

Military Police—White found the same complaint abroad on Military Police that has been made in some parts of America, namely that white MPs are armed, but Negro MPs are not. He recommended that no MPs be armed except when guarding payrolls.

Paternalism— Paternalistic attitudes on the part of white officers is resented, White reported, saying that both well-educated and less-educated Negroes resent being treated as "boys." Abandonment of the idea that southern white officers are best for Negro troops because they "understand" Negroes was urged by White, who, however, said many fair and decent in their teratment white officers from the South are of Negroes, while there is no guarantee that a man will be free from prejudice just because he happens to be from the North.

Lectures—Lectures to American white troops aboard ships as they near England on the difference between the British and American attitudes toward color, together with lectures to British troops by competent Americans on America and the true place of the Negro as a citizen of his country would be helpful, White declared.

A connection between the venereal disease rate among colored troops and the attitude which has barred them from normal association with respectable families was seen by White, who quoted a soldier as saying they were more and more restricted to women picked up in pubs. White suggested that a Negro physician be attached to the office of the Chief Surgeon.

More Negro actors and singers were recommended for the entertainment of both white and Negro troops.

Red Cross—After praising the American Red Cross for doing "in many respects a superlative job," White deplored the "white" and Negro" Red Cross clubs located in many areas as not only introducing segregation to the British, but denying white and Negro soldiers the opportunity to know each other better. He cited the non-segregated pattern of one club as a model for the Red Cross everywhere.

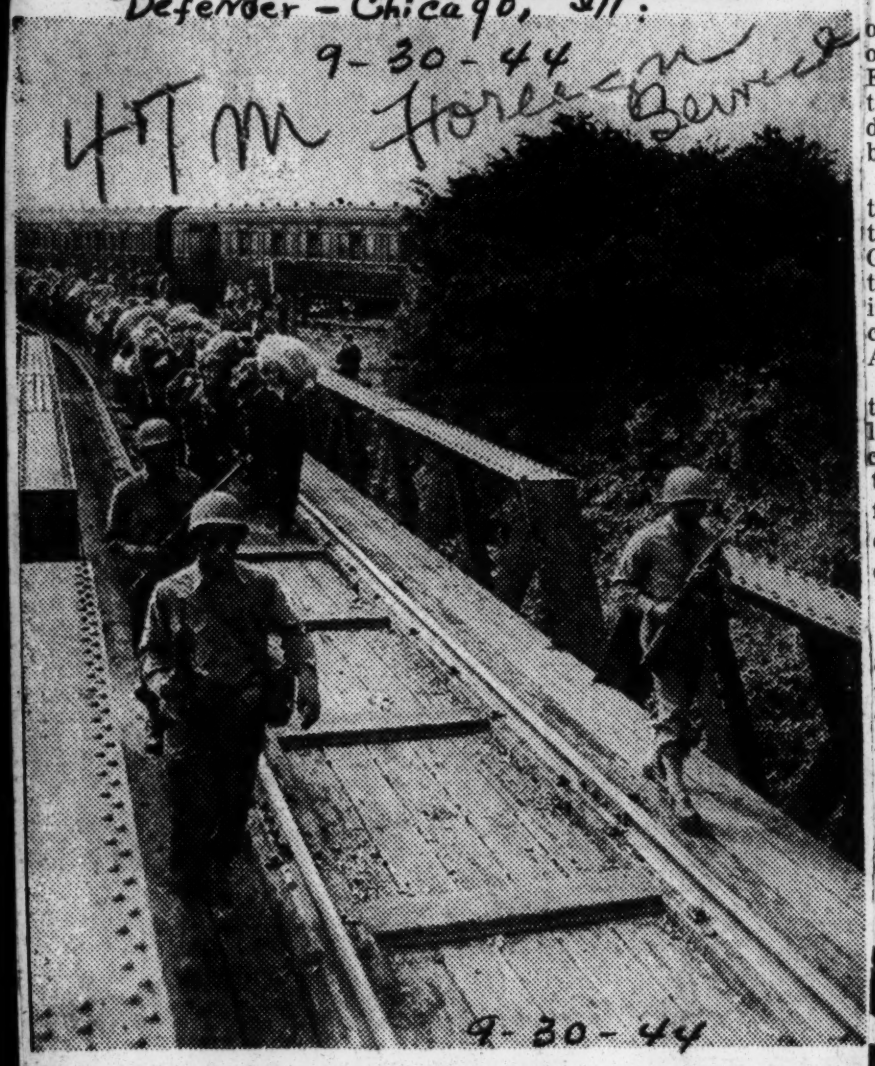
Censorship—More news and more sympathetic handling of news dealing with Negro troops by the censors would be very helpful, said White, as it would give Negro civilians a better picture of the contribution of their men to the war.

Lagging Behind—White's concluding recommendation was a suggestion that the War department policy on race "lags behind that of much of the personnel of the Army." He said an advanced position would meet opposition, but would be approved by "a much larger percentage . . . than the War department appears to believe possible."

"The time and field are ripe for progress. Continuance of segregation and discrimination is in part responsible for a less determined spirit ahead before this war is won. Vision to see the situation as it is in the Army than is necessary to meet the very crucial days which and courage to surmount difficul-

OUT OF WAR FOR GOOD

Defender - Chicago, Ill:
9-30-44
4th Motor Service



9-30-44

Under the watchful eyes of Negro soldiers, German prisoners of war file across a trestle en route to a PW camp somewhere in England.

How 24th Infantry Has Spent 2 Yrs. in S. Pacific

Afro American - Baltimore, md.
6-3-44

Men Performed Non-Combatant Tasks over Year; Now Fighting Japs on Bougainville

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

GUADALCANAL. — The 24th Infantry Regiment came overseas to fight two years ago and it is the enemy's fault that elements of the regiment have only recently gotten down to the business for which they were trained.

When the 24th landed in 1942 on Efate or Sandwich Island in the New Hebrides group, it had only a small settlement of about 500 British, French, Chinese, Australians and natives, and one road, a fourth-class trail to a native mission.

6-3-44

Worst Job on Island

It was the soldiers' job to clear camp sites, build airports, set up defense positions, and establish communications relay stations.

During the time they were being introduced to South Pacific island life, there were six days when there was a food shortage, many days of sleeping on muddy, lizard and insect-infested ground, and many days when there was not even good drinking water.

By far the most harrowing job of the island defense, however, was the establishment of communications lines between the scattered battalions, a maze of jungle outposts, and regimental headquarters. This task fell to the unit's thirty-man signal communications section.

6-3-44

On Island 14 Months

In June, 1942, the heavy weapons company was placed in charge of the prisoner of war camp on Espiritu Santos, another island in the New Hebrides, where it underwent Jap bombardment once but there were no casualties.

After fourteen months of maintaining almost a constant alert, the regiment was shifted to Guadalcanal where it went on with the non-combatant tasks assigned it until a portion of the unit was called to action on the Empress Augusta Bay beachhead.

On Bougainville, the last and the largest of the Solomons Islands, the 24th became the first colored combat troops to contact the enemy in the Pacific war. Its first patrol engaged in a firing encounter with Japs and came off on the winning end of a 1-0 score.

Anxious to Get Home

Other portions of the regiment are still carrying on their important behind-the-lines functions. There are some men in the unit who are anxious to get into action, but bulk of the men said, as did one sergeant:

6-3-44

"We're kinda tired and would like more than anything else to go home, but if we are called on to go up and clean up the Japs we can and we will do it."

Harlem Hell Fighters Have Gained Respect

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.
10-14-44

Correspondent Martin Writes Of Solved Problems

BY FLETCHER P. MARTIN
War Correspondent of the Atlanta Daily World and NNPA

PACIFIC FLEET HEADQUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR — (By Courier) — Honolulu, a symphony of races, creeds, colours To these islands, over a period of years, have come Occidentals, Orientals, and natives from the South Seas. All to mingle with native Hawaiians. A melting pot of multi-coloured peoples living amidst the grandeur that is the Territory of Hawaii. Then came deep tanned Negro troops from America to complete the tapestry of color. Fine, sturdy men — representative of all black men who have fought in America's wars. And America was at war again.

10-14-44

Harlem Hell Fighters they called themselves. Armed to the hilt with anti-aircraft field pieces, they arrived in early 1942. The embers of enemy treachery were still smoldering when these inheritors of the famed records made by the enviable "Black Regiment," the 15th New York Infantry during the last war arrived. A regiment which survived air-bursting German artillery for 190 days — and not a foot of ground was lost; not a man captured. They were there when the Germans were stopped cold on the Marne in the summer of 1918.

For reasons, perhaps only known to the American military, these troops were incorporated into the French Army, as regular American troops. The story is still told of the Meuse-Argonne operation in which the city of Sechault was captured in one of the bloodiest street fights in the war. Every man in the regiment was awarded the Croix de Guerre, one of France's ranking citations.

10-14-44

READY TO FIGHT

At this hour, the reorganized unit ~~under Lt. Col. Wilmer P. Lucas~~, of Brooklyn, New York, is ready to push forward again — to fight for the rights to live as equals to any man, anywhere. And as former commander, Col. Chauncey M. Hooper, said, "Every man in the regiment is eager to match the record made by the same unit during the last war."

Their tactical mission at this highly strategic command is the guarding of Pearl Harbor. An imporant cog in the Oahu anti-aircraft defenses, this regiment of more than 1500 Ngero officers and men help guard the harbor from mountain recesses. The first colored combat unit to reach Pearl Harbor following December 7, a prodigious amount of work has been expended by the New York outfit. But first they had to sell themselves to the local population An endeavor not familiar in many fields of military operations.

CREATE SOCIAL PROBLEM

The Hawaiians looked on them in courteous silence. They created a social problem -- not to their liking. But circumstances being as they were, the problem was inevitable. They were strangers to the natives, but not so to many who had migrated here from the mainland rather than the native population.

10-14-44

The problem was not as intense as in some sections of the world But, as was aforementioned, there were certain barriers to be swept away. Music helped do the job There was a satisfying rhythm these men had brought down from New York. The Hawaiians liked its sweetness, its tempo, its melody. There was a common bond — if not in language, not in customs — in music.

10-14-44

The doors were partially opened, as least enough to get one foot in. That was the first step. Courtesy—the kind that only a Negro knows—did much. He was courteous on the trams, in the streets, his clothes were immaculate, he made an excellent appearance. He was every inch the soldier. The people noticed, and what was once courteous silence leaped into cordiality.

TROOPS AT GUNS

Amidst the fields of swaying sugar cane, our troops are on their guns. A glance only will not reveal these men. Hawaiians work silently in the fields. But on close scrutiny the ugly, business-like muzzles of anti-aircraft can be seen. And on the slightest provocation baleful, orange flames will send shells hurtling skyward.

10-14-44

What of future operations out of American waters — out where enemy inner defenses begin? Lt. Faulkner Watts, one of the battery commanders summed it up:

"We would like to see some action I can imagine all fighting units do. We would hate to go home without having fired at one enemy plane. But they tell us we are a part of the island defenses, an important part. It has been over two years now, and perhaps the chances of combat fade. But then you can never tell. As God, the American Army works in mysterious ways. You can never tell."

10-14-44

The spirit has dampened somewhat, but not to the extent that this unit can't take care of themselves in a tactical situation. Perhaps few coloured units have the type of personnel which make up the anti-aircraft group.

Big Johnny Woodruff, great half-miler from Pittsburgh University, is here. Now Captain Woodruff, battery commander. And there are numerable other athletes. But perhaps better known than the runners, baseballers, and other athletic greats, is the array of known musicians. Cpl. Otis Johnson (Louis Armstrong); Pvt. Robert Ashton, Dick Thompson (Benny Carter); Sgt. Ben Richardson (Blanche Calloway); shy Reuben Reeves, formerly with Cab Calloway.

The unit is kept up to date on the Pacific situation. Orientation officer, Capt. David A. Lane, of Louisville, Kentucky, has been sent here by the War Department especially to keep the unit tactfully informed on current developments. The man have recognized the former West Virginia State College and Louisville Municipal College dean as a scholar, his opinions carry ewight.

10-14-44

All in all, this New York unit, thoroughly schooled in the art of modern warfare, readied for the "fighting" phase of war, is carrying through its mission.

Colored and White GI's in Same Outfit in France

Disposition of Personal Effects Entrusted to Men Who Live and Work Harmoniously

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE—(ANP)—Belying the contention that colored and white soldiers cannot associate amicably is a "quartermaster effects company," which is composed approximately of an even number of soldiers of both races who work and live together harmoniously here.

I recently visited the "Silhouette," a little cabaret in Paris, where I met Pvts. Ed Warner of East Chicago, Ind., and Conway Butler from New Orleans, members of the outfit, who said they were treated "swell."

Warner interjected: "We could not expect anything better. I am the driver for our commanding officer, Maj. McCormick, and I can truthfully say that he makes no distinction in the company."

Florida Major a Liberal

I visited the company the next day and met Maj. F. R. McCormick from Florida, who said that his primary function was the efficient execution of his task, and secondly, the welfare and happiness of each man in his company.

The officers, all of whom are white, expressed pleasure in their association with this mixed team. Lt. Thomas F. Flannery of Springfield, Mass., is in charge of the colored soldiers.

"We exercise justice in small things, and would avoid all cause of offense, not by seeking merely to please all, but to give all their due," said Capt. Joseph Minotti of New York.

Capt. Henry Beck of Wisconsin said that there is always an amicable adjustment of disputes if there are any. At lunch the men ate and sat together, full of geniality, humor, conversation and cheerfulness.

Disposes of All Personal Effects

This organization is charged with the responsibility of receiving and storing. In addition, it must make proper disposition of personal effects of all U.S. personnel and people subject to military law in the ETO.

When a soldier is ill in the the hospital and becomes well again the executive department of the hospital communicates with the effects office and the personal belongings of the soldier are returned to him.

If he dies, his effects are sent to Kansas City to be handed over to his next-of-kin. Similarly, they handle the belongings of those missing or prisoners of war.

No Priority for Generals

All effects are handled in the same manner whether they be those of a general or a private. Any military information as well as anything that would mar the memory of the soldier is extricated.

The colored soldiers are the guards. A brigadier general once visited the warehouse and was not properly identified and he was refused admission by the colored guard.

Colored members of the unit include:

Sgt. A. G. Newton, Manhattan, Kan., who is in charge of the colored soldiers; Sgt. Marvin A. Wortham, Cpl. Charles Albertson, Philadelphia; Cpl. W. Earl Grimes, Detroit; Cpl. Robert Jones, Palm Beach, Fla.; Cpl. Numa Barnabe, Opelousas, La.; Pfcs. A. Richie Carter, Houston; Clarence Dominguez, New Orleans; Robert Franklin, Arizona; James Hennings, St. Louis; F. Julius Lissimore, Valdosta, Ga.; Ike Perry, Atlanta; W. John Robertson, Cleveland; A. Joseph Willis, Atlanta, and Robert Winter, Jacksonville, Fla.

MOST FROM THE SOUTH

Pvts. Frank Collier, Houston; Trellie Culbreath, Monroe, Ga.; Robert L. Giddings, Houston; N. Ambrose Johnson, West Virginia; Walter Latham, Kingston, N.C.; Joseph Lebo, Nantucket, Mass.;

James Maxwell, Savannah; William McCall, North Carolina; A. Arthur Nash, Hope, Ark.; Brazee Robinson, Miami; L. Hubert Sanders, St. Petersburg, Fla., and William Wilkerson, Chicago.

Large Complimen t Of Negro Officers Commands Truckers

Men Hauling Explosives Are Constant Targets Of Snipers

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR
(ANP War Correspondent)

WITH THE UNITED STATES ARMY IN FRANCE — (ANP) — I was amazed when I visited a mobile aviation QM. battalion somewhere in France and discovered that there were 23 Negro officers including six captains in the company. It is the largest compliment of Negro officers I have seen on the western front.

Col. Ellis Anderson, Houlton, Me., is the commanding officer. He started with the company when it was activated in March of 1940 at Fort Bragg. Possessed of a knowledge of human nature, Col. Anderson boasts about the good conduct of his men even from the days of Fort Bragg.

When the company was in America, Col. Anderson's wife gave birth to a baby girl and the men of the company made her an honorary buck private, as well as presented her with a sterling cup which was engraved "To Anne Dee from a Truck Co."

Capt. B. Taylor of Hartford, Conn., is the executive officer and second in command. A colored officer, Capt. Taylor deals with matters of the highest importance and his administration involves every exercise of authority that affects the whole battalion. Other high ranking colored officers are Cap. Robert E. Randolph from Albany, N. Y., battalion adjutant; Captain Randolph S. Wright, battalion staff officer and Capt. Kenneth E. Small, Boston, battalion motor officer.

As a part of the Ninth Air Force Service command, the battalion has traveled two and a half million miles on the Red Ball highway. Their convay is a matter of great consequence and air force chiefs plan their operations according to what the trucks are hauling. The importance of their tasks may be summed up in the words of the commander of a medium bomber group. "We might as well have no planes if the trucks do not operate."

Assigned the job of hauling deadly explosives from the beaches to the front line, the men work under terrific pressure. The officers and men of the battalion exercise the utmost care and attenion with their vehicles and as a result they have had the lowest deadline of any similar organization in the Ninth Air Force service.

One platoon of a convoy that was sent to Germany to deliver some very urgent ordnance supplies was the targets of Nazi snipers when they were returning from their mission. They report that the snipers were cunningly concealed. Fortunately, there were no casualties. However, the men were very frightened. Not because they were afraid of the Germans, but because it was dark and they were unable to trace where the shots came from. They have been extremely anxious to return to Germany again just simply to get an opportunity to bag some snipers.

The first company in the battalion is commanded by Capt. George Evans from Middlesburg, Va. Other officers include Edwin Jones of New York City, executive officer and Lt. Freeman W. Martin, Memphis, motor officer. Capt. Charles E. Jones, Los Angeles, commands the second company. Officers serving under him are: Lt. James A. Wright, St. Louis, executive officer; Lt. Pierce M. Thompson, Atlanta, intelligence officer; 2nd Lt. James R. Skaggs, St. Louis, supply officer and Lt. Booker T. Young, also of St. Louis, motor officer.

The third company is under the command of Capt. Mathew Slamon of New Orleans. Lt. Darwin E. Smith, a Virginian, is executive officer; Willie B. Macon of Arkansas, motor officer, and Lt. Lilburn B. Pappy, a Floridian, supply officer.

Lt. Fred McLaurin, of South Carolina, commands the fourth company. His assistants are Lt. Robert Davis, Washington, D. C., executive officer; Lt. William Fitzgerald, Washington, motor officer; 2nd Lt. Robert M. Ateman, Chicago, supply officer and 2nd Lt. Leslie C. Mayo, St. Antonio, Tex., intelligence officer.

Negro Troops Skip Meals To Get at Nazis

By Franklin Banker

With American Troops in Germany, Nov. 25 (AP).—Gunners of the 707th Field Artillery Battalion, who lay claim to being the first Negro soldiers fighting on German soil, are so busy shelling the enemy these days they eat only two meals a day.

It's breakfast at 8:30 a. m. and supper at 4 p. m., and they don't even miss the noon-day meal, not when they can fire seven rounds from their 4.5inch guns in 37 seconds as one battery reported doing today.

Moving 600 miles from the vicinity of Cherbourg to Germany in four days, the battalion got its first taste of combat three weeks ago. Since then they have been bombed, strafed and shelled, but this only intensified their desire to give the Germans more than they received.

Their eagerness is typified by T/5 Kermit Warren, Kilgore, Tex., who left a telephone switchboard because "there wasn't much excitement there" and helped lay telephone wire alongside frontline infantry.

Gray-haired Tech. Sergt. Carlton Godon, New Yok City, is another. Godon, who won't disclose his age, is so old he had to argue to get permission to come overseas.

"These boys have been doing an outstanding job and we intend to become the hardest and fastest shooting outfit in the whole Army," said Lieut. Col. L. G. Witmer, Lake City, Iowa, battalion commander.

All battalion officers are white except Lieut. James H. Robinson, jr., whose father is dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Wilberforce University, Wilberforce, Ohio.

Bombarded With Propaganda

92nd Unit Takes Strategic Mountains In North Italy

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
10-14-44

By OLLIE HARRINGTON, Courier War Correspondent

WITH THE 92nd DIVISON IN ITALY—Elements of the 92nd Division, clawing deeper into Nazi mountain positions, have taken two important positions, Mt. Costa and Mt. Canala, the loftiest positions yet secured in this sector. The grim, hard-slugging Negro infantrymen, battling against increased Nazi resistance in the race of rain, fog, freezing cold and occasional snow flurries, dislodged the Nazis from the two points which, because of their extreme height—Mt. Costa, 9,796 feet, and Mt. Canala, 9,596 feet—command important positions.

IN COASTAL AREA

The mountains captured are located in the coastal area of the Fifth Army front some nine miles north of the bomb-twisted Via Reggio and three miles in from the Ligurian Sea coast. Other elements of the Fifth Army, pressing forward toward the vitally important city of Bologna, have executed a surprise left wheel to widen to 20 miles their advance front south of that objective. 10-14-44

No indication is given in the official reports as to whether the surprise move trapped any sizeable Nazi forces, though it seems highly probable. This move was correctly analyzed in previous dispatches to The Pittsburgh Courier, in which the importance of the 92nd combat team's pinning down of Nazi forces was emphasized.

BITTER FIGHTING CONTINUES

Fighting in the mountains continues to be bitter, with the Germans taking full advantage of the terrain, and the hated "88" shells continuing to pour mercilessly into the division's sector, along with heavy machine-gun fire. The Germans are using mines extensively, causing considerable casualties.

A significant development is the Nazi use of propaganda leaflets shot into the division loaded in artillery shells. One of these leaflets shows a huge photograph, evidently taken from Life magazine, showing a Negro being pursued by men with clubs and lead pipes during the infamous Detroit riots of last year. Others show lynchings.

NAZI LEAFLETS ARE INEFFECTIVE 10-14-44

Most of the leaflets have printed matter on the back expressly addressed to the Negro troops. It would be foolhardy to completely discount the effect of these leaflets, although there is no evident change in the hard-fighting qualities of the Negro infantrymen.

I saw one platoon leader, his heel blown off by a mine, reading one of the leaflets while waiting for medical aid. I asked him what he thought about it. "Damned good propaganda," he said. "All of the men know that it is true as hell, and that sort of makes it tough. But there's not a man in the outfit who is damn fool enough to think those over there love us either."

Earle E. Pruitt Gets Relief Post Overseas

Courier Journal — Louisville, Ky.
10-11-44

Notice of appointment as administrative assistant in the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration for European duty has been received by Earle E. Pruitt, manager of Beecher Terrace housing project for Negroes, and one of the first Negroes to be so appointed, it was learned yesterday.

Pruitt, who is the oldest housing manager in Kentucky in point of service, has been granted a 2-year leave of absence by the Louisville Municipal Housing Administration to take the position. He will report at Washington October 16 for training and inoculations for overseas service.

Pruitt Is Well Known.

Pruitt, who has served on numerous civic and related committees during the past several years, is nationally known in housing circles for his management activities first at College Court here and later at the 800-odd-unit Beecher Terrace.

Pruitt is a native of Louisville, a graduate of Simmons University, and took special work at Louisville Municipal College. He also studied housing in New York at the Dunbar Apartments project, for which study he was granted a leave of absence from his job in the Home Owners Loan Corporation here. He was appointed manager of College Court in 1937, and of Beecher Terrace in 1940. 10-11-44

Is Boy Scout Leader.

He served as chairman of the Negro Division of the War Fund during the past several campaigns, is a member of the Mayor's Interracial Committee and chairman of the Negro War Housing Committee.

He is a member of Negro health organizations here, the Urban League's board of directors, the Negro committee of the Family Service Organization and of the board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He served as senior warden of the Negro Air Raid Warden organization. He is a member of Broadway Temple Steward Board and of the board of the Colored Division of the Boy Scouts of America.

EARLE E. PRUITT. 10-11-44

92nd Captures Town in Italy

Afro American

Baltimore, Md.

Unit Overcomes Odds to Occupy Lucco

CARTER WATCHES D.C. Man Made Capt. by Gen. Clark's Order

9-16-44

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

FIFTH ARMY FRONTLINE IN ITALY (By Cable) — The battle of Vorno Valley, just another step in the Allied advance along the Fifth Army front, will live long in the memory of soldiers of the 92nd Division combat team.

This was the first big battle for these tan Yanks and they won against unseen odds — artillery fire and hidden machine guns protected by steel, hills and the mountain shrubbery.

Some of their blood was spilled in the valley — blood of young men who had just begun to live—but they gained their objective, occupation of the town of Lucco, and are pushing the desperate Germans back into Northern Italy where the retreating enemy hopes to make a stand at the much-publicized Gothic Line.

Watched Battle 7 Hours

I watched the Vorno Valley battle for seven hours, three of which I spent pinned down by Jerry machine-gun fire in a dirty, smelly ditch with a patrol led by Capt. Charles F. Gandy.

All odds were with the enemy, who had excellent observation from a mountain top and menaced the only road from our position to town with dreaded 88MM shells. 9-16-44

Now that it is over and Lucco, an ancient walled city, has been brought under Allied control with the aid of partisan support, I know the valor of this combat team's soldiers can never be questioned.

Races Mingled

They fought for every inch of ground to complete the mission — fighting side by side with other units of all races.

Resistance by the Germans at this point was mainly rear-guard fighting, characterized by effective machine-gun and artillery attacks. Thus the advance was marked by the most hazardous type of fighting, forcing the tan doughboys to scrap for every yard, dig in at night and charge again at dawn.

At one time artillery fire was so terrifying that the commanding colonel screamed, "If they knock out that 88 I will give them my bear ration for the next six weeks." He had reference to Allied artillery that supported the attack. 9-16-44

Welcome Worth Ordeal

The breakthrough came early September 5, with patrols from Captain Gandy's company first to enter the city.

Pfc. Jeremiah Cannon, of Oberlin, Ohio, who brought back three prisoners, said a bridge was blown out when we reached it, but we walked across the canal. The reception given us was worth it. Women and men screamed 'liberators' and gave us everything they had."

Pvt. Don Hill, Columbus, Ga., added, "Girls ran up, kissed me and put flowers in my hand." Both are members of a platoon commanded by Lt. Millard Sullivan, whose forces entered from another point shortly after the initial entrance by Captain Gandy's group.

Captain Gandy, who is 24 and lives at 423 Hobart Street, Northwest, Washington, asserted: "I have a damn good company. They are smarter than they were twelve days ago, when they crossed the Arno River."

Promoted by Gen. Clark

Gandy was promoted to captain only a few days before by a field order. Lt. Gen. Mark W. Clark, who learned during a review of 92nd Division elements that he had been a lieutenant fourteen months, pinned the double bars on him, declaring "You are promoted to captain under my orders."

Other elements of the combat team fought their way on both sides of the town and were smashing hard against the enemy's desperate rear-guard resistance.

In those dark hours which preceded the breakthrough, every supporting unit — service troops, heavy weapons company, and medics — gave unified support. Scores of soldiers displayed courage beyond the call of duty.

Units Commended

Second Lieutenant Sullivan, company commander, was highly commended for his direction of artillery fire from an observation post that was constantly under enemy shellfire. 9-16-44

Second Lieut. William Colvin, Cincinnati, directed supply convoys, while the mortar company led by First Lieut. Raymond A. Montgomery, Washington, was instrumental in silencing several menacing machine-guns.

The communications crew under First Lieut. Harold Jenkins, McKeesport, Pa., kept lines open. His crew includes: S/Sgt. Clarise Walls, Birmingham; Sgt. George Thompson, Dallas, Texas; T/5 James Varnado, McComb, Miss.; and Pfc. John P. Varnarsdale, Camden, Miss.

Among other soldiers I met during the hot 72-hour period I stayed with this battalion, commanded by Capt. Herscheld Price, white, all doing some important job to keep the battle going and doing it under fire, included: 9-16-44

Sgt. Harold Clemons, 56 W. 127th Street, NYC; Pfc. Harold L. Carr, Montclair, N.J.; Pvt. Daniel Cumber, 1253 N. Fifty-seventh Street, Philadelphia; Sgt. James Scott, 1735 E. Preston Street, Baltimore; Pvt. Thomas Hughes, Philadelphia; First Sgt. Jack A. Ellis, Dayton, Ohio; Pvt. James Threat, Richmond, who went on a one-man patrol to get food for a forward patrol of his company.

Knife-Waving Negroes Rout Scared Nazis

PM — New York, N.Y.
8-2-44

Krauts 'Run Like Hell' as U S. Drivers Launch Own Attack

By HENRY T. GORRELL
United Press Correspondent

WITH U. S. FORCES IN FRANCE, Aug. 2.—U. S. Negro truck drivers, wielding jungle knives, charged into the fighting line yesterday and started carving up the Germans with enthusiasm and inspiring efficiency in a savage melee north of Percy.

For three days crack German armored and infantry forces had been trying vainly to wedge into our lines and split our front. Attacks and counterattacks became steadily fiercer.

The Germans were trying to hold Percy and Tessy-sur-Vire.

They were fighting with no holds barred, and even their company clerks and cooks were thrown into the line.

The Negro truck drivers heard what was going on and they went into action.

"We didn't tell them to fight," a colonel said. "They just found the Germans were close up and they started in. Their very appearance scared the daylights out of the Germans. Now when the Krauts see one of them they run like hell."

The Negroes went charging into the hedgerows, looking for Germans, in the manner of the famous French Senegalese and Goon units of Tunisian fame. 8-2-44

Their favorite weapon is a strictly personal one—the jungle knife.

It has a startlingly big blade, like a giant butcher's knife.

"You know, boss, these here Heinies is scared of us," one of the boys said to the colonel.

"If they knew how scared you were of them they probably wouldn't act that way," the colonel kidded.

"Aain't it the truth!" the Negro said.

But if they were frightened they certainly did not show it and it didn't interfere with their carving.

The fighting around here has been wild, with Germans and Americans getting mixed up at night and finding it out at dawn.

Each night infantry commando units go out to wreck German tanks with sticky bombs and to kill German troops silently by strangling them with piano wire.

These units are specially equipped and they wear the commando stocking cap.

Eight men are picked from each infantry company. They are trained as cut-throats. They have special passes which when they are not in action get them anywhere, and they do no fatigue or kitchen police. They do their stuff at night—keeping the Germans stirred up by attacking command posts and, by throwing grenades and shooting their guns, leading the enemy to believe that a big attack is on.

One of the units is commanded by Capt. Howard C. Brazzard, Tucson, Ariz. 8-2-44

His men attacked a German tank with bazookas the other night and bayonetted its crew as they emerged.

"My only regret is that most of the Germans were dead before we could question them," Brazzard said.

Negro Soldiers Operate Postoffice In Normandy

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

Mississipian Finds Mail Aids Morale Of Men

8-2-44

BY RUDOLPH DUNBAR

(Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

WITH THE ALLIED ARMY IN FRANCE — (ANP) — CABLE—An all-Colored army postal unit, under the direction of Lt. T. R. Barnes, is operating somewhere in France with skill and efficiency.

S. Sgt. Henry O. Preston, Vicksburg, Miss., is second in command. He said that in this outfit, where personnel has to do all types of work that is carried on in a post office, he finds that more experience is gained in a year than could possibly have been obtained in 10 years in civilian life. All the men have worked in various branches of the postal service in America.

Efficient mail service builds up the morale of soldiers, Sgt. Preston declared, and added that in the army mail comes first then food and lastly money.

Working hours for these army postal employees begins at 2 a. m. and continues until the work is completed. They are all keen and enthusiastic and realize that their job is highly important. 8-2-44

I can personally endorse the moral effect letters have upon the individual soldier. Recently, I was in the supply office of a certain battalion. The mail clerk appeaed on the scene quite mysteriously and began distribution of the mail. It was the signal to cease work and one soldier dropped everything out of his hands took his hat off and exclaimed, "I shall now commune with the spirit.'

Uncanny Fire Of Negro Fighters Pays Dividends

World — Memphis, Tenn.
8-22-44

BY RUDOLPH DUNBAR
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

WITH THE ALLIED ARMY IN FRANCE—(ANP)—Early this morning (Tuesday) I went to the fire direction center to find out what success the battalion had in their previous day's hunting. The hunting was good and they have excelled beyond all expections. Here is an account of their kill for Saturday, August. 12.

THREE DIRECT HITS

An enemy gun position inside a concrete emplacement received a direct hit. A special mission came from corps command to destroy a concrete wall which was holding up the infantry which had to pass through for an important operation. Ten rounds were fired and direct hits completely destroyed the wall. The firing was done by one of the crack batteries of the battalion. 8-22-44

Pfc. Othalia Thompkins, Fort Worth, Tex., computed for Battery B based on an enemy battery of three guns destroyed the guns. Eight rounds were fired on an enemy emplacement located on an island. Direct hits destroyed the guns. Computer for this battery at the time of firing was Pfc. Fletcher Morgan, Bay City, Tex.

The most important traget was a position held by the enemy. Five rounds were fired by C. Battery and the fifth round landed in the center of it. Then, the enemy waved a white flag and after talking over terms of surrender decided to keep on fighting. On the morning of Aug. 13, headquarters instructed the battalion to resume firing on the position in order to force a surrender or neutralization. The money stubbornly held out and would not surrender. The battery continued its mission of destruction with relentless intensity until 8:55 a. m. of Aug. 13. Computer for the firing was Cpl. John Smith, Baltimore, who told me that the men had a strenuous and exacting time the last few days in executing their mission. Their duty, he said, called for mental brilliance and devotion. Capt. Walter M. Jefford, Philadelphia, is a gunnery officer and is in charge of the fire direction center plans and training of the battalion. He praised the work of the gun crew. "Two years of hard work in America are now paying dividends," he said.

8-22-44

WORK PAYS DIVIDENDS

In the fire direction center I met the chief computer, Henry L. Smith, Baltimore, who told me that the men had a strenuous and exacting time the last few days in executing their mission. Their duty, he said, called for mental brilliance and devotion. Capt. Walter M. Jefford, Philadelphia, is a gunnery officer and is in charge of the fire direction center plans and training of the battalion. He praised the work of the gun crew. "Two years of hard work in America are now paying dividends," he said.

8-22-44

FORTIFICATIONS DESTROYED

On Aug. 12 strong enemy fortifications on Isle de Cezembre were destroyed. The same day Battery A fired 14 rounds to destroy a particular concentration of German 16 inch gun. There were a gun. There were also anti-aircraft guns in a nest of anti-aircraft guns in the northwest St. Malo at the northwest seaboard section near Togo Bay. Five rounds per gun section were fired near Togo Bay. Five to destroy these targets Saturday at 5:45 p. m.

The previous day I was in the section were fired town with Carlton Moss, New York L. Alverson, New York City. The City, and his party. We were told telephone operator was Cpl. Robert to leave town immediately because of snipers. St. Malo just fallen

Writers Cover New Invasion From Ringside Seat In C-47

I Informer — Houston, Texas.

8-26-44

By JOHN JORDAN

With Airborne Troops Over Southern France Beachhead On D-Day.—From a ringside seat in a C-47 Dakota towing glider troops to point miles inland, The Guide correspondent witnessed the unfolding of initial phases of the streamlined invasion pattern.

The entire operation, Nice to Marseille, was on such a gigan-

Extra!

(Two Negro war correspondents, Ollie Harrington, of the Pittsburgh Courier, and John Jordan, of the Norfolk Journal and Guide, were included among the American reporters representing the Combined United States Press during the August 15 invasion of Southern France. Then dispatches were filed through the Office of War Information Press Pool on August 16.)

tic scale that it was impossible for any one correspondent to grasp its magnitude. The best seat in the house for this billion-dollar show was a box in the first balcony of a C-47.

8-26-44

After an uneventful three-hour trip overseas from an Italian base, we saw the first invasion action as sleek warships, churning unmolested about the coastline below, hurled rounds of heavy shells upon inland German positions in the Cannes area.

I saw naval craft laying smoke screen about certain sections of the coast. Several fires were raging along the rocky coast and in towns several miles inland.

German opposition in this area was very light. There were occasional explosions from heavy Nazi artillery, but great Allied air forces had done a swell job of knocking out the guns earlier.

The coastal strip two miles inland was dotted with thousands of parachutes left abondoned on the green fields and vales by paratroops who landed at dawn.

Inland about 10 miles our great air train ran into medium flak. One C-47 was almost knocked out by a close burst, but recovered, suffering nothing more than dirty face. Other flak bursts were wide.

Gliders Litter Field

Abondoned gliders littered the fields below, evidence of earlier waves. Soon came our H-hour when the air armanda was to release its glider load on the target. When the gliders cut loose there was slight upward jump of the planes, then I saw the gliders turn and head gracefully earthward. Soon the fields were so cluttered with gliders that I wondered if others could possibly land. The bouncy motorless craft already seemed moving over one another.

The troops, mostly veterans of previous invasions, poured from the landed gliders and, in a matter of minutes, the Germans had another tough fighting unit to contend with. Americans appeared to run into little or no opposition.

As our plane circled over the invasion area, I could see no hand-to-hand fighting. Camouflaged troops moved easily to objectives. Over our formation, trouble-hunting fighter planes streaked across the skies. There was no room for Nazi planes, for Allies filled the air.

8-26-44

Invasion operation seemed so simple. First, air bombardment, then naval bombardment, then landings, then paratroops, then gliders, all smooth as velvet. But behind this easy execution that unfolded below and around us were months of careful planning.

This correspondent was thrilled and excited in the realization that a hallowed page in French history was being staged below as gallant French troops, veterans of other campaigns, fought their way inland. These were French that never ceased the fight for freedom. Now with strong Allies, they were moving in for liberation and another showdown with Hitler.

To the crew of my plane this was just another operation. The radio operator, using a parachute as a pillow, was asleep on a row of seats. I asked another crewman why he was not wearing a flak suit. He answered, "Too hot!" Another grumbled because he would not be able to keep a date in Italy that night.

8-26-44

Softened by the greatest blast of

Mob Moved Out

From our altitude, the French countryside looked peaceful and serene and like New England countryside. The only difference was that thousands of parachutes littered the meadows. The plowed fields below presented a quiet holiday pattern and the only element missing in this nostalgic rural scene was the absence of grazing livestock. I didn't find this surprising however, considering the fact that the master race mob moved out.

8-26-44

One of my most pleasant aspects of the invasion was the crew of the C-47 in which we rode. They were without exception the swellest bunch of guys I've ever yet shackled up with. The pilot, Lt. Roger Coleson of Fairbault, Minn., and co-pilot, Lt. Gene Feckler, St. Louis, are both, despite their extreme youth, veterans of the troop carrier trade. The navigator, Lt. Alex M. Pakowitz of Brooklyn, N. Y., slept most of the time on what he called the milk run.

There was nothing heroic about any of them, yet all carried Distinguished Flying Crosses with Oak Leaf Clusters buried away somewhere in their barracks bags. After much coaxing, I discovered that they had gotten them for a job in Burma supporting the legendary General Wingate's Army on the Imphal drive with Col. Corkin, the Flip Corkin of Terry and the Pirates.

9-26-44

These fellows had only gripe. They knew Joe Louis was somewhere around but some general had decided to pull this invasion before they had a chance to see the champ go through his paces.

STEWART ENTERS CITY WITH BOYS; SEES NAZIS FALL

Informer — Houston, Texas

8-26-44

By OLLIE STEWART

FRENCH CHANNEL PORT — I have today, August 15, seen history being made. I entered St. Malo while the city was half in the hands of the Americans and the other half in the Germans.

In a jeep, driven by Cpl. Melvin Lockwood, 5422 Summer street, Philadelphia, Joe Thomas, 78 Barclay street, Newark, N. J., and I entered a smoking town, while a white infantry was mopping up the last Nazi defenders. With the snipers taking final potshots at us, we reached colored artillery positions on a hill as thirty-five Germans were being herded out of a building, less than a hundred yards away.

Military police patrols lined up a group of dirty, wounded Nazis and searched each of them as they emptied their pockets. There was one officer captured.

Close to German dugouts, American machine guns were chattering and spitting lead at a small pocket of Germans still holding out. The Germans returned the compliment from a smoking building.

8-26-44

French Yell

We ducked into a dugout with a group of excited French men and women, shaking their fists at some Germans and yelling, "You dirty boches." One woman had a bottle of cider, which she shared with us. This one time, colored troops helped make possible the capture of an important city and actually entered with the first arrivals.

From the hilltop, I could see dirty, white flags still dangling from a strongpoint just captured, as we sat beside guns which had pummled Hitler's crack soldiers. Prisoners were dazed and shaken from incessant pounding of artillery divebombers. Dugouts were littered with grenades, ammunition, shattered guns and stale bread, too hard to chew; however, the concrete walls were too thick for anything to penetrate, but the big guns of the flame throwers.

French civilians, half naked, were begging for food and clothing everytime we stopped. Our men were sleepy from a night's fighting. One of them said, "I could lie down on a live German and sleep."

Later I talked to some prisoners who had almost nothing to eat. They said that the Germans pulled 88 guns by hand and used horses and wagons instead of trucks for transport.

8-26-44

Talked to, S. Sgt. George Bouttee, New Orleans; Cpl. John Galloway, Johnson City, Tenn.; Pfc. Arthur Glover, Winterpark, Fla.; Pfc. Obediah Wright, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Sgt. Dennis Haslar, Knoxville, Tenn.; Cpl. William Duneen, Shelbyville, Ky.; S. Sgt. Leonard Holmes, Warm Springs, Fla.; and Sgt. Jesse Wells, 129 Hill street, Baltimore, Md.

Quartermasters In Key Spot Near German Border

Iowa Bystander — Des Moines, Iowa

With the First U. S. Army, Bel- as A. Collins of Marion, Indiana, the Nurses Board, St. Louis.

officer. Among the men who keep the outfit working are:

Staff Sergeant William Smith, St. Louis, Missouri; Corporals John R. Morris, St. Louis, Mo., and Morris White, Brooklyn, New York, who is doubling as company clerk and news correspondent; Privates First Class Wallace Carter, Magnolia, Mississippi; Privates Vinson L. Stimson, Hartford, Connecticut and Philip Woodson, New York City.

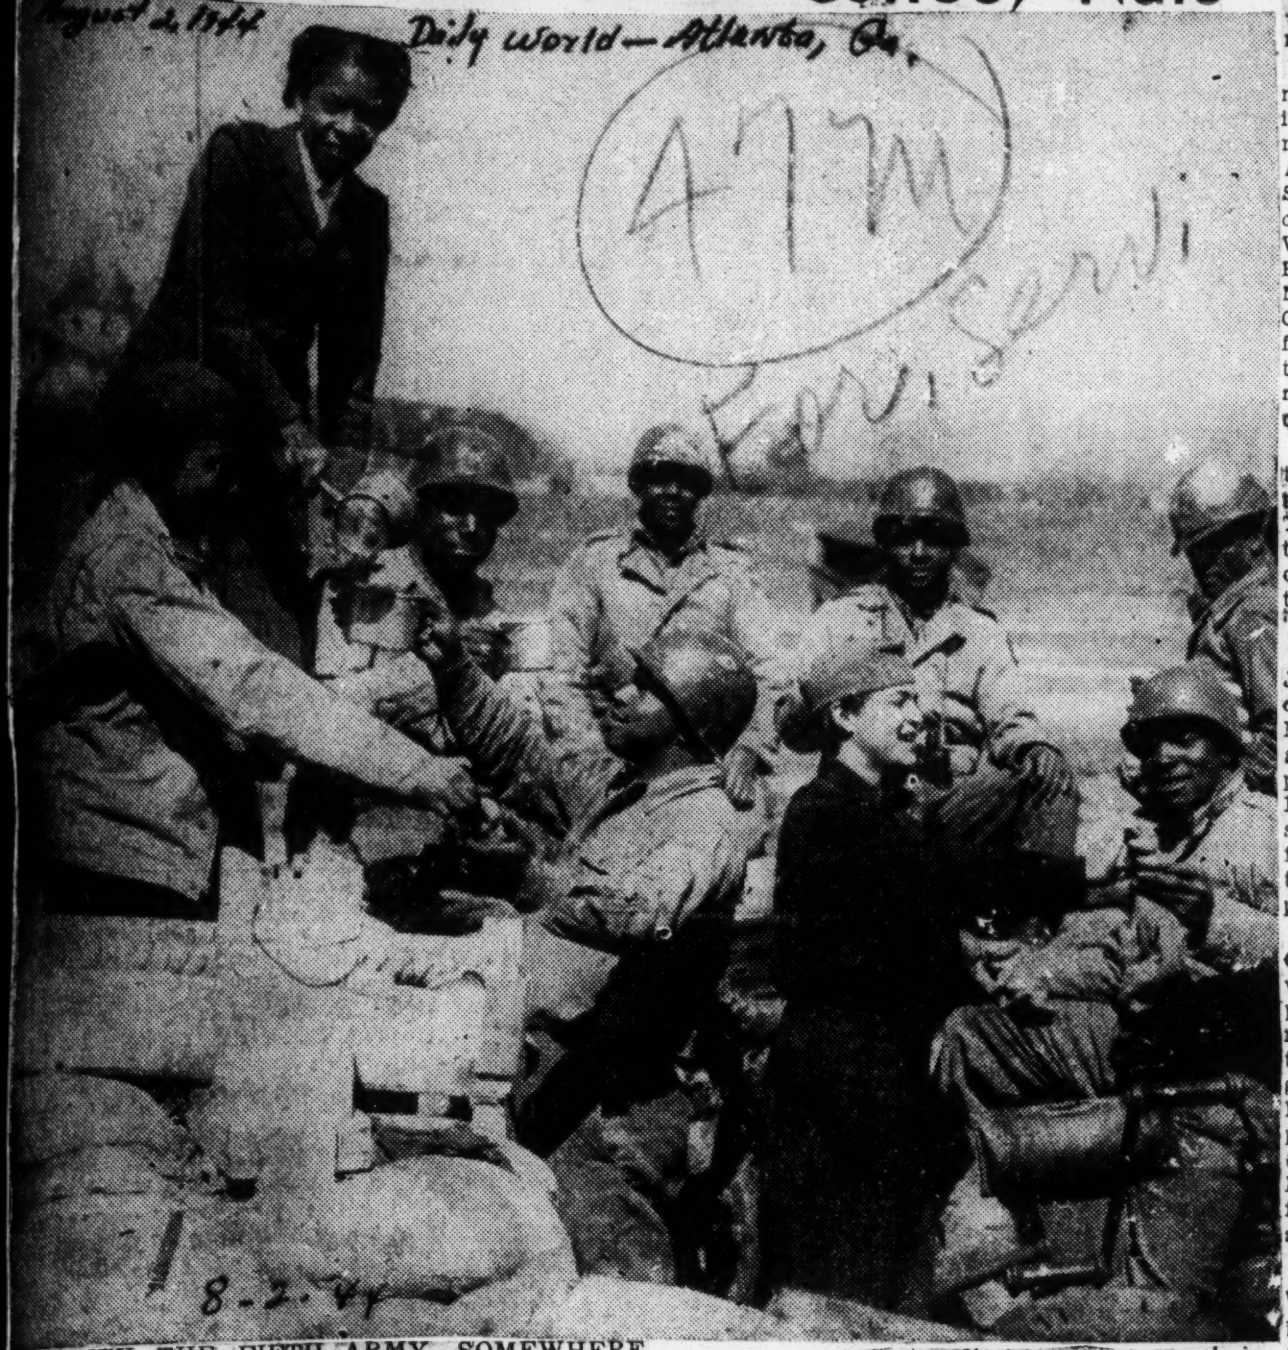
gium—Not too many miles from the fact that the responsibility of the German border the First Army has load in the Army rests with the a great signal depot, in a key spot is sponsible non-commissioned officers, a quartermaster service company. The and told the top-kick, "We've found men from this company came that the companies that are up on the in Normandy on "D plus 7" and have little things are up on the big things." been holding down this front line The signal depot is a key repair service spot for Lieutenant General shop and maintenance plant for high-Hodge's First Army since that time by the First Army, and all the servmoving when the First Army moved icing, as well as the depot mess, is The unit was visited last week by handled by this outfit. Captain Edward J. Gillett is the commanding Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, ranking Negro officer of the Army who stressed to First Sergeant Thom- Mary Porter Scott, of the Municipal

47m-1944

Foreign Service

Clubmobile Girls Serve Coffee, 'Nuts

August 2, 1944 Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.



WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, SOMEWHERE IN ITALY—American Red Cross clubmobile girls serve hot coffee and doughnuts to troops manning ant-aircraft guns. (ANP)

Artillerymen Pound Super Race Theory

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa.

7-22-44

A. U. S. ARTILLERY COMMAND POST, FRANCE—Showing contempt for "master race" divisions facing them, U. S. Negro artillerymen, firing 155-mm howitzers, are blasting German installations and troop concentrations, pounding to pieces the Nazi theory of "inferior" and "superior" races.

First Negro combat artillery team to fight in this sector, this outfit is the howitzer member of a four-unit group that includes a battalion of 105s and two of 155-mm Long Toms.

They make music horrible to enemy ears, but to U. S. doughboys of the infantry division being directly supported by their fire it is the sweetest song this side. 7-22-44

A few weeks ago these were the kids who enlivened English villages when they "swung" cadence drill on training hikes to the tune of "Whatcha Know Joe?" Now, when these cannoneers join in a group "serenade" the rhythm is not as regular, but Yanks in observation posts on the line report that the Jerries are dancing to it. Results: shattered thanks, wrecked 88s, smashed fortifications, dead Nazis.

"It's a hell of a different tune," observed Technician Fifth Grade Joe Hodge, a survey section man from Detroit, "and we know those Germans up there don't like it a bit."

The battalion's uniqueness far transcends the fact that its a Negro cobat unit. Its firing record, accuracy and output are acclaimed from corps artillery headquarters to the foxhole—pitted ridges of Hill 122 where muddy infantrymen fight. 7-22-44

A little later the guns spoke their mathematics—plotting and computing—precedes the sending of fire directions to the individual batteries. Armed with this data, computers Staff Sergeant Lawrence E. Innis of New York City; Private Van Q. White, of East Orange, New Jersey; Private Otis B. Walker, of Passaic, New Jersey, and Technician Fifth Grade Charles A. Peterson, of Plainfield, New Jersey, went to work with their graphical firing tables (slide rules to non-artillery folk) and quickly made their calculations.

A litle later the guns spoke their thunderous language, but the Germans miles away caught its meaning. The end of the mission came when the number one man of the 10-man crew pulled the lanyard and the battery computer at battalion called out "Charlie on the way."! 7-22-44

Soon it all comes down to where 12 Joes in the unit, known as number one men, pull down and out on their lanyards, sending the projectiles screaming through space. Very important Joes, these number one men. By yanking on their cords, primers set off the powder charges which forces the shells on the long trip to the target. They receive the biggest part of the concussion.

To number one man Private First Class Arthur Broadnax, of Autaugaville, Alabama, went the honor of pulling the lanyard for the first round fired by Negro Artillery against the Nazis. Number one men seldom go beyond private first class, but look upon their jobs with immense pride. One number one man in Baker Battery, Private First Class Robert Lee, from Montgomery, Alabama, refused a chance to become a gunner and go up in rank. 7-22-44

"I want to pull that lanyard and watch the shells go off," was his explanation. Other lanyard-pullers in the outfit: Private Horace Jacob, of Kaplan, Louisiana, Private T. J. Deramus, of Montgomery, Alabama; Private Grady Clay, of Tatum, Texas; Private Eddie J. Lynn, of Edwards, Massachusetts; Private First Class Tom Thomas, of Stamford, Connecticut; Private First Class Willie Cannon, of Columbus, Georgia; Private First Class Adam Tinnell, of Waxahachie, Texas; Private First Class John Trinr , of Bateford, Mississippi; Private First Class Jim Leatherwood, of Tupelo, Mississippi; and Private First Class John Battle, of Wadley, Alabama.

New Engineer Battalion

Journal + Guide
Norfolk, Va.

Blazes Trail

In Operation Only 3 Months, Already Setting A Record

7-22-44

ALLIED FORCE ADVANCE PRES HEADQUARTERS, (AN P)—An engineer construction battalion, one of the first Negro units of its kind to be organized and activated overseas, is now operating every type of construction project in Italy. In operation only three months, the men of this outfit are already maintaining over 150 miles of highway.

This unit, unique in that it has combined a company of Negro combat engineers with three companies of colored cavalry, claims that its men possess more non-commissioned ratings than any other engineer outfit in Italy. All but a very few of the troops are skilled specialists and over 90 percent of them have been trained in construction work in the Army.

OPERATE ROCK QUARRIES

In order to keep vital war traffic rolling forward over Italian roads the men of this unit are operating three rock quarries, utilizing salvaged Italian rock crushing equipment as well as the finest machines America can build. 7-22-44

A daily training schedule has been issued by Maj. Gen. Arthur B. Wilson, comamnder of the peninsular base section which includes everything from road marches to rifle drill on the range. In addition to their field training these men attend classes in road construction, iron working and all types of general and field maintenance work.

Every type of heavy construction machine is standard equipment for this outfit. The men, most of whom had no previous skilled trade, are being taught how to operate everything from giant cranes to bulldozers and road-graders.

REPAIR STEEL MILL

Repairing a bombed out Italian steel mill was one of their first jobs. The men picked for the project were given special demonstrations on steel construction safety before they mounted the 50 foot plant walls to rebuild the roof. Although this type of work calls for highly skilled mechanics, the job was completed ahead of schedule without the loss of one man through serious accident.

"This outfit does anything and everything," said M/Sgt. Lawrence M. Carter, battalion sergeant major and veteran of 30 years in the Army. "It just goes to show you that the cavalry can do anything," he said.

Sgt. Carter, who is 51 years old and the husband of Mrs. Anna Carter, 11 Arsenal Hill, Leavenworth, Kan., has been in the Philippines," Sgt. Carter said, "and the last war and never have I out the area. Each company is seen an outfit as versatile as self sustaining, being equipped this one. with all the necessary machin- 7-22-44 ery and technicians to perform men of the battalion the distinction of having any job given them.

"I saw seven years duty in their own 1,000 man camp ed athletic fields for their own ing area. They have construct- several outdoor thea- while bivouaced in a neighbor- IN THE PHILIPPINES

Roi Ottley Sees Negro Troops in Action in Normandy

PM—New York, N.Y.

By Roi Ottley
Staff Correspondent

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE, July 31.—Had American supply lines broken down in the first assault here following the infiltration of paratroopers and strong armed attacks along the beachheads, in all likelihood the U. S. forces would have been thrown back into the Channel.

I have just completed a tour of the front. It is apparent now, though only admitted recently, that such a situation faced the American High Command. Today the sheer weight of supplies and men is breaking the back of German defenses and perhaps has staved off serious counterattacks. 7-31-44

Ottley

The task of keeping an avalanche of food, ammunition and troops moving steadily toward the front is mainly the job of Negro troops. They would be last to acknowledge the importance of their contribution. They insist others are doing more, but their officers warmly praise their heroic performance under enemy fire.

They are particularly proud of Negro Pvts. Bernard Henderson of New York City and Percy Cox of Petersburg, Va., who are slated for awards for valor.

Sent Up Balloons

While working at Valognes, they saw a German scouting party of 15 men creeping stealthily up a hill. Henderson and Cox sprang on them with their poised automatics. The Germans surrendered without firing a shot. 7-31-44

In the early days of the invasion Negro battalions moved on to the beachheads alongside the assault troops to send up balloon barrages. It was the success of this operation that kept the German planes at great heights and prevented them from dive-bombing and strafing our forces on the beachhead.

The American sector is subject to day and night attacks by air and shell fire. The men here say it is almost inaccurate to talk of front and rear under these conditions. Only tactically is there a front line. Once the American troops had landed, Negro amphibious craft units, the "ducks," brought in supplies and more men from ships anchored in the Channel, often within range of blasting German guns.

They rolled the supplies to dumps ashore. Many a life was lost when these ambivalent autos struck mines laid by the Germans. From these supply dumps on land, Negro motor transport units loaded their two-ton trucks and moved the supplies and men further toward the front. 7-31-44

Many Occupations

Traveling in their wake, the roar of bombs and guns, the swirls of blinding dust, the utter devatation, even the concern with self-preservation is apt to distract attention from the miracle of army organization being efficiently carried out by Negro units.

Significantly enough, Negro troops are engaged in a variety of occupations, many unknown to the average Negro in civilian life. Along the route to the front Negro Signal Corps men are seen astride telephone poles, easy targets for the German snipers. Nevertheless they are erecting and repairing communication lines destroyed by the retreating Germans.

The back-breaking, unsung jobs necessary to waging successful war are being done cheerfully by Negroes. They are repairing roads, constructing buildings, laying railroads ties, salvaging, and even breaking stone in quarries for road building and repair. Two Negro units only are in actual combat. One is an anti-aircraft outfit and the other an artillery formation.

Artillery is definitely one of the skilled jobs of war in which Negroes are making a creditable showing. Artillery played an important role in the successful offensive at St. Lo. I visited the Negro troops and officers at their bivouacs, some in apple orchards. 7-31-44

Spic and Span

The areas were spic and span, their tents neatly put up and covered with green parachute cloth, their foxholes dug deep and carefully boarded at the sides. Some had pinup girls on the rude walls. This was a luxury few had. The men took pride in their personal appearance and in their mess quarters. Cleanliness was easily evident everywhere I went.

I found the morale high. Officers corroborated this finding. The reason for this excellent morale, Negroes explained, is the noticeable change in the attitude of white officers toward Negro troops. A contributing factor is the exceptionally cordial welcome of the French people. No one here apparently can afford the luxury of Jim Crow, though the American Red Cross is now preparing to open quarters for Negro soldiers.

The Negro soldier feels appreciated by his white comrades. The white boys, one enlisted man told me, see us working hard and better understand our need to each other—that if we don't pull together we die. 7-31-44

There are about 30 Negro commissioned officers in France with the highest rank a major. Everywhere I went I asked the Negro troops what most they wanted the folks back home to know. The answer was the same everywhere:

"We want to see the end of Jim Crow in America and equal treatment for everyone."

Eisenhower Praises 2 Negro Army Units

PM—New York, N.Y.

Balloon Battalion and Truck Company Win Commendation

7-31-44

By Marshall Yarrow
Reuters Correspondent

ADVANCE COMMAND POST, SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, July 31.—Two Negro units in the U. S. forces have received special commendation by Gen. Eisenhower for meritorious services in the invasion of France.

The letters sent by the supreme commander follow:

"To the commanding officer, officers and men of an anti-aircraft balloon battalion:

"Your battalion landed in France on June 6, 1944, under artillery, machine-gun and rifle fire. Despite the losses sustained, the battalion carried out its mission with courage and determination, and proved an important element of the air defense team. The cheerfulness and devotion to duty of officers and men have been commented on by the personnel of other units.

"This report is most gratifying to me. I commend you and the officers and men of your battalion for your fine effort which has merited the praise of all who have observed it."

The second letter was addressed to QM Truck Co. A and said:

"You landed under enemy machine-gun and artillery fire which caused losses in men and equipment. Nevertheless, you salvaged most of your equipment at once, and within three days 90 per cent of your vehicles were operating on a 24-hour basis, a scale which was maintained for five weeks. During this time you continued the delivery of essential supplies. 7-31-44

"I want you to know that I appreciate your splendid work. Your accomplishments are a source of gratification to me."

Praise from Eisenhower, and from their white buddies, too, comes to the Negro troops who are doing a bangup job in France. Here are some of them—a platoon surrounding a farm house as they prepare to eliminate an enemy sniper.
Signal Corps Photo

Retreating Germans dynamited the span and dig in on the western bank of the river, from where they continued ambush operations.

British Capture Forli in Italy, Negro Troops Take 3 Villages

ROME, Nov. 10 (AP)—British troops of the Eighth Army cap-

47m-1944

Foreign

Race Lines Cracked At Iran's Camp Stalingrad

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
10-21-44

By FRANK E. BOLDEN
(NNPA War Correspondent)

CAMP STALINGRAD, KAZVIN, Iran—Nestled deep in the bosom of the Elburz mountains in northeastern Iran lies Camp Stalingrad, so named in honor of the famous Russian city of the same name. It is the last American occupied outpost situated on the vital supply route to Russia.

Men of the Red Army take over at this point and continue to roll the supplies on through to the Soviet front.

Here, I found one of the smartest, soldiering colored units in the Persian Gulf Command, the 435th Engineer Dump Truck company. It is the only Negro complement on the post and comprises approximately ten per cent of the garrison's strength.

Working side by side daily with the sturdy sons and daughters of the USSR, and in mutual harmony, these tan GIs most of whom hail from New York, New Jersey, Massachusettes (with replacements from the southern and midwestern states) are also turning in a diplomatic chore, worthy of State Department approval by their good conduct and cooperative attitude extended to soldiers of the Red Army. GI ambassadors they are.

Long lines of loaded truck convoys roll in 24 hours a day to both Russian dumps. Both trucks and supplies must be checked before being allowed to proceed farther north. The 435th handles most of this work. 10-21-44

Said alert, coffee-colored First Sergeant Derrick G. Hamilton, ex-athlete from Plainfield, N. J.: "It has been easy to handle the men of our company because they not only realize that the Russians can and will do a good job at the front if they can get the supplies, but also the harmonious relationship maintained between our men and the Russians and the white American troops both at work and on the post has helped immeasurably. We have encountered less discrimination and segregation here than back home in the States."

Echoing sentiments along the same vein were Supply Sergeant Clifford B. Cole, slim, goateed GI from New York City, and Cpl. Herbert D. Henry, the company clerk with the basso-profundo voice, also from New York City, who remarked, "The men don't mind putting out when they know and can see that it is appreciated. We have one of the best company commanders in Capt. Andy Skocynski, of Chicago that troops could wish for. He soldiers with us as does Lt.-Col. Gruneck, the post commander. 10-21-44

"We use the same PX, sif anywhere in the enlisted men's section at the theatre, have the same transportation facilities to town, and enjoy the same privileges at the service men's club as the white GIs. Occasionally in town a white soldier thiinks he is in Dixie and gets out of line, bue he receives little support in his argument from others, including the Iranians and the Russians. We haven't had much trouble on that score."

Designs Mural For U. S. Army Hospital At Australian Base

Age — New York, N.Y.
4-22-44

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA—A large mural on the wall of an American Red Cross recreation hall attached to a U. S. army hospital is winning many critical plaudits for First Sergeant Elwood Dean, of 109 Belgrove drive, Kearny, N. J., who previously did lettering for R. J. Goerke Co., a Newark, N. J. department store.

The project was started three weeks ago when Vera Hoover, American Red Cross recreation worker from Nashville, Tenn., told a few of the boys that she'd like a decoration to fill in the blank walls. Sergeant Dean, who is a patient at the hospital, suggested a mural and volunteered to execute it.

Within three weeks time, painting only in the evenings, Sergeant Dean completed a 50-foot action-loaded western mural that covers one end of the hall and provides a colorful background for the "wild west" atmosphere the Red Cross has created in the building.

4-22-44

Before starting work, Sergeant Dean made small sketches to scale. He was loath to start on the actual mural because the Red Cross hall is always jammed with patients. "But the boys were really very considerate," he said, "they didn't ask many questions, and I soon got used to working with pingpong balls flying around the rooms and a jam session going on in the corner."

Sergeat Dean is a graduate of the Newark School of Fine and Industrial Arts and hopes to make portrait-painting his career. This mural in his first artistic attempt since going on overseas service.

CARLTON MOSS BACK IN STATES

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
10-21-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Negroes in the American Expeditionary forces are primarily concerned about a job and making up for "lost" time after the war, Carlton Moss, author and playwright just returned from overseas, told reporters last Wednesday.

Moss wrote the script and narrated the documentary film, "The Negro Soldier," which was produced by the War department under the direction of Hollywood's Frank Capra. Accompanied by Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis and Maj. Homer B. Roberts, public relations officer, Moss spent three months abroad shooting more than 100,000 feet of film for a follow-up film. The party visited England, France, Italy and North Africa.

"These boys want to know whether they're going to get jobs when this thing is over," Moss said. "Most of them have learned new skills, have thrown off the old timidity, and are looking for their share in the peace."

He said too that they are learning languages and winning friends. They have found that no race is "naturally" submissive, a thinking that had been dinned into their heads in America.

Moss cited narrow brushes with death which he and the party encountered, told of the job the boys are doing to hasten the fall of Germany, and related several amusing experiences. 10-21-44

He brought back nearly 100,000 feet of film showing Negro and white soldiers in action together, and in almost every military occupation. Another 12,000 in technicolor was taken of the 332nd fighter group, now in Italy.

(The Chicago Defender does not vouch for the authenticity or truthfulness of letters printed in this column, nor do letters contained here express opinions or views of the Defender. All letters must be signed with name and address of writer. Confine them to 300 words.)

Filipino Lauds Negro Soldier

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

Some time ago while still in training back in the states, I read in Life Magazine and in other fine American journals of the shocking attitude and disgraceful treatment accorded colored soldiers in some parts of the United States. Recently I read it in the Yank, the army weekly and noted with gratification the noble reaction of white soldiers regarding the injustice done to colored American boys in Uncle Sam's army. 10-21-44

I read your fine paper while I was still back in Chicago working in the post office, and I had nothing but respect and admiration for your fine work in trying to promote goodwill and understanding among all races, and your valiant fight against the vicious monster—race prejudice.

As an American soldier, as a son of the brown race, as a firm believer in democracy and equal justice to all I've taken this opportunity to voice through your courageous paper my feelings and those of other Filipinos.

Here in New Guinea as in other war fronts all over the world thousands of colored American youths are sweating and bleeding to help win the war. Many have already given their last full measure of devotion to the country of their birth. I have seen tireless colored boys toiling from morn till dusk, many times through the night, driving trucks laden with vital war supplies, keeping the roads and runways open and safe, building bridges across streams so the big guns and tanks could pass through, clearing jungles and swamps for new soldiers from the states to camp in. 10-21-44

These colored doughboys are as fine as any in the American Expeditionary Forces. They are as patriotic as anyone. They are as capable for the greatest sacrifices as the white boys from the North or South. They would stand and fight to the last, a hopeless and forlorn struggle for the Stars and Stripes as did the Filipino and American heroes in the battlefields of Bataan.

Then why should their brothers back in the United States, who are wearing the same uniform and in the service of the same country as the white servicemen, be treated so differently and shamefully? They are human beings with souls as all the rest—they are men with feelings, too! Why?—Cpl. Luis H. Carbonell, Somewhere in New Guinea.

D-Day Mistake

News Age Herald Magazine
A True Story by TOM TREANOR Section
Birmingham, Ala.

Tom Treanor, who was wounded in an accident near the front. — The Editors from France by War Correspondent

10-1-44

SAID Pvt. Eric T. Davis, Negro soldier of Uvalada, Ga., "It's the darnedest mistake I ever heard tell of."

He wasn't angry, but he wasn't pleased either.

Pvt. Walter Pearson, also colored, of Shreveport, La., declared, "No sir, we didn't know nothing. We was in England, and we didn't have no officer. Just had a sergeant. He told us to drive our trucks on the beach. But he didn't tell us to get off. So we sat in the trucks, and these Negro truck drivers made pretty soon they closed the ramps, and off we go to France. We didn't know until we got here that we wasn't supposed to go."

Pvt. Randolph Dillon, of Gary, Ind., declared, "No nothing. We was but I wanna go back. We got more unity when we are with our own outfit."

"Now that you're in France," I asked, "are you glad you came, or do you want to go back?"

"Glad we came, all right," said Pvt. Randolph Dillon, of Gary, Ind., "but I wanna go back. We got more unity when we are with our own outfit."

"I took down a JU-88," he said. Up spoke Pvt. Dillon. "I saw the tracers go into it. He took it down all right."

So now they want more action. And they want more guns on their trucks.

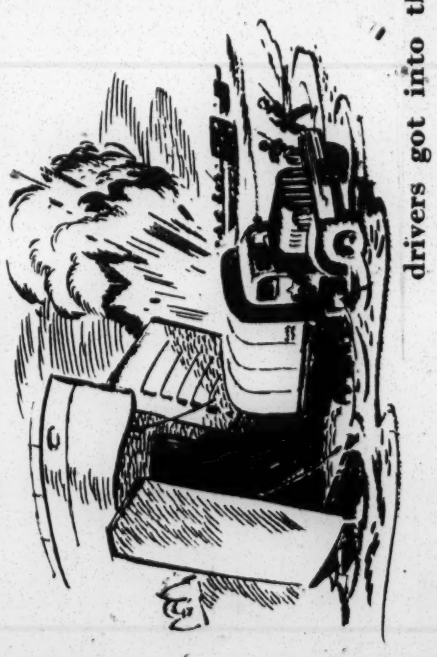
"We only got one little old machine gun on each truck," said Pvt. Theodore Fry, of Dayton, Ohio.

"We'll get you more," said Lieut. Harry Huftlas, a white officer from South St. Paul, Minn. His trucking unit badly needed these boys. "We'll get you just as many guns as the regular trucks have."

"First plane we shot at we was happy," said Pvt. Pearson. "But we found out?" they tell me it was a wrong one."

"You mean it was —"

"Yes sir, one of ours," interrupted enemy fire. According to their ac-



Without a Tag
10-1-44
He Moved — Fast!

THE men feel well seasoned to drivers got into the invasion . . . by error!

10-1-44

"YOU know how we asked Pvt. Davis. "The whizzing around, and I

How a unit of truck This article is one of the last sent counts they alighted at one of the hottest moments on D-Day.

"Lookit," said Pvt. Hamlin Kizsee, of Norfolk, Va., as if to prove it. "Here's three bullet holes in my truck!"

"Where were you when they came in?" I asked.

"When the first one came in," he said, "I was in the cab. When the next two came in I was in a hole." 10-1-44

At this point Pvt. Pearson returned to the subject of the Sergeant who had ordered them on the landing craft and hadn't ordered them off.

"He was gassed," he said. "He was gassed in the hold of the ship before we sailed. That's maybe why he didn't tell us to get off."

"What gassed him?" I asked.

"Some drums in the hold," he said.

"Was it ammonia in the drums?"

Gas Attack

"No SIR, it wasn't no ammonia," said Pvt. Kizsee. "He was just gassed, that's all."

"Was it aviation gasoline?"

"Wasn't no aviation gasoline," said Pvt. Wilce Chapman, of Hiwannee, Miss. 10-1-44

The unit held a brief conference and then came up with the verdict that the substance in the drums which had gassed their sergeant was 190 proof alcohol. They had to carry him off the landing craft to a hospital. In his condition as a casualty, he had been unable to inform the unit that it should leave the invasion of France to others.

White Lists Points on Negro Troops Abroad

Northwest Enterprise
Seattle, Wash. 5-24-44

Report to Washington Lists Recommendations as Result of 15 Week's Observation Overseas.

WASHINGTON — Fourteen recommendations, ranging from lectures to American white soldiers to a special Board of Review for courtsmartial cases, were made by Walter White in a report to the War Department, it was revealed here last week.

The report was based upon White's 15-week, 20,000-mile tour of military installations in the European theatre of operations, in North Africa, Italy and the Middle East as an accredited foreign correspondent for the New York Post newspaper. The 14 points included:

OFF LIMITS — That General Eisenhower's directive to abolish "off limits" of towns and pubs (taverns) be enforced in all areas. Negro soldiers were found to resent bitterly the off limits orders or orders setting "odd" and "even" nights for white and colored troops to visit towns and places of amusement. White observed that some commanding officers took a positive stand for fairness and had very little trouble in their localities. 5-24-44

COURTS MARTIAL — A special board of review of courts-martial cases was recommended by White who said that "great unhappiness" has resulted among Negro soldiers "because of their belief that they are punished more quickly and more severely than white soldiers." After citing a number of cases detailed to him by Negro prisoners with whom he was permitted to talk freely, White urged that the special board of review include an eminent Negro lawyer, who would be brought in to serve with appropriate rank. 5-24-44

COMBAT TROOPS — The department is urged to send Negro combat troops to Englasd. White said stories were being circulated that there are no Negro combat troops in England because "Negroes are afraid to fight." He termed as "unfortunate" the fact that, with the exception of some anti-aircraft units, only Negro service troops had been sent to the European theatre. "The Negro troops in the ETO," said his report, "have little or none of the exciteement of war necessary to raise the spirits and to give a sense of participation to men engaged in waging war." 5-24-44

Also recommended was that Negro medium bomber crews be sent to England to "fly in non-segregated units," and that Negro service troops now stationed therein be given refresher courses in the use of combat weapons, "as many of these troops will closely follow the assault waves of invasion, will be under fire, and need to be made competent in the use of weapons."

Supporting his recommendation for more combat troops, he cited the improved atmosphere in the Mediterraseas as a result of the exploits of the 99th Pursuit Squadron. He recommended that Negro and white fighter squadross function in the same group; and he also urged reconsideration of the conversion of the 2nd Cavalry Division into service troops.

In connectios with the moral value of the presence of Negro combat troops, White also urged that more Negro officers above the rank of captain be sent to England. 5-24-44

ANTI-NEGRO RUMORS — Some Negro soldiers abroad have taken the spreading of vicious and fantastic rumors about Negroes as a joke, but some have resented the stories deeply, said White, in recommesding that G-2 (Army Intelligence) try to track down and scotch moral-sapping stories.

White reported less anti-Negro propaganda in the Mediterranean than in England, but suggested that Army Intelligence run down the people who were issuing leaflets, placards and other material seeking to poison Italians against Negroes. Upon inquiry one such placard was found to have been issued by a non-existant organization and signed by a fictitious person. 5-24-44

MILITARY POLICE — White found the same complaint abroad on Military Police that has been made in some parts of America, namely that white MP's are armed, but Negro MP's are not. He recommended that no MP's be armed except when guarding payrolls.

PATERNALISM — Paternalistic attitudes on the part of white officers is resented, White reported, saying that both well-educated and less-educated Negroes resent being treated as "boys." Abandonment of the idea that southern white officers are best for Negro troops because they "understand" Negroes, was urged by White, who, however, said many white officers from the South are fair and decent in their treatment of Negroes, while there is no guarantee that a man will be free from predudice just because he happens to be from the North. 5-24-44

LECTURES — Lectures to American white troops aboard ships as they near England on the difference between the British and American attitudes toward color, together with lectures to British troops by competent Americans on America and the true place of the Negro as a citizen of his country would be helpful, White declared.

A connection between the venereal disease rate among colored troops and the attitude which has barred them from normal association with respectible families was seen by White, who quoted a soldier as saying they were more and more restricted to women picked up in pubs. White suggested that a Negro physicias be attached to the office of Chief Surgeon. 5-24-44

More Negro actors and singers were recommended for the entertainment of both white and Negro troops.

RED CROSS — After praising the Red Cross for doing "in many respects a scperlative job," he deplored the white and Negro Red Cross clubs located in many areas as sot only introducing segregation to the British, but denying white and Negro American soldiers the opportunity to know each other better. He cited the non-segregation pattern of one club as a model for the Red Cross everywhere.

CENSORSHIP — More news and more sympathetic handling of news dealing with Negro troops by the censors would be very helpful, said White, as it would give Negro civilians a better picture of the contribution of their men to the war. 5-24-44

LAGGING BEHIND — White's concluding recommendation was a suggestion that the War Department policy on race "lags behind that of much of the personnel of the Army." He said an advanced position would meet opposition but would be approved by a "much larger percentage . . than the War Department appears to believe possible."

"The time and field are ripe for progress. Continuance of segregation and discrimination is in part responsible for a less determined spirit in the Army thas is necessary to meet the very crucial days which lie ahead before the war is won. Vision to see the situation as it is and courage to surmount difficulties and opposition in the implementation of that vision are greatly to be urged upon the War Department asd Navy Department, and upon all others charged with the prosecution of the war."

Martin Reveals Negro Units Are Facing The Enemy

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga.
1-18-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

GUADALCANAL—(By Cable) — An advanced echelon of Negro troops has arrived in Bougainville, Army sources revealed this week. A returning correspondent revealed the presence of Negro troops already on the last enemy stronghold in the solomons.

The possession of Bougainville becomes more necessary since American landings on New Britain. Allied forces pushing up from the Solomons can hasten the inevitable ground assault on the powerful base of Rabaul.

AIR BASE SECURITY UNIT

The Negro contingent is an air base security unit heavily armed. It is believed they will be used to make secure the vital and strategic allied air strip next Empress Augusta Bay.

Fresh Negro Marines landed at Guadalcanal recently and have already pushed into the Russell Island to reinforce Negro troops stationed there. Semi-official reports revealed that a large defense unit of Marines will soon be stationed in the Pacific. It is thought that these Negro troops may be used in any landing and assault.

The use of Negroes as assault troops is yet to be experienced in the South Pacific although several combat units have been in the perimeter of combat. It is still a gross question mark whether they will be used, but the trend points that they may shortly be put into action. 1-18-44

ACTION AT A MINIMUM

At present, except for patrol classes and air strikes, action here is at a minimum as each side marshalls its forces for what promises to be a bitter struggle.

Bougainville stands as the bottleneck and must be taken at all costs. On Guadalcanal where thousands of Negro troops are stationed life is only disturbed by the periodical rains. These troops are winning no battle glory as far as the world is concerned, but they still remain in the connecting line and a vital link between the supplies and men at the front.

Local Negroes Undergo Raids In Manning Isle

News- Birmingham, Ala.
3-2-44

The following story, distributed by The Associated Press, was written by Sgt. John R. Hurley, formerly of New York City, and Hollywood, Calif., a Marine Corps combat correspondent.

* * *

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC— (Delayed) —Negro marines, 17 from Birmingham, Ala., are undergoing almost constant air attacks as they help man this island, a key supply base for American forces fighting the Japanese.

The Negroes, trained at Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C., received their baptism of fire at Guadalcanal, where ships they were aboard were raided by Jap planes.

From Guadalcanal, they moved forward into more active combat zones. Japanese bombers made regular nightly runs over the areas but the marines grew accustomed to the air raids.

Trained as infantrymen with some later specializing in anti-aircraft artillery, other special weapons and tanks, they are nearly all volunteers. Retaining marked good humor and spirits under the trying conditions imposed by remoteness and tropics, they work hard at their assigned duties, taking the good with the bad.

The former cooks and clerks, mechanics and drivers, carpenters and farmers are from Alabama, Mississippi, New York, Michigan, Florida, Tennessee, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Georgia, Illinois, Arkansas, Virginia and California. They average about 20 years of age.

* * *

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., is the best represented with 17 men from that town. From Birmingnam are Corp. Jesse L. Craig, of 2935 Fourth Avenue, South; Pfc. Jesse Williams, 518 38th Street (airfield); Pvt. Nathaniel Booker, 2221 11th Avenue, South; Pvt. Riley Wilkins, 3342 31st Place, North; Pvt. Clarence J. Collins, 203 North 22nd Street; Pvt. Walter C. B. Bolden, Jr., 400 Ninth Court, South; Pvt. Milton A. Williams, 528 Dawson Avenue (Powderly); Corp. Frank W. Ishman, 120 33rd Street, North; Pvt. Willie Moore, 1417 17th Street, South; Pvt. Jesse Riddle, 961 First Street, North; Pvt. Robert Ward, 1017 23rd Street, North; Pfc. Simpson Norris, 912 Avenue "G" (Pratt City); Pvt Kit Bibbs, 515 11th Court, East; Pvt. Elijah Durden, 721 24th Street, North; Pvt. Melvin G. Cooper, 1629 Ninth Avenue, North; Pvt. Earl L. Davis, 911 First Avenue, and Pvt. George C. Matthews, 5 First Avenue, Southwest. 3-2-44

* * *

POCKET - SIZE GRAMMARS HELP THE MARINES eliminate the language problem in their trade with natives. They vent their souvenior craze by dickering with the natives, later sending home grass skirts, sea shells, war clubs and canes, and other curios. The natives take money first, then cigarets, tobacco, pipes, soap, junk jewelry, etc. The visionary brought along ample supplies of the latter from dime stores.

At night, when air raid sirens are not blowing, can be heard the moan of spirituals such as "Join the Band," "Bread of Heaven" and "Father Prepare Me," mingled with livelier modern tunes.

Negro Troops Rip Bougainville Foe

Daily Worker- New York, N.Y.
3-19-44

GUADALCANAL, March 16 (UP) —The 24th U. S. Army Regiment of Negroes, under command of a white officer, moved into Japanese-held territory on Bougainville Island Sunday and bested the enemy at jungle fighting.

The 24th was the first Negro combat unit to go into action in the South Pacific, and to Sgt. Alonzo Douglas went the distinction of probably being the first Negro to kill a Japanese in this war.

The Negroes, commanded by Lt. Col. Julian C. Hearne, completed a difficult mission on a battle-torn front where the Japanese were in the throes of suicidal attempts to take back the U. S. beachhead at Empress Augusta Bay. 3-17-44

A combat patrol was the first to draw blood. It filtered several thousand yards into Japanese-held territory beyond the U. S. perimeter, then worked its way out of a Japanese ambush and made its way back to the U. S. lines.

24th Infantry Unit On Tactical Duty On Bougainville

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga.
2-23-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

SOUTH PACIFIC ADVANCED POST—(By Cable)—Two Negro mess attendants manned machine guns and aided in downing six Japanese planes during recent landings on Gree Island.

Leaving their regular duties when 15 Japanese dive bombers attacked the Allied convoy, Coast Guardsmen Presty McCrary, of Detroit, Michigan, and Jack Price, of Wetempka, Ala., reserve gunners, ran onto the reck of their ship and fired continuously during an intense rain. Hard-fighting marines watched as the men kept bullets flying in the face of sudden death.

Ray Fitzpatrick, Marine reporter, wrote a special story on the deed.

Guns from the flotilla drove the Japanese higher. Six planes were shot down.

Also with this announcement came information that a unit of the 24th infantry regiment is now on tactical reconnaissance duty on Bougainville. It is the first ground unit to see such service and is entitled to a battle star. Landings put the Allies within 120 miles of Rabaul and Kavieng, Japanese bastions. 2-23-44

News of the Negro coast guard in the South Pacific is the first knowledge of such in this area. Indications point towards Negroes in combat in the near future.

The heat in this area is 128 degrees. Seasoned troops expect rotation.

WATCH JAP STRATEGY BY THE S. N. S.

Secretary of the Navy Knox said Tuesday that developments in the Pacific point to a Japanese attempt to repeat the sea strategy that won the Russo-Japanese war and the American Navy hopes they'll try it. Nipponese naval strategy of 1904-05 consisted of a sneak attack at Port Arthur, much like Pearl Harbor, followed by evasion of full-scale action for a time until the Russian fleet had been lured far from the bases then an all-out attack. Up to now, the Japanese have evaded meeting the American Navy full strength.

Allied headquarters at Naples said their forces were on the alert for a third German thrust at Anzio. Fighting on a comparatively small scale took place Tuesday. The Allies plan to hold the beachhead at every cost. 2-23-44

American bombers from Italy struck with record strength Tuesday at the Messerschmitt airplane factories at Regensburg, Germany, while other powerful United States forces from Britain dealt devastating blows elsewhere in the Reich in the first such synchronized assault from two directions.

In Moscow, Premier Marshal Joseph Stalin announced that Krivol Rog, the Ukraine city of mines which the Germans had defeated with frantic zeal in four months of bitter fighting, fell to the storming Ukrainian forces of General Malinovsky. The announcement came only a few hours after the Germans announced they had evacuated the city, whose ores were a major military prize.

The 24th Infantry

Daily Worker- New York, N.Y.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT has apparently modified what looked like a no-fight policy for Negro troops. Jolted by avalanches of protests, the War Department now announces that the 24th Infantry is fighting—and fighting well—in Japanese-held territory on Bougainville Island. 3-18-44

It is unfortunate that the Negro people

When will our government learn that the Negro people, who realize that they have everything to lose by a fascist victory, are determined to do their part as equals—both fighting their own government for the right to fight the enemy. But that is what happened with respect to the 24th. The Negro people only recently demanded of Secretary of War Stimson why the old and valorous 24th Infantry, in the South Seas for 21 months, was employed as a stevedore outfit.

in the military and the home sectors—in this anti-fascist war?

The 24th, combining the 38th and 41st infantry regiments, was formed by act of Congress in 1869. During 75 years it has maintained an enviable reputation. The 24th Infantry, with other Negro troops, sang "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," in the Spanish-American War, as they charged up San Juan Hill to the rescue of Col. Theodore Roosevelt. The 24th supplied sterling officer material to Negro outfits in the first World War. 3-18-44

The 24th, however, is not the only Negro unit with a brilliant record and a burning desire to use its training. All troops trained for combat desire combat. That desire, today, is the more passionate among Negro troops. Why? Because they feel they are fighting a war to liberate their people. We hope the War Department, interested as it is in maintaining civilian as well as soldier morale, will heed this simple fact.

Bishop Tells How Negro Troops Fed Yanks Along Italian Front

News-Birmingham, Ala
2-17-44

Negro soldiers were responsible for the serving of a Thanksgiving dinner to every American on the Italian front regardless of where he happened to be.

The way the Negro troops carried the turkey and fixings by truck over perilous roads to every sector of the bloody front and made their way to trenches and foxholes was described in an interview Wednesday by Bishop J. A. Gregg, of the A. M. E. Church, of Chicago, who was commissioned by President Roosevelt to visit Negro soldiers on the various battlefronts.

The Negro bishop, who represented the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches on the tour, mentioned this as one of the many deeds performed by Negro soldiers. He made particular mention of the splendid engineering work they are performing and told of the roads, runways and bridges they have built.

* * *

BISHOP GREGG RETURNED THIS WEEK from a visit to England, Italy, North Africa and Burma. It was his second battle tour within a few months. He left on this one last November and in July he visited the Pacific area.

He received permission from the War Department to stop over in Birmingham for a council meeting of A. M. E. bishops before reporting in Washington. He will be joined here before going to Washington by Maj. John A. DeVeaux, highest ranking Negro chaplain in the United States Army, who accompanied Bishop Gregg on his tour. 2-17-44

Bishop Gregg met all top-flight generals with the exception of Gen. Eisenhower, whom he missed by two days in Italy. He was in close contact with Gen. Clark in Italy and Gen. MacArthur invited the bishop to stay at his headquarters at Port Moresby.

He crossed the Owen Stanley mountain range in New Guinea and was eight miles from Buna when the battle to eject the Japs was raging there and when the Japs held Lae.

* * *

BISHOP GREGG TOLD OF ADDRESSING Negro soldiers within the sound of gunfire and while planes were being shot down. He described hospitals he visited where he brought his message of good cheer to white and Negro soldiers. He spoke to as many as nine groups of Negro soldiers in one day.

Caution was necessary in what he had to say, Bishop Gregg pointed out, because he has not yet reported to the War Department. His last trip covered 15,216 miles and the Fraternal Council of Negro churches which he represented is made up of 40,000 churches and 6,000,000 members. Among other accomplishments of Negro soldiers of which Bishop Gregg said he is proud is the work they have done on the Alcan Highway from Canada to Alaska. Bishop Gregg is the guest here of Bishop Ward D. Nichols, chancellor of Payne University for Negroes in Woodlawn. He expects to be here the remainder of this week.

U. S. Negro Troops Crack Bougainville Foe; Some From Harlem in Spirited Action

Times-New York, N.Y. 3-17-44

By FRANK L. KLUCKHOHN

By Cable to THE N

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, March 16—For the first time in this area organized Negro combatant troops have been in action. Led by Second Lieut. Henry J. McAllister of Hamburg, N. Y., they took the offensive against Japanese who had infiltrated American lines at Empress Augusta Bay, on Bougainville Island, drove the Japanese back, infiltrated their lines and generally caused a sensation.

Tonight as this is written one battalion of the Twenty-fourth Infantry, officered by whites but with all the rest of the organization Negroes, is holding an active segment in the Bougainville line.

There has been a little Anzio show at Bougainville, where desperate Japanese on the isolated island tried in numbers to drive off the Americans. They actually, it is now revealed, broke our lines in places by their suicidal attacks and, as is generally known, put the airstrips under fire. Then troops of the Thirty-seventh American Division aided by tanks and flamethrowers drove them back. Now we have taken the offensive again, and at this point a combat patrol of the Twenty-fourth Infantry went into action. 3-17-44

They infiltrated several thousand yards within the Japanese lines, killed some of the enemy, threw others off balance and evaded a Japanese ambush attempt in returning to their own lines. In other words, these lads, some of them from Harlem, out-fought the Japanese in their chosen medium—the jungles.

The first Japanese to be killed by an American Negro was bagged by Technical Sgt. Alonzo Douglas, 21, of Chicago. Sergeant Douglas, who has had four years in the army, commented, "I want to get more Japs."

Sergeant Douglas also remarked, "I was a little nervous at first, but it was all right as soon as you got out a ways."

"We are going to get some more action soon, aren't we, Lieutenant?" one soldier asked.

"You said it, son," answered Lieutenant McAllister.

Three patrols were sent out, according to Major Carey Meredith of Shreveport, La., but only one saw action. When Japanese fire pinned them down as they were returning to our lines the American's returned the fire steadily, and the Japanese fled.

To those of us among the correspondents who have seen American Negro soldiers working nights to build new airfields, chanting as they worked, and who have watched them uncomplaining load ships and do "heavy" work at Tunisian airfields within range of planes, there was something good in knowing that some of them were in action at last, and it was better to know that they had done superbly in their first test. 3-17-44

An entire Negro division is now in the South Pacific. The regiment of those elements in action is commanded by Lieut. Col. Julian C. Hearne of Wheeling, W. Va. It has had long training in jungle fighting.

Southwest Pacific Warriors Operate Dump In Solomons

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga.
2-15-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN

(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA

ADVANCED SOUTH PACIFIC BASE — (Via Airmail) — When 2,000 pounds of hurtling missles of steel and powder smash enemy installations on Bouganville, it is a safe wager that these flying fragmentations of death were handled by a Negro ordance unit. It is safe to add that when Mitchells and Liberators, pregnant with blockbusters, hover above Rabaul, strong brown hands are they which shoved the bombs through the bomb bays before the ships took flight.

Somewhere in the bosom of the Solomons, hidden from the bespectacled eyes of enemy reconnissance, is a potent and formidable ammunition area, acres long, acres wide. Guarding and handling each fuse, each bomb, is a unit of Negro specialists in ordnance. The exact amount of destruction there is confidential information, but confidentially, there is enough to blow the citizens of Tokyo to the land of their beloved ancestors.

UNIT HANDLES EVERY POUND

This colored unit receives, issues, stores, and ships every pound of this deadly power. Cherished records show that in a daily routin these men have handled 16 tons of small ammunition, per man, per eight-hour shift. They work around the clock.

Landing in an advanced Solomons base in September, 1943, after two months in Noumea, New Caledonia, they have since operated the dump in this area for the 13th Air Force.

When talking with checkers and loaders one finds that these men know their job. They know of the potential danger. They know its importance. The average citizen might find it difficult to distinguish between demolition and incendiary bombs; armor piercing and general purpose blockbusters. Not only does this unit know, but they also know the component parts of each, and reasons why they are so constructed and designed. 2-15-44

Commanding is Capt. Frank G. Dudley, veteran soldier of Montesta, Virginia. The ranking noncommissioned officer is youthful looking, grey-haired, I World War veteran Sgt. Albert L. Hypps, of Washington, D. C. Sgt. Hypps first enlisted in 1917, served 18 months in France. Enlisted for the second time in September 1942. In in the pursuit of allied aims in the Pacific. But its mission is an essential part of what gains are made here. When Bougainville and Rabaul feel the earth tremor; these men are unquestionably guilty of having a hand in it.

One important item of major interest explained by Sgt. Hypps and the commanding officer—Ninety-eight per cent of the unit are to receive shortly Good Conduct medals awarded by the Army. The largest percentage in the South Pacific. 2-15-44

Sergeant Japan, and parts of Russia, as a Master and athlete specializing in Sergeant baseball and track. Detroit, soldier an

IMPORTANCE

Little technical information can given about this outfit because confidential nature of the and of its potent importance

Another veteran, and famed tour the Philippines. China work and

47m-1944

Foreign Service

No Story Book Heroes Here; Just Plain Tired Men . . .

Journal & Guide - Norfolk, Va.

"Small Talk" Of Fighting Men"

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the Journal and Guide and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)
(Copyrighted. Reproduction Expressly Forbidden.)
1-15-44

SOMEWHERE AT SEA, SOUTH PACIFIC—(Via Air Mail, Delayed)—This is the first of several articles written while enroute to Guadalcanal. They deal mainly with "small talk" of men who are headed for the forward areas of this command. Huddled in the ward rooms, on the weather decks, in the mess of this ship, their conversations were unperfumed. They represented a cross-section of Americans at war, and the kind kind of talking they were doing is seldom seen in print. No story book heroes here, just plain tired soldiers.

For instance, the wives of four officers were expecting, several men had not seen a woman in months, one Marine had seen seven friends killed at Bougainville, another was refused a second helping of chicken at dinner, three Naval officers were going home. A Negro warrant officer repeatedly talked about a WAC, Captain Francis whom he had met in Arizona and who was expected to be made major soon. This small talk, sometimes humorous, sometimes serious, represented some of the thoughts of men who might never pass this way again.

"Keep your head out of the way, and if you have to run, run like hell," yelled Bill Shrout to me as the boarding craft shoved off. We had been talking about bombings. 1-15-44

The Life Magazine photographer knew what he was speaking, having had some very narrow escapes at Guadalcanal and Bougainville. There were lines on his face and his voice had a nervous pitch. His eyes danced as he spoke. Consistent bombings can get the best of most of them. Bill threw up a hand as the craft shoved out into the water.

The sun was hot and the blue waters glistened and played around the craft sometimes splashing over the top-side. Lined with troops, the craft inched farther and farther away from the shore.

Left behind was one of the few bases in the South Pacific where a little civilization abounded. It was a relief from the jungles, sweating men, damn insects, and hot drinking water. There was beer, civilians, and a dance band. We were leaving these things behind and going back into the bush—maybe for months.

Mr. Bassett has already left the dock in a jeep worn thin around the edges. The Naval public relations officer looked too tall to ride comfortably in the mechanical puddle-jumper which had Press scrawled on its hind seat.

"I didn't think you were going to make it," he had said as I hustled my gear out of the command car onto the dock. "What happened?"

I didn't answer the question because it was the second time he had asked the same in three days. The first was when I was late for an interview with Admiral Halsey and kept the commander waiting for 15 minutes.

"Yon can't keep a man like the Admiral waiting," Jim Bassett had said. We just managed to get an interview between important conferences. "Come on, we still might be able to make it. If we do, don't make it too long." 1-15-44

The frazzle-edged jeep refused to budge. We "ran" the four blocks to headquarters. A sentry ~~inspected the identity cards~~ hurriedly and pointed up the stairs. Commander Harold Stassen stood waiting. I could readily tell that the former governor of Minnesota wasn't at all pleased that we had kept the Admiral waiting.

Little butterflies tickled the bottom innersole of my stomach. Here the Admiral with pressing matters of the war on his mind had agreed to see me, the first interview granted by him in months,—a fine kettle of fish to be in.

"MAKE IT SHORT"

As we were shown into the inner sactum, Jim Bassett whispered, "Make it short." It had to be short, only four minutes remained.

I remembered these things as the press chief drove off from the dock. I also remembered Lt. Col. Leslie Shope, Army press chief of the South Pacific Command who constantly had a cigar jammed between his teeth. He had made the 3 days on the island very enjoyable for me. 1-15-44

He exclaimed the day I arrived from the South Pacific, "Hell, we knew you were coming, but hell, they didn't let us know when. Draw up a chair." It was raining outside which fact added to the comfort of his office.

"The first thing you want is a place to stay. Well, let's see. What colored outfits do we have here?" He consulted a list, and then the telephone directory. "Here we are, the very place," he announced as he took the phone off of the hook.

"Hello Kroencke (Lt. Col. Edward J. Kroenche, Chief chaplain), Shope talking. Will you call up Chaplain Middleton and arrange with him for Martin to have a comfortable place to stay. Yeah, he's the correspondent and just arrived." Hell, excuse me chaplain, he has to have some place now. Good quarters, remember. Call me back," and with that the colonel hung up.

GET THINGS DONE

This man impressed me. Not so much because he wore the silver leaves, but he seemed like a man who could get things done without countless yards of red tape. Leaning back in his chair, leisurely puffing a cigar, he talked of days past, of world economy, of many things. As he talked, he nervously fingered the cigar and stared out the window at the driving rain.

A New Yorker, and this island was so far away from the glamour of Manhattan. Here there were ox carts, bare footed people, grinding Army trucks. Civilization, but not of the New York variety.

"We'll fix you up. Lot of colored outfits here. Tell you what, after you get settled, come down tomorrow and we'll map out an itinary. Lot of colored troops over here. Glad you came over to see them," said the colonel as he abruptly reverted back to the point of why I had come over.

"Here's your car to take you out to camp. By the way, do you like Rye?" he asked. Greedily did I answer in the affirmative. I had never tasted it in my life. But it must taste better than the medic's, alcohol or the juices of canned fruits mixed with coconut milk after it has set 4 days.

GRAVE YARD 1-15-44

The car waited until the chaplain had called back. We started on what was to be a long trip. Enroute we passed a grave yard. The driver called it the "Truck Drivers' Cemetery." Many of these buried there were truck drivers who had crashed over the steep hills of the island.

The flag fluttered over the white stones. The road seemed slippery than any I had traveled. Large drops of rain washed our face. The windshield wipers seemed wholly inadequate as the curves came faster. 1-15-44

These scenes flashed back as the craft loaded with soldiers pushed further out into the bay. The troops were made up of soldiers, sailors, and marines, Negroes and whites, Americans, Filipinos, and New Zealanders, Jews and Gentiles. Some sitting on packs staring into the water, some leaning against the rail staring into the water, others just staring. All sweating under the broiling sun.

As we pushed past one ship someone yelled, "Any you guys from Brooklyn?" It brought a laugh, and then silence again. Soldiers can wear the emptiest expressions when headed for the fighting zones.

SEE THE DEAD

Most of them look downward, others can look one another dead in the eye without saying anything. Once and awhile a guy would start to whistle a tune, one with no beginning, no end,—just a middle floating in the air. He would stop as abruptly as he started.

We pulled up alongside our ship. Somebody yelled, "Get your shopping done early, 10 days before Christmas." Pleasant thought. We boarded.

OUR BOYS OVERSEAS

SPEAKING at the dedication of a service flag in Crispus Attucks High School, Indianapolis, on Friday, Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, whom the War Department trots around everp time it wants to make Negroes forget the inequalities they suffer in the armed forces, gave forth with the type of speech that Negroes would rather not hear because they get mad all over again after they have had time to get the full impact of its importance. 1-29-44

Age - New York N.Y.

General Davis spoke of the glorious exploits of Negro soldiers in all the overseas war theatres, but with few exceptions the exploits were of soldiers who were in units which dig ditches, build roads, act as stevedores, or truck drivers.

We should like to quote a few of the General's remarks:

"Last August 31—and no later figures have been announced — 153,800 colored soldiers were serving overseas, which represents more than one quarter of the total number of colored soldiers in the army. On that same date, the War Department announced that the total number of colored persons in the army was 582,861.

"Of this colored personnel, 57,323 were in the infantry, 58,328 in the coast and field artillery, 92,171 were in the engineers, 9,750 were in the cavalry. The remaining 360,000 were in the other arms and services — army air forces, chemical warfare service, quartermaster corps, armored command, which is tanks, tank-destroyer command and medical corps.

"I mention these figures, because I believe that on such an occasion as this it is fitting to examine the great contribution which colored people are making to the powerful army we have created to meet the challenge of the Nazi and the Jap.

"Over in New Guinea last spring, Brigadier General Hanford C. MacNider paraded the troops on the occasion of the first anniversary of the landing of American soldiers on that embattled island. A colored general service engineer regiment which had seen service under fire had the distinction of leading the parade, because it had been the first American unit to arrive in the spring of 1942.

"Speaking to the assembled officers, noncoms and enlisted men of the unit, General MacNider said, and I quote, 'Fellow soldiers, a year ago today when you stepped ashore as the first American troop unit in New Guinea thus you've helped make possible the destruction of the convoy in the Bismarck sea. You've been making history. You've had a part in the building and upkeep of all our air fields, and we've taken at the Japs. You've built the roads and the mains which bring us water you were making it ever since. You've contributed your share to every crack and the lines which give us our light and power. Some of you have been to war with the tanks." 1-29-44

"And then General MacNider," continued General Davis, "gave these men his highest praise. He said, 'You're one of the workingest outfits in this man's army. All of us over here are proud of you. All Americans will be proud of you when your record gets into the histories."

General Davis continued giving exploits of other soldiers but his speech does little to increase the morale of the Negro when the bare fact is that Negroes are still consigned mainly to labor battalions although they've got fancy names for them. And while the white soldiers are commended for actual heroism in combat, the Negro soldiers get their praise only because they helped unload ships, build roads and dig ditches.

There are some who subscribe to the theory that they would just as soon see our Negro boys not in actual combat because there is less chance of their being killed. At least in combat they would be regarded as men, not as servants or common laborers. At least in combat they would be able to prove their ability as fighters — something which many white soldiers doubt because they've seen Negro soldiers just doing the laboring work.

Laboring work in the army has to be done. It is important. But not all the laboring work has to be done by Negroes. And Negroes appreciate General Davis the less when he attempts to glorify laboring work without at the same time being able to tell of the Negro's participation in other phases of the army.

1-29-44

Rumors are rife now that another Negro colonel will shortly be promoted to the rank of brigadier general just before election time as one of the strategies of trying to keep the fast-straying Negro vote away from the Republican party. We should like to see more Negroes attain higher rank. Nearly all the high ranking generals in the army today were just colonels four years ago when Davis was made a brigadier general. Today after nearly four years Davis still holds the same rank. Because we feel that he has disappointed the race, perhaps we shall feel glad that he didn't advance any higher. Perhaps it would have been just as well if he had gone into civilian life when he was retired on reaching the age limit instead of being continued in active service only as a sop to Negroes.

1-29-44

The Saga Of 44 Men With A Job To Do

Communications....

Journal and Guide, Norfolk, Virginia

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN 2-12-'44
U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the Journal and Guide and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)
(Copyright—Reproduction Prohibited)

GUADALCANAL—(Via Air Mail)—An amazing example of the intracacies of wire and wireless communications used by the infantry is shown in the work shop and area of the colored infantry force stationed on this island. A network of wire is strung over the entire area, a central communications switchboard is buried far below the ground's surface, operators keep constant vigil. Radio antennas tower skyward. If this base were alerted on a moment's notice, orders could flash over the wires with the speed of lightning to every unit.

Six types of radios are kept in top condition. These include giant sending and receiving sets for communication between command posts; walkie-talkies and hand sets for ground reconnaissance; and special built radios for mobile units.

For confidential code messages are precision instruments for coding and deciphering. Mobile and foot messengers are in training. The latter used when jungle terrain does not permit mobile travel. In sending Morse code, technicians have attained the incredible speed of 25 words per minute—sending and receiving. For practice current news is decoded daily as it speeds in over the wireless.

MARTIN

BASE UNDER CONSTANT INVASION THREAT

Since July, 1943, the unit's major task has been training more and more operators. For 16 months prior to that time the technicians were in the field on the New Hebrides stringing wire to connect all units on the island. During those days the base was under constant invasion threats and units were isolated by mountains and thick foliage. Sections of dense underbrush were unexplored.

Friendly natives, to be used as guides, refused to penetrate the inner jungles claiming ferocious head-hunters were hidden in the bosom of the inland. In spite of these handicaps on the offset, more than 35 miles of line were strung even while the enemy warned by radio to vacate or die. The tale of that heroic feat is told later in this story.

Presently on Guadalcanal there is no acute emergency. The island serves primarily as an air base and supply depot. The colored infantry is used in conjunction with the latter in the loading and unloading of cargo vessels.

SKELETON TACTICAL FORCE MAINTAINED

The need for an infantry communication setup is not as urgent as it was months ago. Only a skeleton tactical force is maintained. However, the training of technicians continue. The school graduates an avreage of 25 officers and enlisted men every three months.

Heading the department is First Lt. Martin J. Connely, the infantry's communication officer. A New Yorker, he is the only white officer in the unit. Second in command is Warrant Officer Willie C. Jones, of Birmingham, Ala., who has been in the Army four years and enlisted at the suggestion of an uncle "who just talked me in."

An elongated youth of 26, he has had 11 years of practical experience in his native Birmingham where he operated a repair shop and spent nights sending and receiving messages on his "Ham" set. Coming into the Army on a special assignment, he was promoted to his present rank in Feb. 1943.

THIRD IN COMMAND EX-TUSKEGEE STUDENT

A curly-headed master sergeant from Cleveland, Otis T. Pinkard, is third in command. A former student at Tuskegee where he studied plumbing, Sgt. Pinkard was employed there by the United States Veterans Administration at the time of his induction. Making an excellent score on the code of aptitude test, he was sent to Fort Benning, Ga., and graduated from the infantry school of communications.

Forty-one men make up the unit and they are responsible for the big job on New Hebrides. Bill and Sgt. Pinkard told the story that seemed incredible, however, they showed written documents to substantiate their claim of the soldiers' superhuman endurance during a rainy season on the Pacific island south of the Solomons.

In May, 1942, there were no military installations on the New Hebrides. There was a township (Espiritos Santos), not unlike Noumea, New Caledonia. But inland was the damp insect-infested jungles. The infantry landed 3 days before the Battle of the Coral Sea, so the enemy was almost in the perimeter of allied defenses. The natives told tales of head hunters and wild bulls.

The mountains ranged from five to seven thousand feet. Small allied units were scattered around the coast to thwart any invasion attempt. Such units had to be connected via wire communications. Such was the condition when the mission was undertaken.

MOUNTAINS PROVE AN ORDEAL

Wire parties, consisting of eight men to each party, were formed. Half of the group was to work a stretch of 26 miles through the jungles, the other to string wire over Mounts MacDonald and Erskine which covered 15 miles to mountanious terrain and the potential dangers as cited by natives. The long stretch was not too difficult, but the mountains proved an ordeal.

Canned rations, water, ammunition, tents, tools, and spools of wire were trucked to the foot of the incline, or approximately five miles. The wire was strung enroute. The first problem was encountered at the base of the mountain. The wire was too heavy to carry by hand. There was no path for vehicles. But pack horses could make it. Horses were borrowed from the local government. Five mares were procured and the party started up. Several men were sent ahead to scout.

One more fell and broke her leg. She was shot. Two days climbing brought them to the crest. Packs were unloaded and a spike camp made. One man cooked, two walked patrols, five strung wire. The rain lashed unrelentingly, the horses refused to work. They were driven back to the local government.

The job was progressing too slow for authorities. Aircraft was then employed to drop the spools of wire. With a compass, a crude map, the men pushed deeper into the hinterlands. The work schedule remained the same—one cooked, two patrolled, five strung.

BARBECUED PORK AND CANNED HASH

The food was getting low. The main camp was too far away to return for provisions. A party of three was sent out to bring in some meat. They had seen the reported cows and wild boars. After several hours they returned with two boars, badly shot up, and left a dead cow several miles from camp. Barbecued pork, canned hash, and dried biscuits were eaten. Streams of clear, fresh water were plentiful.

From dawn till dusk the wire was strung. After weeks of trudging through the mud, climbing trees, wearing wet clothes, the party working up from the other side was met. As Mr. Jones explained it, tired men met and almost wept. The fears of unexplored jungles and the dizzy heights of the mountains had been overcome and conquered. Alone they had done the job. Soon the wire was singing with messages. All allied units on the island were connected. Forty-four men, 43 Negroes, one white had put it through.

On Guadalcanal they await a new assignment. In the interim there are freighters to be unloaded. Most of these men are from Southern states and worked as farmers in civilian life. Several spoke to this correspondent about returning to the land, to Mississippi, Florida, Tennessee, Georgia, Alabama, and Louisiana. And like the land they're quiet, very unassuming, very much soldiers.

NINE STATES INCLUDED IN UNIT'S PERSONNEL

The unit includes: Private Ellis Bradford, Chicago; Private Everett Alexander, Decatur, Ill.; Private Willie N. Warren, Clinton, N. C.; Private George Crenshaw, Wewoka, Okla.; Private Robert L. Taylor, Baltimore, Md.

ALABAMA: Corporal Shedrick Bell, Montgomery; Private First Class Willie J. Cooper, Opelika; Private First Class Armstead, Jackson; Private First Class William Love, Greensboro; Private Samuel Adams, Linden.

LOUISIANA: Sergeant Willie A. Johnson, Opelousas; Corporals Clarence C. Bourgeois and John D. Chisholm, New Orleans; Sergeant J. P. Mays, Lake Providence; Sergeant Roland Melton, Coverton; Sergeant Paddio Czemie, Lake Charles; Corporal Charlie Lewis, Farriday; Private First Class Erby Magee, Coverton; Private Victor Warner, Schriever.

GEORGIA WELL REPRESENTED

Georgia sends Sergeant Curtis A Hadley, Albany; Private Dillwood Bengmon, Savannah; Private Dudley Drane, Atlanta; Private First Class Johnny Y. richard, Atlanta; Corporal Charlie T. Taylor, Roseville.

MISSISSIPPI: Sergeant Earl Nash, Macon; Corporal Robert L. Evans, Newton; Private First Class Douglas Blanks, Meridian; Private Lionel Hollaway, Jackson; Sergeant Henry Thomas, Jackson; Private First Class Y. C. Carothers, Prairie; Staff Sergeant Robert D. Lilly, Crystal Springs; Corporal John D. Monroe, Woodville.

TENNESSEE: Sergeant Thomas M. Swift Pulaski; Private Audrey Croom, Humboldt; Private Albert Perry, Memphis.

Negro Engineers

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

Build China Road

2-15-44

CHICAGO — (A N P) — How American Negro engineer troops are completing a spectacular motor road which will ultimately link India and China for the first time in history is told by Edgar Snow, foreign correspondent famed for his book, "Red Star Over China," in an article "Road to Tokio" which appears in the February issue of Negro Digest published here.

Despite the handicap of working with wet feet (the troops are without rubber boots) and of malaria and the wilderness and a steady three months diet of corned beef and rice, the morale of the colored troops was praised by every officer in the outfit, Snow reports.

"Maj. Gen. Raymond A. Wheeler, chief engineer here, himself said they were as good as any engineering troops he ever had on a job, and Wheeler has had plenty. One of the stories that spread through Assam deals with the legendary strength of the Negro troops, and tells how an American watched four underfed Indian coolies trying to move a huge log from one side of the road to another. "Presently he interrupted their struggle, pushed them aside, lifted the log over his shoulders and tossed it over their heads. Then he grinned and said: "Rest yourselves, brothers, you just did four days' work."

Negro M.P.'s patrol London for 1st time

Tribune 12-25 Kansas City, Kans.

The British news agency, Reuters, declared from London last week that Negro U. S. Military Police went on duty in London for the first time June 26.

"It is understood that American headquarters here do not allow Negro policemen to patrol in pairs," the news agency commented. "Hence in the West End white and Negro M.P.'s were seen out on patrol together. 7-10-44

"These Negro policemen are all men with unusually high educational qualifications. Many of them are university graduates," the agency commented further.

Negro Troops In Burma Supply Air Transport Forces

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga

4-12-44

SOMEWHERE IN INDIA — (SNS) — At an airbase in Assam, far in the rear of the Burma border, Negro troops of a quartermaster truck unit are preparing a breakfast of fresh eggs for other American troops isolated in the jungles of Burma.

A soldier carefully places about 200 eggs in an Indian-made basket, separating each egg from others with a layer of rice husks. A topcall is put on the basket and the carton is provided with a fourteen-foot parachute.

In a few hours these eggs will be parachuting down to earth, after being dropped from a plane which has swooped low over the jungle clearing where men eagerly await each item of supply as it is dropped.

NOT ONE LOST

Eggs are the most breakable item which is air-dropped regularly, but the unit which does the packing has yet to receive a complaint of damaged cargo.

Beyond the lines of ground communication in Burma are American and Chinese soldiers who depend almost entirely upon air-dropped supplies to keep them alive, fighting and working. The only method of ground supply is by native porters, who carry loads on their heads in limited amounts over tortuous jungle trails.

Back of every man who flies a plane or kicks out the supplies on an air-dropping mission are several others to whom fall the important job of getting the supplies ready for delivery. There is a great deal more to the process than merely throwing a lot of rations on a plane and kicking them off when the plane arrives over the desired rendezvous area. Food, munitions, fuel and other necessities of modern warfare must be skillfully packed so that they can withstand the impact in landing. 7-12-44

DROP GASOLINE

Dropping high octane gasoline calls for three parachutes, which are attached to one side of a barrel, and a large sack of rice husks which is secured to the other side. The use of three prachutes and the extra rice husk cushion reduces the chance of fire when the highly volatile fuel hits the ground.

All packing for air dropping is done at the air base by the same quartermaster truck unit which packs the eggs. Supplies ranging from small arms ammunition and artillery pieces to milk and live pigs are packed by the outfit for air delivery.

The men are hard pressed to keep up with with the planes which constantly shuttle back and forth from the air base to the troop areas. But the supplies are always ready, and no sooner does a plane come in from a mission than a truck backs up to its open door with more supplies for the jungle fighters.

Troops In Italy Want Race Girls

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga.

4-15-44

By JAMES A. SANDERS
(ANP Foreign Corespondent)

SOMEWHERE IN ITALY — (ANP) — Since coming to the Mediterranean theater of operations seven months ago, the Negro troops stationed in this section have not seen a girl of their own race. In addition to mail from home, that is their biggest desire.

There are American girls here, however, hundreds of them, nurses and WACs. Some of them are pretty swell, but many of these wonder why they can't have some of their own nurses and WACs. Don't get me wrong. There's no sentimental angle involved. Most of them have someone, a wife or a sweetheart, that they are carrying on for, but all want someone they can "talk" to; someone to whom they can carry their troubles; someone who will understand.

The papers tell them that in England, the South Pacific and in West Africa colored WACs are the chief morale boosters. They know what Evelyn Vaughn in North Africa meant to them . . . she and a couple of others from Casablanca to Oran to Algiers. They want them here.

S.C. Chaplain First Negro Officer To Die In Pacific

Defender-Chicago, Ill.

1-8-44

By ENOC P. WATERS
(Defender War Correspondent)

AT AN ADVANCE BASE SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA—In the base chapel, a thatched shed with rough benches hewn from tropical trees and a crude but impressive altar, funeral services were conducted last week for 1st Sgt. Joseph A. Taylor, of Abbeville, S. C., chaplain for an anti-aircraft gun unit here.

Chaplain Taylor, who died after a month's illness on Saturday, Dec. 18, at a military hospital here, was the first Negro chaplain and first Negro officer to die in this theatre. The services, brief and simple, were conducted by Chaplains Jesse Moses, George Berkheimer, John E. Bowers and Robert E. Hansen.

In attendance were 18 chaplains of all faiths from organizations in the area, Lt. Henry K. Roscoe of Delaware, commander of the outfit to which the chaplain was attached, a score of his fellow officers and several hundred enlisted men from a number of organizations.

Playing a portable foot-powered organ for the services was Lt. Laverne Weigkelt, a nurse from Morris, Ill., and the enlisted men's choir which Chaplain Taylor helped develop, sang effectively "There Is Rest for the Weary," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and "Shine on Me," favorites of the deceased.

Following the service which did not exceed 30 minutes, a cortege of 16 army vehicles accompanied the hearse over a rough 20-mile route cleared of traffic by military police to a military cemetery where interment occurred at points along the road which parallels the shoreline. The procession passed details of soldiers engaged at various tasks, who upon recognizing the string of vehicles as a funeral procession stopped work and doffed their hats in tribute to an unknown fellow soldier. 1-8-44

Battered and bullet-ridden Japanese barges, grim reminders of the Japanese attempt to land troops here more than a year ago, dotted the rocky coast as silent monuments to men, who like the chaplain gave their last measure of devotion to their country and their flag.

A native of a section of Abbeville called Taylortown, where he was born July 7, 1906, Chaplain Taylor is survived by his widow, Lucia A. Taylor, a schoolteacher at Gastonia, N. C., and a six-year-old son, Joseph Jr.

He was educated at Johnson C. Smith university and Oberlin Theological Seminary and at the time of his entrance into the army on June 27, 1942, was pastoring a Presbyterian church in Washington, D. C.

Chaplain Taylor began his military pastorate with the 378th engineer battalion at Camp Shelby, Miss., and was later transferred to the anti-aircraft organization with which he was serving at the time of his death. 1-8-44

Although no official announcement has been made, it is expected that either Chaplain Paul Kidd of Kansas City, Kans., or Chaplain Walter A. Miller of Chicago, both of whom are unassigned, will be assigned to the vacancy.

NEGRO SOLDIERS BRAVE HARDSHIPS IN INDIA BUILDING "ROAD TO TOKIO"

Washington Tenn.

1-7-44

By Evelio Grillo
Associated Negro Press War Correspondent

SOMEWHERE IN INDIA, Dec. 23 (ANP)—They're building a road out India way, a good road, a road which, to all appearances, will be a vital factor in the final conquest of Japan. Eventually, according to official releases, this road will join the old Burma road to become an important artery of supply for war-starved China. Before that junction is made, territory now occupied by the Japanese must be traversed by the "buildingest" engineers ever to set foot in this country.

ROAD TO TOKYO"

Take out your map of India, Glance towards the northeastern section and look for the name ASSAM. The territory surrounding the Assam-Burma border has become familiar country to thousands of Brown American soldiers. By far the greater number located in this general vicinity is engaged in the construction of this "Road to Tokyo" as the route was dubbed by the first contingent of troops to begin work.

The allegations of TIME magazine (Oct. 11) to the contrary notwithstanding, it was not the engineer unit that had built airbases in Canada which played the role of advance party on this great project. In December, 1942, when work was begun on this Assam-Burma route, the first two units assigned to the project arrived. They were Negro engineers and they "sweated it out," to use army parlance, along with Chinese and Indian engineer troops until March, when other troops assigned to the project began to arrive. At this writing, approximately three fourths of the troops engaged in the actual construction of the road are Negroes. Far out in front, on the coveted "point" of the road is the present advanced contingent, a group out of a famed colored unit formerly stationed in Florida. They are now in such an inaccessible section of country that almost all of their supplies are dropped to them by air. They are performing more than creditably, as they have during the entire year, and are inspiring the admiration of all as they cut their way relentlessly towards Japanese-controlled territory.

Building a road, on the surface, appears to be a prosaic task devoid as it is of the glamour and violent drama that are part fo combat assignments. But though this has not been the super-human achievement which correspondents strive to make of every accomplishment of soldiers overseas, it has been no simple road building job. It has called for the application of liberal doses of very human skills and capabilities backed by persistence and guts.

The route over which the road winds itself goes over some of the most difficult terrain imaginable. The country is all mountainous, and it receives, according to some authorities, the heaviest rainfall in the world. Added to this, during the early days of the task, were the difficulties imposed by shortages of supplies and equipment here at "the end of the line," legistically speaking. This has been no glamour-boy job, and it has certainly not been a push over. 1-7-44

Building this road has meant, literally, the leveling of mountains, the moving of millions of tons of earth. It has meant sloshing around in veritable seas of mud for weeks on end, weeks during which it was all but impossible to remain dry over half a day at the time. It has meant groping around in ever-present clouds of dust during the dry spells. It has meant steaming in the humid monsoon heat and baking under a merciless tropical sun. It has meant a ceaseless and often unsuccessful struggle to avoid contracting one of the numerous tropical diseases which plague us here—malaria, dongue, dystentery, and the dreaded black water fever, among others.

It has meant the pulling of minor miracles by maintenance crews in order to keep the heavy equipment in operation in a situation where it has been difficult and often impossible to procure replacements for outworn parts. It has meant a consistent struggle against rain-swollen streams to get necessary bridges built and to keep these completed from being washed away. It has meant almost forgetting, for weeks, that such a word as recreation existed. It has meant contending continually with landslides, cave-ins, and washouts. Take it from the men who have worked on it for a year, this road has been no push-over.

Nor has this gigantic project been carried out without its toll of heroes, unsung and undecorated though they be.

There was Pfc. Herbert I. Simms, from Wilson, N. C., who lost his life, though not his fight to keep a bridge from being washed away, when he slipped into the swirling waters of a swollen mountain stream while attempting to clear away the debris which was threatening to undermine one of the piers of the bridge. And Albert Allen, technician fifth grade, from New York City, who unmindful of personal danger, attempted to rescue Simms, but succeeded only in sharing his fate. There are those lik eSgt. John P. Powell of Washington ,D. C., who have succumbed to the ravages of one or several of the tropical diseases against which precaution must be taken continually by every soldier in this theatre. Many others, not known personally to the writer, have paid the extreme price in the service of their country, as this road has inched along. 1-7-44

All the heroes, moreover, have not been those who are no longer with us, but who, rather, are now enjoying their pride in assignments brilliantly carried out. We refer to men like Sgt. Sandolph Hill, from Hickory, Miss., and Sgt. Quincy Bordeaux, from Norristown, Pa., who have performed so remarkably with the dozers that they have become known throughout this area. In like manner, Cpl. Sterling Hathcock, Dayton O., made his mark. "Stumpy" as his buddies call him, operated the leading dozer on the road for three months and early earned the reputation of an operator "who could put a dozer where a dozer just cloudn't be put."

Then there is M. Sgt. William Wright, of Washington, N. C., (class of '41, N. C. A. and T.) who for months was the enlisted man supervising the actual cutting of the road, or T. Sgts. Edward F. Clark, from New York City (class of '40, Columbia U.) who has done the greater part of the surveying required at this base. Sgt. Clark is perhaps the most widely known and respected non-com on the road. His reputation as a thorough and skilled surveyor is such that requests for his service are often received from higher headquarters. He is at present engaged in the task of supervisiting the mapping of the completed road.

Engineers are by no means the only Brown Americans serving America in the building of this supply route. A well-known quartermaster unit from Georgia, has taken over the bulk of the transportation work on the project. Recently, a Negro signal construction unit arrived. It has acquitted itself notably in the building and maintenance of signal communications in this area.

Enemy interference with the builders of the road has been all but nonexistent. We've wtinessed an aerial battle or two.

On one occasion we were all alerted and ready for action when Japanese patrols were in contact with the Chinese troops which have formed a protective screen around the road. We were prepared for any eventuality, but the situation was brought under control early. Everything has been quiet for a long while, as far as we are concerned. We are all aware, however, that we're sitting on a veritable powder keg, which can explode at any time; for this road certainly is not going backwards. Watch your newssheets, folks, and whatever happens out this way, you may rest assured that your boys are in there pitching and playing a vital role as the allies move against Japan from this theatre.

Find Heroes Among Colored Soldiers In Indian Jungles

Courier-Courts 3-26-44

WITH THE U. S. ARMY IN NORTH BURMA—(ANP)—Life in this theatre of war has produced its heroes in the same dramatic style as on other battle fronts and in this regard the colored soldiers who are stationed here are proceeding to conquer the jungle while fighting the Japanese in a spirit that is characterized by determination and laughter, reports A. T. Steele, a white war correspondent, this week. Out of their experiences, which are constantly flirting with death, heroes are born along with two Chinese fighters Steele found one, Ray Smith, Lex-Dragging the weight of his we ington, Ky., among the many whouniform, Sgt. Madison Carey, o have the daily task of courting North Chicago, who was travelling death. Assigned as operator of on a second boat, leaped into th one of the flat-bottomed boats that rapids to rescue a third Chinese. ply the forest-lined rivers of north- TWO LOSE LIVES 3-26-44 ern Burma, Smith's task is to safe- ly deliver men, supplies and wound- as a reminder of a second escap ed Chinese to their respective des- from death when his boat was ma tinations. chine-gunned from the river bank

CHEATED DEATH TWICE

"Smith has been in Burma less than three months, but he has already cheated death twice and is credited with saving the lives of two Chinese soldiers." Steele re vealed. "He is a member of a Ne gro pontoon outfit with which this writer lived and traveled for three days early this week. His comrades, Negroes from every section of the United States, think Smith deserves some kind of special recognition, though Smith himself says it is all a lot of fuss about nothing."

According to the story, Smith was one of nine occupants of a small flat-bottomed boat that found dered in a northern Burmese river, Three colored soldiers drowned by Japanese soldiers. The encoun ter cost the life of a colored en listed man and a white officer.

Bernie Durant, Sumter, S. C. however, does not like the jungle because he is an extremely big man, 6 feet, 3 inches tall and wears 11½ shoes.

"This is a small man's game," Bernie told Steele. "What chance have I got? Every time I take a step with my No. 11½'s everybody around knows I'm coming."

When the boys saw their first Japanese prisoner they were surprised that so much danger could be wrapped in such a small package. "Gosh, is that all we are fight-ing?" they asked. "Why, he's only a midget."

Sergeant Goes 68 Hours Without Sleep For 168

Artillerymen Have Record Of "Probables" 6-9-44

THE INVASION FORCES than the AAA crews going through LAND—(ANP)—Back in their practice paces, getting when the German Luft- signals from control points as to the skies over Britain range and spot locations. The ch to itself, a nightly colored unit has a record of ques- back on the world's largest tion marks, meaning that they firmed kills. Are they on the job? Well S-Sgt. A. J. MacGill, of Pine Bluff, Ark., went for 168 supply sergeant, straight hours without sleep recently in the performance of his duty.

It's very different now from what it was back in the days, when Jerry came and at will. Sounds in the night which make you think you're listening to a hot basketball game, every player yelling for the ball at the same time, are nothing less starved China. Before that junction is made, territory now occupied by the Japanese must be traversed by the "buildingest" engineers ever to set foot in this country.

Take out your map of India. Glance towards the northeastern section and look for the name ASSAM. The territory surrounding the Assam-Burma border has become familiar country to thousands of Brown American soldiers. By far the greater number located in this general vicinity is engaged in the construction of this "Road to Tokyo" as the route was dubbed by the first contingent of troops to begin work.

The allegations of TIME magazine (Oct. 11) to the contrary notwithstanding, it was not the engineer unit that had built airbases in Canada which played the role of advance party on this great project. In December, 1942, when work was begun on this Assam-Burma route, the first two units assigned to the project arrived. They were Negro engineers and they "sweated it out," to use army parlance, along with Chinese and Indian engineer troops until March, when other troops assigned to the project began to arrive. At this writing, approximately three fourths of the troops engaged in the actual construction of the road are Negroes. Far out in front, on the coveted "point" of the road is the present advanced contingent, a group out of a famed colored unit formerly stationed in Florida. They are now in such an inaccessible section of country that almost all of their supplies are dropped to them by air. They are performing more than creditably, as they have during the entire year, and are inspiring the admiration of all as they cut their way relentlessly towards Japanese-controlled territory.

Building a road, on the surface, appears to be a prosaic task devoid as it is of the glamour and violent drama that are part fo combat assignments. But though this has not been the super-human achievement which correspondents strive to make of every accomplishment of soldiers overseas, it has been no simple road building job. It has called for the application of liberal doses of very human skills and capabilities backed by persistence and guts.

The route over which the road winds itself goes over some of the most difficult terrain imaginable. The country is all mountainous, and it receives, according to some authorities, the heaviest rainfall in the world. Added to this, during the early days of the task, were the difficulties imposed by shortages of supplies and equipment here at "the end of the line," legistically speaking. This has been no glamour-boy job, and it has certainly not been a push over. 1-7-44

Building this road has meant, literally, the leveling of mountains, the moving of millions of tons of earth. It has meant sloshing around in veritable seas of mud for weeks on end, weeks during which it was all but impossible to remain dry over half a day at the time. It has meant groping around in ever-present clouds of dust during the dry spells. It has meant steaming in the humid monsoon heat and baking under a merciless tropical sun. It has meant a ceaseless and often unsuccessful struggle to avoid contracting one of the numerous tropical diseases which plague us here—malaria, dongue, dystentery, and the dreaded black water fever, among others.

It has meant the pulling of minor miracles by maintenance crews in order to keep the heavy equipment in operation in a situation where it has been difficult and often impossible to procure replacements for outworn parts. It has meant a consistent struggle against rain-swollen streams to get necessary bridges built and to keep these completed from being washed away. It has meant almost forgetting, for weeks, that such a word as recreation existed. It has meant contending continually with landslides, cave-ins, and washouts. Take it from the men who have worked on it for a year, this road has been no push-over.

Nor has this gigantic project been carried out without its toll of heroes, unsung and undecorated though they be.

There was Pfc. Herbert I. Simms, from Wilson, N. C., who lost his life, though not his fight to keep a bridge from being washed away, when he slipped into the swirling waters of a swollen mountain stream while attempting to clear away the debris which was threatening to undermine one of the piers of the bridge. And Albert Allen, technician fifth grade, from New York City, who unmindful of personal danger, attempted to rescue Simms, but succeeded only in sharing his fate. There are those lik eSgt. John P. Powell of Washington ,D. C., who have succumbed to the ravages of one or several of the tropical diseases against which precaution must be taken continually by every soldier in this theatre. Many others, not known personally to the writer, have paid the extreme price in the service of their country, as this road has inched along. 1-7-44

All the heroes, moreover, have not been those who are no longer with us, but who, rather, are now enjoying their pride in assignments brilliantly carried out. We refer to men like Sgt. Sandolph Hill, from Hickory, Miss., and Sgt. Quincy Bordeaux, from Norristown, Pa., who have performed so remarkably with the dozers that they have become known throughout this area. In like manner, Cpl. Sterling Hathcock, Dayton O., made his mark. "Stumpy" as his buddies call him, operated the leading dozer on the road for three months and early earned the reputation of an operator "who could put a dozer where a dozer just cloudn't be put."

Then there is M. Sgt. William Wright, of Washington, N. C., (class of '41, N. C. A. and T.) who for months was the enlisted man supervising the actual cutting of the road, or T. Sgts. Edward F. Clark, from New York City (class of '40, Columbia U.) who has done the greater part of the surveying required at this base. Sgt. Clark is perhaps the most widely known and respected non-com on the road. His reputation as a thorough and skilled surveyor is such that requests for his service are often received from higher headquarters. He is at present engaged in the task of supervisiting the mapping of the completed road.

Engineers are by no means the only Brown Americans serving America in the building of this supply route. A well-known quartermaster unit from Georgia, has taken over the bulk of the transportation work on the project. Recently, a Negro signal construction unit arrived. It has acquitted itself notably in the building and maintenance of signal communications in this area.

Enemy interference with the builders of the road has been all but nonexistent. We've wtinessed an aerial battle or two.

On one occasion we were all alerted and ready for action when Japanese patrols were in contact with the Chinese troops which have formed a protective screen around the road. We were prepared for any eventuality, but the situation was brought under control early. Everything has been quiet for a long while, as far as we are concerned. We are all aware, however, that we're sitting on a veritable powder keg, which can explode at any time; for this road certainly is not going backwards. Watch your newssheets, folks, and whatever happens out this way, you may rest assured that your boys are in there pitching and playing a vital role as the allies move against Japan from this theatre.

Find Heroes Among Colored Soldiers In Indian Jungles

Courier-Cotts Burgh, Pa. 3-26-44

WITH THE U. S. ARMY IN NORTH BURMA—(ANP)—Life in this theatre of war has produced its heroes in the same dramatic style as on other battle fronts and in this regard the colored soldiers who are stationed here are proceeding to conquer the jungle while fighting the Japanese in a spirit that is characterized by determination and laughter, reports A. T. Steele, a white war correspondent, this week. Out of their experiences, which are constantly flirting with death, heroes are born along with two Chinese fighters Steele found one, Ray Smith, Lex-Dragging the weight of his wet ington, Ky., among the many whouniform, Sgt. Madison Carey, of have the daily task of courting North Chicago, who was travelling death. Assigned as operator of on a second boat, leaped into the one of the flat-bottomed boats that rapids to rescue a third Chinese. ply the forest-lined rivers of north- TWO LOSE LIVES 3-26-44 ern Burma, Smith's task is to safely deliver men, supplies and wounded Chinese to their respective destinations.

CHEATED DEATH TWICE

"Smith has been in Burma less than three months, but he has already cheated death twice and is credited with saving the lives of two Chinese soldiers," Steele revealed. "He is a member of a Negro pontoon outfit with which this writer lived and traveled for three days early this week. His comrades, Negroes from every section of the United States, think Smith deserves some kind of special recognition, though Smith himself says it is all a 'lot of fuss about nothing.'"

According to the story, Smith was one of nine occupants of a small flat-bottomed boat that foundered in a northern Burmese river. Three colored soldiers drowned a midget," one of them said. as his buddies call him, operated the

Sergeant Goes Memphis, Tenn. 4-26-44

For 168 Hours Without Sleep

Artillerymen Have Record

Of "Probables" 6-9-44

WITH THE INVASION FORCES than the AAA crews going through IN ENGLAND—(ANP)—Back in their practice paces, getting their the German Luft-signals from control points as to es over Britain range and spot locations. The itself, a nightly colored unit has a record of ques- the world's largest tion marks, meaning that they ar- thing, but have some "doubtfuls," or uncon- firmed kills. Are they on the job? Well S-Sgt. A. J. MacGill, of Pine Bluff, Ark., the battalion supply sergeant, went for 168 straight hours without sleep recently in the performance of his duty.

It's very different now from what it was back in the days, when Jerry came and went at will. Sounds in the night which make you think you're listening to a hot basketball game, every player yelling for the ball at the same time, are nothing less

93rd Forward Elements Find No Paradise While Moving Up Toward Japan

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga
7-1-44

Correspondent Martin Tells Of 'Hell' On Island

Soldiers Find Many Problems In Tropical Areas

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(U. S. War Correspondent for Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)
(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

(By Courier)—Forward elements of the 93rd division which have reached this point did not find a Pacific paradise as it appeared offshore. On the contrary, it is a muddy coral dot lost in the vast Bismarck Sea, and inhabited by ferocious hogs and chickens, a thousands species of centipedes and taranulas, multi-colored mosquitoes, coconut palms, giant banyan trees, and grinning natives.

After disembarking our troops took positions atop an overhanging craggy wall. Deep waters far below constantly hammer coral reef—creating sounds like rolling thunder. Never have waters been so blue, days so bright, nights so dark. To the Southeast the rugged mountains of northern Bougainville push out of the sea. To the west enemy-held Rabaul and New Britain less than 150 miles away.

ROUGH LIVING

At the present it is rought living. Mud ankle deep carries the odor of sour dough. Grunting, tail wagging hogs convoy the bivouac. And the many varmins writhing up from the ground lends more horror to the already horrible surroundings. 7-1-44

Veterans of the Bougainville campaign are making the place as habitable as is humanly possible. And it is the same ageless story of man's grim struggle against nature. Because of the mud, tents are floored with coarse sand, lumber being scarce. What lumber is available is used chiefly to construct kitchens and latrines. Food must be kept off the wet ground, what with hogs, chickens, and rains wanting to destroy it before we can consume it.

Drinking water is also a problem. Despite being near oceans, drinking water is rationed—two quarts per day, per man. It is greedily hoarded for bath taking—saving a little at a time. Baths don't come often. The sea is pregnant with sharp coral rock, starfish, and sharks which discourage bathing in the warm waters.

At the present our site resembles what the old West must have been like in the pioneer days. Camp fires dot the area—trash burning. Kitchen crews opening canned hash, canned beans, canned biscuits, canned milk, even canned bacon. While one soldier washes a week's dirty clothes in his helmet, another washes his lousy body. Everybody is doing something, and few things are easy.

SENTRIES ON ROADS

Grim-looking sentries are posted at every road intersection. They look none too pleasant, maybe this caused by the blistering sun, or the shape of things here. Every few hours armed guards leave the area to take positions on the airstrip. Night and morning the monstrous trucks roll.

All in all its rough, but that was expected. From here on on it is going to be even tougher. Men are warned of this fact daily. From what shapes up here the trend points to serious days for the division. Terrain gets no better as we move forward toward the equator, and westward toward Jap bastions. And the enemy is expected to be even tougher as we near his inner perimeter.

An intensive training program is to be inaugurated. Bougainville glories are past history. Despite initial victories expected mistakes were made—and proved costly. Experiences proved in most instances that the enemy is capable, and fights hard, 7 and 1 only superior trained troops will subdue him.

Physically, the division elements here are in good condition. Morale is good, spirit high. Despite these jungle surroundings the boys can still laugh—enjoying a good joke about letters failing to arrive, repetition of the daily menu, or the presence of beer when things like nails, lumber, and mosquitoe netting are needed.

Officer Says He's Really Got Guts

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga.
6-11-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent

BOUGAINVILLE—(By Courier)—When Big George said a man has got guts, you can bet your bottom dollar on it. And Big George said Pvt.. Bett. Pierce of New York Alabama, has got more guts, per square inch, than any he's ever seen. It takes the best in a man to ride a Browning automatic rifle and stick to his gun as the enemy lets loose with a light machine gun at him.

Big George is really Capt. Geo. Hunter, company commander, 24th Infantry. Pierce is an expert automatic rifleman. Together they make a small army. And when the going is pretty tough, they are more than likely together. Like the time when part of Big George's people were pinned down after a fire fight east of the Mavavia river. The Japs were operating three heavy and seven light machine guns. Capt. Hunter's men couldn't advance—couldnt' retreat. The situation looked pretty grave as the enemy continually showed he was not a novice with the machine gun. Big George had lost 3 men.

TAKES PIERCE 6-11-44

Back on our side of the river Capt. Hunter mumbled that he "was going after those men. With a few tanks to draw their fire, we can make it." Pierce had already got his long, blue steel Browning Evidently he knew he was going to be called. The rescue squad was composed of riflemen, medics, litter bearers, Pierce and Big George.

When the LCTs hit the beach the tanks rumbled off firing with the 75mms. The infantry right behind. Pierce, a 23-year-old farmer, two other enlisted men, and Capt. Hunter started down the beach at a fast trot. Machine gun bullets pinged off the tanks. Soon they were off the beach and in the bowels of the jungles. Fire was continuous. From the LCT we could no longer see the action as bullets forced us to take over.

TELLS REST OF STORY

"We spotted several of our men who had dug in. I called out but evidently they didn't know who I was. I guess so many things were going on at once, it was hard to tell head from tails. We eased up a little closer."

Capt. Hunter said they began receiving gun fire. He told Private Pierce,

"You going to have to take that guy with the gun out. First draw his fire away from us, then let him have it."

He said Pierce answered, "Got you, sir." The gunner crawled up behind a stump, turned the bill of his cap around until it rode his neck and let go. The enemy swung his fire in the direction of the automatic rifle and starting showering them over Pierce. In the meantime Big George help get the casualties out.

RUNS INTERFERENCE

Later while consuming a can of C-rations Big George told the rest of the story: 6-11-44

"But you should have seen Pvt. Pierce. Lying behind that log, he would peek up every once and awhile to get his aim, then let go again. Not only did he draw their fire but darn if he didn't knock the machine gun out," Capt. Hunter said, "Some of the best shooting I've ever seen."

Pvt. Pierce figured he must have thrown fifty rounds into the pit. Big George said the Alabaman always runs the interference, and that is the job that calls for guts "especially when its fourth down and you got to win."

Eisenhower Lauds Force Of Negroes For Invasion Work

Age. Herald—Birmingham, Ala.

ADVANCED COMMAND POST, SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 30—(AP)—Negro troops of an anti-aircraft balloon battery and a quartermaster truck company Sunday drew official commendation from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower for their work in Normandy since D-Day. 7-31-44

"Your battalion landed in France, June 6 under artillery, machine-gun and rifle fire," Eisenhower said in a citation to the anti-aircraft troops.

"Despite the losses sustained, the battalion carried out its mission with courage and determination and proved an important element of the air defense team. The cheerfulness and devotion of its officers and men have been commented on by personnel of other units. This report is most gratifying to me. I commend you and the officers and men of your battalion for your fine efforts which have merited the praise of all who have observed it."

Eisenhower spoke to the quartermaster company of its landings against intense enemy opposition, and said:

"Nevertheless, you salvaged most of your equipment at once and within three days 90 per cent of your vehicles were operating on a 24-hour basis, a scale which was maintained for five weeks. I want you to know that I appreciate your splendid work. Your accomplishments are a source of gratification to me and to your Army commander."

7-31-44

Colored Unit Is Backbone of Attack on Japs at Bougainville

Afro-American—Baltimore, Md.

2-19-44

Ordnance Men Guard, Handle All Ammunition in the Solomons; 98 P.C. to Get Conduct Medals

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
NPA Pool Correspondent

ADVANCE SOUTH PACIFIC BASE — (Via Airmail)—When 2000 pounds of hurtling missiles of steel and powder smash enemy installations on Bougainville it is a safe wager that these flying fragments of death were handled by a colored ordnance unit.

It is safe to add that when Mitchells and Liberators, pregnant with block-busters, hover above Rabaul, strong brown hands are they which shoved the bombs up through the bomb bays before the ships took flight.

Somewhere in the bosom of the Solomons, hidden from the bespectacled eyes of enemy reconnaissance, is a potent and formidable ammunition area, acres long, acres wide. Guarding and handling each fuse, each bomb, is a unit of colored specialists in ordnance.

The exact amount of destruction there is confidential information, but confidentially, there is enough to blow the citizens of Tokyo to the land of their beloved ancestors.

Men Work Around the Clock

This colored unit receives, issues, stores and ships every pound of this deadly power. Cherished records show that in a daily routine these men have handled 10 tons of small ammunition, per man, per eight-hour shift. They work around the clock.

Landing in an advanced Solomons base in September, 1943, after two months in Noumea, New Caledonia, they have since operated the dump in this area for the 13th Air Force.

When talking with checkers and loaders, one finds that these men know their job. They know of the potential danger. They know its importance.

Know Their Ammunition

The average citizen might find it difficult to distinguish between demolition and incendiary bombs; armor piercing and general purpose blockbusters. Not only do the men in this unit know them, they know also the component parts of each, and reasons why they are so constructed and designed.

Commanding is Capt. Frank G. Dudley, veteran soldier of Moneta, Va. The ranking non-commissioned officer is youthful-looking, grey-haired, World War I veteran Sgt. Albert L. Hypps, of Washington, D.C., who first enlisted in 1917, served 18 months in France.

He enlisted the second time in September, 1942. In between those years he was an advertising agency executive in New York and Washington. The reason he gave for volunteering again at the age of 46 was simply stated:

The War Struck Him

"The war struck me. I will do all I can as long as I can be useful."

Another veteran and famed Army athlete is M-Sgt. Lockhart H. Barnett, of Detroit, now chief clerk of the depot office, who has spent 25 years in Army service stationed with the 10th Cavalry, 25th Infantry, and 3 ordnance units.

2-19-44

After attending A. and T. College of Greensboro, N.C., he joined the service and toured the Philippines, China, Japan, and parts of Russia as a soldier and athlete, specializing in boxing, baseball and track.

Little technical information can be given about this outfit because of the confidential nature of the work and of its potent importance in the pursuit of Allied aims in the Pacific. But its mission is an essential part of what gains are made here.

When Bougainville and Rabaul feel the earth tremble, these men are unquestionably guilty of having a hand in it.

98% to Get Conduct Medals

According to Sgt. Hypps and the commanding officer, 98 per cent of the unit are to receive shortly Good Conduct Medals awarded by the Army. This is the largest percentage in the South Pacific.

Making up the unit are:

Pvts. William Stephens and Courtney P. Wells, Pfc. Lewis E. Pollard and Pvt. Melvin Reid, NYC; Sgts. Thomas Black, Walter F. Medlock, James B. Banks, Tony Ward, Otis Bannister and Pvt. Eugene Millender, Detroit; Sgt. John H. Scott, St. Louis; Sgt. Dave Beverly, Pvts. Morriss E. Cavin and Walter Jackson, Chicago; Sgt. Clinton T. Ware, Pvts. Easten M. Bradley, Elijah Montgomery, Harold Foster; Pfcs. Floyd Williams, Samuel Martin, Washington, D.C.; Sgts. Charles E. Jones, Charles E. Waters, Cpl. Rommelle Robinson; Pfcs. Robert H. Black, Julian O. Braxton; Pvts. Bennie Carr, Norman Young, William T. Wheatley, Milton A. Barnes, Baltimore.

2-19-44

VIRGINIANS IN GROUP

Cpl. Fred J. Youngblood, Sgts. John Fulton, James Thompson, William Thompson, James Terry; T-5 Charles L. Blair, Pvt. DeMorse Gray, Pfc. Arthur Bolds, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pfc. Thomas E. Moore, Sgt. Ulysses Hardy, Sgt. Roland Shambry, T-5 James Harris, Pfc. Thomas Holloway, Pfc. Frank J. Harris, Pfc. Melvin Perkins, Pvt. Arthur W. Spellman, Pfc. Stephen A. Clemons, Pfc. Willie Mapson, Jr., Norfolk, Va.; Sgt. A. T. Harrison, Pvt. Virgil C. Evans, Pfc. James L. Gray, Newport News, Va.; S-Sgt. Earl T. Collins, Sgt. Goldie J. Rodgers, Pfc. Dan Willie, Pfc. Clarence Jackson, New Orleans, La.;

PHILLY BOYS IN UNIT

Cpl. Andrew S. Corbin, Pvt. Paul T. Marshall, Pfc. Sam Wise, Pvt. Alvin Robinson, T-4 Samuel Webb, Cpl. Robert R. Thornton, Pvt. William D. Craig, Pvt. Alfred Bradley, Pvt. Robert L. Gravely, Cpl. Thomas R. Bailey, Sgt. John A. Harper, Pvt. Leroy Hooks, T-5 Robert Landis, Cpl. Ulysses Brown, Cpl. William Penn, Sgt. Wilson Giles, Sgt. William Dixon, Pfc. Andrew O. Barbour, T-5 Willie G. Holmes, all of Philadelphia;

Pvt. Luther E. Carey, Marlin, Tex.; Pfc. Ben Lewis, Pvt. Willie Cowans, both of Birmingham, Ala.; Pvt. Leroy Rowe, Cpl. Wilmer H. Mills, Atlantic City, N.J.; T-5 James E. Morgan, Raleigh, N.C.; Pfc. Freddie Bailey, Sgt. Cleveland Johnson, Charleston, W.Va.; S-Sgt. Earl T. Collins, Pfc. Clarence Jackson, New Orleans, La.; Pvt. George Brown, Pvt. Charles Brown, Pvt. Francis Lambert, Pvt. Leobard Wiggins, Pfc. Lloyd G. Ferrell, Pvt. Terrel Frierson, Wilmington, Del.; and Pvt. Lewis J. Ford, Hartford, Conn.

Invasion Memo From Norfolkian

Barrage Balloon Unit Only Negro Combat Outfit There

Journal + Guide—Norfolk, Va.

7-22-44

By FIRST SGT.
JAMES HUGO MADISON
Exclusive to Journal and Guide

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE—(By Mail)—Every night Jerry visits the invasion coast of France. He comes to bomb or strafe the beach, but he keeps a respectable distance above the lethal cables held erect along the shore line by barrage balloons. Not since the first night has he been able to drop to strafing altitude and that was before balloons were present in sufficient numbers.

Dug into the ground at the base of each one of those many cables is a crew of the only assault balloon battalion to take part in the American effort against the hostile shore. It is this crew's job to keep that balloon flying in the hours of darkness — and these men have proved their ability to do that job well.

7-22-44

ONLY NEGRO UNIT THERE

These men in the foxholes along the beach have other claims to distinction. They formed the only Negro combat unit in the American assault forces in this greatest epoch in the history of the world.

They started coming ashore on D-Day in small groups. They came in more than 150 different assault crafts—small combat teams working on their own and not a single large unit. Some died, along with other Americans, in their attempt to get ashore. Some never saw the shore, and others gave their lives doing their jobs on the beachhead.

WHAT THEIR JOB IS

Since the first gory hours when the long-planned invasion seemed domed to failure, these men have been performing their mission. They keep the front door to the front lines open. Through this front door must come food, ammunition, and tons of other necessities for the men in the front lines. Through it also come the wounded, and the prisoners of war.

A balloon barrage is not a secret weapon. Actually, the more the enemy knows about it the better a barrage balloon performs. If the enemy stays above the barrage, knowing the danger of flying through a "picket fence" of lethal cables, then the barrage has performed its mission just as effectively as if it had destroyed some Jerry planes.

7-22-44

EFFECTIVE DEFENSE

Now and then a Jerry pilot takes his chances. In the early morning of June 16 one pilot came down to strafe. Before he could get his guns going, he hooked a wing on a flying cable. He realized his error too late, and headed out to sea in an apparent effort to avoid other cables in front of him.

His whole plane was visible for an instant when the bomb on the cable crashed against his wing. Then the plane disappeared in the turbulent waters of the English channel.

NO EASY JOB

But the daily duties of the men at the base of these cables are not always spectacular. There is hard work to be done every day, and every night. The work must be done if the mission is to be performed. Crews go to the beach to get their balloons from landing barges. They must be "walked" inland to the place they are to be flown.

7-22-44

If there is a wind, they surge and tear at their mooring, and the three men who hang on to the strop that keeps them captive have a desperate wrestle to hold them. Usually their hands are torn and bleeding when they reach their destination.

EVER-DANGEROUS SNIPERS

They must get over such obstructions as telephone and electric lines. They must walk along dusty roads crowded with vehicles of war. They must pick their way gingerly through mine fields, where only a narrow path has been marked. During the early days they had to go armed, for snipers were busy behind the hedge rows.

Once the balloon is in place the nightly job of "paying it out" to operational heights takes all their strength and "know how." This task begins when friendly planes go back to England—after it is too dark to see.

Then, after Jerry scoots for home in the early dawn, before our planes return, the job of bringing the balloon to its mooring begins. More than an hour of work on the winch is needed. Inch by inch, the balloon is brought down, the lethal devices removed, and put in readiness for the next night's operation.

7-22-44

TENSE NIGHTS

During the night there is the tenseness in waiting for the home are the They know the boys up front have it even worse than they do, and they are determined to see that food and medical supplies in the front line will not be short because the men are not. The crews at the bottom of the They know that flying cable have failed. It one bright spot. Letters from home are not conducive to personal cleanliness. Food comes in the GI pack. It can be made more palatable when heated, but too often it is not possible to have a fire.

WORK RECOGNIZED

7-22-44

LETTERS WELCOMED

There is no place to go at night but to their foxholes; no extras except the issue of cigarettes which are appreciated. Even a little money to spend, and every night their best is not enough. then

General Praises His Infantrymen

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

4-29-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN

(Representing the Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

(Copyright—Reproduction Prohibited)

BOUGAINVILLE — (By Courier) — Blunt and wizened Major General Oscar W. Grisworld, commander of Bougainville operations, was direct as he outlined the present campaign—and the part Negro units are to play. In one of his seldom-granted interviews, the veteran jungle fighter underscored each word with pause, and outlined action which he hopes to be the strategy for contemplated days to come.

No soldier in the U. S. Army has a firmer belief in the ability of his troops than Oscar Griswold. A devout member of the infantry, he said:

"Fourteen times they hit our line: fourteen times, they were slaughtered. Our ability to withstand their efforts have been proved. In no campaign in the South Pacific has the enemy felt more fire power . . . There is no substitute anywhere for infantry and these men shall continually push back and defeat a stubborn enemy."

INFANTRY HOLDS 4-29-44

Concerning the last month's activities which saw the enemy again try to shift through the line while his artillery pumped shells over the human wall of defense: and which introduced into World War II the Negro infantrymen, Griswold expressed admiration over an effort which not only thwarted the famed Jap (6) division, but sent thousands of the enemy scurrying back over the mountainous-like ridges.

Visibly, he showed satisfaction over the work of untried Negro troops; "They have made an excellent start in jungle warfare. Although they have not been in wholesale combat like Guadalcanal or New Georgia campaign," they have with merit accomplished missions assigned them . . . Whatever experiences they realize here will fit them for the difficult days to come. It is the experience they vitally need. Jungle war is unlike any we have heretofore fought."

Griswold is familiar with Negro troops, having once served with the 24th infantry at Fort Benning, Ga. In fact, he commanded the unit which saw action here for the first time on March 8 — the first in the world. The General recalled many who served under him in the early 30's. He remarked:

THEY'RE STILL HIS 4-29-44

"I feel they're still my troops. I think they deserve the honor of being the first. My chief of Staff (Brigadier General Arnold) has served with the units from Fort Huachuca and boosts them highly. They're all excellent troops, but I just have a soft spot in my heart for the 24th. We know they will (both units) acomplish their missions with honor."

In warning against any sentiment other than that of doing the job, Griswold explained that Americans have been killed thus far, and we can expect them to be killed in the future. That is part of the price paid. We are fighting a capable enemy who often charges in the face of overwhelming fire—trampling over his dead. To win, these men must be killed without any thoughts other than the business of killing. We must kill, and kill again, again and again.

However the commander, as has been shown in past records, does not intend foolishly of uselessly sacrificing American troops, but he realizes there will be casualties. The responsibility of sending men to their death is a grave one. From conversation one realizes that gray-haired Oscar Griswold will do all that is humanely possible to save his men.

For Negroes: 4-29-44

"They will continue patrolling . . . reconnoitering and engaging enemy. They now occupy positions outside perimeter which are of great military value" — The 24th infantry was ordered to hold its position 'at all cost.' "Out there they will get the training." He added as to the military significance of the mission — the perimeter will be partially protected by these outposts and the immediate region scoured for miles for any semblance of Japanese troops.

Bee—Chicago, Ill.
2-20-44

Released by U. S. War Department, Bureau of Public Relations

SETS RECORD IN MARKSMANSHIP—Private Emmett O. Smith, of Montgomery, Alabama, is shown in the kneeling position with his M-1 (Garand) rifle, the weapon with which he broke all marksmanship records at the Fort McClennan (Alabama) Infantry Replacement Training Center. He scored 206 out of a possible 210 on the rifle range, after only seven weeks of basic training. (Photo by U. S. Army Signal Corps.) 2-20-44

MAJOR BLASTS STIMSON SLUR

Bee—Chicago, Ill.
3-19-44

Revelation that the 184th Field Artillery regiment formerly the old Illinois Eighth regiment, had the highest I. Q. rating of any army units known to the officers of the Fifth Infantry division come this week from Maj. Ovid E. Harris, former battalion commander, in a letter repudiating Sec. of War Henry L. Stimson's charge that "many Negro units have been unable to master efficiently the techniques of modern weapons," of which the 184th was one of the units mentioned in the charge.

Maj. Harris, now on the inactive list, sent his letter to the President and Sec. Stimson.

"It is both amazing and shocking to find your signature placed over so gross a misstatement of fact," Maj. Harris said to Stimson.

As a battalion commander of the 184th Field artillery regiment for three years, Maj. Harris said that every test given in handling weapons was passed with credit by his men. The test teams of the Fifth Infantry division gave "superior," "excellent" and "very satisfactory" ratings following a combat test. All of this went to naught, however, to Gen. Courtland Parker. 3-19-44

"Unlaced Shoes" Rate Efficiency

"Despite all that has been said to the contrary, your regiment is not ready for combat," Gen. Parker declared. "You can march, you can implace your weapons, and you have demonstrated your ability to fire; but until your housekeeping improves I'll never certify you for combat. Why, just this morning I made an inspection of your barracks and found a pair of unlaced shoes under one of the beds. That is poor leadership."

"More than 300 of the enlisted men were college trained, but as replacements came the I. Q. rating was lowered," the major revealed. "Of the first group received, 40 could not read nor write. Then we were called upon to furnish a cadre of 300 men for a quartermaster unit. Instead of allowing us to keep our best material for the artillery requirements, the selection was made from personnel cards and our men with the highest I. Q. were transferred." 3-17-44

"Our communications were rated 'superior,'" Maj. Harris pointed out. "We were credited with peculiar adaptability for motor marches and our fire direction centers became quiz centers for all visiting artillery personnel. In the fall of 1941 the 1st battalion went to Camp McCoy, under my command, for firing tests. Its scores for the G.H.Q. tests 1 and 11, have not been equaled. Col. Lewing of the second army conducted the test. Four official commendations resulted. Then came the usual reward—350 men were transferred as cadre. Replacements were received. Our task started over again." 3-19-44

Hits Dixie Mistreatment

The 184th was gradually broken up and reorganized into the 930th and 931st field artillery battalions which the war secretary disclosed will be converted into combat engineer units. "Certain other existing Negro field artillery units are being converted to heavier artillery, but the 930th and 931st 155-mm. howitzer battalions have not been selected for conversion to heavier artillery or

Soldiers Prove Superior In Chemical Warfare Training

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga 2-5-44

Negroes Can Resist Heat More Than Any Others

CAMP SIBERT, Ala.—(ANP)—The army's test given trainees in chemical warfare here recently reveals that colored soldiers can resist heat better than white soldiers when both donned the air-proof suit worn by members of the contamination squads, and are stated as the best chemical warfare soldiers.

Made of alligator cloth, these suits are designed to protect the body from all types of gas, while the wearer works to remove the deadly vapor from any object that must be used, such as large and small arms, planes, cars and trucks, after it has been sprayed by enemy planes. 2-5-44

The demonstration squad suit is airtight, and after several tests it was found that whereas a white soldier, in summer heat, can remain in it only about 15 minutes, a colored fighter can wear it for 35 minutes. A great number of colored have been assigned to the decontamination squad as a result of the findings. 49m

Colored trainees at this 35,000-acre chemical warfare training ground have been praised for their outstanding work, and are considered to be generally superior in performance to their fellow white soldiers in this branch of the service.

Infantry Unit Has Served Long And Well There

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga. 1-13-44

Command's New Year Greetings Are Significant

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily WORLD And NNPA)

A SOUTH PACIFIC BASE—(Via Airmail)—New Year greetings held an added significance for the veteran 24th Infantry this year. In the greetings of Commander Julian G. Hearne, Jr. (Lt. Col), there was a hint that relief might be in store soon. In greeting his unit Col. Hearne said:

"In wishing you a 'Happy New Year'—as I do sincerely—let me say that I do not know what may be in store for the unit, and any prediction I would make would only be speculation. But I can tell you this: General Harmon has said, in a letter to all units, that he has in mind those organizations which have been longest in the tropics, and that as soon as the situation permits he will carefully consider the matter of relieving units.

"Of course, many factors are involved which are beyond General Harmon's control, but you may rest assured that he has our welfare at heart, and will give us a break just as soon as he can do so—although that time may yet be several months in the future. Meantime, we shall continue to accept whatever may be in store for us, in keeping with the high tradition of our unit. 1-13-44

INCREDIBLE CHRISTMAS

Christmas morning was incredible. The sun pushed up out of the ocean and giant golden rays searched the sky. Hazy grey mist crawled slowly from the blue waters onto our camp site. Beauty spread all around.

The towering palms were like oversized Christmas trees. And soldiers throaty voices sang, 'Silent Night, Holy Night' in soft hushed voices. The band played in the background. The Church-Call sounded while it was yet dark. Candles on the altar flickered, but braved the cool ocean breeze. Chaplains Norman Long (Oberlin, Ohio) and Gil Lloyd (Chicago) conducted the service. Men took Sacrament. 1-13-44

Lt. Col. Hearne sopke to the men in these somber words:

"It would be a misnomer to refer to the period December 25-January 1 as the 'holiday season,' for our duties will continue unbated. That, however, is as it should be. The Christmas season, of all seasons, is one of 'peace on earth, good will toward men,' and there can be but little of that until our task is finished and the enemy is crushed. We are doing our share towards bringing about the final day of victory when the full measure of 'peace on earth, good will toward men' will again be a reality in our world.

"So let us realize the true meaning of Christmas, and pause on that day long enough to promise our God and ourselves that we shall not fail him in our efforts."

XMAS RECEIVED

The number of Christmas presents received from home was enormous. Chief Warrant Officer Rufus Williams, veteran soldier from Columbus, Georgia, expressed the sentiment of the entire force when he said, after spreading his gifts on the little bunk, "My wife, my wife, my darling wife."

The Christmas feast, and it was a feast, was all that could be asked. Turkey and elaborate accessories—cakes and spices—pastries and candies—cigars and cold beer. To end the joyous day a new motion picture was shown. It was a night without rain, the stars were low, and far out to sea we could see the dimly lighted ships in the night. Christmas away from home had come and gone.

Negroes Set High Mark In Cavalry Training

Post-Washington, D.C. 1-9-44

Wichita, Kans.—Within cannon range of the geographical range of the United States, at Fort Riley Replacement Training Center, Kans. instructors with white saddle blankets are putting horse-mounted Negro troops through basic training.

The Negro cavalry—as distinguished from mechanized cavalry—is making good in a grueling training program. At this center the morale of the Negroes was particularly high while Joe Louis was present.

Now that he is on tour teaching boxing in Army camps, his big reddish-black dog, Butch, is a constant reminder of the prowess of his master.

There is a great deal to "take" in horse-cavalry training. On his third day in camp the Negro recruit rides out for fatiguing drills. None is easy, but one of the hardest is riding with the feet out of the stirrups, reins resting on the saddlehorn while arms and legs perform lengthy limbering-up exercises. This is a mere prelude to reinless and stirrupless walking, trotting and galloping on command. The recruit is thankful that the training program calls for only 45 minutes of this a day. 1-9-44

During his first weeks in camp the rookie develops a great love for his mount. He is indebted to his horse for simplifying things. Long used to moving in circles and to the orders, the animal changes pace with military precision. The rider soon learns that he can depend upon that and realizes fully the meaning of the old saw: "Heads come double in the cavalry."

Plenty of Horses

The Army has plenty of horses arriving in a steady stream from remount centers. Most of them are 2-year-olds, stocky, strong, of many breeds and partially trained. Young, agile, well-set Negroes, arriving from all corners of America, are assigned these mounts, each trooper usually keeping the same mount during his period of training. Horse cavalry, described to me by my guide as "glorified infantry," is glorified only in the sense that it can negotiate difficult terrain and arrive faster at the combat area than can foot soldiers. Once arrived, the troopers dismount and fight on foot.

After riding at various paces is mastered, courses in use of weapons, close-order drill, road marches, obstacle courses and use of maps and compass follows. The Negro rookie rides and marches, studies, stands guard, does kitchen police and everything else required willingly and with a smile, while he is becoming master of the "military seat"—the way of sitting on a horse in military fashion. Two styles are taught at Riley, one called the "Riley Seat," the other the "Chamberlin," the last named for Brig. Gen. Harry Chamberlin, world-famous horseman and former commanding officer of the CRTC at Fort Riley.

It is a mighty tricky thing to master and uncommonly easy to forget, but the Negro strives for it and masters it and near the end of his training rides with fine military bearing.

Next Come 'Problems'

Eventually he comes to the morning when he faces what the Army, with easy terminology, calls "problems." On horse or afoot—for he has also been put through the regular infantry drill—in squads or alone, he works out as many military problems as Riley's undergrowth-tangled stream beds, open plains and precipitous hills can pose. 1-9-44

The men say the problems are unpredictably intricate and that there is only one certain thing about them.. They are endless.

Toward the end of this training the Negro faces highly specialized missions within definite land limits that bring into use all he has learned in classroom and drill area. But he gets them. He is now assured master of all but the most unruly horses and toughest problems. With the inevitable cheerfulness of his race, he comes through smiling and digs into his final assignments.

Cavalry groups, in various stages of training, offer a spectacular sight when they are out doing their stuff over Riley's 22,000 acres. The rifle ranges are tame compared to pistol-charging horse cavalry, squads taking obstacle courses, racing from point to point, swimming rivers and taking targets at the gallop.

Horse Is Nonchalant

Negroes who enter training handicaped by being horse or gun shy stick it out. One trooper, remembering his rookie nervousness, said "Oh, yes, I fell off and I was thrown off and I was dragged as much as 20 yards before I learned the howness. Of course, I was scared. But I kept thinking of Brig. Gen. George Davis and some of the captains and those colored boys down South learning to fly, and I just naturally stuck her through." 1-9-44

Innumerable lump-swallowings take place at the top of the slides—long, steep, smooth down grades upon which a horse must make a constant double brake of his hind legs. The beast is the only nonchalant party the first time the rookie takes a slide.

CREATE THIRD ALL-NEGRO FIRE FIGHTING UNIT

Chicago, Ill. 6-17-44

An all-Negro personnel was created at a third fire company yesterday. Fire Commissioner Michael J. Corrigan replaced the white firemen at hook and ladder company 11, at 9 E. 36th st., with 15 Negroes from engine companies 16 and 19, which have all-Negro complements. Two white officers, Capt. William Street and Lt. William Draper, remain at company 11. The commissioner's orders were effective yesterday.

Commissioner Corrigan also promoted Gerald Tyrell from lieutenant at engine company 27 to captain at engine company 128, and promoted George F. Hengels from fireman at engine company 44 to lieu-

20 Negro Leaders Honor Hero Dead; Pledge War Aid

Daily Worker - New York, N.Y.
5-30-44

Twenty nationally known Negro leaders pledged support to America's Commander-in-Chief and paid tribute to the honored dead colored warriors and other fallen heroes of the war in a Memorial Day statement last night.

The statement, signed by Mary McLeod Bethune, of the National Council of Negro Women; A. Clayton Powell, Jr., of the People's Committee; Paul Robeson; Ferdinand C. Smith, secretary of the National Maritime Union; Benjamin J. Davis, Jr., New York City Councilman, and others, announced that:

". . . We pledge our utmost support for the wise and courageous leadership of our Commander-in-Chief in his efforts to defend, strengthen and extend the area of democracy throughout the world."

HAIL FALLEN HEROES

Hailing the fallen heroes of the war, the statement said in part:

"We honor Dorie Miller, Robert Brooks and the countless other Negro soldiers, sailors and airmen who have died in this struggle of all progressive mankind against the scourge of fascist barbarism.

"We honor the millions of fallen sons and daughters of our valiant Allies—Britain, the Soviet Union, China and all the others including those Africans, Indians and other colonial peoples who have died for the making of a free world.

"We rededicate ourselves to the cause for which they have died—to wipe every vestige of fascism from the face of the earth, to build a truly enduring peace of universal security and freedom. . . .

". . . These are the tributes of the entire Negro people."

The signers include: 5-30-44

Dr. Richard A. Billings, Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity; Charlotte Hawkins Brown, Palmer Memorial Institute; Dorothy Hobday Bryant, National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses; Lester Granger, Executive Secretary National Urban League; Dr. Gordon B. Hancock, Virginia Union University; Theodore A. Jackson, Eastern Regional Director, Joint Council of Dining Car Porters; Eugene Kinckle Jones, General Secretary, National Urban League; Belford W. Lawson, Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity; Dr. Rayford Logan, General President Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity; Louis E. Martin, Michigan Chronicle; Dr. Leon A. Ransom, Howard University; Mabel K. Staupers, National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses; Shelton Tappes, United Automobile Workers; Dr. Channing H. Tobias; Max Yergan, Council on African Affairs, National Negro Congress.

664,066 NEGROES SERVE WITH ARMY

Age-Herald - Birmingham, Ala.

WASHINGTON—The number of Negroes serving in the Army was 664,066 as of Feb. 29, 1944, an increase of 81,205 over the Aug. 31, 1943, total of 582,861, the War Department reported.

There were 77,335 Negroes assigned to the air corps and an increase of 593 commissioned officers, the report revealed. Of the increase noted in the six-month period, the greatest change ocurred in the number of Negroes serving overseas. 6-3-44

A partial breakdown follows: Infantry, 44,022; coast and field artillery, 50,955; cavalry, 9,043; engineers, 106,514; air forces, 77,335; all others, 376,197; total, 664,066.

Commissioned officers, 4,979, including dental corps officers, 77; nurses, 219; other medical corps officers, 467; chaplains, 205.

Serving overseas, 284,664.

4 Officers and Sergeant In One Negro Family

Courier-Journal - Louisville, Ky.
6-11-44

Special to The Courier-Journal.

Camp Breckinridge, Ky., June 10.—In a feat probably unparalleled, five brothers from a Negro family have risen through the same regiment—the 372d Infantry—to gain four commissions and one sergeantcy.

Three of the five brothers, all of whom enlisted when the 372d was a National Guard regiment in Massachusetts, remain with the unit at its new location here. Another is an instructor at Camp Butner, N. C. The fifth is overseas. They are the Phillips brothers of Medford, Mass.

At one time all five brothers not only were serving with the 372d Infantry Regiment, but all five were in Company K. The 372d served at Fort Devens, Mass.; Fort Dix, N. J.; New York City and engaged in New England maneuvers before arriving at Camp Breckinridge several weeks ago.

The three Phillipses at Camp Breckinridge are 1st Lt. William H. Phillips, 33; 2d Lt. Richard K. Phillips, 28, and Technical Sgt. Raymond L. Phillips, 31.

The other brothers are 1st Lt. Ernest Phillips, 38, and 2d Lt. Cecil F. Phillips, 25. The younger brother has left a Pacific port for overseas service. Lt. Ernest Phillips is with the Engineers Corps at Camp Butner. 6-11-44

Their father, Raymond L. Phillips, who died twenty-one years ago, was a Spanish-American War veteran. Grandfather William H. Phillips fought in the Civil War.

Mrs. Hannah J. Phillips, the mother, resides at West Medford, Mass.

Soldier Makes Cross Continent Flying Trip

Memphis World - Memphis, Tenn.
6-6-44

A soldier, who spent 14 months overseas, arrayed against the Japanese invaders of American territory in the Pacific, and who is now stationed at Camp McCain, Miss., to assist in the training of other men for overseas duties, was a stop-over visitor in the city last week-end.

He is Sgt. E. Maurice Sanders member of a chemical unit in the United States Army.

Sergeant Sanders who is on an extended furlough, flew over Memphis enroute to New York on May 22nd. He returned here by plane, and last Saturday was awaiting a seat to continue his flying trip to the other side of the continent, where he will visit friends in Los Angeles, Calif.

The sergeant is a former well known athlete and graduate of Wiley College. His home in in Houston, Texas. He is a former schoolmate of Messrs Benjamin Bell and Charles Thomas of Memphis. He has been in the Army three years. 6-6-44

Before his induction he worked as chemist at the Carbon and Carbide Chemical Corporation in Texas City, Texas, the world's largest oil seaport. He described his duties in the army as largely connected with his chemical training, as he was attached to an outfit whose job was to attend to the chemical purity of the soldiers' drinking water and to be prepared to take care of repelling and retaliating against any gas attacks the Japs might decide to unleash.

He described as his most interesting overseas experience, the manner in which the Negro soldiers of his organization won the goodwill of the Hawaiian and New Caledonian natives, after the natives had formed a dislike of Negro American soldiers based on previous erroneous reports given them by white Americans.

He was high in his praise of a Hawaiian woman USO directress, one "Miss Hopi," who was especially useful in helping the Negro soldiers in their job of adjustment to their environment. He also credited Lt. John Woodruff, former Olympic running champion, and a trained sociologist, with helping in this problem of adjustment. Lieutenant Wodruff was a member of the 369th Coast Artillery at the time he (the sergeant) was serving overseas. 6-6-44

The sergeant also mentioned the formation of a Veterans of Foreign Wars chapter, called the Henry O. Flipper Post, in honor of the first Negro graduate of West Point Military Academy in this country. 6-6-44

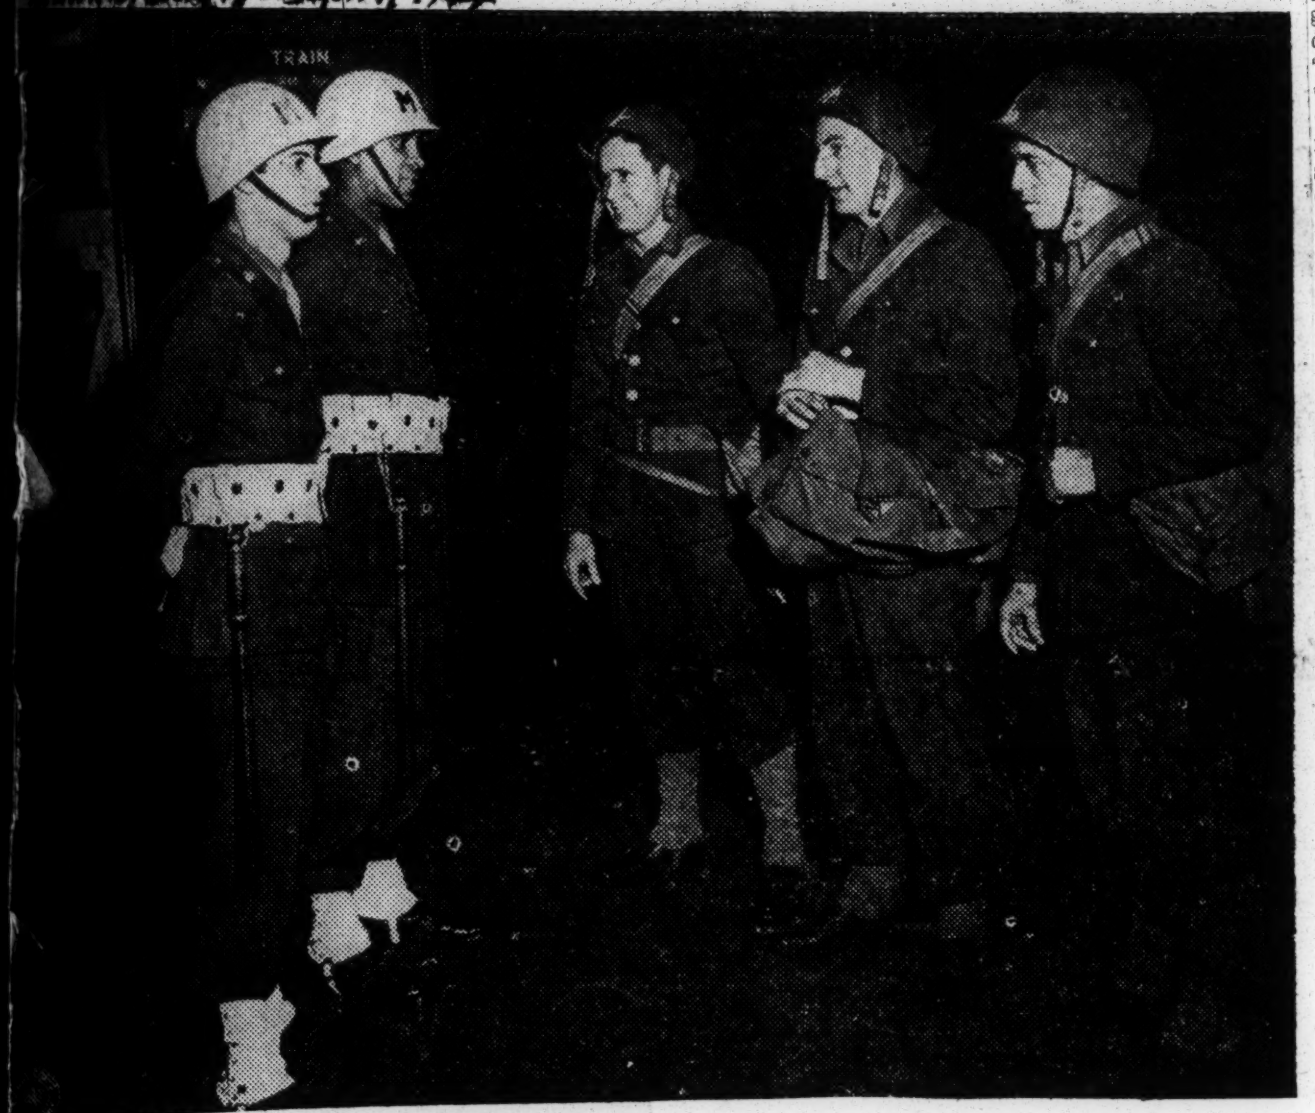
Sergeant Sanders is a member of the Omega Psi Phi Fraternity. He arrived in Memphis Saturday monring and left Sunday.

47m-1944

Military Police

Negro, White MP's Patrol In London

Daily Worker
Phila. Issue of - Sept. 7, 1944



Shown here at one of the largest railway stations in Londons are two soldiers of a U. S. Military Police Detachment assigned to duty in the London area. They are pictured here giving information to three GIs. MPs shown here are Private Paul H. Burdge, (left) Plymouth, Ohio, and Private Hugo V. Talliaferro, 1517 Q Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

NEGRO MP UNIT PATROLS ENGLISH, INVASION PORT

Daily World - Memphis, Tenn. Sept. 1, 1944

Unit Serves To Promote Good Race Relations

HEADQUARTERS, EUROPEAN THEATRE OF OPERATIONS — A Negro special Military Police Detachment, attached to the office of the Provost Marshal of a United States Army Transportation Corps port, is serving to promote good relations between Allied servicemen, the War Department reported Saturday.

Employing both foot and motor patrols, the Military Police maintain order at this vital invasion springboard and serve as guides to visiting soldiers and sailors. They work in conjunction with British Military Police and shore patrols covering strategic streets and areas frequented by military personnel.

Assigning and supervising these patrols is the duty of First Sergeant Paul Robinson, 32, of 8 Indian Lane, Stamford, Connecticut. "The liaison character of our work," said Sergeant Robinson, "is very important. It serves as a direct link in cementing already strong Anglo-American ties. Generally speaking the Yanks and the British make fast friends. Behavior on both sides is excellent."

Members of the unit include:

Arizona: Phoenix — Cpl. Zabedee Fuller, 20, of 1111 East Lincoln street, son of Mrs. Mamie Fuller.

Georgia: Atlanta — Pvt. Tinnie Perkins, 21, of 25-C Memorial Dr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Perkins; Quitman—Pfc. Daughty H. Corker, 20, of 915 East Forsyth street, son of Mrs. Harvellon Batchelor.

Kentucky: Louisville—Pfc. Richard Edmonds, 30, of 623 South 18th street, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Edmonds, General Delivery, Allen Springs, Ky.

Mississippi: Bolden — Pvt. William Polk, 24, Route 1, Box 2, husband of Mrs. Lily Polk, Pocahontac, Miss.

North Carolina: Elm City—Pvt. John C. Daughtry, 20, Route 3, Box 7, husband of Mrs. Gladys Lee Daughtry.

47m-1944

92nd Infantry Division

Negro Soldiers Make Grand Showing in Battle

The Sinker New York Evening 9-3-44

American Negro troops are crack combat units.

By EUGENE GORDON

The 92nd Infantry Division of the United States Army went into battle this week as part of the Fifth Army. Dispatches said it was the first Negro ground troops to see action in Italy. Negro troops have fought in the South Pacific ever since our landing there. They were, in the first days, chiefly engineers, or service troops, trained in combat.

9-3-44

Later Negro arrivals were members of the famous 24th Infantry which, itself, may have been a part of the 93rd Division. For security reasons we cannot—and need not—be exact on this point.

ON BOUGAINVILLE

It is a fact, however, that the first Negro combat division to see action in World War II belonged to the 93rd Division, on Bougainville, facing the Japanese.

Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's address to men who joined his Fifth Army this week was both a gracious gesture and a pep talk. There is nothing in army regulations requiring a commanding general to welcome newcomers with speeches. What he said is, therefore, indicated their commander-in-chief's present attitude toward Negro troops.

Negroes are now in every branch of the armed services, including the Marines. There are scores of field officers, including a brigadier general. There are, for the first time Negro officers in the U. S. Navy.

"Take this opportunity, as I know you will, to cover yourselves with glory," General Clark is quoted as telling the Negro troops.

Russell Hill, the Herald Tribune correspondent reporting the speech added that the men "will be watched critically by those who are skeptical about the fighting ability of Negro units."

FIGHTING ABILITY 9-3-44

There is probably no informed person still "skeptical" about the fighting ability of Negro troops. This same 92nd Division—alongs with the provisional 93rd Division—proved in World War I that, despite all handicaps, it was an outfit of first-class soldiers.

Reports from fighting fronts in World War II, when they tell of Negroes in combat, do so chiefly because these men have distinguished themselves. That has been true of Negroes on Bougainville and of Negroes on the landing beaches of France. It has been particularly true of members of the 99th Fighter Squadron.

47m-1944

93rd Division

LETTERS

PM-New York, N.Y. 4-17-44

From the Editor

Negro Soldiers

We made an especial point to get and print the stories on Negroes of the 93d Division in combat in the Pacific (page 10) because there is so much misinformation going around right now on the status of Negro troops in the war.

Anyone who receives much soldier mail from Negroes has had reports about reassignments of colored fighting troops of one kind or another to service and work assignments. Such reassignments have led to a rather widespread belief that all Negro troops have been ordered kept out of action and assigned to work details.

That isn't true. What is true, apparently, its that recently there have been troops, both white and colored, transferred to combat outfits to service duty, but the fighting of the 93d Division is the best evidence that Negro troops are not going to be kept out of action.

What happened is that someone called the shot wrong early in the war on the number of service troops that would be required to supply the fighting armies. As near I can find, estimates on the number of service troops required were based on the proportion found to work out best in the last war. Insufficient allowance was made apparently for the increase in fire power of the new division. That requires more service troops to provide the additional ammunition and supplies. Further, the mobility of troops today has been stepped up over the last war, and the service problem increases astronomically with the increase in mobility.

The results have been that in recent months it was discovered that more service outfits were needed and other troops were reassigned to this work to meet the need. Many of the troops, so reassigned, have been Negro outfits, but not all of them by a whole lot. 4-17-44

Incidentally, the ultimate responsibility for using, or not using, Negro troops in combat is in the hands of the commanding general in the different theaters of war. If Gen. Eisenhower will call for Negro troops to go into fighting action, they will fight in Italy and Europe. If he doesn't, they will not. The decision on actual use of troops in the war theaters is in the hands of the commanding generals in the field, and not the War Dept.

That is not to say that the War Dept. record on handling of the Negro problem is good, for it isn't. Except for officers' training schools, where white and Negro students live and work very successfully without a color line, the Army is on a Jim Crow basis.

Most inexcusable of all, the Department has so far refused to sanction even an experimental mixed outfit, made up of white and Negro soldiers who volunteered to serve together to prove that soldiers can fight and perform better on a basis of democratic equality. 4-17-44

To get back to the 93d Division, the soldiers of that outfit have proved that you can't measure the quality of Americans by the color of their skin. It is time that all of us learned that same lesson at home.

—John P. Lewis.

93D NEGRO DIVISION FIGHTS JAPS BEYOND BOUGAINVILLE LINES

Tribune-Chicago, Ill.

BOUGAINVILLE, April 15 [Delayed]—(AP).—Elements of the 93d Negro division are still in contact with the enemy several miles east of the American beachhead perimeter at Empress Augusta bay on Bougainville, Lt. Gen. Millard F. Harmon's headquarters reported today. 4-17-44

Twelve torpedo planes and 10 dive bombers raided Japanese supply caves near the Saua river and Japanese artillery continued the early morning shelling of the Torokina fighter strip and the Piva bomber strip. Minor damage was reported before the enemy guns came under the fire of a counter battery.

Allied patrols reported finding additional Japanese dead beyond the beachhead perimeter.

Bags First Jap For 93rd

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

WITH THE AMERICAN DIVISION AT BOUGAINVLLE— Photo shows Maj. Gen. Oscar W. Griswold of Elko, Nevada, commanding general of Allied troops on Bougainville Island, congratulating Pvt. James H. O'Banner, young Negro infantryman, Sidon, Miss. O'Banner bagged the first Jap to be killed by a Negro soldier at Bougainville. He is with the elements of the 93d Negro Division, attached to the veteran American Division

(U. S. Army Signal Corps)

NEGROES ON BOUGAINVILLE

Their commander is proud of them.

Says General Lehman: "They have the same courage, the same fear and fighting spunk as any other soldiers. They are quick to learn and eager to perform. They can give & take, and they are about the best disciplined men in the Army."

Major General Raymond G. Lehman, of Sleepy Eye, Minn., commander of the 93rd, who has been a Regular Army officer since 1917 and commands Negro troops because he likes to lead them. 5-20-44

OPERATIONS

Time-Chicago, Illinois

"Tan Yanks"

May 29, 1944.

In the Bougainville jungles white and colored troops live together in soldierly understanding, TIME Correspondent Robert Martin reported last week. Units of the 93rd Division, first all-Negro infantry division to be sent overseas in this war, had fought and acquitted themselves with honor.

For the Negro troops, acceptance by their white comrades-in-arms was something to shout about. There had been gibes when units of the 93rd landed on Bougainville, on the heels of the Americal Division. The Americal knew by then what jungle fighting was like. They doubted that the "Tan Yanks" would stand up under the jungle's strange and silent horrors.

The tight-lipped Negroes had moved in. Among their units was the old 24th Regiment, which had supported Teddy Roosevelt in 1898 in the Rough Riders' charge up San Juan Hill. Two-thirds of their officers were Negroes, 90% of them college graduates. The enlisted men were boys who had lived in Harlem tenements, plowed Georgia farms, carted crates in San Francisco. Time-Chicago Ill. 5-20-44

With Prayer. It was animal-like warfare on Bougainville. The Negroes did not like it, any more than white men did. Sometimes their officers had to tongue-lash them into action. But unseasoned white troops had also gone through that first paralyzing terror of jungle combat.

Private James O'Banner, a mild-mannered youngster from Memphis, Tenn., was the first man to get a Nip. His carbine snap shot stirred up a hornet's nest. A dozen Negroes were slain, 25 were wounded. But 30 Japanese were dead before the melee was over. 5-20-44

The men of the 93rd learned fast. They were resourceful. Corporal Lemon Hicks of Silver City, Miss. and four buddies got lost behind enemy lines. When they blundered into a command post they picked off one Jap, melted back into the thick and steaming underbrush. They ran into a Jap minefield and methodically picked their way through it. They located their own lines by the sound of distant artillery, finally crossed safely back. Said Lemon: "All of us prayed."

One unit, moving out along the muddy Laruma River, fought it out with Japs for two days, destroyed five of their pillboxes, crossed the river with fixed bayonets and put their disorganized enemies to rout.

With Flame. Their artillerymen learned to "walk" shells toward distant objectives. Their fire was so accurate that Jap prisoners thought U.S. troops had installed listening posts deep in the jungles to tip off Japanese movements.

Fighting alongside white units, the Negro doughboys helped extend outposts across the Saua River. With bazookas, flame-throwers and Browning automatic fire they beat off frontal attacks by day, creeping infiltration by night, until the Bougainville base was finally secured.

By last week they were either veterans or casualties of the jungle war and white

47m-1944

15 Nurses in S.W. Pacific Send Holiday Greetings Home

Afro-American-Baltimore, Md.
1-1-44

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA—(Via Air Mail)—Nurses recently arrived in Australia from the States have some messages they want transmitted to friends back home.

In a four-hour session each of the fifteen members of the female contingent of the non-white hospital unit poured out her heart and a lot of her private life to this correspondent. Harlem and Lincoln Hospitals in New York claim the major portion of the group as daughters and they were lavish in their praise for the various forms of entertainment available in Gotham. There is nothing for them to do here but go "window wishing."

Duties Light

In the staging area where they are now quartered their duties are light, consisting of tours at KP or at "gardening"—which is the Nurses Corps way of speaking of "policing up" the camp area. Several have done stretches of guard duty.

Lieut. Elnora Jones, Rahway, N.J., is the sole member of the group trained at Baltimore's Provident Hospital. For ten years, from 1932 to 1942, she worked as general duty nurse at Seaview Hospital, Staten Island, N.Y.

She sends greetings to Miss Anita Keller, 812 Fremont Avenue, Baltimore, and to the Ponders, Wilsons and Fishers of Rahway.

Lieut. Inez E. Holmes, Norfolk, is a graduate of the Piedmont Training School at Burkeville, Va., which is an affiliate of St. Philip Hospital at Richmond. She worked briefly at Seaview Hospital, joined the army in June, 1941, and saw service at Fort Bragg, N.C., before going to Fort Huachuca.

Greetings to Brooklynites

She says hello to Mr. and Mrs. Philip Green, Mr. and Mrs. James Bonner, Brooklynites; Mrs. L. D. Mitchell, superintendent of nurses at Seaview; here parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Holmes; and a sister, Miss Eula Holmes, who is a teacher at Norfolk's Small Public School. 1-1-44

Another sister, Mrs. Vivian Holmes, 5328 Race Street, Philly; the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Williams of Raleigh, N.C., and Mrs. Mollie B. Cook of Halifax, are others to whom she sends word she is safe and happy.

Lieut. Albert L. Smith, Kansas City, Mo., who did nurse training at General Hospital No. 2 in Kaycee, worked at Wheatley Provident Hospital for awhile, then returned to her alma mater as resident superintendent of nurses before joining the army in October, 1942. Her greetings go to Mrs. Katie Barnett, 1701 S. Thirty-fifth Street, Kansas City, Kans., and to her brother, Everett Lewis, who is a trumpeter in Count Basie's orchestra.

Kisses to Husband

Lieut. Elena Townsend, Glen Cove, L.I., N.Y., graduate of Harlem Hospital School of Nursing in 1942 and employee of the emergency receiving section prior to joining the army in November, 1942, sends "love and kisses" to her husband, Lieut. James Gleason of the 93rd Division, and greetings to Miss Marion Ray of North Philadelphia. 1-1-44

First Lieut. Birdie Brown, New York, sends regards to members of Abyssinian Baptist Church and the word that "much has already been shown to prove that we CAN live together and work together."

Other members of the group who send greetings to friends and family are Lieuts. Louise Miller, Atlanta; Thelma L. Fisher, Boston; Beulah L. Baldwin, Cleveland; Dorothy O. Branker, Nashville; Joan Louise Hamilton, Kansas City, Mo.; Bessie Parker Evans, St. Louis; and Geneva Culpepper of Alabama.

Members of the 93rd Division and staff attaches of the Fort Huachuca Station Hospital hold high priority in the "hello back there" greetings of these newcomers to the Land Down Under.

LT. SUSAN FREEMAN

Nurses

Group of 30 Under Lt. Susan Freeman, Back from Liberia

Afro-American-Baltimore, Md.
1-22-44

Surgeon-General's Office Says Reassignment Purely Routine; Major John West Also Back in U.S.

WASHINGTON.

Thirty nurses, members of a contingent on duty in Liberia, have been returned to the United States for reassignment, it was learned last week.

The group was under the command of First Lieut. Susan E. Freeman of Hartford, Conn. Some of them have been assigned to Camp Livingston, La., some to Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and still others, it is reported, have been assigned to a unit which may soon be sent overseas.

Also back in the States is Major John West of Washington, who headed a unit of medical officers in Liberia.

Nothing "Sinister"

The Surgeon-General's office had no comment upon the reassignment, other than to deny that there was anything "sinister" about the change. An effort is made, it was stated, to rotate nurses periodically. 1-22-44

Many of the members of the unit, it is reported, contracted malaria in Liberia and none had had any leave since the unit landed overseas. Another unit was last reported in the South Pacific.

There was no official indication as to whether the unit would be replaced. It is believed that the shifting battlefronts may mean that no replacements will be sent

The Liberian contingent included, in addition to Lt. Freeman: 1-22-44

Lts. Thelma H. Calloway, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Chrystalee Maxwell and Clara A. Henry, Los Angeles; Sarah F. Thomas, Marion, Ala.; Bela M. Long and Alberta L. Holt, Chicago; Wineas A. M. Hibbler, Vallejo, Calif.; Gertrude M. Ivy and Maria W. B. August, both of Atlanta.

Lts. Pharfeania F. Jones, Tampa, Fla.; Ruby Gill, Beaumont, Tex.; Mattie L. Aikens, Macon, Ga.; Susan F. Harris, Rochester, Pa.; Hallie M. Brown, Charlotte, N.C.; Jewell E. Patterson, Colorado Springs, Colo.; Louise M. Jacobs, New York; Sammie M. Rice, Florence, S.C.; Esther B. Stewart, Princeton, Ind.; Margaret R. Kendrick and Alma H. Favors, Athens, Ga.;

Lts. Idell E. Webb, Kansas City, Kans.; Fatima D. Smith, Hazlehurst, Miss.; Norma L. Greene, Elkins, W.Va.; Phloy G. Frierson, Rayford, N.J.; Rosemary Vincent, Detroit; Eva C. Bogess, Waco, Tex.; Ellen Robinson, Hackensack, N.J.; Daryle E. Foster, Bedford, Pa., and Leola M. Green, Houston, Tex.

Army Lifts Its Ban On Negro Nurses

PM-New York, N.Y.
7-12-44

Faced With Desperate Shortage, It Changes Its Jim Crow Policy

PM Exclusive

The U. S. Army, faced with a desperate need for nurses and growing public impatience at its refusal to make fullest use of the nurses available, has abandoned its traditional Jim Crow policy in limiting Negro enlstments.

The new policy is that the Army will accept and commission qualified nurses "without restriction."

It already has been put into effect. A check of several Negro nurse groups revealed that most of the members entered military service more than a week ago.

The reversal of policy is a victory for the National Assn. of Colored Graduate Nurses and those organizations which supported the Association in its campaign to have race restrictons lfted.

Association Notified

Announcement of the new policy was contained in a telegram from Truman K. Gibson, Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, to Mrs. Mabel Staupers, executive secretary of the Assn. of Colored Nurses. The telegram said:

"Negro nurses will be accepted without regard to any quota. They will be used both in this country and abroad. They should apply for commissions in the regular manner."

For the past two years the Army has refused to take Negro nurses because their use was restricted to Negro hospitals at four Army stations and the 220 Negro nurses in the Nurse Corps were sufficient to handle those four hospitals.

"Negro nurses will now be recruited and used without restriction and without quota," Mrs. Staupers said. 7-12-44

"Our organization is urging all qualified nurses to apply for admission to the Army Nurse Corps. They should apply through their local Red Chross chapter. There are 800 in the New York area ready to go.

Progressive Step

"This policy change is a significant and progressive step in race relations. It shows that the War Dept. will respond to public pressure and demands. We wish to acknowledge the help of all the organizations which have assisted us, especially the National Nursing Council for War Services. Your paper, PM, has been a valuable factor also."

The Procurement and Assignment Service for Nurses of the War Manpower Commission lists nurses in essential and less essential work. It urges qualified persons engaged in less essential duties to join the Nurse Corps. Mrs. Staupers said that close co-operation between the Procurement and Assignment Committe in each community would be highly important in making the new policy effective. She explained that these committees could either

NO NEGRO NURSE QUOTA

7-13-44

Army Denies Any Limitation and Asks Them to Apply

Times-New York, N.Y.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, July 12 — The War Department denied today that there had been a quota for white and Negro nurses in the Army. It stated its position following an announcement by Mrs. Mabel Staupers, executive secretary of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, of a policy under which Negro nurses would be accepted in the Army without regard to quota. 7-13-44 easier to aid, were barred by their color.

encourage or discourage joining the Nurse Corps.

The Jim Crow policy on nurses was changed by the Army after repeated and insistent appeals for white nurses. Five thousand nurses had failed to fill quotas. They said, after the meeting, that it "was simply heartbreaking" that the end of the year to hear the pleas for help and to realize they, who were ready and

Bid to Nurses

Qualified nurses can make application for commissions in the Army Nurse Corps through the Red Cross. In New York application should be made to Miss Eleanor Lee, Director of the Recruitment Center, 139 E. 36th St., MUrray Hill 4-4455, Ext. 260. Nurses who pass the required tests are commissioned as second lieutenants and draw $1800 a year in addition to uniforms and

Their Return from Liberia Said to Be "Routine"

These thirty U.S. Army nurses have been sent home from Liberia, where they have been stationed. According to the Surgeon-General's office the transfer is purely routine.

'ANGELS OF MERCY' . . . DRILL IN TEXAS

It's not all hospital work for Army nurses. Here, "Angels of Mercy" at Fort Clark, Brackettville, Texas, are shown going through a drill routine. First Lt. Josie M. Glenn, principal chief nurse, is at extreme right. She is a native of Winnsboro, S. C.

Other nurses, left to right, 2nd Lts. Lucille R. Guilford, Kansas City, Mo.; Ruth Smith, Steubenville, Ohio; Prinzola McFarland, Silsbee, Texas; Goldie M. Quinerly, Norfolk, Va.; Anne L. Jackson, Houston, Texas; Inez F. Howard, West Cape May, N. J.; Bertie M. Long, Weldon, N. C.; Theresa V. James, Minneapolis, Minn.; Annie B. Jackson, Whitethorne, Va.; Carolina Schenck, Uniontown, Pa.; Alice M. McCoy, Millington, N. J.; Jane E. Pate, Christianburg, Va.; Laura Smith, Philadelphia, Pa.; Nannye R. Hatton, La Grange, Ga.; Mary J. Culver, Cheyney, Pa., and Syble A. Lewis, Brooklyn, N. Y.—U.S. Army Signal Corps photo.

Negro Nurse Center Opened. 7-16-43 Courier-Journal-Louisville, Ky.

Washington, July 15 (AP)—The first basic training center for Army Negro nurses has been established at Fort Huachuca in Arizona, the War Department said today. A medical training center for Negro Wacs also has been established at Huachuca.

Our Nurses in Australia

Recently arrived in Australia are these nurses, members of a unit which will eventually be assigned to hospitals in the Southwest Pacific Dressed for a shopping trip to town are, left to right, 2nd Lieuts. Geneva H. Culpepper of Wadley, Ala., Marjorie S. Mayers of New York City and Thelma L. Fisher of Roxbury, Mass.

Nearly 2,000 Negro Women Enrolled In Nurse Cadet Corps

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Great impetus to Negro nursing education are studying in 20 all-Negro schools; the rest are enrolled in schools having botoh Negro and white students. Almost 2,000 young Negro women have joined the Nurse Cadet Corps. They represent all but about 600 of the total number enrolled in all schools of nursing admitting Negroes.

At the end of one year of the Cadet Corps under the Public Health Service recognizing the medical need among Negroes, it was reported here at headquarters that 33 schools of nursing out of a possible 55 which admit Negro students have qualified under the Federal program which was begun in 1943 when the Bolton bill creating the Nurse Corps was enacted.

Five collegiate schools are now

Five Army Nurses At Utah Hospital

World—Memphis, Tenn.
7-14-44

OGDEN, UTAH—Five Negro Army nurses now are on duty in the Quartering Area Hospital at the Utah Army Service Forces Depot, the War Department reported today. They were ordered here from Station Hospital No. 1 at Fort Huachuca, Arizona where they were stationed for several months.

First Lieutenant Agnes B. Glass, Chief Nurse, of Meredian, Mississippi, received her training at St. Mary's Infirmary, St. Louis, Missouri, where she subsequently served a year. She is a post graduate student of Washington University in St. Louis and has pursued studies in ward management and administration.

For five years prior to her enlistement in the service in September, 1942, Lieutentant Glass practiced nursing at the Homer G. Phillips Memorial Hospital in St. Louis. She acted in the capacity of chief nurse in surgery at Fort Huachuca, and received her promotion in September, 1943. Her ambition is to go overseas where she feels she is needed most. 7-14-44

Second Lieutentant Velma M. Brown, of 1717 Euclid, N. W., Washington, D. C., is a graduate of the Homer G. Phillips Memorial Hospital and served as general duty nurse after graduation. She received her commission in the Army Nurse Corps in July, 1942.

Second Lieutentant Marjorie E. Clark, of 1147 Prospect Avenue, the Bronx New York, graduated from the Harlem School of Nursing in New York City, where she continued working as a general nurse prior to entering the Army in October, 1942.

A graduate of the Freedman's Hospital Training School for Nurses, Washington, D. C. Second Lieutenant Bessie O. Hart of 240 Adams Street, Steelton Pennsylvania, spent one and one half years at West Virginia State College at Institute, prior to her enlistment in the Army in September, 1942.

Sees Policy Change

Times—New York, N.Y.

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, July 13—In response to a press conference question of lifting of quotas on Negro nurses, Robert P. Patterson, Acting Secretary of War, said today that in May the Army Nurse Corps quota had been increased to 50,000 from 40,000, that there never had been any distinction made as to Negroes or any other group within the Corps, and that if any individual were professionally and physically qualified she was eligible for a commission. 7-14-44

This was later interpreted by Truman Gibson, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, to mean a change in policy in that "nurses would be accepted without regard to race or creed."

Mr. Gibson said the Negro nurses had previously been recruited only for four Army hospitals serving large numbers of Negro troops, which had "in effect imposed a ceiling on them, so that no Negro nurses had been recruited for four years as these hospitals already had their required number."

The Army policy thus worked out as a disadvantage to the Negro nurse, he said.

He listed the hospitals were Negro nurses had been serving as follows: Fort Huachuca (Ariz.) Hospital; a separate ward in Fort Bragg Hospital, South Carolina; a separate ward in the Livingston (La.) Army Hospital; and the all-Negro Tuskegee Hospital. A fifth, at Fort Clark, Tex., was closed when all its troops went overseas.

The civilian aide further stated that Negro troops were serving in all overseas theatres of war, and with the great flow of nurses overseas it would seem likely that some of the Negro nurses would go. However, he said that exigencies of war were such that Negro nurses would not necessarily be assigned to Negro troops, but would give their services on a basis of need, just as white and Negro soldiers alike came into the war-zone hospitals on the basis of need.

Questions on assignment of Negro nurses were answered by the Office of the Surgeon General of the Army with the following statement: 7-14-44

"There is need for a substantial number of additional nurses, including Negroes. Both white and Negro nurses are being procured at this time. They will be assigned to positions they are best fitted to fill and where the maximum benefits can be secured from their services."

ARMY TO INCREASE ITS NEGRO NURSES

Patterson Says No Distinction Has Been Made—Aide

She's Supervisor

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga. 7-13-44

CAPTAIN MARY L. PETTY

Army Nurse Corps, of Chicago, will supervise training at the first basic training center for Negro nurses recently established at Fort Huachuca, Arizona. The initial class will have an enrollment of 135 nurses, all of whom were recently commissioned second lieutenants (Photo by U. S. Army Signal Corps)

Hats Off!

PM—New York, N.Y.

7-23-44

Hats off today to the Negro nurses who have succeeded in their fight to get the Army to end its quota system of admitting them into the Army's nursing corps. As a result of their pressure, backed by civilian protest, they are now being admitted to the service on the same basis as other nurses. One of them, shown above, is Bertha Rushing, 28, of Salisbury, N. C., a 2d Lt., among the first to get into the service since the change of policy. For four of the six years she has been a nurse, she was located at Sea View Hospital, Staten Island, and she also spent one year at Kate Betting Reynolds Memorial Hospital Winston Salem, N. C.

The Nurse Policy

The decision of the War Department to abandon its Jim Crow policy of accepting only white nurses does not indicate that the department has taken a change of heart toward Negro nurses. It simply means that the need for nurses is so great and the available white nurses so few, they are forced to accept Negro nurses or stand accused of neglecting our war wounded. Tribune—Washington, D.C.

Other recognition will come to us as the war progresses and the available white manpower dwindles. 7-22-44

There has never been a war yet that didn't net some good to Negroes. World War I ended too soon or we, as a race, would have advanced farther along the road of equality. If the war continues for another year or so, there can be no doubt that it will result in unparalleled advancement for the Negro.

We are in the Navy for the first time because we were needed, not wanted. We are in the Air Corps for the same reason and yet, again, we are found among the paratroopers.

The war has practically shattered the employment policies of our Government agencies, and Negroes are to be found in practically every Government unit including those which formerly boasted they would never hire Negroes. 7-22-44

Government cafeterias once open to white only, now have to feed Negroes on equal basis with whites if the Government wants Negro workers to remain here. Signs, "For Negro Women" and "For White Women" which is pre-war days distinguished white toilets from Negro toilets are no longer on display; white women now have learned that they will have to use Government toilets behind Negro women or wait until they get home. They usually prefer the former because they can't wait.

We have come a long way since Pearl Harbor, and every day we see signs pointing toward other achievements.

And so, while we rejoice that some event brought about our end to Jim Crow in the Army Nurses Corps, we cannot attribute it to any religious or conversion on the part of Mr. Stimson and Company. It was plainly a war necessity. Sooner or later the necessities of war are going to cause other avenues to be opened to Negroes.

While the authorized strength Army Negro nurses has of the Army Nurse Corps was been established portions. Under the new policy lished at Fort Huachuca, the War Department Col. Median O. Bousfield, Ariz., as of February 29, there were under the commonly 219 colored nurses enrolled Chicago, head of the Station Hospital at the Fort. 7-22-44

First Negro Army Nurse Center Opened

Basic Training To Be Given At Fort Huachuca Hospital

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. 7-22-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Following the removal of restrictions on the enrollment of colored nurses in the Army Nurse Corps, Medical training for Negro nurses has been established at Fort Huachuca, the War Department announced Saturday at Huachuca. announced that the first basic training center for NURSES ENROLLED

End of Army Nurse Quota Praised

People's Voice — New York, N. Y.

LT. ANNIE E. PHILLIPS of the Army Nurse Corps, which now includes 225 Negro nurses, dresses a wound for Pfc. Michael P. Brigida at Station Hospital, Camp Livingston, La. According to the War Dept. the quota of nurses now required is 50,000, and Negro nurses will not necessarily be assigned to Negro troops, but where needed. Hitherto, the nurses have served in only five hospitals in this country, mainly working with Negro troops. In New York, until the recent order, there had been practically no appointments during the last two years, though the recruitment office stated that 169 had applied in that period.

PROSPECTIVE ARMY NURSES are (l to r) Thelma O. Lambert of Plainfield, New Jersey, Julia L. Kelly of Philadelphia, Penna., and Julia Cobb of New Orleans, Louisiana, now working in Harlem Hospital. All three had made applications to the Army about two years ago but only recently received notices to report for preliminary examinations, since the institution of the new Army policy. These young women are glad to take advantage of Army's recent announcement of accepting qualified nurses without color restrictions —but they will be happier still, they say, "when all barriers in the armed services are abolished and when the Navy accepts Negro nurses also."

AT LONG LAST

NEWS from Washington last week was to the effect that the War Department has rescinded its ban on the general admission of Negro nurses in the Army Nurses Corps and that hereafter the quota system would be abolished and Negro nurses accepted without restrictions.

That is good news, but it is mighty late coming. Late because ever since Pearl Harbor, the plea has come out from Washington that more nurses are needed to care for the sick and wounded men in the armed forces. There has been a serious shortage of nurses, and yet hundreds of Negro nurses have been compelled to sit on the side-lines and not contribute directly to the war effort because of the color of their skin.

Wounded and sick men draw no color line. They know that death draws no color line. They know, too, that all they are concerned with is getting the proper treatment so that they can get well again. They do not care who helps them so long as they get well.

That is apparently what the War Department is just finding out. That is the reason why, at long last, it has abolished the quota system for Negro nurses in the Army Nurses Corps. We hope that is the reason. We should not like to believe that it is just another political move because a national election will be held this year.

Negro Nurses Urged To Seek Commission

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Negro nurses are ready to proceed to the theatre of war. At least 63 are under orders now and additional units have been requested from the same theatre of war. There is plenty of room for additional nurses who are registered graduates and who can meet the rigorous physical test.

There has been considerable lassitude on the part of Negro nurses, it was learned, in volunteering for army duty. Understandably this was due in part to the feeling that the army, while pleading for white nurses, was not opening the door to Negro nurses.

7-22-44

The doors are now open and qualified, physically fit Negro nurses are being urged to apply for commissions as second lieutenants. Many new advantages are guaranteed those who are commissioned now. Out of whatever number of colored nurses who have applied there are only 150 now on file who meet the qualifications. The demand is expected to be so great that "there will be no trouble in assigning all available applicants." It takes a considerable period of time however to clear nurses from their civil positions through the War Manpower commission, which must agree to their transfer.

The change of policy in opening opportunity to colored nurses must be credited to the unremitting fight which the National Nursing council, the National Association of Colored Graduate nurses and Congressman Frances P. Bolton of Cleveland have waged. Quietly and without recrimination they have brought effective pressures to bear. Mrs. Bolton, author of the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps bill, points to the fact that in the future as the cadets graduate a plentiful supply of nurses will be available for army, veteran hospital and other emergency duties, but urges that every qualified, capable, physically able young nurse place her application on file now.

Nurses Get Full Military Status

World — Memphis, Tenn.
7-4-44

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Negro nurses coming into the army nurse corps now will enjoy the advantage of full military status for the first time since the corps was founded in 1901 by an act of congress. Until recently there had been only 211 colored army nurses. Change in policy has removed the ceiling on such enlistments.

By the terms of an executive order signed by President Roosevelt, the entire personnel of the army nurse corps has been moved with the same pay and prerogatives as other officers. Heretofore the corps has been but an auxiliary such as was the old WAACS.

Commissions in their present grades are being issued to all members of the army nurse corps

NEGRO NURSE UNIT LANDS IN ENGLAND

7-22-44

The four Alabama nurses are 2nd Lt. B. M. Harris, Birmingham 2nd Lt. Laura Colquitt, Birmingham; 2nd Lt. Sarah F. Thomas Marion, and 2nd Lt. Margaret L Lipscomb, Salem.

The first contingent of Negro officers of the Army Nurse Corps to be assigned to the European theater of operations has arrived in England for active nursing duty in that theater, and the unit includes four Alabamians, the War Department has announced at Washington.

The unit, composed of 63 nurses selected from various Army hospitals in the United States, was

Day with Harlem Cadet Nurses Reveals Study, Work and Play

Afro-American Balt. Md. 8-27-44

NEW YORK CITY.—Three girls in starched blue-and-white uniforms with insignia on their sleeves, and wearing clean white aprons—these are typical cadet nurses, students in training at the Harlem Hospital, 136th street and Lenox Avenue, New York City.

Enthusiastic and quietly earnest in turn, Armentha Elliott, of Dallas, Texas; Charmaine Young, of New Castle, Pa., and Priscilla Carter, of New York City, outlined the routine of a cadet nurse's day and discussed their plans for the future.

Miss Elliott, 20, explained that their day started at 6:30 o'clock, "but it's about 7 by the time I'm buttoned into my uniform." Chapel and breakfast, then on duty and to classes.

"Of course, the subjects differ in each class program," Miss Carter, 25, added. The only senior of the three, the white cap she wore was rounded, while those of Miss Elliott and Miss Young, both freshmen, were pointed.

Capped After Six Months

For a definite number or weeks, depending on school requirements, the freshmen send the major portion of their day in classes. Their very limited duties on the wards are closely supervised. At the end of a six-month period, freshmen at the Harlem Hospital are presented with their caps, and they officially go "on duty."

"We really feel as if we are a part of the hospital then, as we are actually filling a nurse's place," Miss Young, 19, said.

"On duty" means that the cadet nurses are assigned to the wards to care for patients under supervision, to the operating room and to the diet kitchen.

"After studying diet therapy," Miss Elliott explained, "we went right into the diet kitchen to plan menus and weigh food for the patients."

Ward duty seemed particularly fascinating to each of these future nurses.

"Having first learned the underlying causes of disease in class, it is interesting to watch the progress of a patient with whom you work," Miss Elliott said.

Leisure time for these hard-working nurses-to-be comes at the end of the day. From 4:30 in the afternoon until 7 is letter-writing time for some, while for others, it is time enough for a set of tennis.

"We have a recreation room here in the hospital," Miss Carter said, "with a phonograph, table tennis table and a handball court, among other things, to enjoy and to keep us fit."

First Negro Nurses Land At War Front In Scotland

N.Y., N.Y. Amsterdam News

Under the leadership of Capt. Mary Petty, of Chicago, sixty-three Negro nurses have arrived at a port west of Scotland. They were met on their arrival by Gen. Benjamin O. Davis. 8-26-44

This marks the first contingent of Negro nurses to be assigned to a European theater, although a similar group of nurses served for many months in Liberia

8-26-44

CAPT. MARY PETTY
In Battle Dress

Helmeted, and in full battle dress the newly arrived nurses were welcomed as they marched from the transport. All of them received their Army training in the station hospital at Fort Huachuca, where Capt. Petty was chief nurse.

The one New Yorker in the group is Second Lt. Lydia Pinckett of 205 W. 112th St., a former nurse at Harlem Hospital here

Capt. Petty is a graduate of Freedman's Hospital in Washington and had served a term at Harlem Hospitl before taking up her duties with the armed forces.

General Davis was flown to Scotland to greet the nurses following his tour of inspection of Negro units in Normandy.—C.

Negro Nurses

Serve Nazi Prisoners While Our GI's Suffer

Call—Kansas City, Mo. 10-20-44

Communication received by The Call this week revealed the startling information that 63 of our army nurses, one from Kansas City, are stationed in England administering to prisoners of war while our boys in France have to be content with the nursing by male ward attendants.

Following is the communication received:

Dear Mr. Franklin:

"I am one of the 63 nurses who arrived in England some time ago. I came over here as a volunteer to give aid to the wounded soldiers

At present we are not nursing our boys and I do not think we are doing anything to aid the war effort. The patients that we are nursing would not be of any service to Americans in general if they were well. We are nursing prisoners of war.

I received a letter recently from one of the medical officers somewhere in France. He had heard that we were nursing prisoners in England while our boys over there are suffering from the lack of attention. He stated that he had only the ward men to do the nursing care. 10-20-44

I might be wrong in writing this letter but I do feel that you and others should know what we are doing over here.

Our captain and chief nurse who came over with us from the States is the assistant to another captain nurse at this hospital. She is doing the type of work that a second lieutenant would do ordinarily. To think that she was chief nurse in the States for two years or more and then comes to England and has to act as assistant to a person with the same rank as hers.

We are really isolated. We 63 are the only colored on the post. We have heard that we are the only group of colored nurses to arrive in this theater of war. The eyes of England are upon us. It is up to us to make our race feel proud of us. How can we make our race feel proud of us when we are taking care of prisoners of war?

It hurts us to think that our boys in France are suffering from lack of care while are are over here serving our enemies."

Sincerely, 10-20-44

A Nurse, Who once Lived in Kansas City.

Admit Our Nurses Treat Nazi PW's

Afro American
Baltimore, Md
12-16-44

WASHINGTON

An admission that colored American nurses sent to the European theatre of operations are assigned to treat German prisoners of war came from Under-Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson at his press conference Thursday.

In what appeared to be an effort to justify the practice, he pointed out, however, that more white than colored nurses are so assigned. "There is no discrimination at all in the jobs to which white and colored nurses are assigned," he declared.

Secrecy Veil Lifted

Only last month the War Department disclaimed knowledge of reports that the entire contingent of sixty-three colored nurses recently sent to England had been given PW camp assignments while American soldiers in France lacked proper attention.

Colored nurses in the European theater of operations were assigned to one station hospital, Mr. Patterson explained, and later that hospital was converted to the exclusive care of German prisoners of war. 12-16-44

"There are others also assigned to that job," he said. "There are more white nurses than colored nurses caring for German prisoners of war."

"Grave" Shortage Admitted

At the same time, Major Gen. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the Army, disclosed that the present shortage of Army nurses is grave, placing the figure of needed additions at 10,000.

Accepting an oil portrait of an Army nurse painted by a soldier in an effort to promote nursing recruiting, General Kirk said that the 40,000 civilian registered nurses in the united States are eligible for service in the Army Nurse Corps may have been "lulled by the false impression that the war in Europe is practically over. 12-16-44

Casualty Lists Cited

"Let me say that if they will examine the casualty lists now being released they will realize that there is a lot of fighting and dying going on in Europe right now," General Kirk stated.

"We are getting calls for more nurses from the European theater of operations far in advance of scheduled shipments."

Registered nurses under 45 years of age should apply to the Surgeon General, United States Army, or to any Red Cross Procurement office.

Nurse Recruiting Hampered by J.C.

AFro-American
12-30-44 Balt., Md

CHICAGO. (ANP)—Compliance with Dixie's code of racial segregation was revealed last week to be a factor that is blocking the War Department's urgent call for 10,000 Army nurses.

The failure of colored nurses to respond whole-heartedly was attributed to the Army's insistence on isolating them in keeping with Southern race tradition.

While there was no reported complaint about discrimination, men in and out of the service are reported to have made bitter objections against their wives, sisters and sweethearts enlisting in the Army Nurse Corps only to face racial segregation along with the general hardships of the battlefield. 12-30-44

Class of 14 Opposed

"While all fourteen graduates of my class are eligible for the Army nurse service, they are not available," said Miss Belva L. Overton of Provident Hospital. "Most of them are not interested in joining the Army Nurse Corps."

Another outstanding nurse recalled frankly the Army's attitude about colored nurses in the early stages of the war. "Colored nures wanted to join the nurse corps then," she said, "but were restricted by quota barriers. We resigned ourselves painfully to these barriers with the feeling that we would not impose our services upon the Army."

Handicap Admitted

Outstanding white nurses in this area are aware of this underlying sentiment, but admit they are in no position to break the Army's racial codes.

"We have been told the same thing by colored recruits," said Mrs. Emily Brannon, white head of the Red Cross nurse recruiting division. "Racial segregation is an additional handicap they must face."

Mrs. Brannon agreed with Miss Katherine M. Holfeltz, white, of the First District Nurses' Association, that the public must be educated to the needs of the general welfare of the nation and should become more war conscious. Both agreed that racial prejudice paid very poor dividends.

To Ask Stimson Why Our Nurses Treating Nazis

Pittsburg—Philadelphia
12-11-44

WASHINGTON —(ANP)— Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson will be invited to explain this week why colored nurses who were sent abroad sometime ago to care for the sick and wounded American soldiers are instead treating German prisoners of war.

He will be called upon also to say whether or not there is not now an existing shortage of army nurses in the European Theatre of Operations, one which might well be met in part by the detailing of American nurses to the care of American soldiers first.

That there are Americans for whom these nurses could care is disclosed in a letter from one of the 63 nurses which were sent abroad after considerable fight on the part of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses.

Women Given High Praise By Commander

Atlanta Daily World
ATLANTA, GA.
12-2-44

Handle Cases Of General Nature In Great Britain

A UNITED STATES ARMY STATION HOSPITAL, ENGLAND—(SNS)—In the oldest hospital in the United Kingdom, commanded by Colonel John C. Clun of Yonkers, New York, the first Negro nurses to arrive in the European Theatre of Operations are now on duty, the War Department reported today.

On September 16, 1944, the 63 nurses reported at the 1700 bed hospital. Captain Mary L. Petty, the chief nurse from Chicago, Illinois, appointed 16 nurses to take charge of wards and assigned others to the operating room. With seven years nursing experience Captain Petty is being trained as surgical supervisor. At present she is serving as assistant chief nurse. 12-2-44

"The hospital has never been staffed by a more efficient group. Those girls are good housekeepers," said Colonel Clum. "We handle cases of general nature, none remaining here longer than eight weeks, and the patients are receiving as good care as that provided by any staff we have ever had," he added.

Other appointments by Captain Petty are: First Lieutenant Susan Harris, Rochester, Pennsylvania, medical supervisor; First Lieutenant Jessie Glenn, Columbia, South Carolina, night supervisor; operating-room nurses, Second Lieutenants Dorcas Taylor, Louise Manley, Zola Long, Thelma Caloway, Alice Ishmael, and Alma Favors; anaesthetist Ridgely; nurse in charge of wards, 2nd Lts. Lucy L. Akers, Anna L. Collins, Gussie A. Daniels, Phloy C. Frierson, Roby Gill, Magnolia L. Harris, A. M. Hibbler, Sarah E. Johnson, Theresa J. James, Roberta Johnson, Lizzie V. Moore, Lydia M. Pinkett, Catherine E. Randle, Estella L. Smith, and Aslan A. Shepard. 12-2-44

War Dep't Uninformed On Negro Nurse Story

New York Amsterdam News
11-18-44 N.Y.N.

WASHINGTON (ANP)—The War Department had no information regarding the report that the 63 Negro nurses recently sent to England had been assigned to the caring of German prisoners. As to the further report that American soldiers in France were not receiving adequate medical care, this too was denied.

Secretary Henry L. Stimson told his press conference last Thursday, in answer to previously submitted questions, that this information was lacking. He gave no indication that the subject might be pursued further, although in another quarter it was inferred that a full report is being sought.

Deny Report

In his denial of a shortage in France the secretary said that "according to the information which I got from the medical corps, there is no shortage of nurses on the European front."

On October 11 the War Department put out a release quoting Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the army, as saying that there is a "critical shortage of nurses" in the army. The statement further pointed to the "disappointing response" to the call for 10,000 additional nurses which had already been made.

"Surely there are 10,000 graduate, registered nurses who are willing to join the army to help out in this emergency," Gen. Kirk said at the time.

The whole discussion has been provoked by a letter to the Kansas City Call last month written by one of the nurses in the group. Since then, however, an unquestioned

War Dep't Offers Denial

'No Knowledge' Of Negro Nurses Caring For Nazis

Pittsburgh Courier
11-18-44

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—The War Department had no information regarding the report that the 63 Negro nurses recently sent to England had been assigned to the caring of German prisoners. As to the further report that American soldiers in France were not receiving adequate, medical care, this too was denied.

Secretary Henry L. Stimson told his press conference last Thursday, in answer to previously submitted questions, that this information was lacking. He gave no indication that the subject might be pursued further, although in another quarter it was inferred that a full report is being sought. In this denial of a shortage in France the secretary said that "according to the information which I got from the medical corps, there is no shortage of nurses on the European front."

On October 11, the War Department put out a release quoting Major General Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the Army, as saying that there is a "critical shortage of nurses" in the Army. The statement further pointed to the "disappointing response" to the call for 10,000 additional nurses which had already been made.

"Surely there are 10,000 graduate, registered nurses who are willing to join the army to help out in this emergency," Gen. Kirk said at the time.

The whole discussion has been provoked by a letter to the Kansas City Call last month written by one of the nurses in the group. Since then, however, an unquestioned source in Washington put the stamp of truth upon the report.

Chicago Defender — Chicago, Ill.

Negro Nurses Tend Nazi War Prisoners In Britain

12-2-44

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND.—Some months have passed since I stood on deck in a warm June sun in an English port with Negro members of a medical unit moving silently but competently carrying stretcher loads of wounded Herrenvolk off jammed LSTs.

Waiting at the dock were ambulances driven by Negro drivers who also handled the Nazi "Master Race" with care.

Now with warm June days gone and wet, damp, cold English winter well underway, wounded, maimed and injured "Supermen" by a magnificent irony, having relied on the ability and gentleness of Negro stretcher bearers, now turn to the wisdom, efficiency and decency of Negro nurses to nurse them back to health.

12-2-44

For here in a small town in England, concealed back of neat row houses, are numerous Nissen-hutted hospital wards where Negro nurses carefully, uncomplainingly and sincerely give their best attention to their enemy—the hated "Master Race."

12-2-44

Upon my visit recently, I was surprised at the extreme caution taken to enshroud the nurses, their charges, and their duties from the eyes of others but having recently arrived from France, where everything inside an American uniform gets first call, I had forgotten certain rules with reference to prisoners of war that are strictly adhered to over here.

Under the rules of the Geneva Convention, prisoners of war "must at all times be humanely treated and protected, particularly against acts of violence, insults and the public curiosity."

Thus, information concerning how the "Supermen" convalesced remains a secret but the presence and sight of these comely brown girls warmed my heart so that I was certain that had I been ill their personal ministering to me would have set me on the road to recovery.

Long for Home

Like all Americans, GIs and officers, these 63 nurses aren't in love with Spamland and they, like their brothers now in France and here in Britain, get no joys out of the bleak winter days with nothing of the cheer that they experienced in the States.

"It's like this," put in pretty Louise Jacobs Manley, New York City and Fort Huachuca, Ariz., where her husband, Captain John Manley of the Army Medical corps, is stationed. "Most of us have served fifteen or more months, ten months in Africa, and then to Fort Huachuca and Camp Livingstone, La., and Fort Bragg, N. C., and and like all soldiers, we miss home.

"You see, some of us are married and well, it's only natural that we women would like to be with our husbands. But I suppose if the boys can take it, we have just got to see this war won and hope that V-day will be soon."

Comment on Nazis

Concerning her "Supermen" patients, Lieutenant Manley bristled at the questioning and stated quietly: "We are professional nurses and just as physicians, we are interested in saving the lives of all human beings."

I was moved and proud at the lieutenant's statement for here was an example of how our women are gallantly doing their bit here in Britain far away from home and fireside. I could not help but think of port units hauling, towing, toting, heaving and doing all the back-breaking labor on docks here in Britain and France, doing their bit to free human beings all over the world.

Captain Mary L. Petty is ranking officer of the group of nurses and comes from Chicago, Ill.

With a group of nurses and the captain, I walked one dark night through blacked out streets to the railway station, where they took their train back to the hospital.

Most From D. C.

Captain Petty has a brother in DuSable High school that she is maintaining in his education. She thinks that "her bit will help to prevent him going to war in a few short years."

10-2-44

Most of the nurses received their training in Freedman's hospital, Washington, D. C., but not all, for here again the old home town of Columbus, Ga., manages to have some alumni. Lieutenant Lizzie Moore graduated from the Columbus City hospital (Annex). Her home is LaGrange, Ga.

The nurses certainly have created some comment in all of the large neighboring towns and I had to admit that these smartly-tailored figures with regal bearing furnished some mightly shapely sights.

At one dance given by an American Red Cross club, Lieutenant L. Aikens, Worcester, Mass., had all the English girls fairly oozing with envy.

And now on Sunday afternoons, the women's lounge at the dormitory of these nurses has many gay young officers who come to pass the evenings away just as other officers came to visit the seventy nurses who were replaced by Captain Petty's group. Of those seventy nurses only one remains, Captain Frances Crouch, of North Carolina, the only non-Negro member of the nursing group.

And "Supermen" gain a new chance at life at the gentle hands of Negro nurses.

Daily Worker 12-29-44

LATEST NEGRO NURSE GRADUATES AT CAMP McCOY — The latest class of Negro nurses to complete their basic training center at Camp McCoy is shown at attention prepared for inspection. Negro nurses trained at McCoy are already serving overseas, station hospital officials revealed. The nurses are as follows: Front row (left to right) Lts. Thelma Gallman, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Rosetta Austin, Savannah, Ga.; Gladys Brown, Camden, N. J.; Rachel Green, Charleston, S. C.; Mary Burton, Petersburg, Va.; Ada Mack, Greenville, S. C.; and Virginia Mobley, Haverhill, Mass. Second row (left to right) Lts. Mary Rogers, Savannah, Ga.; Mildred Stokes, New Orleans, La.; Lydia Wiles, of New York; and Evelyn Decker, of Washingtonville, N.Y. — (ANP)

Our Nurses Now in Oldest U.S. Hospital in England

Afro-American Balto. Md.

12-2-44

A UNITED STATES ARMY STATION HOSPITAL, ENGLAND —In the oldest hospital in the United Kingdom, commanded by Col. John C. Clum of Yonkers, N.Y., the first colored nurses to arrive in the European Theater of Operations are now on duty, the War Department reported today.

On September 16, the sixty-three nurses reported at the 1700 bed hospital. Capt. Mary L. Petty, the chief nurse from Chicago, Ill., appointed 16 nurses to take charge of wards and assigned others to the operating room. With seven years nursing experience, Capt. Petty is being trained as surgical supervisor. At present she is serving as assistant chief nurse.

"The hospital has never been staffed by a more efficient group. These nurses are good housekeepers," said Col. Clum. "We handle cases of general nature, none remaining here longer than eight weeks, and the patients are receiving as good care as that provided by any staff we have ever had," he added.

Other appointments by Capt. Petty are:

First Lt. Susan Harris, Rochester, Pa., medical supervisor; First Lt. Jessie Glenn, Columbia, S.C., night supervisor; operating-room nurses, Second Lts. Dorcas Taylor, Louise Manley, Zola Long, Thelma Calloway, Alice Ishmael, and Alma Favors; Anaesthetist, Second Lt. Marion Ridgely; nurses in charge of wards, Second Lts. Lucy L. Akers, Anna L. Collins, Gussie M. Daniels Phloy C. Frierson, Roby Gill, Magnolia L. Harris, A. M. Hibbler, Sarah E. Johnson, Theresa J. James, Roberta Johnson, Lizzie V. Moore, Lydia M. Pinkett, Catherine E. Randle, Estella L. Smith, and Aslan A. Shepard.

GLAD TO SEE YOU . . . NOW

Amsterdam News—New York, N.Y.

COMMANDS OVERSEAS NURSES

Defender - Chicago, Ill.

8-26-44

CAPTAIN MARY PETTY

First of her race to hold the captain's rank in the U. S. Army Nurse Corps and who is in command of the contingent of Negro nurses who arrived last week at a British port. Capt. Petty, who came to Chicago at an early age, graduated from Wendell Phillips high school in 1934, then went to Freedmen's hospital school of nursing, Washington, D. C.

First Nurses Arrive In Europe Area

Daily World - Atlanta

8-22-44

The first contingent of Negro officers of the Army Nurse Corps to be assigned to the European Theater of Operations has arrived in England for active nursing duty in that theater, the War Department announced Monday.

Consisting of 63 nurses selected from various Army hospitals in the States, the unit came down the gangplank to be greeted by Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, America's ranking Negro officer, as they set foot on United Kingdom soil for the first time.

"During my long association with our Army," General Davis stated, I have seen a number of first. The first women Army nurses were introduced to post hospitals during my period of services. You are the first colored nurses to enter upon a tour of duty in this theater. The American people expect great things of you and I know you are going to live up to all the traditions of your profession and bring honor to the service."

8-22-44

TO RENDER SERVICE

Captain Mary L. Petty, of 5310 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, who heads the contingent, said "the foreign service at the brief ceremony that has come to my contingent has soil to render the greatest possible service to casualties in this theater and to do everything within their power to improve race relations."

A shy and unassuming young woman, Captain Petty has been an Army nurse for the past four years, serve as chief nurse at Station Hospital No. 1, Fort Huachuca, Arizona, now Army Service Forces Regional Hospital, Section One, where an average of 20,000 men have been in training constantly.

Fifteen members of the unit have had previous foreign duty. The largest percentage received their training at Freedmen's Hospital in Washington, D. C., and a number have been in the nursing profession for 12 years or more.

Second Lieutenant Anna Mae Jackson of Houston, Texas, graduate of Prairie View Hospital, Prairie View, Texas, gave up a job as head nurse of an eye, ear, nose and throat clinic at Houston Army service, because, she remarked, "care of the war sick and wounded seemed to me to be of greater importance at this time."

One team, Second Lieutenant Thelma Calloway of Brooklyn, New York, graduate of Lincoln Hospital in the Bronx, and Second Lieutenant Zola Lang, of Chicago, a Freedmen graduate, have been on identical assignments since joining the Army Nurse Corps two years ago. Both served in Africa.

8-22-44

Second Lieutenant Theresa V. James of Minneapolis, Minnesota, a graduate of the School of Nursing at the University of Minnesota, class of 1933, former pediatrics supervisor at the Homer G. Phillips Hospital at St. Louis, Missouri, joined the ANC three years ago and has been in administrative work.

The new unit of nurses will receive immediate assignment to active duty from Major General Paul R. Hawley, Chief Surgeon of the European Theater of Operations.

Colonel Ida W. Danielson, Chief Nurse of the theater. In addition to those named above, the roster, includes the following:

ALABAMA: Marion—2d Lieut. Sarah F. Thomas; Salem—2d Lieut. Alma H. Favors; Atlanta—2d Lieut. Alice C. Simpsons; Cordele—2d Lieut. Doretha Wadley; Lieut. Lizzie V. Moore; Orange—2d Lieut. M. L. Alkens; Macon—2d. Lieut. Magnolia L. Toccoa—2d. Lieut. F. A. Harris; Valdosta—2d. Lieut. Daniels.

NORTH CAROLINA: Charlotte Lieut. Aslan A. Shepard; Palestine Lieut. Hallie M Brown; Gas-2d Lieut. Lucille L. Scales. Lieut. Rubye E. Col- VIRGINIA: Norfolk—2d. Lieuts. Gwen-Goldie M. Quinerly and Ruth B. Shore—2d. McCoy; Portsmouth—2d. Lieuts. Green Vernice W. Kizer and Anna L. Raeford— Collins; Richmond—2d. Lieut. Julia E. James. TENNESSEE: Knoxville — 2d. Lieut. Lillie L. Emory.

8-22-44

Birmingham—2d. Lieuts. B. M. Harris and Margaret L. Lipscomb; Laura Colquitt.

ARKANSAS: Helena—2d. Lieut. Elizabeth L. Williams.

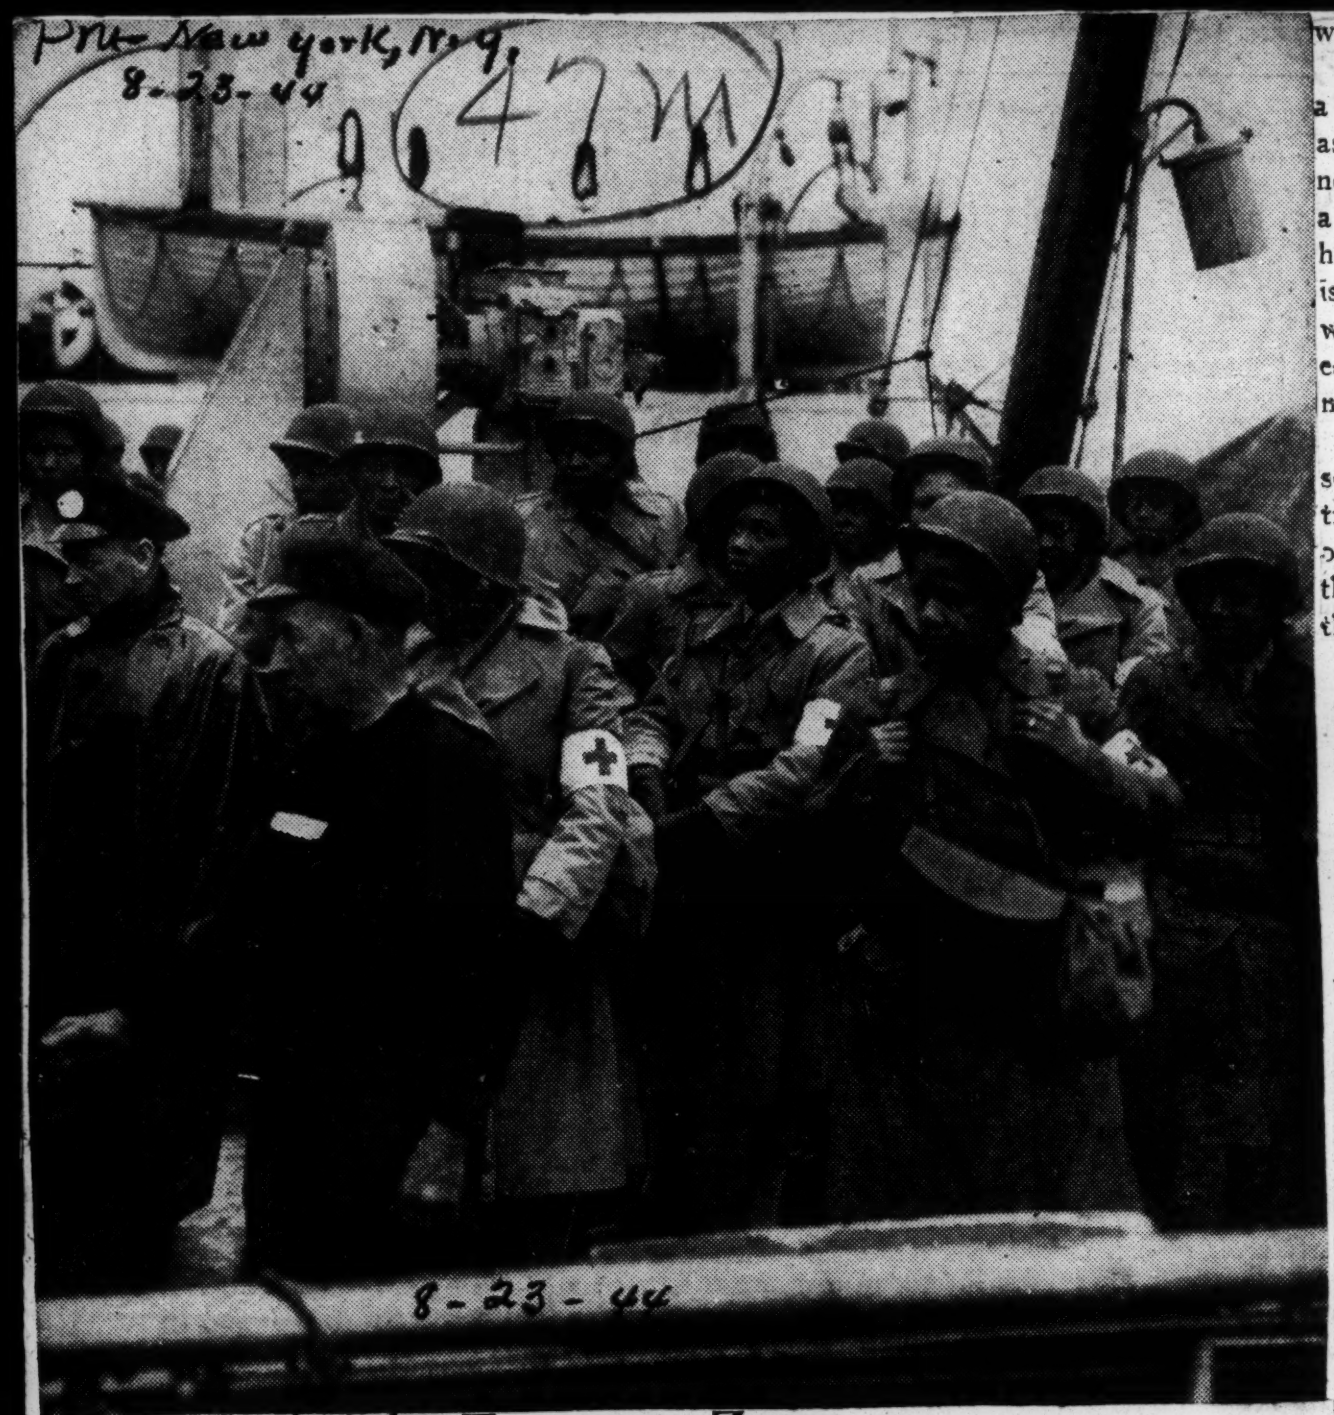
FLORIDA: Tampa—2d Lieut. P. F. Jones.

8-22-44

GEORGIA: Athens—2d Lieut. Lieut. Colonel Ida W. Danielson, Chief Nurse of the theater. In addition to those named above, the roster, includes the following:

ALABAMA: Marion—2d Lieut. Sarah F. Thomas; Salem—2d Lieut. Alma H. Favors; Atlanta—2d Lieut. Jesie M. Glenn; Florence—2d. Lieut. Alice C. Simpsons; Cordele—2d. Lieut. Sammie M. Rice; Greenville—2d Lieut. T. M. Sommers.

TEXAS: Appleby—2d. Lieut. Roberta Johnson; Beaumont—2d Lieut. R. Gill; Cleburne—2d. Lieut. Doris E. Heath; Galveston—1st Lieut. Aslan A. Shepard; Palestine Lieut. Lucille L. Scales. Norfolk—2d. Lieuts. Goldie M. Quinerly and Ruth B. Portsmouth—2d. Lieuts. Vernice W. Kizer and Anna L. Richmond—2d. Lieut. Julia E. James. TENNESSEE: Knoxville — 2d. Lieut. Lillie L. Emory.



PM—New York, N.Y. 8-23-44 947W

8-23-44

Nurses Arrive in European Zone

U. S. Army nurses line the rail of their vessel as it puts into port somewhere in the European Theater of Operations. They are waiting to disembark as the gangplank is lowered. (This picture is a hopeful indication that the Army's recently liberalized policy on accepting Negro nurses is being carried through effectively.) Signal Corps Photo

NEGRO NURSES ABROAD

DISPATCHES from London disclosed that 63 Negro trained nurses, led by Captain Mary Petty, of Chicago, have arrived at a west of Scotland port as the first contingent of Negro nurses to arrive in the European theatre of war. Age — New York, N.Y. 8-26-44

Although there are innumerable Negro doctors who have been serving Negro troops in France since D Day, it was not until the Army recently announced that it had abandoned the quota system for Negro nurses that applications of long standing were honored and enough Negro nurses accepted into the Army Nurse Corps to release these 63 Negro nurses from Fort Huachuca for duty overseas in the European war theatre.

One of the paradoxes — and there are many in connection with Negroes in the Armed Forces — has been the urgent need for nurses in the Army and the advertisement for them in newspapers and over the radio. And yet, despite this urgent need for nurses, there were thousands of Negro nurses denied the opportunity to even make application because there was a quota for them in the Army.

A wounded man, a dying man, doesn't care a tinker's dam who ministers to him, so long as he receives medical attention. There is not a single soldier who would refuse to have a Negro doctor or Negro nurse attend him if his life were hanging in the balance. There is no prejudice on the battle field. We have written time and again that bullets are not earmarked. They kill or wound all who might be in their path. 9-26-44

We hope that now that the first Negro nurses have been sent to the European war theatre, many more will be given the opportunity of being of service to humanity and practice the profession to which they have dedicated their lives.

ARMY LIFTS ITS QUOTA BAN ON RACE NURSES

Defender—Chicago, Ill. 7-15-44

Long Fight Against Color Bar Won By Women's Organizations

By RAMONA LOWE
(Defender New York Bureau)

NEW YORK — The jim crow bars against Negro nurses in the armed forces received a smashing blow this week when an army memo ordered the lifting of the quota that has limited the admittance of Negro nurses into the Army Nurses Corps.

Mrs. Mable Staupers, head of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, who received official word from the War Department that Negro nurses would no longer be restricted hailed the announcement as a victory for the cooperative efforts of her association, Negro organizations like the NAACP, and the Negro press.

"There are now 220 Negro nurses in the Army," Mrs. Staupers said, "but now I am sure the majority of our nurses will offer their services. They have been reticent about applying because they resented the indignity of the quota placed upon us and I don't blame them, but now that that's lifted I know they will respond. 7-15-44

Cooperative Fight

"It is just as important to emphasiz that a significant victory like this is not won single handed. The National Association of Graduate Nurses spearheaded the fight for the end of discrimination against nurses in the Army, but fighting along with us has been the National Nursing Council for War Service, which is made up of all nursing agencies and which has taken a positive stand against jim crow in the Army Nurses Corps and which has made its position known to the War Department. It's cooperative effort that wins a fight like this."

Mrs. Staupers added that the unit of Army nurses originally sent to Liberia has been increased to 70 and is being reactivated for overseas duty. "It is expected that they will leave almost immediately," Mrs. Stupers said. 7-15-44

The Liberian unit was the first contingent of Negro Army nurses. There were 29 headed by First Lt. Susan E. Freeman of Stamford, Conn., who was the second Negro woman to enlist. They were sent to Africa in February, 1944.

"Those women have a good many stories to tell," Mrs. Staupers remarked, "that will be a blow to Hitler and fascism."

Back From South

Mrs. Staupers hardly had a chance to deposit her luggage from a ten-day trip South before reporters began ringing her doorbell Saturday morning to know about the War Department's change of policy.

The National Nursing Council was equally proud of the recognition at last that jim crow in nursing is defeating democracy. Mrs. Elmira B. Wichenden, executive secretary, speaking at the biennial nursing convention in Buffalo last month, said one of the Council's problems was getting "a square deal for the Negro nurse, both in civilian and military service."

Up to the present Negro nurses, with the exception of those who were sent to Liberia, have been confined to the Tuskegee Army Air Field and similar jim crow camps throughout the country.

Navy Ban Kept

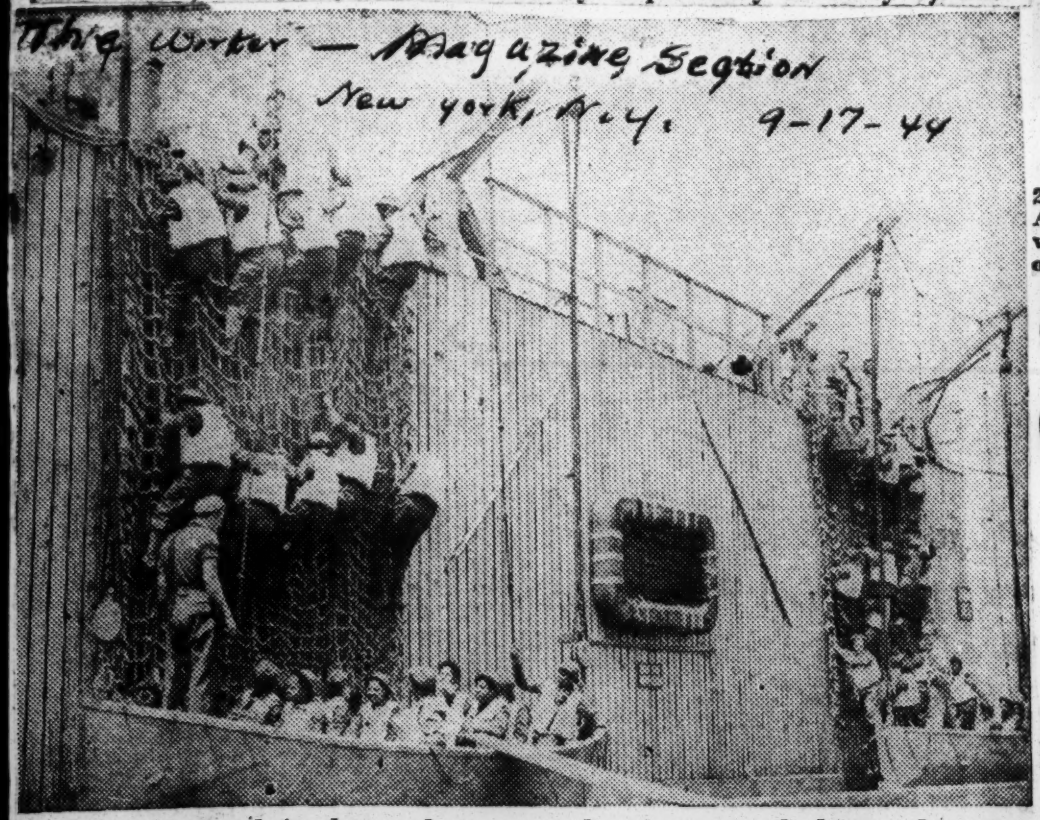
This new action is significant in view of the fact that Negro nurses are being trained together with whites at the larger hospitals in the North. It appears that a real "beachhead" has been driven into the pattern of segregation heretofore practiced by the Army. 7-15-44

It is fair inference that the Army Red Cross showed the Navy Nurse Corps intends to use the Negro nurses to be 1800 nurses behind its quota without regard to color in view of the latest report of the American the new order abolishing Negro quotas, and the announcement that they must be "white." set for July 1. Urgent appeals are being made for Navy nurses, but Negroes will be used both at home and abroad.

The Navy, however, despite its announced need, has not made any move in that direction yet. The last

Negro Worker Magazine Section — New York, N.Y.
9-17-44

Members of the first contingent of Negro officers of the Army Nurse Corps are shown above as they arrived in England. Consisting of 63 nurses, the unit is commanded by Capt. Mary L. Petty of Chicago. Upper left shows the nurses drawing new clothing. In upper right, the nurses go through the ship abandoning drill prior to sailing for England.



ORIENT NEGRO NURSES IN ENGLAND

CONGRESSMAN FRANCES B. BOLTON of the 22d Ohio district, Cleveland, on her recent trip to American Army hospitals in France, spent some time with the Negro Nursing unit which is doing its orientation training at the 168th Station hospital in England. Mrs. Bolton was enthusiastic in her praise of the fortitude, ability and spirit of the colored nurses, the first to be prepared for the battle front. —ANP

Army to Stick to Separation of Negro's Blood and Nurses

Tribune — Washington, D.C.
4-15-44

A pronouncement that he knows no reason why any change should be made in the policy of labeling and separating the blood of Negroes for blood plasma banks and that the Army policy is not to mix colored and white nurses was made last week by Major General N. T. Kirk, Surgeon-General of the Army.

The statement was made during a press conference and the officer was reminded of the findings of scientists that there is no difference in the blood of Negroes and any other persons, to which he said: "There is no difference. I perfectly agree with you. But we might get in worse water than we are in now if we swap around too much."

Nurses? "If We Need Them"

Asked whether the Army plans to use more Negro nurses, and told that only 202 are reported in the service, he answered:

"If we need them." Up to now we have tried to use Negro nurses only where we have Negro troops. It has not been our policy to mix colored and white nurses throughout the Army."

This happened during the week which public announcement was made that Dr. Charles Drew, a Negro, had been awarded the Spingarn Medal by the NAACP for creating the blood plasma technique now saving thousands of lives on the world's battlefields.

CAPTAIN OF NURSES

Argus - St. Louis, Mo.

6-23-44

The outstanding and meritorious work of First Lieutenant Della H. Raney, Chief Nurse at the Tuskegee Army Air Field Station Hospital was rewarded by a recent promotion to the rank of Captain. She is the only Negro Capt. in the Army Nurse Corps assigned to duty with the Army Air Forces.

Capt. Raney, prior to her entrance into the Armed Forces, was operation supervisor at Lincoln Hospital, Durham, N. C. She left Durham in April, 1941, to report for duty as the first Negro in World War II. She was also the first Negro to be appointed Chief Nurse and the first to be promoted to First Lieutenant.

Army Opens Up To Nurses, Minus Quota

Informer - Houston, Texas

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA) — Negro nurses may now enter the Army nurse corps without restrictions of quotas, without ceilings as to numbers, and with opportunity to serve both at home and abroad, the NNPA has learned this week from an authoritative Army source.

The order already has been sent out, and the new arrangement has gone into effect. 7-15-44

Credit for the change in Army policy in this regard is due largely to the Association of Negro Graduate Nurses and to the Negro press, both of which have been fighting since Pearl Harbor for the full and proper utilization of Negro nurses.

This new action is significant in view of the fact that at Camp Livingston Negro nurses are being trained together at the larger hospitals in the North. It appears that a real "beachhead" has been driven into the pattern of segregation heretofore practiced by the Army.

It is fair inference that the Army intends to use the Negro nurses without regard to color in view of what is happening at Livingstone, the New order abolishing Negro quotas, and the announcement that Negroes will be used both at home and abroad.

No More By Navy

The Navy, however, despite its announcement need, has not made any move in the direction yet. The latest report of the American Red Cross showed the Navy Nurse Corps to be 1800 nurses behind its quota set for July 1. Urgent appeals are being made for Navy nurses, but they must be "white." 7-15-44

Nurses must volunteer their services, and Mrs. Mable Staupers, head of the Association of Negro Graduate Nurses, has expressed the hope that there will be no lack of enlistments now that the doors have been pried open. Through her organization she is notifying all local war counsels of this latest move of the War Department.

Physical Therapy Aides

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

10-5-44

Left to right: Second Lieutenants Valjeanne Taylor, Atlanta, Georgia; Lilyanne Plummer, Washington, D. C., and Muriel Joy Davis, Evanston, Illinois, are the first civilian cadets to be graduated from the Ninth Service Command's School for Physical Therapy and Medical Technicians at Fort Huachuca, Arizona. Upon completion of one year of training and practical work, they were commissioned on October 23 as second lieutenants, A. U. S., Medical Department. (Photo by U. S. Army Signal Corps.)

10-5-44

The opening of the doors broadens the opportunities available to cadet nurses, many of whom are training in hospitals throughout the country.

AMERICAN NURSES IN ENGLAND

Age - New York, N. Y.

10-14-44

Recent U. S. War Department, Bureau of Public Relations Personal inspection of Army nurses is conducted regularly by staff officers at the Army Nurse Training Center in England. Above, an inspection is under way by Captain Mary L. Petty, of Chicago, at right, and First Lieutenant Mary F. Brucey, of Clyde, Ohio. Nurses stand at attention in front of their barracks. They are assigned to nursing duties with the U. S. Army's oldest established hospital in the United Kingdom. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

10-14-44

47m-1944

Post War

War Vets to Get $1,000 a Year For Schooling

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
8-5-44

Others Who Want to Buy Homes, Farms or Enter Business Can Get $2,000 Loans

WASHINGTON

Educational and economic benefits, as well as hospitalization, are provided for veterans of World War II in recently enacted Federal legislation known as the Service Men's Readjustment Act of 1944.

The benefits include:

1. Provisions for completing a general education interrupted by call to military service, or for vocational training;
2. Special consideration in obtaining employment, and readjustment payments for periods of unemployment;
3. Federal aid in acquiring a home, farm or business.

Greater Health Care

Established practices with regard to hospitalization are expanded and now include assurances for the provision and training in the use of artificial eyes, legs, arms, etc.

8-5-44

Benefits are available to men and women who have served ninety days in the armed forces between September 16, 1940, and the termination of the war and hold honorable discharges, or were discharged because of service-incurred injury or disability following any period of service.

The act provides a fund of $500,000,000 for construction of additional hospital facilities and authorizes use by, or transfer to, the Veterans' Administration of suitable Army and Navy hospitals after the war.

4 Years' Study Possible

The provision for resumption of interrupted general education is applicable to persons who were not over 25 years of age upon entering the service.

They may begin government-financed training, either in the form of continuation of an interrupted course of study or a refresher course, within two years after discharge, or after the end of the war, whichever is later.

Such training is limited to a maximum total of four years, depending upon length of service, and may not extend beyond seven years after the war is over.

May Select School

The veteran may select his own course of study and decide which of the government-approved institutions he wishes to attend, provided he meets the school's eligibility standards.

8-5-44

The Veterans' Administration will pay tuition, laboratory, library, health and other fees, and provide books, supplies and equipment, up to a maximum total cost of $500 a year; and in addition, will provide a subsistence allowance of $50 a month for veterans without dependents and $75 for those with dependents.

Similar assistance is provided for veterans taking vocational training, already assured in earlier legislation.

Job Search Eased

By way of assuring profitable employment, the act creates a Veterans' Placement Service Board, consisting of the administrator of veterans' affairs as chairman, the director of the National Selective Service System, and the administrator of the Federal Security Agency (or whoever heads the U.S. Employment Service), to cooperate with the USES.

Under this board, a veterans' employment representative will be assigned to each State, and one or more employees of each local USES office shall be given the primary function of carrying out the duties of the employment representative.

8-5-44

These duties will include supervision of the registration of veterans for suitable employment and placement therein, collection of information on available jobs, and promotion of employers' interest in hiring veterans.

$20 a Week for Jobless

Veterans unable to find work, if they report regularly at a public employment office according to regulations, will be eligible to receive a $20-a-week readjustment allowance for a maximum of fifty-two weeks within five years after termination of the war.

Periods of eligibility for such allowances are determined as follows: 24 weeks for the qualifying 90 days of military service and four weeks for each subsequent month of service, the total not to exceed 52 weeks.

These allowances are denied veterans who are unemployed as a result of dismissal for misconduct in the course of employment, voluntarily leaving suitable employment without good cause, refusal to accept suitable employment, or a work stoppage resulting from a labor dispute to which he, or a union to which he belongs, is a party.

8-5-44

Loans for Homes

The act provides for Federal guarantee of up to one-half of a loan for the purchase or construction of a home, the purchase of a farm or farm equipment, or the establishment of a business.

A $2,000 limit is set on the guaranteed portion of such loan and the interest thereon is limited to 4 per cent.

Non-Eligibles

Barred from all benefits under the act are conscientious objectors, deserters and any person whose discharge from the armed services is other than honorable, unless it is established that the person was insane when the offense responsible for his status was committed.

8-5-44

The War and Navy Departments are authorized to set up five-member boards of review which may modify discharges or dismissals except those based on sentences of a general court-martial. Requests for such reviews must be filed within fifteen years.

Cases of officers placed on inactive service for physical disability will be similarly reviewed by boards consisting of five commissioned officers, two of whom must be medical officers.

24th Patrol Adopts Commando Tactics To Raid Deep Inside Japanese Lines

Sergeant From Valdosta Leads Bold Attackers

Daily World

Four Japanese Fall Victims To Boys' Tommyguns

Atlanta, Ga

3-31-44

By FLETCHER MARTIN
War Correspondent for the Atlanta Daily Word and NNPA

BOUGAINVILLE, South Pacific — (By Cable) — Meeting the enemy for the first time in open fire fighting outside the perimeter, the 24th Infantry Patrols killed four, captured ammunition, and escaped in the wake of enemy machine gun fire back to their lines. Using Commando tactics the patrols struck lightening blows often getting close enough to touch the enemy.

One patrol returning after deep penetration in enemy territory spotted four Japs digging machine gun positions. The patrol opened fire with tommy guns and the enemy countered with machine gun fire. Our troops crawled closer to heir positions folowing this skirmish.

GEORGIAN LEADS

Sgt. Frederick Bell, Valdosta, Ga. leading the party, crowled within a few feet of the enemy, hurling grenades. The sergeant fired twice and two Japs fell as the patrol opened with automatic fire. Lightening Jap surprises were returned and the patrol stole back through the underbrush before the Japs could counter-attack again with Machine guns. 3-31-44

The second of our patrols, well outside the perimeter, challenged strange noises heard. The Japs answered with fire, and the patrol took cover, outflanked the enemy and poured in white heated automatic fire, as the Japs fled madly. Cpl. Sam Herron of Valdosta, Ga., standing behind his sub-machine gun, let loose and one Jap clutched as though for the sun and fell shrieking. Pfc. Willie Johnson, of St. Louis, crawling through thick underbrush, nearly bumped into Jap who was also crawling.

Both, o surprised each other, they withdrew without further ado. Third patrol submitted a negative report, having not encountered the enemy. All partols reported Japs speaking fluent English in efforts to lure them into traps. Our line her every letter. They want it to be a big wedding to be put in all the newspapers. At the party Major A. R. Traylor (Los Angeles) and Capt. C. R. Little (Washington, D. C.) Negro officers, gave toasts and ate sphagetti. Everybody felt good. 3-31-44

Somebody hummed "Here comes the bride" Raymond N. Knox beamed. S-Sgt. Emmanuel M. Burns (Shreveport, La.) sent for some more sphagetti. Outside the sun was scorching, but nobody minded much. Inside the wedding was being rehearsed. Raymond N. Knox didn't walk like a groom. Too ful of ice water and spnagetti. Lt H. B. Henderson (New York City) said he wasn't nervous enough.

At this writing some of the men have gone into the upper perimeter. Others are expecting to go home. Some coming, some going, never staying long enough to strike up a real friendship. But no one there will forget the party given for Howard's Miss Virginia Drew and Raymond N. Knox, even if we never meet again.

Enemy Leaves Dead And Dying On Beachhead

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

3-26-44

Infantry Refuses To Quit Muddy Tract Of Jungle

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(War Correspondent of the Atlanta Daily WORLD and NNPA)

BOUGAINVILLE—(By Cable)—Negro troops of the 24th Infantry, and the 54th Artillery, seasoned by preliminary skirmishes have coordinated effectively as the enemy forces have been routed in a vain attempt on beachhead. The infantry refuses to quit the muddy tract of the jungles, thwarting the enemy attack with blinding automatic fire, while the artillery thunders in background. The jungle stinks with a dead, musty odor as Jap bodies litter the boggy, bloody ground. Twice the enemy tried infiltration through our position, but both times they left their dead and dying. One Jaap surged through with his body riddled, but soon died. The enemy attacks in wave after wave but is killed. Entering the second week of action, there is quiet, but the enemy is thought licking his wounds. In the interim our troops have dug deeper into the line awaiting another desperate, though befuddled attack. 3-26-44

Since attack began March 8 there have been reported approximately 3,000 enemy losses, less than 300 losses for us. four of these being Negroes killed in action. Our last death came as a result of an ambush attack by a Jap sniper. Troops scoured the area aided by Fijians of the enemy force. Japs still number in the thousands, and the only handicap is the thickness of the jungle, which makes it difficult to use of grenades. Rains and degrading heat are also liabilities out here. The morale of our troops soars daily, despite the long hours of waiting in total darkness, and their fire and discipline has caused compliment from many.

One general remarked that considering two years in jungles at hard work men have taken to weapons like naturals and the entire base is mighty proud of the work of these warriors. Patrols continue to move in the bosom of the enemy positions not only reconnoitering but engaging the enemy whenever possible. The enemy refuses to accept the challenge and what few shots have been fired have been at Japs darting through bushes. The enemies camouflage themselves with bushes from their waists up and squat. However, shrewd eyes have caught the bushes while running.

News of the 25th Infantry in action has receded through the South Pacific. Major General Lehman, Commandant of the Negro Combat Force, visited the positions. Whether this is an indication that Negro reinforcements will be sent the Chief of Staff here. Gen. Arnold, refuses to be quoted but one official remarked, "never can tell." First blood has been drawn and the 24th Infantry is rocking in saddle with litttle thought of withdrawal. Their muddy tract has been enlarged considerably. The enemy bounced on, and bounced off—those who were not carried off. During one night, 1st Sgt. Arthur Jones of Detroit, was testing a telephone line to the front. A voice on the other end yelled "I have a grenade in my hand," and pulled pin "what you want?" The sergeant yelled, "My God, let it go." Three Japs were caught coming down the stream in a front position. 3-26-44

Periodically, machine guns spout, spraying the areas. Lying behind the pulsating monsters discouraging any advances are: Cpl. Joseph Luke, Atlanta, Ga.; Pvt. James Reynolds, Birmingham, Ala.; Pfc. Dave Yancy, Rossville, Tenn.; Pvt. John Henry, Pittsview, Ala.; and Pvt. Freeman Jones, Oakland, Ala. often the long toms bark and we now that our gunners of the 54th rtillery are called back to duty.

24th Ordered To Hold Hill At All Cost; Leave Perimeter

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

4-12-44

Martin Describes Goriness And Stench of Area

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(War Correspondent of the Atlanta Daily WORLD and NNPA)

BOUGAINVILLE — The indefatigable 24th Infantry veterans of patrol and frontline action ordered beyond the perimeter to occupy and "hold at all cost" X, a strategic outpost overlooking the American line.

No Sits in the Bougainville area and broken bodies line the terrain where troops are locked in bloody bayonet battles and litters the area. The knob has changed hands several times. Casualties are great. A command of the hill gives a command of surrounding valley and an observation outpost for our line.

Leaving bivouac in mechanized convoy, the 24th Infantry troops were arsenal firepower, as they marched from the permieter started the hazardous climb of the hill which stands like a menacing Gibraltar. The troops resembled small ants winding up the steep trail, silent and serious, dragging their guns behind them. Shell torn trees, gaping bomb craters, and broken bodies line the terrain where we reached the top. Barbed wire pill boxes, shattered trees—a symphony of destruction. Far below the tiny sparkled, winding of skulls. Burial details were cleanup. The former were with a 75-millimeter gun, wiped sweat from his grinning face and hell laughed, "I know it's hard but it's fair." 4-12-44

Dusk came fast. There was no water for washing after a day. Following supper blankets were spread on the ground. We bedded down for the night. The first day out of the permieter safely passed the camp crew was silent. Long guards silhouetted against the sky as the moon passes over the crest. Each man knows the shell gulched know must be held at any cost and there men who first unloaded the ships, built the roads, strung wire, then patrolled the enemy territory, fought on the line and defeated the enemy at his own game in the dark jungles are ready to protect with their lives this plot of mud which would not bring a dollar an acre. 4-12-44

To this correspondent the first night is like something from Edgar Allen Poe, yet no enemy, no firing, just shadows and a faint murmur of the Torokina River far below.

Battle-Scared Veterans Hurl Back Jap Attack

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga
4-20-44

Fight Becomes Man-to-Man Affair On Bougainville

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS ON BOUGAINVILLE— (By Courier) — Unites of the 24th infantry with victories afield behind them have [illegible] on to [illegible] greater glory in the campaign here. Lt. Col John Thomas led the battle scarred veterans out of our arsenaled perimeter into the unskirted hell beyond. The stench of unburied Jap soldiers permeated the air as these troops, with faces forward and a song rolling from their lips, started the trek which led upward to Hill X, a knobed jungle outpost overlooking lines.

The decision had been carved with bayonets on Hill X. The enemy had shown himself impresive and capable. Having been beaten down the rugged incline once, with heavy recuperative power he challenged again. The foliage was so thick that the battle became a man to man combat. Using bayonets and grenades the forces fought until power and stark determination overcame enemy fanaticism. The enemy fled leaving his dying and dead.

HOLD HILL X

While the enemy smarts in the valley, units of the indefatiguable 24th were ordered to quit the fighting front, and under command of the American division, mount Hill X and "hold it at all cost."

The long mechanized convoy left the bivouac area with seriousness written across each face. Heavily ladened with fire power, and dragging heavy guns behind them the sweating troops mounted the hill. the sun poured white heat from cottony skies. One soldier bursted out with song. Shell craters dotted boggy terrain. Blistered, blackened ammunition lay scattered. Trees were torn as if some giant hand had twisted and broken them. Here the enemy had chosen to advance and die before ordering retreat.

Atop the hill were barbed wire, craters, pill boxes. In one hole clenched in death were the bodies of one American and two Japanese. Only parts of flesh remained but they told what happened there. They told of a struggle to death and an American guy who won't be going home. 4-20-44

ENEMY LURKS WITH GUNS

Far below the Torokina river flowed lazily. Surrounding the stream are miles of flat land. then suddenly the earth shoots upward to form ungainly mountainous ridges. In the bosom of those ridges the enemy lurks with his guns. his supplies his troops.

If the enemy chooses for a third time to attack he must cross the Torokina and scale the hill from the north, or encircle the mountainous-like peak and attack from the west. Either way Hill X must be climbed and he who holds the crest has the advantage. Perhaps the enemy won't risk the exhaustion and inevitable knockout.

Preparing for any eventuality, men of the 24th infantry are not horsing around on the hill top. The first mission is to dig into the narsh terrain and set up positions. Machine gun, mortar, and heavy weapons emplacements. Along the supplies. They're tired and wet and hungry, but the job must be finished before dark, there are no lights. 4-20-44

Here is home, among the trees, damp ground, and insects of Bougainvilie. There will be a few, shaves, baths, or anything that might exhaust drinking water. Water must be packed uphill and is to valuable to be splashed over the body in bath taking. For that same reason only few clothes will be washed.

OPERATE PATROLS

When the men of the 24th moved into the hill the troops were relieving moved off. With the 'deed' in his hip pocket, Colonel Thomas called his men and explained the seriousness of the situation. From this point they would operate patrols down the hill and keep ful check on what an aroused enemy was doing. Virgil must be kept at all hours, especially during the long nights.

The first night passed without incident. Only the murmuring Torokina and humming insects attacked the stark silence. A gold-plated moon was up early. The silhouetted torn trees resembled halloween postcards. Once and a while we would hear artillery fire in the distance. The clowning 'banana' bears romped the area all night, dancing thru the brush. fighting, like huge cats. Darkness closed in at six thirty making the night a thousand hours long.

Dawn displaced darkness at six, and while the sun peeped over the gulchlined terrain the coffee pots boild. The day's work began early and the hill takes on a home-like atmosphere. The stench is becoming more bearable, and soon it too will pass away. 4-20-44

To the East is enemy holdings. They too are up since smoke curls lazy-like from their emplacements.

Three 24th Warriors Get Bronze Star Awards For Bougainville War Deeds

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.
4-25-44

Waves Smash At Enemy At Mouth Of Mavavia River

Martin Describes Heroic Action In Rescue Of Party

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily WORLD and NNPA)

BOUGAINVILLE — (Via Cable) —Elements of the 24th Infantry, medium tanks and Naval craft lying off-shore combined in smashing the Japanees enemy at the mouth of the Mavavia River. There was stubborn enemy resistance despite heavy fire concentration which turned the skirmish into a bloody fray with the dead of both forces scattered along the beach. Installations were destroyed beyond recognition as the dusk was ripped by flying tracers and the pinkest of smoke grenades.

Negro troops and an unestimated enemy number have faced each other at the mouth of the Mavavia, a bitterly contested narrow stream, once a natural obstacle. The enemy can now be pushed eastward, thusly erlarging and strengthening our buildings in addition to jockeying the enemy in a death saddle as elements of the 93rd Division push them forward. The enemy is aware of these factors and is entrenching himself for suicide.

MEET MACHINEGUN FIRE

Two waves of the 24th Infantry under Lt. Donald Newnan of Ithaca, N. Y., and Sgt. James Johnson, of Albany, Ga., crossed the river, meeting an estimated five machine guns of heavy caliber. The enemy waited until the groups had crossed the stream onto the beach before firing. Our troops hit the ground, returning the fire. However, the enemy held the advantage concealed in the jungles. Three snipers were killed before Newnan, himself pinned down, commanded a withdrawal. Sgt. Johnson organized a group, protecting them while recrossing the river, then was hit four times, but succeeded in stumbling down the beach and into the ocean. With his rifle in hand, while Japanese automatic fire followed ,he swam under the water, the enemy firing each time his head appeared over the surface. He could hear them jabbering, "Die, die!" Johnson swam 300 yards. His first words to Captain George Hunter on being pulled in were: "Sir, I did not leave until Lt. Newnan told me to leave." Hunters' eyes were clouded with tears. He said to Johnson: "You are a real hero," and commended him.

WOUNDED LEFT ON BEACH

4-25-44

Several hundred wounded had been left on the beach plus two known dead and three pinned down, including the commanding officer. Tanks were ordered while Hunter organized an automatic rifle squad to go after the casualties and clean up the enemy positions.

Two LCT's loaded with 30-ton tanks steamed up. Hunter told the group, "We get the men or die." The party included medical litter-bearers and your correspondent, all boarding the crafts. 4-25-44

When the barges hit the Jap beach, all hell broke loose. The tanks shoved off, firing while deck guns blazed away. The enemy answered with machineguns, knee mortars. Our barge was racked by bullets, while the men huddled together like sardines. The tanks rumbled through the area. One pillbox was seen disentegrated. Our troops moved in firing while tracers richocheted through the trees and the tumbled Japs yelled.

tles, worked untiringly in his capacity as wire chief, refusing to haid duties until vital defensive lines of communication installed and functioning perfectly; and T-4 Thomas Dees, of Jackson, Miss.; who, working with minimum of repair parts, called upon to recondition vehicles which received exceptionally hard usage, kept regiment's transportation system functioning smoothly, adapting and improving available material.

following day heavy ar- initiative in improving vehicle parts and maintaining ured fire into the enemy and cleared off efficient and uninterrupted trans-d area and liage. It was one of the portation. Sgt. Roland Melton, Covbattles. Our little family ington, La., who, despite inadeg the next round. nt of the bronze star quate equipment and transporta-re Christ Gaulloy, of Co- tion facilities, personnel shortages
Ga., who showed unusual and terrain and under difficul-

spread on the ground. We bedded down for the night. The first day out of the permieter safely passed the camp crew was silent. Long guards silhouetted against the sky as the moon passes over the crest. Each man knows the shell gulched know must be held at any cost and there men who first unloaded the ships, built the roads, strung wire, then patrolled the enemy territory, fought on the line and defeated the enemy at his own game in the dark jungles are ready to protect with their lives this plot of mud which would not bring a dollar an acre. 4-12-44

To this correspondent the first night is like something from Edgar Allen Poe, yet no enemy, no firing, just shadows and a faint murmur of the Borokina River far below.

Battle-Scared Veterans Hurl Back Jap Attack

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga
4-20-44

Fight Becomes Man-to-Man Affair On Bougainville

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS ON BOUGAINVILLE— (By Courier) — Unites of the 24th infantry with victories afield, behind them have ...ched on to ... greater glory in the campaign here. Lt. Col John Thomas led the battle scarred veterans out of our arsenaled perimeter into the unskirted hell beyond. The stench of unburied Jap soldiers permeated the air as these troops, with faces forward and a song rolling from their lips, started the trek which led upward to Hill X, a knobed jungle outpost overlooking lines.

The decision had been carved with bayonets on Hill X. The enemy had shown himself impresive and capable. Having been beaten down the rugged incline once, with heavy recuperative power he challenged again. The foliage was so thick that the battle became a man to man combat. Using bayonets and grenades the forces fought until power and stark determination overcame enemy fanaticism. The enemy fled leaving his dying and dead.

HOLD HILL X

While the enemy smarts in the valley, units of the indefatiguable 24th were ordered to quit the fighting front, and under command of the American division, mount Hill X and "hold it at all cost."

The long mechanized convoy left the bivouac area with seriousness written across each face. Heavily ladened with fire power, and dragging heavy guns behind them the sweating troops mounted the hill. the sun poured white heat from cottony skies. One soldier bursted out with song. Shell craters dotted boggy terrain. Blistered, blackened ammunition lay scattered. Trees were torn as if some giant hand had twisted and broken them. Here the enemy had chosen to advance and die before ordering retreat.

Atop the hill were barbed wire, craters, pill boxes. In one hole clenched in death were the bodies of one American and two Japanese. Only parts of flesh remained but they told what happened there. They told of a struggle to death and an American guy who won't be going home. 4-20-44

ENEMY LURKS WITH GUNS

Far below the Torokina river flowed lazily. Surrounding the stream are miles of flat land, then suddenly the earth shoots upward to form ungainly mountainous ridges. In the bosom of those ridges the enemy lurks with his guns, his supplies his troops.

If the enemy chooses for a third time to attack he must cross the Torokina and scale the hill from the north, or encircle the mountainous-like peak and attack from the west. Either way Hill X must be climbed and he who holds the crest has the advantage. Perhaps the enemy won't risk the exhaustion and inevitable knockout.

Preparing for any eventuality, men of the 24th infantry are not horsing around on the hill top. The first mission is to dig into the narsh terrain and set up positions. Machine gun, mortar, and heavy weapons emplacements. Along the supplies. They're tired and wet and hungry, but the job must be finished before dark, there are no lights. 4-20-44

Here is home, among the trees, damp ground, and insects of Bougainville. There will be a few, shaves, baths, or anything that might exhaust drinking water. Water must be packed uphill and is to valuable to be splashed over the body in bath taking. For that same reason only few clothes will be washed.

OPERATE PATROLS

When the men of the 24th moved into the hill the troops were relieving moved off. With the 'deed' in his hip pocket, Colonel Thomas called his men and explained the seriousness of the situation. From this point they would operate patrols down the hill and keep ful check on what an aroused enemy was doing. Virgil must be kept at all hours, especially during the long nights.

The first night passed without incident. Only the murmuring Torokina and humming insects attacked the stark silence. A gold-plated moon was up early. The silhouetted torn trees resembled halloween postcards. Once and a while we would hear artillery fire in the distance. The clowning 'banana' bears romped the area all night, dancing thru the brush, fighting, like huge cats. Darkness closed in at six thirty making the night a thousand hours long.

Dawn displaced darkness at six, and while the sun peeped over the gulchlined terrain the coffee pots boild. The day's work began early and the hill takes on a home-like atmosphere. The stench is becoming more bearable, and soon it too will pass away. 4-20-44

To the East is enemy holdings. They too are up since smoke curls lazy-like from their emplacements.

Three 24th Warriors Get Bronze Star Awards For Bougainville War Deeds

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.
4-25-44

Waves Smash At Enemy At Mouth Of Mavavia River

Martin Describes Heroic Action In Rescue Of Party

By FLETCHER MARTIN
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily WORLD and NNPA)

BOUGAINVILLE — (Via Cable) —Elements of the 24th Infantry, medium tanks and Naval craft lying off-shore combined in smashing the Japanees enemy at the mouth of the Mavavia River. There was stubborn enemy resistance despite heavy fire concentration which turned the skirmish into a bloody fray with the dead of both forces scattered along the beach. Installations were destroyed beyond recognition as the dusk was ripped by flying tracers and the pinkest of smoke grenades.

Negro troops and an unestimated enemy number have faced each other at the mouth of the Mavavia, a bitterly contested narrow stream, once a natural obstacle. The enemy can now be pushed eastward, thus erlarging and strengthening our buildings in addition to jockeying the enemy in a death saddle as elements of the 93rd Division push them forward. The enemy is aware of these factors and is entrenching himself for suicide.

MEET MACHINEGUN FIRE

Two waves of the 24th Infantry under Lt. Donald Newnan of Ithaca, N. Y., and Sgt. James Johnson, of Albany, Ga., crossed the river, meeting an estimated five machine guns of heavy caliber. The enemy waited until the groups had crossed the stream onto the beach before firing. Our troops hit the ground, returning the fire. However, the enemy held the advantage concealed in the jungles. Three snipers were killed before Newnan, himself pinned down, commanded a withdrawal. Sgt. Johnson organized a group, protecting them while recrossing the river, then was hit four times, but succeeded in stumbling down the beach and into the ocean. With his rifle in hand, while Japanese automatic fire followed ,he swam under the water, the enemy firing each time his head appeared over the surface. He could hear them jabbering, "Die, die!" Johnson swam 300 yards. His first words to Captain George Hunter on being pulled in were:

"Sir, I did not leave until Lt. Newnan told me to leave." Hunters' eyes were clouded with tears. He said to Johnson: "You are a real hero," and commended him.

WOUNDED LEFT ON BEACH

4-25-44

Several hundred wounded had been left on the beach plus two known dead and three pinned down, including the commanding officer. Tanks were ordered while Hunter organized an automatic rifle squad to go after the casualties and clean up the enemy positions.

Two LCT's loaded with 30-ton tanks steamed up. Hunter told the group, "We get the men or die." The party included medical litter-bearers and your correspondent, all boarding the crafts. 4-25-44

When the barges hit the Jap beach, all hell broke loose. The tanks shoved off, firing while deck guns blazed away. The enemy answered with machineguns, knee mortars. Our barge was racked by bullets, while the men huddled together like sardines. The tanks rumbled through the area. One pillbox was seen disentegrated. Our troops moved in firing while tracers richocheted through the trees and the tumbled Japs yelled.

...ties, worked untiringly in his capacity as wife chief, refusing to ...hald duties until vital defensive ...lines of communication installed ...and functioning perfectly; and T-...4 Thomas Dees, of Jackson, Miss.; ...who, working with minimum of re-...pair parts, called upon to recon-...dition vehicles which received ex-...ceptionally hard usage, kept regi-...ment's transportation system func-...tioning smoothly, adapting and im-...proving available material.

...following day heavy ar-...initiative in improving ...ing vehicle parts and maintaining ...cured fire into the enemy ...d area and cleared off ...efficient and uninterrupted trans-...foliage. It was one of the ...battles. Our little family ...portation. Sgt. Roland Melton, Cov-...ington, La., who, despite inade-...g the next round.

...nt of the bronze star ...quate equipment and transporta-...ere Christ Guillory, of Co-...tion facilities, personnel shortages ...Ga., who showed unusual and terrific ... ... difficul-

On the following ... raked ... tillery poured ... stronghold ... jungle foliage. ... hardest battle ... is awaiting ...

At Intervals, litter-bearers ... turned. All the Injured were ... aboard with the wounded ... cued, however, two litter-bearers ... dead. Three machineguns were ... killed in the task. One ... lenced by grenades, killing six ... by machinegun fire, his buddy ... the enemy. As night closed in, the ... fused to return without him. He ... tracers resembled sky rockets, the ... was kiled trying to pull the dead ... barrage deafening. Newnan and ... body away.

His party were brought aboard. We lost six men during the day, while the enemy dead numbered 15. Recipient of ... LITTER-BEARERS KILLED ... medal were C... After half an hour the tanks and ... not counting probables from tank ... Columbus, Ga. our sweating, hot-eyed troops re... fire. 4-25-44

24th Runs Into Jap Snipers; 3 Of Enemy Slain

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga.
5-4-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent

(Representing the Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

WITH AMERICAN FORCES IN BOUGAINVILLE—(By Courier)—The second day after occupying a new position southeast of the perimeter, the 24th Infantry ran face to face into its deadly enemy—Japanese snipers. And that night a new threat slipped across the horizon under the cover of darkness and floated near the Negro sector. It proved to be two Japanese barges easing thru the water. The infantry geared for action and letting loose both barrels at the enemy on land, or sea, killed 3 snipers and shelled the barges. The latter limped back beyond the horizon.

Enemy offensive or defensive action, was expected. The colored troops were given what was termed a "hot" sector to make secure. One of the flanks constituted the front. Off the beach to the south lie the field of battle cluttered with pill boxes, inky black lagoons, enemy bodies. In a possible attempt to protect its rear guard as the main body retreated eastward, enemy snipers infested the area.

ROUT ENEMY

In the push eastward American artillery, tanks, and naval guns had routed enemy forces which had for 18 months occupied positions along the beach, in the eastern vicinity of Empress Augusta Bay. Blistering fire power had bludgeoned the area from the Torokina eastward to the leveled native village of Mavavia. In between American forces had taken charge, including elements of the 24th infantry.

Soon enemy rifle fire was discerned, almost in the 24th vivouac area. It was later learned that enemy riflemen had hidden themselves in several towering coconut trees which remained unscathed from artillery barrages. Not only was the enemy provided with temporary protection—hidden by thick cluster of palm leaves — but he fed on the tree as well. Realizing the seriousness of this danger to our patrols as well as sector, heavily armed security forces went into the charred surrounding — a dank 'no man's land' to ferret out the danger. 5-4-44

A short, mustachio-wearing Mississippian Pfc. Bennie Will Cotton spotted a Jap as the enemy cut coconuts from his hiding place. Cotton, whose commanding officer termed him the best scout in the 24th, knelt—as if in prayer — pointed his rifle at the target 75 yards away. His running mate, Sgt. Ferdinand Dejean (New Orleans) watched the former squirrel hunter. Cotton squeezed the trigger slow-like. The rifle barked —the jay tumbled forty feet to the ground, shot near the heart.

Your correspondent remarked to Bennie Will that such shooting was reg'lar Kentucky mountain shooting.

"Might be, sir," Bennie observed, "but we call it Mississippi delta shooting."

JAPS ARE HEARD

Another security patrol had moved southward, was 75 yards from the sector when Japs were heard. The patrol was cautioned, then moved in quietly. Pvt. Herman Martin, of Meridian, Mississippi, got the first shot in. They had crawled within a few yards of the enemy. One was killed, the other, thought wounded, slipped through the jungles.

The same morning Martin killed another enemy soldier, thought to be the one injured. The 26-year-old soldier spotted the enemy as he attempted to hide in a smashed pill box. Martin saw that he was wounded and commanded come out " with your hands high." The Jap came out, and with hands high, but in one he held a grenade. His body was riddled. 5-4-44

The 24th infantry has learned much since that first day of jungle fighting. They now move with ease through jungular terrain, cautionsly yet confident, alert yet not over confident. And above all they maintain excellent fire discipline — all important as a capable enemy silently awaits each noise with grenade poised.

CAPTURE ARTILLERY

Penetrating beyond the lines one patrol drug in an enemy 75 mm. artillery piece, and spotted a 15 centimetre cannon, the latter being howitzer type comparable to our heavy 155 mm. Also found were an ammunition carrier and tractor. The enemy had fled leaving both weapons.

During the night as the moon swung over black jungles, sentry Pvt. Royal Dominick (New Orleans) spotted two log-like objects pulling in. He estimated their distance as 450 yards out and heading toward the area. He warned gun squad leader, Cpl. Sam Herron, Valdosta, Ga., who informed the command post. While watching the objects loom larger, 3 mm. artillery weapons opened up. Sgt. Hubert Baily of Oxford, Ala. said the 37 mm. registered 3 hits. From our vantage point we could see that the barges were not set afire, but limped back toward the horizon. 5-4-44

The night then became quiet again. The waves lashed unceasingly against the beach. Men returned to the holes. Behind us the jungles looked horrid as jaggered tree tops silhouetted against the moon. A bat screeched. Except for walking sentinels, the camp soon slept.

Troops Dream Of Combat While Loading Supplies

Courier-Pittsburg, Pa.
1-22-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN, Representing Combined Negro Press

ADVANCE PACIFIC BASE—(Via Airmail)—Off the sandy shores of a historic South Pacific beach which is prefaced by countless miles of Coral Sea, the crack 24th Infantry is stationed. Neatly tucked in the bosom of jungular terrain, this force, fully equipped, is prepared for any eventuality. Whether they will be flung against the enemy, only the military command knows. In the meantime the pushing of supplies to forward areas is their task.

Twenty-one months have slowly passed since this outfit embarked from California for the South Pacific. Twenty-one months without a letup. Under tropical conditions they soldier on the docks and in supply dumps. Despite this, they remain ready for combat, having in their possession full equipment for a full infantry unit. Time crawls, work is hard, but in the words of Lt. Col. Julian G. Hearne, Jr., commander from Wheeling, W. Va.:

"We feel that what we are doing is essential in this war effort. Our force is one prepared to do anything, whether at the front or behind the lines. Now we are behind the lines handling essential supplies. We are doing, and will continue to do a good job."

SCENE OF BATTLE

The camp is flanked on all sides by towering coconut palms. And on the North are miles of sandy beach. A beautiful site which does not show the wear and tear of battle. Yet only a few months ago here was fought one of the bloodiest of battles.

The climate is hot and sultry. Yet the health of these men is remarkably good. The food is good, and tents are spacious and clean.

Having felt the wage of aerial bombardments, preparedness is the by-word. During one such attack Pfc. Verna C. Neal, of Ruleville, Miss., crawled 250 yards in the face of hurtling death and aided in the evacuation of several wounded. Receiving injuries in this courageous undertaking, Private First Class Neal later received the Legion of Merit award and the Purple Heart.

These seasoned and well disciplined troops still fondle their weapons. An appreciable number of the non-commissioned officers are Regular Army. And the spirit of miiltary courtesy, carried out to the letter, leaves little to be desired. The men are influenced largely by such old Army regulars as F/Sgts. John J. Hansbury, of New Orleans' (20 years); Jacob Harrison, of Columbus, Ga., (26 years); Harry Relf, of Montgomery, Ala., (8 years); Robert Palmer of Phenix City, Ala., (14 years), and S/Sgt. Romalus Lewis, of New Orleans (16 years).

RANKING OFFICERS

Except for the chaplains, Captains Norman G. Long, of Oberlin, Ohio; Theodore H. Brooks. of San-

(Copyright—Reproduction Prohibited)

FORWARD AREA, SOUTH PACIFIC—(By Courier)—For six weeks this correspondent has lived with the colored 24th Infantry. Dispatches have been radioed; and sent by special courier. A partial history of their tenure, their mission as allied troops in the South Pacific. But six weeks, six months, are not long enough to learn and adequately tell the story. The tale of men who have not fought with weapons, but who have valiantly fought and conquered a strange and desolate surrounding.

Six years would be too short to live with men in a total emergency and adequately record their emotions, their wants, their fears —the unseen little cogs inside the wheel. Words too are inadequate to record back strains, the lashing of rain against the face, the

The Story Is Heard In The Song Of Men Who Lived It

Courier-Pittsburgh, Pa.
5-4-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the Journal and Guide and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)

H. Turner, Circleville; Pfc. Kenneth G. Black, Newark, and Pfc. Morris C. Courtman, Coatsville. 1-22-44

TEXAS: 1/Sgt. Joe McCoy, Houston; Pvt. Edward Hargraves, Fort Worth; Pvt. Joe Joshua, San Antonio, and T/4 Lee E. Keeton, Fairfield.

KENTUCKY: Pvt. Clifton C. Gay, of Lexington, and Sgt. Hugh S. Gregory of Greenville.

VIRGINIA: Pfc. Frank Brown, Jr., Norfolk; T/4 Willie Cosby, South Boston, and Pfc. Thomas G. Penn, Martinsville.

MARYLAND sends Baltimore's S/Sgt. Willie Berry, Pfc. Isaac Hall, of Cookesville.

From California hail Pfc. Isaac Williams, Sacramento; S/Sgt. J. G. Morgan, Fresno.

sound and feel of shoes in sloppy mud, the choking at embarkation, the sound of daily bugle calls.

Here, in the combat perimeter, I have heard the true story. Simple voices sang a simple song with the indescribable something that made clear the two-year stay in the Pacific. Maybe it was their lusty voices, yet they were untrained. Their lyrics too wholly lacked a skilled hand. Maybe the way they looked in mud-soiled dungarees. Maybe it was the rhythm characteristic of Negro music. Whatever it was the song bespoke and succeeded where the written word has failed.

THE COMPOSER

The composer, Pfc. Latree Forester (Jacksonville, Fla.) has skin like plush velvet and saucer eyes. As he sang his muscular frame was tense, the veins roped his thick neck. Using the tune of the spiritual "What A Time," Pfc. Forester had the rhythm the Golden Gate Quartet has popularized. Bass voices hummed in the background.

Permission was granted to use the lyrics in this story. They are as follows:

"1942 the old 2-4 began to march, we marched to the station and came to a halt;
The first thing we did was to put down our bags, the Captain and the Colonel inspected our shoes;
The corporal and the privates said
that's bad news—Now what a time.

"We boarded the train and began to ride,
Mother and father standing there
crying,
Lord have mercy on that child of mine, now what a time.

"Now stop let me tell you what a mighty sad day,
When the old 2-4 sailed away,
The old ship rocked from shore to shore,
Privates running from door to door
Crying Lord have mercy, no place to go.

"Late one night about half past nine,
The old 2-4 got trouble in mind
Soldiers walked from door to door
The Blume Fountaine began to blow
The time has come, won't be no more.

"An American soldier was standing at attention,
The old mess boy's name wasn't mentioned,
Out on deck the old boy lit,
Mounted him a gun and took his aim,
Shot a Japanese bomber and six more planes.

"The 4th of May about half past ten,
The Blume Fountaine came cruising in
The old 2-4 began to look around
Barges running from ship to shore
We cried out, 'hit land once more.'

"We went three long days with nothing to eat
But cocoanuts, oranges, and tangerines,
Officers and mess sergeants, trouble in mind
'Soldiers it ain't no fault of mine.'

"We left from Vila one Sunday morning
About the break of day
We were on our way to Undine Bay,
Boy what a time.

"In 1943 the old 2-4 thought she was free
She received an order and began to move,
Got on board about half past nine
The ship went rocking on down the line.

"You know just how the 2-4 felt
Out on sea about a night and a day
Stopped at a place they called Santo
Praying to God it was Francisco.

"Stayed in the harbor about 19 days
Nothing to see but cocoanut trees,
Now the Pollark was a great big ship,
She turned around and began to sail
She stopped at a place didn't look so well
Now let me tell you that was Guadalcanal.

"Let me tell you something and it
aint' no lie,
The time we road the L. C. I.
We moved to ..... near .....
Over there where the Japs got killed.

"Late one night about half-past nine
The Jap bombers began flyin'
They gave the alarm was behind
Everybody knew condition was red
Running in the tent and out of door
Trying to find the old fox hole.

"I can't say when I'm coming home
Sometimes I feel so all alone
I work pretty hard from day till night,
Then a letter comes and I feel all right.
Dark days for me are still ahead
I feel like living, I wish I was dead,
Lord, Lord please help 2-4
And guide her safely home once more."

Arrived Before Victory In New Georgia

24th Infantry Was Ready To Fight Japs

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the Journal and Guide and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)

(Copyright—Reproduction Prohibited)

FORWARD AREA, SOUTH PACIFIC—(By Courier)—One late afternoon in September of 1943 as artillery continually thundered in the . . . . region, a unit of the colored 24th Infantry received word that three stray armed Japanese were headed in their direction. Patrols were dispatched. Dusk found sic troops still stalking. Reaching the jungled edge of a stagnant pool, one soldier felt a hard body slink against his leg. Momentarily startled in the semi darkness, he turned and found himself looking into the "pulsating innards" of a 12-foot crocodile. He followed his first impulse.

When the unit moved up . . . a defense position guarding the airfield. Only one body was found on Sasavele, an infant washed ashore. they had been warned to expect anything.

In the rear the ashes of battle were in evidence. Dead American and enemy soldiers littered the airstrip area where the newly arrived Negro troops were bivouaced. Enemy stragglers cut off from the main body were found, some maimed beyond repair, others mentally helpless, few with fight left.

MARTIN

Tons of rations spoiled on the ground. Flour and uncanned perishables rotted under the lashing of unrelenting rain. To salvage foodstuff and protect it from the inclement weather dumps and shelters were needed. Men were chosen for the important mission—men able to fight as well as work. The 24th infantry moved in with 50 cal. machine guns, mortars, and 37 mm. artillery.

The unit landed on September 5, 1943. Already there were Army service troops, marine port and security units, and few heavy weapons. The 24th moved across the . . . . . lagon, a mile west . . . . . on an alligator shaped coral reef island . . . . . One unit remained. . . . .

For two weeks . . . . decomposed bodies were buried. American dead was handled by the grave registration unit, the 24th buried their share of Japanese. The bivouac areas stenched with the many dead because it had been

CARVED OUT CAMP

With ax and knife men literally and figuratively carved a camp out of the bush, coral, and swamps. Between air raids they chopped down trees, made drainages, built mess halls and command posts, patrolled the area, established armed beach defenses, and unloaded ships. At the end of the first 30 days they had completed the construction of five ration dumps and moved "off the grounds" over 2,000 tons of rations. Further, they were in a posiiton to handle 350 tons of rations every other day.

Today this supply port, under the 24th Infantry, is rated by Army officials fifth in efficiency among Allied military ports in the world. This was gained without the use of heavy lifting equipment. Cranes used to handle heavy ammunition are the only equipment, everything else moves by hand (trucks and barges are used for hauling).

GETS UNIT STAR

At one time during the fight . . . . it was thought that the infantry would become tactical and be used as reinforcement when our offense momentarily bogged, but the enemy was finally beaten back. However the unit has been awarded a star for the New Georgia campaign, having arrived six weeks before the campaign ended.

Commanded by West Pointer, Lt. Col. James B. Wells, veteran of South Pacific battles and recently given his present command, the unit was the first out of the 24th to push into the inner combat perimeter following the Coral Sea battle when the entire regiment was on the brink of attack.

This correspondent was told that during the action . . . Col. Wells commanding a battalion lost a number of men among whom were two officers he was fond of. The bodies were not found. The colonel worried. Weeks later a sweaty Negro noncom gave him two rusted dog (identification) tags. He had heard of the officer's grief and went hunting for the remains of the thought-dead soldiers.

"Thank you so much, you have closed the case," the colonel said gravely.

"You are welcome sir," the soldier replied.

Among those making up the unit are: Sgt. Herbert Roy, Columbus, Ga.; Sgt. Esau Williams, Houma, La.; Sgt. Charlie H. Hayden, Hogansville, Ga.; Sgt. Harold B. Bussey, College Park, Ga.; Sgt. Clifton H. Hawthorne, Atlanta, Ga.; Sgt. Dennis Lee, Bayou Goula, La.; Sgt. Thomas W. Miller, Louisville, Ky.; Sgt. William S. McGhee, Louisville, Ky.; Pfc. Alto L. Miller, Slocomb, Ala.; Pfc. Henry Boyd, Montgomery, Ala.; Pfc. Otis C. Toland, Atlanta, Ga.; Pfc. Davis Croom, Emelle, Ala.; Pvt. Ed Black, Sumner, Ga.; Pvt. Roger H. Moss, Louisville, Ky.; Pvt. Lafayette E. Oliver, Atlanta, Ga.; Pvt. William D. Wilson, Brooklyn.

Cpl. Claude Stevenson, Westwago, La.; Cpl. John L. Wilson, New York City; Cpl. Issac Carson, Demopolis, Ala.; Cpl. Gaston Nash, Pike Road, Ala.; Sgt. Antonine E. Pierce, Columbus, Ga.; Sgt. Tom Mayo Jr., Coosada, Ala.; Sgt. Angus Jones, Savannah, Ga.; Sgt. Willie F. Ryce, Moultrie, Ga.; Cpl. Dewitt Hudson, McNair, Miss.; Cpl. Bernie C. Lyle, Ford, Ky.; Cpl. Richard Clifton, Arnaudville, La.; Sgt. John Parker, Blue Ridge, Ga.; Sgt. Robert S. Patrick, Macon, Ga.; Sgt. Autley Turner, Jacksonville, Fla.; Pfc. Bennie Brewton, Eutaw, Ala.; Elroy Williams, Snow Hill, N. C.

Sgt. Leroy Polite, Savannah, Ga.; Sgt. Samuel Harris, Columbus, Ga.; Sgt. Freddie Keley, Columbus, Ga.; Sgt. Robert Small, Ft. Gaines, Ga.; Pfc. Roosevelt White, Salitpa, Ala.; Pfc. Leadell Boyd, Chicago, Pfc. John A. Pillard, Oakmont, Pa.; Pvt. John Smart, Goodman, Miss.; Pvt. Manuel Constance, Los Angeles; Pvt. B. Williams, Rockville, Conn.; Pvt. Clarence Farrow, Maline, Fla.; Sgt. Evans Roberts, New York City; Pfc. Harry A. White, New York City; Pfc. Willie T. Keyes, Sweeny, Texas; Cpl. Henry C. King, Adairville, Ky.

24TH CITED FOR OUTSTANDING SERVICE RECORD AND THRIFT

Unit Dubbed The "Depositingest" In Forward Area

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga.
3-4-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(War Correspondent of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

FORWARD AREA, SOUTH PACIFIC—(By Courier) — In addition to being selected by an Army magazette for its weekly "Salute" for "outstanding record of service in this area," the 24th Infantry (the unit stationed here) was dubbed by base finance officers as the "depositingest," outfit on the island. The expressive title was foundationed on data showing that these Negro troops bank approximately 50 per cent of Army pay. In addition six out of every ten purchase war bonds monthly in denominations ranging from 25 to 100 dollars.

The high percentage of depositors is a regular "24th trait" but the bond drive was started Dec. 26 of last year. Ending the first month with 60.4 per cent buying, the trend as this dispatch is written indicates that that figure will be topped by February's report.

BIG POLICY CARRIERS

Another item of equal importance is that out of a total of over 800 men, nearly 97 per cent have $10,000 policies. Of the 17 men making up less than the 4 per cent needed for a perfect record, eleven have 5 thousand dollars policies, two have two thousand, and one soldier's policy is valued at 6 thousand dollars. The remaining 3 signed statements that there is no one at home to receive the benefit in the event of death.

The 'save now, spend later' philosophy did not happen by sheer accident. It was only adopted after the soldier was made to realize that a period akin to that which immediately followed the earth-shaking 1929 might dawn following the present conflict. Officers and non-coms daily preach to many men, who had not known a "living, wage" before, the foolhardiness of returning home without funds after years of soldiering in the "best paid" army in the world. Time was taken out each day to teach men individually and make them realize the importance of saving.

And none the less important was the hurtful experience of several men who learned that funds sent home had been squandered by the recipients. One soldier received a letter from "my girl friend" stating that the $1500 (cash) plus allotments he had sent her over a period of time were gone and she was now broke and "will you please send me some money."

Credit has been given Louisian an (Maj.) George Hilliard, executive officer, for the determined and unrelenting drive. Backed by company commanders and non-coms, he has been rugged in his approach, explaining in soldiery terms the vital need of such a procedure. His language, far from drawing room, was such that the soldiers understood. Not coercion but what he described as plain common sense. 3-4-44

As the personnel records were studied one example stood out. A corporal who draws $80.50 monthly out of which he pays 30 dollars in an allotment, $6.70 insurance, $18.75 for a war bond, has on deposit over $250. Another example, a sergeant has saved over $2500 during a period of 21 months. His pay is $97.50 monthly out of which come $28 allotment, $18.75 war bond, and $6.70 insurance.

$6751 IN DEPOSITS

The total monthly payroll for the unit is approximately $13,800 of which, the last report shows $1,139.50 goes for insurance $4,208 in allotments, $1701.25 in war bonds, leaving $6751.75. Of this amount $3305 was placed in soldier deposit. Money orders took one-third of that amount leaving actual balance of less than 2[illegible] per cent of total payroll.

Major Hilliard explained that men in this forward area have little to spend money for. It is the endeavor of the sponsorers of the savings campaign that the unit have less than 15 per cent, the other being in war bonds or soldier deposits. Of course the amount saved will fluctuate, being less when the unit is based where civilization abounds. That point is taken into consideration. 3-4-44

"The soldiers are going to have something. We don't intend to let the fascinations of strange taking rob them of a start after the war is over," the officer said.

After pay day the small orderly starts out with the soldier deposit slips and a bag of money. When the finance officer sees him he knows it's coming from the "depositingest" outfit on the island.

Negro Troops Now Veterans, Get New Task

PM-New York, N.Y.
4-17-44

Take Strategic Hill Where Dead Still Litter Ground

The story of our Negro troops' courage and skill in action hasn't been presented much to the American general public. This dispatch, second in a series, continues the story of the 24th Infantry Battalion and tells how these troops have been fighting in the Solomon Island jungles. The author of the eyewitness stories is war correspondent for the Negro Newspaper Publishers Assn.

By FLETCHER MARTIN

EYE WITNESS

After its initiation into jungle warfare on Mar. 11 and 12, the 24th Infantry Battalion's next assignment was to take and "hold at all cost" Hill X, strategic steeple-like outpost overlooking the American lines beyond the Bougainville perimeter in the northern Solomon Islands.

No site in the Bougainville sector had been as bloody as this lonely knob which had changed hands several times and where the dead still littered the ground.

The 24th left its bivouac in mechanized convoy, reached the base of the hill and began the hazardous climb. The troops looked like small ants winding up the steep trail, silent, serious, dragging their guns behind them.

War's Corpses

Around them were shell-torn trees, gaping bomb craters, war-smashed terrain. As they pulled through the hot, foul-smelling air they could see vultures crawling like flies over the corpses in shattered pillboxes. 4-17-44

We reached the top of the hill in an hour. Far below us the Torokina River sparkled around the hill of skulls. Burial and demolition squads were cleaning up the area, the former bringing in the bodies of Americans who had fallen on the hill.

We were immediately ordered to dig in to be ready for possible enemy attacks from across the river at nightfall. Our artillery barrage showed the direction of the enemy replacements, about two miles away. If the Japs attacked it would have to be uphill, giving us an advantage.

Lookouts Posted

Lookouts were posted in two great trees and maintained 24 hours a day.

After a dinner of cold C rations and hot water brought by natives, we resumed our work. The break for food and cigarettes took the seriousness out of the men and they even laughed.

Dusk came quickly. There was no water for washing, but we had supper and bedded down for the night. It was a quiet, moonless night—no firing, just shadows and the faint sound of the Torokina River far below. 4-17-44

The night seemed like something from Edgar Allen Poe.

(A following story will tell how mass enemy infantry, meeting mass Negro infantry, was completely routed.)

How Negro Troops Did 1st Jungle Combat Job

PM-New York, N.Y.
4-16-44

The story of our Negro troops' courage and skill in action hasn't been presented much to the American general public. This dispatch, first of a series, tells how they have been fighting in the Solomon Island

By FLETCHER MARTIN

On Mar. 11, U. S. Negro troops

Volunteers for Dangerous Mission

Entire Unit

got their first taste of combat in the south Pacific.

Moving from reserve positions into the forward wall of U. S. defenses of a strategic beachhead on Bougainville, in the northern Solomons, the 24th Infantry Battalion engaged the Japanese that night.

The troops, armed with Thompson machine guns and rifles, dug into the thick underbrush in the gap of a gulch flanked on both sides by units of the 37th Division. Enemy attempts to infiltrate through this gap were blocked, our troops refusing to give up a single inch of the boggy, smelly muck.

During the night when the Japanese opened up with mortar fire, four soldiers crept 75 yards through the jungle to rescue a wounded white soldier, carrying him 90 yards to a first aid station.

First Patrol Mission

A Japanese attempt to penetrate during the next night also was beaten off. It was on that night, too, that our troops were given the first mission of patrolling several thousand yards in the front main line. 4-16-44

The mission was explained as dangerous and meant a penetration of possible enemy positions, but not a soldier hesitated. While the men who were left stood by in groups and watched, the patrols marched off as if to the corner drug store. Miles of terrible terrain, infested with Japanese, lay ahead.

The first two patrols returned on schedule, but the third reported an engagement with the enemy. Wading a small creek, one of the patrol's scouts saw the enemy and shouted a warning before he was killed. The warning saved the patrol by giving it a chance to cover up under heavy enemy fire.

Calls for Help

The patrol sent a message back asking for help. Officers at the base immediately ordered an artillery bombardment of the Japanese while a white patrol headed out to reinforce the beleaguered unit.

Chow time, usually boisterous, was a quiet affair as the men at the base waited for news of the unit. Minutes passed like hours while the artillery pounded away. Finally a message came through: Patrols in contact. Your patrol returning to camp.

Dirty, sweating and grinning, the men came back to be greeted with watery eyes and hugs.

Next morning, when officers asked for volunteers to go back, the whole unit stepped forward and asked to be allowed to clean up the area.

Results of action: Deep penetration by three patrols into enemy territory: engaging enemy, killing one; three of our troops killed; one verbal commendation for bravery beyond line of duty.

Those first two days of fighting—first action for the 24th since San Juan Hill, of Spanish-American War fame—after 23 months of tactical position service in the South Pacific, brought out a grim determination in the men. Despite the newness of jungle fighting, they dug in like veterans and have hung tenaciously to their assigned sectors in the face of artillery, mortar and rifle fire.

After an examination following this first engagement, the medical officer said the troops' calm was startling. 4-16-44

I was present with members of the unit when we returned to pick up the man that had been killed in shouting a warning to his comrades. He had managed to get back on shore. Blood was still wet on the ground. That terrible something was written across each face as the men stood with bowed heads while the chaplain read the last rites.

(How the 24th Infantry now a unit of veterans, took a strategic hill will be told in a following story further depicting the fighting qualities of Negro troops in action.)

Shower Of Shells Greets Advance Of Race Outfits

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

No casualties Suffered As Assault Proceeds

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
(Representing the Atlanta Daily World and the NNPA)
(Copyright — Reproduction Prohibited)

4-1-44

ADVANCE BASE, South Pacific —(By Courier) — Two nights ago the enemy in pale-pink counter-attack put one of our batteries (Negro) out momentarily. An ammunition truck driven by Pvt. Augusta K. Brown, of Washington, D. C., was set afire by flying shrapnel. No casualties were suffered as our assault continued on enemy positions lined along the twisting ridge and gulch-lined front.

Baleful orange flashes cut the black atmosphere. Air bursting shells rent the night. By day the American land-based planes hammer the enemy. Bombs are discerned plummeting earthward and setting afire trees and underbrush.

ENGAGE ENEMY

The jungle-veteran colored 54th coast artillery (one unit) operating as field artillery under the immediate command of Maj. Raymond W. Ely of Ashland, Kansas, and general command of Brigadier L M. Kreber first engaged the enemy February 17. Thunderous barrages have been unrelenting. Reconnaissance show supply lines have been ruptured. Beach installations damaged. Bivouac areas turned into mass debris. 4-1-44

Only three casualties have resulted from enemy counters. Using the largest field artillery cannons, one gun was pocketed by Jap shell fire. The previous night flying shrapnel hit T-5 Thomas E. Jackson, Detroit; Pfc. Olenza Bell, Falkland, N. C.; and Pvt. Henry Tucker, of Leavenworth, Kansas. None of the injuries were considered serious. The big gun was back in commission after only a few minutes delay.

RESERVE POSITIONS

As a part of the base defense, Negro infantry troops (24th infantry unit) have taken reserved positions behind the first lines. As supporting second line troops to our main defensive line of divisional strength, they have not come to direct grips with the enemy, but are prepared for the known Jap strategy of infiltration.

Our all-important beachhead, sole possession on Bougainville, looks the size of a silver dime on a paper dollar bill. Facing Empress Augusta bay, it is surrounded on three sides by ragged ridges and Japanese infantry and artillery. In spots we are within rifle range. Already along the line the enemy has been confined mostly to scattering patrol clashes.

The proximity of the enemy to our well guarded and most strategic air strips is appreciated by the American command. But out ability to withstand an enemy offensive is just as apparent. In the event of frontal assault, we are prepared to make it costly.

TAKE POSITIONS

For the first time in South Pacific history American Negro troops, armed to the teeth, have plunged along the jungle trails and taken positions. The area has been reconnoitered and is secured. Our troops know their firing power and the seriousness of their mission. They have also considered the chances of survival. Boyish laughter has fled, now supplanted by serene seriousness.

During this sweating out period the air of professional soldiers has been acquired. For nearly two years these men have not seen a Japanese soldier or heard a rifle fired except on the range. Now fully tactical, their original mission as combat troops can be considered close. They look and talk like a bunch of men ready for any eventuality. Mingling free with whiteinfantry they have felt no race consciousness.

The spirit of "we're all home folks" was shown when our artillery unit received a near hit. A neighboring white unit rushed medics on the scene. An ambulance bounded into the area, but our own doctors had speeded the injured to first aid stations. And the sight of blood did not hamper the speedy fingers of Negro medics, heretofore accustomed to pill-handling during sick call. 4-1-44

SHELL HITS HOSPITALS

War isn't all shooting and being shot at, but an appreciable portion is. This entire beachhead constitutes the front. Our bivouac areas behind the lines are flanked by heavy artillery. The command is a military target. Recently shrapnel tore away an entire ward of the station hospital. Only God Almighty's grace kept the wounded from suffering more wounds. Your correspondent lives six feet under the ground, but he lives. Within 100 yards are several 90 millimetre batteries, noisy bed mates that make the nights so long.

Enemy attacks, no matter how insignificant, are expected. We are on the right flank of Jap bastion Rabaul. Within air fighter distance. To the north on the tip end of Bougainville is enemy-held Buka island whose harbor facilities are capable of holding our largest craft. Once possessed we are within 152 miles of the strongest enemy fort in the South Pacific, New Britain. The enemy is aware. We are aware that he is aware.

Whatever else the moment brings, it has inaugurated into battle one Negro unit, and made fully tactical another. And no matter how nerve shaking the periodical, air shattering day and night barrages, it is comforting to know that Negro gunners are in there pitching. From all indications the enemy has reached into a reserve sack and found heavy artillery also, but one's chances of survival are better on this side of the ridge.

To watch monstrous cannons spitting ugly orange flames into the night, knowing that each salvo in someway means we'll be home sooner is enjoyable and the cannoneers enjoy the thought. Within arm's reach of one of the land giants, directing death and destruction are gun commanders, Sgts. Floyd Dawson, Jr., Kansas City, Mo.; Raymond D. Johnson, Chicago; Earnest J.; Clack, San Antonio, Texas, and William M. Muckelroy, Nacogdoches, Texas.

Several steps from this battery, cotton-eared and undressed to the waist, commanding the gun they love are Sgts. Eldren Hollery, Colerian, N. C.; Jesse J. Jennings, E. Columbia, Texas; Major L. Barron, Malakoff, Texas, and Dwitt Robingson, Gary, Texas. 4-1-44 Attack has started again. Our dive bombers are overhead destroying mercilessly. The artillery usually follows. Darkness, now closing in, will bring respite.

4/5-1944

24th Infantry Called "Depositingest" Unit

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va.

By FLETCHER MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
Representing the Journal and Guide and the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association
(Copyright—Reproduction Prohibited)

FORWARD AREA, SOUTH PACIFIC—(By Courier)—In addition to being selected by an Army magazette for its weekly "Salute" for "outstanding record of service in this area," the 24th Infantry (the unit stationed here) was dubbed by base finance officers as the "depositingest" outfit on the island. The expressive title was foundationed on data showing that these Negro troops bank approximately 50 per cent of Army pay. In addition six out of every 10 purchase war bonds monthly in denominations ranging from 25 to 100 dollars. 3-11-44

The high percentage of depositors is a regular "24th trait" that the bond drive was started Dec. 26 of last year. Ending the first month with 60.4 per cent buying, the trend as this dispatch is written indicates that that figure will be topped by February's report.

Another item of equal importance is that out of a total of over 900 men, nearly 97 per cent have $10,000 policies. Of the 17 men making up less than the four per cent needed for a perfect record, eleven have five thousand dollar policies, two have two thousand, and one soldier's policy is valued at six thousand dollars. The remaining three signed statements that there is no one at home to receive the benefit in the event of death.

"SAVE NOW, SPEND LATER"

The "save now, spend later" philosophy did not happen by sheer accident. It was only adopted after the soldier was made to realize that a period akin to that which immediately followed the earth-shaking 1929 might dawn following the present conflict. 3-11-44

Officers and non-coms daily preach to many men, who had not known a "living wage" before, the foolhardiness of returning home without funds after years of soldiering in the "best paid" army in the world. Time was taken out each day to teach men individually and make them realize the importance of saving.

And none the less important was the hurtful experience of several men who learned that funds sent home had been squandered by the recipients. One soldier received a letter from "my girl friend stating that the $1,500 (cash) plus allotments he had sent her over a period of time were gone and she was now broke and "will you please send me some money."

Credit has been given Louisianian (Maj.) George Hilliard, executive officer, for the determined and unrelenting drive. Backed by company commanders and noncoms, he has been rugged in his approach, explaining in soldiery terms the vital need of such a procedure. His language, far from drawing room, was such that the soldiers understood. Not coercion, but what he described as plain common sense.

As the personnel records were studied one example stood out. A corporal who draws $80.50 monthly out of which he pays 30 dollars in an allotment, $6.70 insurance, 18.75 for a war bond, has on deposit over $250. Another example, a sergeant has saved over $2,500 during a period of 21 months. His pay is $97.50 monthly out of which come $22 allotment, $18.75 war bond, and $6.70 insurance. 3-11-44

$13,800 MONTHLY PAYROLL

The total monthly payroll for the unit is approximately $13,800 of which, the last report shows, $1,139.50 go for insurance, $4.208 in allotments, $1,701.25 in war bonds, leaving $6,751.75. Of this amount $3.305 was placed in soldier deposits. Money orders took one-third of that amount leaving actual balance of less than 20 per cent of total payroll.

Major Hilliard explained that men in this forward area have little to spend money for. It is the endeavor of the sponsors of the savings campaign that the unit have less than 15 per cent, the other being in war bonds or soldier deposits. Of course the amount saved will fluctuate, being less when the unit is based where civilization abounds. That point is taken into consideration.

"The soldiers are going to have something. We don't intend to let the fascinations of chance taking rob them of a start after the war is over," the officer said.

After pay call the mail orderly starts out with the soldier deposit slips and a bag of money. When the finance officer sees him he knows it's coming from the "depositingest" outfit on the island.

24th Infantry

Part Of 24th Is Back In Country

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
8-26-44

CAMP BRECKINRIDGE, Ky.—(ANP)—After 27 months of working and fighting in steaming Pacific jungles, 14 battle-hardened members of the famed 24th Infantry regiment recently returned to the U. S. under the army rotation plan, and have been assigned to the 372nd Infantry regiment at Camp Breckinridge.

The 24th was activated Nov. 1, 1866, and participated in campaigns against the Indians in Texas and Montana. When President Theodore Roosevelt led U. S. troops in Cuba during the Spanish-American war, the 24th was on hand to take part in the Battle of San Juan hill, then was sent to the Philippines. During World War I they served on the Mexican border and were later sent to Ft. Benning, Ga., where they served as a demonstration team for the infantry school until the start of the present war.

In April, 1942, while our forces were still reeling from Pearl Harbor and the Philippines, the 24th was the first U. S. Army unit to land in the New Hebrides islands, where they prepared fortifications and airfields in expectation of a possible Jap landing attempt. The 24th accomplished the amazing feat of completing a heavy bomber strip in 18 days entirely by hand labor, with the exception of the two bulldozers borrowed from a navy construction battalion. It was from this strip that B-17 bombers took off to begin the softening up process on Guadalcanal. Here also a communications section of the 24th laid telephone wire across 60 miles of mountains, with each man carrying an 80 pound drum of wire, in addition to his rifle, a blanket, and enough food for a week. Three weeks were required to do the job.

After 15 months of working as engineers and stevedores unloading ships in the New Hebrides, the regiment moved on to Guadalcanal while enemy resistance was pockets of enemy resistance was still in progress. Later one battalion was sent to Munda to aid in wiping out the last Jap resistance there. 8-26-44

It was on Bougainville island that the 24th got its ,rst taste of real action. The regiment moved into front line positions shortly after American marines had established a beachhead, and it was here that the first stories of bravery began to unfold.

Pfc. I. J. Henderson was with a patrol that made the first crossing of the Torquine river on Bougainville. After the crossing, they were pinned down by enemy fire for eight hours. Finally the patrol was forced to withdraw by swimming across the river under a hail of enemy bullets and mortar fire. Upon reaching the opposite bank, Pfc. Henderson discovered that Japanese soldiers had managed to infiltrate our positions there. Pfc. Henderson killed one of them as he attempted to throw a hand grenade, and a short time later located and killed another in an abandoned pillbox. 8-26-44

Staff Sgt. Harry Allen was a platoon sergeant in charge of a patrol that captured the first Japanese prisoner on Bouganville, and later captured the first Jap 75mm gun to be taken intact since Pearl Harbor. Sgt. Allen was commended for bravery by his regimental commander for his feat of fording the Terquine under heavy enemy fire to recover the body of a fallen comrade. 8-26-44

Cpl. Howard Sharp was in charge of a light machine gun squad that fired throughout the night at Japanese attempting to infiltrate our lines on the south bank of the Torquine. When the sun arose the following morning, Cpl. Sharp's squad counted five dead Japs a scant 25 yards from their positions.

Cpl. Herbert Brown, while leading an infantry squad in support of a tank unit, located and shot a sniper in a tree a few yards ahead of one of the tanks.

Pfc. Ezel Combs spotted a Japanese soldier who dashed out armed with an explosive charge in a suicidal attempt to plant the charge on a U. S. marine tank. Pfc. Combs calmly waited for the Jap to come within range, then killed him with a burst from a tommy gun. 8-26-44

All of these veterans, who wear the newly-designed Combat Infantryman badge, agree that the Jap is a good soldier with a fanatical lust to kill, but all claim he is a poor shot with a rifle, and that his equipment is far inferior to ours. Still, these battle-wise veterans state that they do not foresee an immediate end to the war in the Pacific.

Tells Students Of Cadet Nurse Corps

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.
4-29-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (SNS) —Miss Rita Miller, consultant on Negro nurse education for the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps, is now touring twenty colleges and universities in seven southern and border states to inform Negro women students of the advantages of services in the corps, the Federal Security Agency announced this week.

Miss Miller, chairman of the Division of Nursing at Dillard University, New Orleans, will visit institutions in Georgia, North and South Carolina, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee. The U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps is administered by the U. S. Public Health Service, Federal Security Agency, through its Division of Nurse Education.

"It is vital that college women realize the need for nurses with administrative ability for supervisory and teaching positions," Miss Miller said. "All expense scholarships offered by the corps have opened tremendous opportunities to qualified young women interested in the nursing profession."

Miss Miller reported that great gains have been made in the Negro nursing program through participation in the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps, both for the student nurse and the school of nursing. 4-29-44

In Georgia, Miss Miller will visit Spelman College, Clark College Morris Brown College in Atlanta and Paine College at Augusta; in South Carolina, Claflin College and South Carolina State Agricultural and Mechanical College at Orangeburg and Benedict College and Allen University at Columbia; in North Carolina, Johnson C. Smith University at Charlotte Barber-Scotia Junior College at Concord, Livingstone College at Salisbury, Bennett College and Agricultural and Technical College of North Carolina, at Greensboro, North Carolina College for Negroes at Durham, and Shaw University and St. Augustine's College at Raleigh; in West Virginia, West Virginia State College at Institute; in Ohio, Wilberforce University at Wilberforce; in Kentucky, Kentucky State College for Negroes at Frankfort; and in Tennessee, the Tennessee Agricultural and Industrial State Teachers College at Nashville.

Age N.Y., N.Y. July 22, 1944

65,000 HIGH SCHOOL GIRL GRADUATES NEEDED FOR U.S. CADET NURSE CORPS

NEWS ITEM

"NOW MORE THAN EVER!"

Inducted Freedmen's Nurses

Washington, Tribune

Fifteen States and the District of Columbia were represented among the fifty enrollees in the Cadet Nurses' Unit of Freedmen's Hospital inducted during elaborate ceremonies in Constitutional Hall, Saturday.

Those inducted are:

WASHINGTON—Annie Allen, 1202 P Street, N.W.; Lucy V. Franklin, 1007 Fourth Street, S.E.; Mildred Gaskins, 1331 Eighth Street, N.W.; Ruth Hinton, 2108 Flagler Place, N.W.; Eloise Pleasant, 2217 E Street, N.W.; Odel Starks, 1110 Fairmont Street, N.W.

MARYLAND—Laura Cook, Joyce Gilliam, Vera Reynolds, Henrietta Smith Baltimore.

VIRGINIA—Elizabeth Sanchez, Orange

PENNSYLVANIA — Evelyn Allen, Edith Robinson, Ruth Young, Pittsburgh; Vivian Walker, Rochester; Annie Pugh, McKeesport; Minnie Pettis, Aliquippa; Sarah Parsons, Bryn Mawr Katrina Johnson, Darby; Estelle Howard, Midland; Ruth Anderson, Parnassus; Virginia Brothers, Charlotte Payne, Ardelle Hundley, Philadelphia; Mildred McCoy, Farrell; Willa McClellan, Blairsville.

NEW JERSEY—Muriel Coffee, Pennington; Ella Claiborne, Orange Shirley Coleman, Neptune; Bertha Laster, Trenton; Natalie West, Englewood.

NEW YORK—Olive Benjamin, Maude E. Smith, New York City; Geraldine Vicks, Sparkhill.

OHIO—Roberta Anderson, Bridgeport; Elizabeth Randleman, New London; Jeanne Seabrook, Warren; Harriett Snell, Youngstown.

WEST VIRGINIA—Sylvia Anderson, Henrietta Coles, Algoma; Eva L. Carr, Parkersburg.

ILLINOIS—Mary Yancey, Chicago.

SOUTH CAROLINA—Edna Thompson, Charleston.

GEORGIA—Cora Terrell, Atlanta.

ALABAMA—Mabel Price, Eloise Harly, Birmingham.

5-20-44

5-20-44

ARKANSAS—Harriette Pearson, Pine Bluff.

INDIANA—Georgia Hughes, Rising Sun.

NORTH CAROLINA—Rosa Busbee, Kinston.

MISSISSIPPI—Edith Johnson, Gulfport.

NEGRO NURSES INDUCTED

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON — Fifty Negro nurses from the Freedmen's Hospital's school of nurse training were inducted into the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps Saturday in a ceremony held in Constitution Hall which was sponsored by the hospital association and the U. S. Public Health Services. A total of 750 nurses took the oath of allegiance with Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Services officiating.

5-20-44

Cadets Get D.C. Posts

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md.

Vivian Walker, left, of Rochester, Pa., and Ardelle Hunley of Philadelphia this week became the first senior cadets at Freedmen's Hospital School of Nursing. Beginning January 1, they will do field work with the D.C. Health Department. Eighty-nine cadets are enrolled in the course at Freedmen's. 12-30-44

They Can Give Only Limited Service

AFRO-American Balt., Md. 5-27-44

U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps at Mercy Hospital, Philadelphia includes the above: first row (left to right)—Misses Olivia Cuff, Salem, N.J.; Virginia Hawkins, Harriett Graves, Moorestown, N.J., and Anna Parker, Phoenixville, Pa.; second row (left to right)—Misses Jessie Dantxler, Bridgeton, N.J.; Dorothy Hammond, Wilmington, Del.; Dorothy Baynard, Marcus Hook, Pa., and Dorothy Caldwell, Tyrone, Pa.; third row (left to right)—Misses Vida Beckford, Morton, Pa.; Mary Quarles, Wilmington, Del., and Leonia Wyckoff, East Orange, N.J. Despite their training, bias Army policy prevents them from serving except in segregated units.

U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps

FREEDMEN CADET NURSES PARTICIPATE IN SERVICES

Fifty students from Freedmen's hospital School of Nursing were among the 700 young women officially inducted into the U. S. Cadet Nurses Corps at exercises held in Constitution Hall, May 13. The first photo shows some of the Cadet nurses as they marched to their seats.

In the second picture, Cadet Nurse Jeanne A. Seabrook, of Warren, Ohio, is shown with Congresswoman Frances Bolton, who made the program of Cadet nurses possible.—OWI Photos.

5-27-44

Cadet Nurses Take Part In National Induction Services

Pittsburgh Courier — Pa.

WASHINGTON—Fifty cadet nurses from Freedmen's hospital were among the more than 700 nurses who participated in the national induction services of the U.S. Cadet Nurses Corps at Constitutional Hall, Washington, D. C., Saturday, May 13. The exercises, witnessed by relatives and friends of the nurses who packed the spacious auditorium, were broadcast over a national hookup.

Preceding the radio broadcast, the U. S. Navy Band Symphony Orchestra gave a concert with Lt. Charles Brendler, conducting. With Captain Burgess Meredith, of the Army Air Forces, as master of ceremonies, the broadcast featured a skit by Helen Hayes, dramatic actress, and a solo by Bing Crosby from Hollywood. Brief addresses were made by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Congresswoman Frances P. Bolton of Ohio, who sponsored the bill which created the U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps, and Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the U.S. Public Health Service, who administered the oath. A selection was also rendered by a chorus of the U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps.

Freedmen's Cadet Nurses who participated in the ceremony included Annie Allen, Washington, D. C.; Evelyn Allen, Pittsburgh; Roberta Anderson, Bridgeport, Conn.; Ruth Anderson, Parnassus, Pa.; Sylvia Anderson, Algoma, W. Va.; Olive Benjamin, New York; Virginia Brothers, Philadelphia; Rosa Busbee, Kinston, N. C.; Muriel Caffee, Pennington, N. J.; Eva La Carr, Parkersburg, W. V.; Ella Claiborne, Orange, N. J.; Shirley Coleman, Neptune, N. J.; Henrietta Coles, Algoma, W. Va.; Laura Cook, Baltimore; Lucy V. Franklin, and Mildred Gaskins, Washington.

Also Joyce William, Baltimore; Eloise Hardy, Birmingham, Ala.; Ruth Hinton, Washington; Estelle Howard, Midland, Pa.; Georgia Hughes, Rising Sun, Ind.; Ardelle Hunley, Philadelphia; Edith Johnson, Gulfport, Miss.; Katrina Johnson, Darby, Pa.; Bertha Laster, Trenton, N. J.; Willa McClellen, Blairsville, Pa.; Mildred McCoy, Farrell, Pa.; Sarah Parsons, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Charlotte Payne, Philadelphia; Harriette Pearson, Pine Bluff, Ark.; Minnie Pettis, Aliquippa, Pa.; Eloise Pleasant, Washington, D. C.; Mable Price, Birmingham, Ala.; Annie Pugh, McKeesport, Pa.; Elizabeth Randleman, New London, Conn.; Vera Reynolds, Baltimore; Edith Robinson, Pittsburgh; Elizabeth Sanchez, Orange, Va.; Jeanne Seabrook, Warren, Ohio; Henrietta Smith, Baltimore, Md.; Maude E. Smith, New York, N. Y.; Harriett Snell, Youngstown, Ohio; Odell Starks, Washington; Cora Terrell, Atlanta, Ga.; Edna Thompson, Charleston, S. C.; Geraldine Vicks, Sparkhill, N. Y.; Vivian Walker, Rochester, Pa.; Natalie West, Englewood, N. J.; Mary Yancey, Chicago, Ill., and Ruth Young, Pittsburgh.

Cpl, Kansas City, Mo

FIRST NEGRO WACs TO ENTER AAF SCHOOL OF PHOTOGRAPHY at Lowry Field, Colo., arrived on the field this week. They are (left to right) Pfc. Indialee Branch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Inman Davis of 4350 St. Ferdinand Ave., St. Louis, Mo.; Pvt. Lavonic Browne, daughter of Mrs. Viola R. Browne of 614 East Hendrie St., Detroit, Mich., and Pvt. Mary Jane Beach, formerly of 6343 Rhodes Ave., Chicago, Ill.; Pfc. Branch is the wife of Cpl. Wilks S. Branch with the 5th Army in Italy; her brother is in the Navy, a sister in the WAC, two cousins in the WAC including one who is a lieutenant, two cousins in the army in the South Pacific including one who is a captain. Her father is a veteran of World War I. Pvt. Browne has a brother with the 5th Army in Italy. Pfc. Beach has an uncle with the Signal Corps in Italy and an uncle with the Medical Corps in France. Her husband, Cecil O. Beach is an aviation cadet at Tuskegee, Ala. The Lowry Field School of Photography is one of the highest-ranking technical schools conducted by the Army Air Forces. —Official USAAF Photo by AAF Training Command.

11-17-44

WAC Wins Position, Travelers Aid

New Amsterdam News

A unique army assignment fell to the lot of WAC Ethel Norman stationed at Camp Forrest, Tenn. By army orders she was assigned to the USO Travelers Aid unit in Tullahoma, Tenn., as a caseworker to help this agency serve the traveling civilians and men in uniform crowding into this army area.

Cpl. Norman was a trained social caseworker before she donned a uniform and the army felt that she could best use her previous professional training by assisting in the Tullahoma Travelers Aid unit as a case worker during the maneuver period.

On duty at this office, Cpl. Norman handled many kinds of case work problems of the camp, newcomers and was particularly successful in helping girls visiting the camp area, and in aiding with the grave housing situation. 12-30-44

For her outstanding work Cpl. Norman was recently promoted from the rank of private. Commenting on her contribution to the USO Travelers Aid service Mrs. Viola Perkins, director, said, "We feel that Cpl. Norman proved an excellent case worker in her assignment under our supervision and was a distinct addition to our USO staff meetings in Tullahoma."

Cpl. Norman, who was born in Petersburg, Va., received an AB degree in sociology from Virginia State College in 1939. Prior to joining the army, Cpl. Norman served for a year as caseworker with the Friends' Association for Colored Children in Richmond, Va.

She was sworn into the WAC on Nov. 18, 1943, and called to active duty Jan. 5 at Des Moines, Ia.

Insubordination Charge Follows Refusal To Work

Philadelphia Tribune—Pa

12-30-44

CAMP BRECKINRIDGE, Ky.—Five colored WACs were taken from the detachment center here by white MP's and lodged in the guardhouse at the Camp Hospital, last week, charged with insubordination.

They had been ordered to fix bed springs in a barracks which had been drained and had been declared unfit to work in since there was no heat.

The women, Privates First Class Eleanor Brown and Edith Young; and Privates Davetta Butler, Ruth Sanders and Geneva Pipkin, refused to obey the order given by a lieutenant who immediately reported them to the commander.

Orders were received to place them in the guard house where they are to remain pending further orders.

For three of the women it was the first offense and they feel that since Army regulations were not followed by the lieutenant in giving them the order that they are being made martyrs.

First Air WAC Company Averages Test of 108.5

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

ARMY AIR BASE, SIOUX CITY, Iowa — Parachute riggers, radio operators, clerks, medical technicians, airplane mechanics, photographers—these are but a few of the skilled jobs held by members of the latest Army unit to be added to the personnel at Sioux City Army Air Base, the War Department announced, this week. 5-13-44

These soldiers, coming from all parts of the United States, especially Eastern States, are members of the first colored WAC company in the Army Air Forces, and of the second largest group of WACs in the Second Army Air Force. They have taken over a wide variety of duties quickly and efficiently.

Average Test 108.5

Prepared by the Army for many vital jobs, more than half of the colored WAC company are college-trained women, the average age is 24, and their average on the Army's Classification Test was 108.5. More than one-fourth of the group made over 110, the mark required for officers' training. A large number of the WACs are ex-school teachers or were formerly in government work. 5-13-44

Typical of the young women who have taken over the WAC barracks at the air base is First Lieutenant Elizabeth Hampton, commanding officer of the company, whose home is Los Angeles, Calif. Lieutenant Hampton was a member of the first Officers' Candidate School class to graduate from Fort Des Moines, in 1942.

Washingtonian Is Adjutant

The company adjutant, Lieutenant Blanche L. Scott, 1826 H Street, Northwest, Washington, D.C., received a promotion from second to first lieutenant March 7, several weeks before the company was transferred to Sious City. Lieutenant Scott attended Howard University, Washington, D.C., for three and a half years, and received her gold bars in the first WAC class to be chosen from the ranks, which graduated January 9, 1943. Both lieutenants are former recruiting officers.

First sergeant of the company, is Minnie B. Gay, a graduate of Temple University, whose husband is editor of a Philadelphia weekly newspaper.

Mine Negro Physical Therapy Aides Commissioned; First Trained by Army

Call-Reporter, Tex. 11-17-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz.—The first Army-trained Negro physical therapy aides were commissioned as second lieutenants, Medical Department, at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., upon their graduation October 20, from the Ninth Service Command's School for Physical Therapy and Medical Technicians, the War Department announced today.

Prior to the graduation of the class, made up of six enlisted members of the Women's Army Corps, and three civilian cadets, only three Negro women held commissions in the Army as physical therapy aides.

On October 1, 1943, the first three civilian cadets reported to Fort Huachuca to begin training. After six months of theory, they served at the station hospital as apprentices for another six months. Last January 10, six WACs were added to the first class. They spent six months in classroom study and served a three months' apprenticeship at the Fort's station hospital, during which time their work was closely supervised by Major Phillip T. Johnson of Washington, D. C., who was recognized in civilian life as one of the nation's foremost physio-therapists, and other officers of the Medical Department.

Nine students who were enrolled in the second class at the school will receive four weeks of Army training before reporting for duty at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. They will complete their training at that station.

Colonel Midian O. Bousfield, commandant of the school at Fort Huachuca, points out that physio-therapy is gaining a forward place in the medical world. During the recent spread of polio in the South, it was used with great success. The Army has found the methods used by physio-therapists of great value in restoring to health muscles weakened by lack of exercise. The formerly sworn into the WAC, 20 are Second Lieutenants Muriel B. Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Davis, 1501 Oak St., Chicago, Ill.; Lilyanne Plummer, daughter of Mrs. Rosa G. Plummer, 4 St., N. W., Washington, D. C., and Valjeanne Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, 383 Forrest Ave., N. E., Atlanta, Ga. They are now at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. Second Lieutenants Ida Belle Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Belle Rogers, 595 Polk St., Memphis, Tenn.; Edythe Bingham, daughter of Mrs. Amanda R. Bingham, 206 Jackson St., Talladega, Ala.: Ruth R. Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Jones, Wisconsin, where they will receive four weeks of Army training before reporting for duty at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. 11-17-44

These WACs were commissioned after they had completed a course of training at the Army's School for Physical Therapy and Medical Technicians at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. Left to right: Second Lieutenants Muriel B. Davis, Chicago, Ill.; Lilyanne Plummer, Washington, D. C.; Ida Belle Rogers, Memphis, Tenn.; Edythe Bingham, Talladega, Ala.; Ruth R. Jones, Atlanta, Ga. They will receive four weeks of Army training before reporting for duty at Fort Bragg, North Carolina. 11-17-44

Consideration of this situation was recently requested and we hope favorable action will be taken by theatre commanders." 12-2-44

Defender — Chicago, Ill. 6-3-44

47 WAC

6-3-44

CPL. ELEANOR BRACEY

Popular member of the WAC, who is a water and sewage analyst and goes about her work at the Fort hospital, where she is now stationed. Cpl. Bracey is one of a number of service women helping to keep camp routine running on an even keel at the big Post. She knows her business, say the boys in uniform.

WAC AT FORT HUACHUCA.—At Fort Huachuca, Ariz., T.-5 Betty Joy works in the Adjutant's office as stenographer and special order clerk. Cpl. Joy was born in Cambridge, Mass. She attended the Palmer Memorial Institute and spent two years at Boston business college completing a secretarial course. Formerly employed as typist-clerk with the Army Air Force, Washington D. C., Cpl. Joy joined the WACs in April, 1943, to receive basic training at Fort Devens, Mass. She was assigned to Fort Huachuca in July, 1943. Cpl. Joy recently appeared in "G. I." Rhapsody," the all musical show of the post. —U.S. Signal Corps Photo.

Negative 6-19-44

47m-1944

WACS Don New Uniforms

Daily World - Atlanta, Georgia
8-5-44

Released by U. S. War Department, Bureau of Public Relations

Chic and attractive in their new off-duty uniforms are these two members of the WAC Detachment at Fort Benning, Ga. At left, wearing the new light beige dress, is Cpl. Magdalen Thompson, of New Orleans. Pfc Julia Harris, of Augusta, Ga.,, wears the tropical worsted uniform. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photo.)

Boys In Pacific Want Negro Wacs, Martin Discloses

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
8-5-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN, U. S. War Correspondent
(Representing the Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

GENERAL MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS—(By Courier)—With the arrival of white members of the Women's Army Corps in the Southwest Pacific command, speculation has arisen as to whether Negro members will be sent into the area. Although questioned Army officials refuse to be quoted at this writing, it seems very unlikely that any are scheduled. From work the white members are reported doing it is quite obvious why Negro members are unlikely to be called.

WACs

Several weeks ago WACs arrived somewhere in Australia. Immediately a forward echelon was sent into New Guinea. It was learned that they are now being used in a clerical capacity at air bases, hospitals, base commands, finance offices, supply depots, and other installations where it is feasible to use women to replace men needed in other capacities.

Up to the present time Negro members of the armed services stationed here have seen very little of this type of duty. Very few, if any, have been assigned to base command clerical staffs. And the trend at present does not indicate that this condition will be altered. 8-5-44

Whether the table of organization of any Negro unit is flexible enough to allow the infiltration of women personnel is not known by this reporter. Unless it is, it is very unlikely that Negro WACs will be used. However, this is an opinion based on observation and not in any way official.

The question has arisen. On seeing other WACs, spruced out in regular ODs and parading thru the streets here, our troops asked the question, "Woder if the clean-cuts from Fort Huachuca are coming over?" The question remains unanswered.

DISCONTINUES WAC BAND; A ROTTEN DEAL

Bystander — Des Moines, Iowa
8-5-44

The Bystander has been informed that the Negro WAC band at Fort Des Moines has been deactivated. The only reason given was that it is an economy measure.

Well, that is strange. Certainly, in the army—while the country is at war.

Another vale excuse is that there is no authority for the unit. And yet somebody paid for about twenty-five hundred dollars worth of instruments for the unauthorized unit. Just another joke.

But be that as it may and assuming authorities are telling the truth, why would the whole Negro band be discontinued while the white band is left intact?

The rule has been that Negro WACs could not join the band with white WACs. This, of course, is ridiculous, unfair and constitutes just another of the many acts of discrimination and injustices which are being practiced upon Negro women at Fort Des Moines. It is further proof that contrary to what the commanding officer told a group of citizens some months ago. Negro girls are denied some types of training.

One of the arguments made against maintaining adequate consideration for Negroes is the burdensome expense of operating two institutions. The railroads argued this for their answer to the charge of unequal accommodation in interstate commerce; some states made the same argument when equal educational opportunities were insisted upon for Negroes. In each instance, the United States Supreme Court said the law is that Negroes were entitled to equal accommodations and since the separate facilities were insisted upon, they must be equal. 8-5-44

It is ridiculous to maintain two bands at Fort Des Moines. Since economy measures are sought after, here would be a fine place to begin by consolidating them; here would be some showing of the practice of the democracy for which we are supposed to be fighting.

The Bystander, and we know that this is the attitude of the Negroes of Des Moines, has been disappointed with the WAC situation. Too many officials have been over zealous in carrying out the army policy of segregation and some of the Negro officers themselves have aided and abetted that policy in order to secure promotions. And the fact that it has been impossible for the WACs to enlist sufficient porsennel because of the disappointment felt and broadcasted throughout the country by those who came to Fort Des Moines. is proof of this assertion.

The Negro girls have taken a terrific pounding from some of the officials at the post and those selfish Negro officers who have been willing to sell their race down stream—cheap too—for a chance to stand in with the right people.

Negro WAC Band Is Inactivated

Daily World
8-18-44
Atlanta, Ga.

FT DES MOINES, Ia.—(ANP)—Negroes throughout the nation have been asked to join in protest to President Roosevelt in an effort to have the recently inactivated Negro WAC band re-organized. After nine months of intensive training, followed by numerous appearances in parades and concerts, these 26 young women representing every section of the country and many Negro colleges and universities, are now being scattered into various training groups. 8-18-44

The members of the disbanded WAC band in Des Moines ask that citizens everywhere busy themselves by voicing their protests to the President.

Army Yields

WACs May Keep Disputed Band

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The decision to disband the colored WAC band at the WAC Training center Fort Des Moines, Iowa, has been reversed, it was learned last Saturday.

Colonel Frank U. McCoskrie commanding officer of the WAC Training center, recommended that the band be not disbanded because its benefit to morale outweighed in importance the necessity for the transfer of its personnel to other assignments at this time.

The War Department approved his recommendation and decided to continue the band. It had previously taken the position that the decision to disband the band was in furtherance of the war effort on the ground that the acute need for personnel did not justify the retention of so many Army bands.

FOR THE PAST two weeks, we've been talking about the White House press conference. From time to time as developments justify it, we'll do more of that type of thing. But now, let's "un-cover" some

UN-COVERING WASHINGTON

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
3-18-44

BY HARRY S. McALPIN
WHITE HOUSE CORRESPONDENT For Atlanta Daily World & N.N.P.A.

Without a lot of fanfare or publicity, the WAC has been fully integrated into the Army. It happened officially on March 1. Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, the WAC director, has been promoted to the general staff corps. She will now set the broad general policies for the WAC here and abroad.

Of the approximately 50 WAC

Need WAC On General Staff

officers who were on Col. Hobby's headquarters staff only four have gone along with her to the personnel division of the general staff. No one of those four is a Negro.

3-18-44

But that isn't our point. We'd like to see a Negro officer on the general staff, yes. We aren't even complaining about the assignment that is in prospect for Major Harriet West, one of the two highest ranking Negroes in the Women's Army Corps. We think a Negro should be in such a spot, too.

But since the WAC is being reorganized, and integrated—and since the undemocratic policy of segregation into white and colored units exists despite our fighting a war against the Hitlerian theories of "Aryan supremacy and "divide and conquer"—why can't we have a Negro WAC in charge of the Negro division? 3-18-44

One reason may be the fact that such a person would be equivalent to a division commander, which would rate a rank of full colonel. But is there any law against that?

This person could take over the whole thing—step up the recruiting campaign for Negro WACs, which is now being given no attention by anyone, find assignments for the 30 or more Negro officers languishing at Des Moines with nothing to do, plug for overseas service for Negro WACs, set personnel goals and standards, and help remove a stigma which has attached itself to the corps so for as Negroes are concerned since its inception.

As a political move, it could be surpassed only by eliminating the color line in the American Army—which isn't in the cards just yet.

2 WAC's Get Labor Sentences

Afro-American—Baltimore, Md. 4-1-44

WASHINGTON

Reports that two colored WAC's at Fort Jackson, S.C., had been found guilty of breeches of military discipline and sentenced to terms of imprisonment were confirmed by the War Department on Wednesday.

In one case, Pvt. Dorcas Harris, of Savannah, Ga., was charged with insubordination and using obscene language to a superior officer. She is said to have refused to work in a hospital ward. The complaining witness was a nurse, Lt. Lillian E. Dillard.

Gets 6 Months, Fine

A special court martial found Private Harris guilty. She was sentenced to six months at hard labor and forfeiture of two-third of her pay for a like period.

In the other case, Pvt. Thenetha Harden, of Norfolk, Va., was charged with disobedience to her commanding officer, Lt. Catherine Landry, a colored WAC, who testified against her. 4-1-44

She was tried by a general court martial, found guilty and sentenced to five years at hard labor, followed by a dishonorable discharge from the army. The reviewing authorities reduced her sentence to one year, of which she is to do six months at hard labor.

A WAC Photographer!

The Union—Cincinnati, Ohio

Hampton Institute, Va.—Pvt. Luvenia C. Miller, photographer, who received the B.S. degree at Hampton Institute in 1934, has been assigned to the public relations office of Fort Douglas Army Air Field in Douglas, Ariz. A graduate of the New York Institute of Photography, she was the first colored woman on WAC duty in the photographic department at the WAC training center in Fort Des Moines, Ia. 4-13-44

The first Negro to pass the State Board of Photographers examination in North Carolina, Pvt. Miller is a graduate of Bennett College high school and formerly taught school in Greensboro, N. C.

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

10-6-44

COMMANDER.—

Captain A. Noel Campbell, commanding officer of WAC Detachment No. 2 at Camp Forrest, Tenn., is the winsome member of a service-minded family. Her oldest brother, Capt. T. M. Campbell is assigned to a tank destroyer unit at Camp Hood, Texas; her youngest brother, First Lt. William A. Campbell is with the AAF in Italy; one sister, Virginia C. is a cadet nurse at Lincoln hospital, New York City; and another, Elizabeth, has reported at the University of California for special work in physical therapy. Captain Campbell's father, T. M. Campbell, Sr., a field agent for the Department of Agriculture, is stationed at Tuskegee, Ala., while her mother is hostess at the Booker T. Washington home, national shrine of the great educator.—U. S. Signal Corps photo.

One Out Of 23

Tribune—Philadelphia, Pa. 7-1-44

7-1-44

Lt. Doris Cable, a WAC officer at the Philadelphia Signal Depot, 5000 Wissahickon avenue, is a member of the Army's largest family, having twenty-two living brothers and sisters.

Doris Cable was born in Alabama, the Daughter of a Practicing physician. She completed her elementary education in Indianapolis, Indiana and was graduated from Fisk university, Nashville, Tenn. 7-1-44

Lt. Cable enlisted as a WAC in July, 1942 and was inducted at Port Haines, Columbus, Ohio graduating as a second lieutenant from Officers' Candidate School, Des Moines, Iowa. She attained the rank of a first lieutenant and was assigned to the Philadelphia Signal Depot in April, 1944 as assistant OC of the Post Restaurant.

As can easily be seen, it is difficult for Lt. Cable to check on the activities of her many brothers and sisters. The general picture includes service not only at the front, but on the equality important food production farm front. One brother, Baldwin, is farming in Montgomery, Ala. A sister, Marie, teaches music in Buffalo, New York. Another sister, Vasti, has two boys in the service from Toledo, Ohio. Another sister, Alma, is with the Ohio Red Cross. A brother, George, is a chemical engineer in Los Angeles. A brother, Jefferson, is a tailor in the Quartermaster Corps. She has six brothers in the Army and Navy, three brothers in defense work on the west coast, and six sisters in defense work. 7-1-44

Lt. Cable is married to Dr. Theodore Cable, a dentist and a civilian air patrol pilot.

Her mother is more fortunate than most mother by reason of having a pass to travel on railroads. She spends all of her time traveling from family to family. It takes her a complete year to make a cycle of visits to all of her children.

Not A Toot From WAC Band Since Reorganization

Iowa Bystander—Des Moines, Iowa

Since August, when the War Department ordered the reorganization of the Negro WAC Band No. 2, at Fort Des Moines, Ia., Negro citizens have been waiting for the first public appearance of the Negro women, now known as the 404th army band—but not a public toot has been heard since July when the women played their last engagement in Chicago, at the NAACP War Conference. 11-16-44

Ask any of these women why they are not carrying on—playing concerts playing for war bond drives in and out of Des Moines like they were when they were the Negro WAC Band, No. 2, they will tell you that "few of us have instruments."

Instruments Slow

During the two months that they have been reorganized the Negro band has been receiving on the average of one instrument a week, some of them related. With sixteen more instruments needed for the band, the women are beginning to wonder if the instruments will arrive before the war is over. 11-16-44

These band women are anxious to get busy, hold their band practices and win back their stripes which they lost during the summer when the band was disbanded, they related.

Whatever is holding up their instruments—with quartermasters' depots and music stores filled with instruments—is the question that is puzzling the members of the Negro Army band, No. 404.

In a message to Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, John S. Coleman, president of the Des Moines branch, urged Mr. White to "help make it possible for these girls with talent to do their share." 11-16-44

7m-1944

ACS AT FORT SHERIDAN, ILL.

ORT SHERIDAN, in the northern part of Illi-, is proud of its WAC detachment. Capt. ildred Osby, formerly of Boston, is top ranking ficer of the Negro group. Here we have Pfc. zella Pierce, 1227 E. Seventh street, Columbus, Ga., and Pvt. Rosalie Hassell, 217 West 130th street, New York city, at the right, as they measure and size clean garments for return to WACs in the service.—U. S. Army photo.

WACS

30 Fort Sheridan Wacs Have College Training

Defender-Chicago, Ill.

1-15-44

FORT SHERIDAN, Ill.—Typical of Women's Army Corps field companies that are performing innumerable army tasks is WAC Company B, 4662 Service Unit, here, Col. John T. Rhett, commanding officer. Company B is attached to the Recruit Reception center under the command of Lt. Col. Jefferson C. Campbell. Activated at Fort Custer, Mich., July 1, 1943, this WAC company so capably performed its duties, that when the Recruit Reception center was recently removed to Fort Sheridan, Col. Campbell requested that the WACs under the command of Capt. Mildred Osby also be transferred.

A brief glance at Co. B qualification cards reveals at least one reason why this group is functioning at a high level of efficiency according to Captain Osby. On the basis of Army general classification tests, the company shows more than 25 of 83 members in group two, the rating required of officer candidates.

Supplement this information with the fact that over 30 have college training, varying from one to four years and that only four are not high school graduates and add that most of these WACs have Army technical or administrative training, and it becomes evident why these women are able to perform in a highly satisfactory manner duties that range from driving and servicing trucks to interviewing recruits and completing war bond applications. 1-15-44

Although work assignments cover a wide and diversified range, in many instances a correlation of civilian occupations with Army jobs has been effected, especially at the Recruit Reception center. Thirteen of these WACs had prior experience in civil service jobs. A WPB stenographer became a payroll clerk, a typist in the Treasury department, became a typist interviewer in the insurance section and a tabulating machine operator for the Social Security Board, became a typist at the checking station.

However, in cases where women preferred new work, the WAC has offered them an opportunity to change. Pvt. Laura A. Browne, 122 Rhode Island avenue, N.W., Washington, D. C., a clerk in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, is happy now as a motor transport driver, and T-5 Laura Bullock, 276 E. Fourth avenue, Columbus, Ohio, a former Show Boat ballet dancer, is punching out codes on classification cards of recruits.

At the Recruit Reception Center where innumerable civilians from three states become fledgling soldiers within the space of a few hours, Co. B WACs interview men, operate key punch machines that hammer out the "dog tags" which officially identify the recruit as a member of Uncle Sam's Army, type payrolls, make out bond and insurance applications, type the opening chapters in thousands of service records and in other ways expedite the work of transforming civilians into soldiers.

Ninety-nine per cent of recruits passing through the center take out $10,000 life insurance policies and from 35 percent to 40 percent request bond deductions from their fifty dollar pay, the average deductions being $6.75. Much of this routine work is handled by Co. B WACs. 1-15-44

Brother An Officer

Several Co. B members selected for typicality of job assignment and personality were interviewed to determine background and attitude. Pfc. Mozella C. Pierce, 1227 E. Seventh street, Columbus, Ga., a stock clerk in the warehouse where clothing is reclaimed under the direction of Capt. Jack Marietta, is one of a family of seven, five of whom have served in the present war. Born in Fort Benning, Ga., where her father is a warrant officer with 26 years of Army service behind him.

Pvt. Pierce has a brother James, a first lieutenant; another Manuel, a sergeant on overseas duty, and a foster brother, Manley, injured in overseas duty, then discharged from the army and now serving as a member of the Merchant Marine.

Private Pierce likes her job of sorting and sizing clean reclaimed clothing, and Capt. Marietta likes the idea that every hat, cap, shirt, or blouse salvaged means money saved for Uncle Sam's prosecution of the war in some other part of the globe.

Two young grandmothers are mess sergeant Marie T. Sublett, 208 N. 14th street, Springfield, Ill., with years of social service and community work experience who supervises the preparation of the hearty and attractive meals served Co. B, and Cpl. Bessie Robinson, 670 St. Nicholas avenue, New York City, administrative and technical clerk in company headquarters. Like many other members of the company, Corporal Robinson has relatives in service, her son, Sgt. Harry Yancey serving with the Air Corps in Hawaii and two brothers in the army. 1-15-44

Pvt. Josephine Moody, 818 17th street, Middletown, Ohio, lost her sight when five years old, learned Braille, regained her sight through an operation at 14 and enlisted in the WACs. She has been assigned to the motor pool where she services and drives vehicles up to two tons. In spare time diminutive Pvt. Moody alternates interest in writing and dancing. She has had several poems and one song published. She likes automotive work but hopes that someday her knowledge of Braille will be used in the rehabilitation of soldiers returned from the front.

Proud of her family's record of service is Pvt. Jacqueline Fuller, 135 N. Campbell avenue, Chicago, Ill., whose father, a Navy machinist's mate, was wounded at Guadalcanal, was awarded the purple heart and discharged from service. A sister, Pfc. Winona Clark, is a WAC at Fort Clark, Texas, and two brothers are in service. Pvt. Fuller is a typist in the records section at the Recruit Reception Center.

Innumerable hobbies are listed by individual members ranging through the usual categories of sports but no off-time activity is more popular than the glee club. Organized at Fort Custer by the late Dr. Nathaniel Dett, composer and director, the Co. B glee club has appeared at Detroit, Kalamazoo and Chicago. At present the group is directed by Eugene S. Perry, assistant director of the Waukegan USO.

Capt. Osby emphasizes that the women of her command are not just civilians wearing neat brown tailored suits, but are real soldiers, carrying on a program of physical fitness with scheduled periods of physical training and regular periods of close order drill in addition to eight hours daily of assigned work. Despite full periods of duty, morale is high in Co. B and good humor prevails. 1-15-44

Mail call during the noon meal is the occasion for good-natured ribbing as T-5 Grace B. Simpson, 528 E. 42nd street, Chicago, Ill., mail clerk, calls out nicknames such as "Termite," "Marmola," "Jeep," and "Friendship."

A company day room attractively furnished, a nearby Post theatre, chapel, and service club provide for leisure hours. However, there isn't much time for entertainment outside the post.

As one WAC put it, "We're just too busy, Ma'am. By the time we go to an occasional movie and keep up on our correspondence—why, it's time to go to bed. Those three buglers literally blow us out of bed at six every morning." The three buglers, Pfcs. Elizabeth Miller, 55 Four Corner Rd., Staten Island, N. Y.; Gertrude Lee, 505 Market street, Newark, N. J.; and Pvt. Mary Mayes, 448 W. 153rd street, New York, like their work. In fact, they like it so well that they alternate blowing the calls during the day. If Bugler Miller sounds reveille, Bugler Mayes will blow taps at eleven p.m.

Capt. Mildred Osby, a native of Boston and a graduate of the first WAC officer training school at Fort Des Moines, resided at 6246 South Parkway, Chicago. She has seen duty at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., Fort Custer, Mich., and Fort Devens, Mass., and Washington, D. C. In civilian life she was employed by the Massachusetts State Board of Public Welfare and subsequently by the Social Security Board in Chicago.

Supply officer of Co. B is Second Lt. Connie Sinclair, 6246 South Parkway, Chicago, who holds a B.A. degree from Tillotson college, Austin, Texas. Prior to enlistment in the WAC, she was employed by the Chicago Board of Education and later by the OPA.

Forrest WAC's Not Ward Boys

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Hold Varied Jobs in Mixed Post Hospital

3 OFFICERS IN UNIT

2-26-44

Colonel Says Morals High, Morale Fair

[EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of a series of articles on how colored WAC's live and what they are doing in army posts where they are assigned. The third, to follow next week, will depict life of the woman soldier at Fort McClellan, Ala.] 2-26-44

By LULA JONES GARRETT

CAMP FORREST, Tenn. — Iceived proper ratings because their frankly admit that when I came officers thought ratings above pri- o this camp I expected to find a vate first class would give them far different story from what ap- pears here.

Morals Praised

For instance, the hospital unit at Fort McClellan is a white de- tachment, and also includes WAC's who had been trained who have been trained as motor transport school at mechanics and drivers, but who here are doing the work of nurses aides, 2 here had been placed in hospital posts as ward boys, that despite good educational qualifications they were being forced into menial jobs, that the company command- er was not solicitous of their welfare, and that they had not re-

Two of the things Col. T. L. Farenbaugh, post commander, will tell you are that the morals of WAC Detachment No. 2 are above reproach and that their morale is high.

As far as ratings being frozen, On the first count he is reasonI found that ratings had been frozen throughout the entire

2-26-44

Not in "Ward Boy" Jobs

But their hospital jobs are not ward boys, but run from Fourth Command. It was merely members of WAC Detachment No. 2-26-44 as a hospital unit, g in the hospital, nurses' aides to technicians. This, an unlucky coincidence that the boys. This is be-I found, is a general policy and not order caught the Forrest detach- ment was sent out confined to colored detachments. ment.

All Ratings Frozen

2-26-44

As one WAC put it, "We're just too busy, Ma'am. By the time we go to an occasional movie and keep up on our correspondence—why, it's time to go to bed. Those three buglers literally blow us out of bed at six every morning." The three buglers, Pfcs. Elizabeth Miller, 55 Four Corner Rd., Staten Island, N. Y.; Gertrude Lee, 505 Market street, Newark, N. J.; and Pvt. Mary Mayes, 448 W. 153rd street, New York, like their work. In fact, they like it so well that they alternate blowing the calls during the day. If Bugler Miller sounds reveille, Bugler Mayes will blow taps at eleven p.m.

Capt. Mildred Osby, a native of Boston and a graduate of the first WAC officer training school at Fort Des Moines, resided at 6246 South Parkway, Chicago. She has seen duty at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., Fort Custer, Mich., and Fort Devens, Mass., and Washington, D. C. In civilian life she was employed by the Massachusetts State Board of Public Welfare and subsequently by the Social Security Board in Chicago.

Supply officer of Co. B is Second Lt. Connie Sinclair, 6246 South Parkway, Chicago, who holds a B.A. degree from Tillotson college, Austin, Texas. Prior to enlistment in the WAC, she was employed by the Chicago Board of Education and later by the OPA.

cisely as a girls' school is run. WAC's are strictly chaperoned, carefully checked.

On the second, he isn't so accurate. This, however, doesn't hold only for this post. The Army just hasn't lived up to the glamour the majority of women expected of it.

Or, it may be, as has jokingly been said, that the WAC's have adopted the habit of "grousing" from soldiers. One of the few liberties the men have is that of grumbling; so, say officers, they "grouse" about everything.

Tried by Own Officers

Camp Forrest has been exceptionally free of incident as concerned behavior of colored WAC'c. Possible incidents were nipped in the bud when three were given a hearing for being late for 11 o'clock bed check. They were tried, fined, and confined by their own officers.

The only time a colored WAC has had a hearing before a white officer here, according to the colonel, was when the WAC officer was accuser, witness, and would have been judge. 2-26-44

Had Scrubbed Floors

While Major Edna Moat, white, chief nurse in the hospital where the WAC's serve, admitted that once, during an influenza epidemic, WAC's had scrubbed floors, none were allowed to do any of the work of ward boys, such as scrub, handle bed pans, etc., when I arrived.

I was told that an order which said that WAC's may be assigned to any job their physical ability would allow had been used by Major Moat in the first instance, but that the change had been made when a memo forbidding WAC'c to do such jobs had been issued.

Basis of Complaints

Cause of much complaint among women stems from the failure to understand that the Army, with a few exceptions, does not teach them new trades and professions, but trains them in the Army way of doing what they were prepared to do before they joined the WAC.

Hence a girl with a grammar school education is doomed to disappointment when she expects to be trained to hold a post that calls for a college background or special training.

Nor can a girl who has never handled a car expect to learn enough about driving and mechonics in the short course given to drive a staff car or handle a mail truck.

Recruiters Blamed

Officials blame WAC recruiting officers for painting a too-rosy picture of the organization when women are solicited. 2-26-44

Of the 153 WAC's stationed at Camp Forrest only 5 are college graduates, 27 above high school level, and 90 within high school grades. Sixteen have less than a full grammar school education.

Pfc. Alberta Stampley of New Orleans is serving as receptionist in the out-patient clinic, and Pfc. Sallie Smith of Bluefield, W.Va., as receptionist in the eye, ear, nose and throat clinic. Pvt. Juanita Bradley of Hennessy, Okla., is receptionist in the registrar's office and Pvt. Alberta Sullivan of Asheville, N.C., is a librarian on the post.

Is Lab Technician

Pvt. Catherine Overton of Philadelphia, is a laboratory technician. Pvt. Theresa McDuffie of Orangeburg, S.C., is a dietician, and Pvt. Jean Outlaw of Hyde Park, Mass., is a physio-therapy technician.

Pfc. Marguerite Coles of Oakdale, La., is a graduate of the Louisiana Normal School, has received special training since being at the post and recently replaced the nurse in charge of the operating room of one clinic.

Pvt. Thomasina Wreeves is now studying for a similar post at the Army-Navy Hospital at Hot Springs, Ark.

Work with Colored, White Patients

Incidently, these women work with white physicians and nurses and colored and white patients. There is no segregation in the post hospital. 2-26-44

The WAC detachment here is under command of three officers. Capt. A. Noel Campbell, company commander, a graduate of Tuskegee, is a member of the famous Campbell family, nearly all Army folk. The father, Thomas Campbell, is a government agricultural agent. Mrs. Campbell runs a USO at Tuskegee.

A brother, Capt. Thomas Campbell, is with the medical corps at Camp Hood, Texas, and another brother, 1st Lt. Bill Campbell, is just back from Italy.

A sister, Virginia, is studying at Lincoln Hospital, N.Y.C., and plans to join the nursing corps upon graduation, and the youngest sister, Elizabeth, now at the University of Wisconsin, plans to come into the WAC upon graduation. Incidently, Capt. Campbell is senior WAC officer on the post.

Supply and mess officer is Second Lt. Josephine Brown, wife of George Brown, police officer of N.Y.C. Second Lt. Margaret E. G. Allen, formerly of N.Y.C., is executive officer.

Colored WAC's Recruited for Overseas Service Now

Afro-American — Baltimore, Md.

3-11-44

BULLETIN

WENDOVER FIELD, Utah — Members of the Women's Army Corps are going to have equality with the men. They are being signed up here for overseas service.

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—Thousands of women are needed for the Women's Army Corps. They are needed at once at one army bases.

Citnzens are asked to inform themselves about the helpful work women are doing at airfields and army bases. Their jobs include everything from clerical work to repairing motors and airplanes.

Mrs. Walter Cartwright, 506 Roslyn Place, president of the National WAC Mothers' Association, asked each mothe rin her organization to pledge at least one recruit.

WAC recruits must be between 20 and 50, and have no children under 14. 3-11-44

Ft. Benning WAC Quota Is Filled

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

7-28-44

FT. BENNING, Ga.—(A N P)—First Lt. Corrie S. Sherard, commanding officer of WAC detachment, station complement, Section 2, this week announced that the detachment had been brought up to its full strength with arrival of the latest contingent of WACs in the area.

There are present 145 members of the WAC detachment. They are coming in steadily from Fort Des Moines, Ia., first WAC Training center; and at frequent intervals from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., after receiving advanced training at the large station hospital.

Pfc. Rebecca D. Scarborough, 25, and Pvt. Ida Hicks, 25, were transferred to Fort Benning from Fort Huachuca. Both are scheduled to be assigned to station hospital at technicians, Lt. Sherard stated.

First colored WAC to reach Benning as a dental technician, Pfc. Scarborough came highly recommended for her work. She is a resident of Decatur, Ala., and as a civilian followed the teaching profession. Pfc. Scarborough is also skilled in the operation of the addressgraph and embossig machine. 7-28-44

Pvt. Hicks, daughter of Mrs. Beaula Draper, of Chickasha, Okla., was a music teacher in civilian life. Both she and Pfc. Scarborough were stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill., before going to Fort Huachuca.

CAMP FORREST, Tenn.—(ANP)—The majority of the Wacs of Detachment Number 2 here work in the station hospital in positions varying from medical technicians to receptionists. They do specialized work varying with their individual abilities and backgrounds. 8-4-44

This detachment received initial training in Fort Des Moines where after basic military training, they were given work to prepare them as a hospital unit. It was as such that they were brought to Camp Forrest.

After coming here many of the Wacs received not only "on the job" training, but specialized classes at the Army-Navy hospital at Hot Springs, Ark. The army tries to capatilize on the individual's civilian schooling and background when assigning them to military duties. Thus if a particular army job calls for an individual with a college background, such a person will be utilized. There is not time for the wartime army to train its soldiers for military duties from the 'ground up.'

Deactivate Negro WAC Band At Ft. Des Moines

Daily Worker, Des Moines, Iowa

July 20, 1944

Members of the 26-ipece Negro band of the First WAC Training Center who played their biggest engagement at the NAACP War Conference in Chicago on Sunday, July 16, returned to their post at Fort Des Moines Tuesday morning, July 18, to find deactivation orders awaitng their organization.

The women of the band who have been housed together as a band unit and have devoted all of their training since last August to the study of band music, laid aside their instruments Tuesday and began undergoing a program of reclassification.

Public Relations Officer K. Stull of the First WAC Training Center in an interview Tuesday said that the orders had come from Washington as a part of the nationwide program to reduce expenses at the camps.

The Negro band had never been authorized by Washington but had been operated on the post as an overhead expense, the officer stated. She added that when the Negro band played engagements out-of-town, the group did not go out as a unit but as individuals.

The public relations officer said that no post maintained two bands and that the 400th Army Band (WAC) belonged to the First WAC Training Center.

The 400th Army Band is an all-white band and for months after its organization, Negro citizens of the country made protests in vain to get Negro members of the then WAAC into the band at the post.

In Chicago Sunday the Negro band women received a big ovation when they played in the NAACP parade and program at Washington Park before thousands and then later gave a concert at the International House on the campus of Chicago University, where they were housed.

Protests have been made to Walter White, national secretary of the NAACP, who heard the band play Sunday. He also heard the announcement of the "rumor" that the band would be deactivated, which was made before the thousands of spectators by a NAACP officer Sunday.

The Des Moines branch of the NAACP, the Civil Liberties Union and other groups and individuals have filed protests.

Most WACs At Camp Forrest World - Memphis, Tenn. At Hospital 8-4-44

47m-1944

WACS

WACs Face Problems Of Other Soldiers

Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.

9-30-44

First U. S. Group Admitting Negro Women Still Holds To Elements Of Prejudice

Amsterdam News — New York, N.Y.

9-30-44

By CONSTANCE CURTIS

The best known of the women's services, in which Negro women are admitted, is the Women's Army Corps, which at the beginning of the war was the Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps.

The oldest, as well as the best known of the women's groups, the WACs, during their two years of life, have had an interesting, and at times paradoxical career as far as the treatment of Negro women in the corps is concerned.

The first of the government services to admit Negro women, there was no question of their acceptance from the beginning. Women were enrolled in the Officers Candidate School as well as in the ranks. They were trained along with white members of the corps, and many of them at present hold ranks above that of second lieutenant.

Two Majors

The only Negro women in the country who hold the rank of major are in the WAC, Harriet West and Charity Adams. Both of them were in the first class which graduated from the Army training school at Des Moines, Iowa. Major Adams is at present post property officer for the whole fort, including both white and Negro officers, and Major West is connected with the Adjutant General's office in Washington.

Approximately 25 Negro women hold the rank of captain, in camps and forts throughout the nation, and the first and second lieutenants are numerous.

9-30-44

Within the ranks of the Corps, nearly 10 per cent of all women members are Negroes, though no policy of limitation is set upon their entrance into the service.

Follow Old Pattern

This background for the Corps at its inception spoke well for what the future might hold for the Negro woman serving in the Army. Events since that time however, show much of the regular Army pattern of segregation. In the majority of cases Negro women have been assigned to camps where the majority of the personnel is colored—their jobs seeming to be the replacement of Negro men only.

Up until the present, although thousands of Negro soldiers have been placed in the foreign theaters of war, Negro women in the WAC have not been sent overseas. The policy seems to be based on segregation, since this does not hold for other women who are members of the group. WACS are to be found on war fronts throughout the world while their Negro fellow members serve only within this country.

Following the inception of the corps, its popularity suffered to a large extent because of a bad press. Women seemed reluctant to join, and Negro women especially, who began to realize that prejudice existed there as well as in nearly every other organization within the United States.

9-30-44

Enrollments within the corps have increased however, and many of the Negro women serving there express a desire to continue in the Army when the war is over.

Change In Uniform

One of the minor ways in which a change has been instituted has been in the renovation of the uniforms. At the beginning, the women were dressed in the usual government issue materials which were used for the soldiers' uniforms. Skirts were cut straight, with fine disregard for the average woman's figure. The stiff hat, under which it was difficult to arrange attractive hair styles, and the unattractive summer uniform all added to a surface reluctance to enter the corps. During the Summer, however, the uniforms began to change. A new, overseas hat was issued, skirts were changed to be more attractive and off duty dresses, both for summer and winter were provided.

9-30-44

Serving in nearly 30 camps in this country, the Negro woman in the WAC works at a variety of jobs from dental technician to personnel officer. Camps where they are located are in many of the southern states, Virginia, Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Texas and North Carolina. They will also be found in Missouri, Arizona, Iowa, Kansas, Indiana, Illinois and New York.

To Be Done

The all over picture within the WACS is till far from what one would wish. The barriers which have been erected have not been broken down as successfully as in other branches of the service—as within the Nurses' Corps for example. The next move for the Army to make in a policy of lessening the barriers in this service, is the transporting of Negro WACS to the overseas theater of war. When this occurs, Negro women will no doubt rally to that service as they are doing at present in the nurses corps.

78 Soldiers And WACS Get Promotions

9-23-44

Journal + Guide

Norfolk, Virginia

CAMP FORREST, Tenn.—Promotions of 78 soldiers and Pfc. WACs stationed here have been announced by Col. Frank T. Adington, post commander, through public relations.

The enlisted personnel, members of Post Detachment, Section II, and WAC Detachment II, were promoted as follows: Five to T/4; six to T/5; eight to T/4; six to T/5; and 36 to corporal; 23 to T/5;

S. C.
PRIVATES
Private, first class—Fayette Tyree, Eutaw, Ala.; Ollie D. Buck, Bowles, Savannah, Ga.; Joseph L. Hankinstpn, Miss.; Andrew Pettry, Johnson, Mobile, Ala.; John Buck-Cleveland, O.; James G. Mayor, ner, Pilotgrove, Mo.
WAC DETACHMENT
Rochester, N. Y.; Paul L. Benson, Glen Ferres, W. Va.; Eddie L. Wetumpka, Ala.; Boston J. Shee- Johnson, Little Rock, Ark.; Carter Kannapolis, N. C.; Timmie Payne, Natchez, Miss.; Joseph Toledo, O.; Chris Crawford, geant—Hattie M. Stanback, Fay-etteville, N. C.; Jean M. P. Outlaw, Hyde Park, Mass.; Sallie M. Smith, Mayor, Jr., New York: T/4 Walton H. Clark, Washington, D. C.; Corporal—Jesse Anderson, Ber-ing, Tex.; John James, Bastrop, La.; Hubert Bell, Caldwell, Tex.; Lewis M. Chavous, Philadelphia, Pa.; T/5—L. C. Reed, Jackson, Miss.; Herbert L. Goodwin, Columbia, S. C.; Private, first class—Tyree, Eutaw, Ala.; Buck, Bowles, Ga.; Pettry, Johnson, Ala.; Mayor, Pilotgrove, Mo.; Johnson, Little Rock, Ark.; Payne, Natchez, Miss.; Buck, Savannah, Ga.; Johnson, Mobile, Ala.; Benson, WAC Det, II promotions: Sergeant—Roland C. Dudley L. Hankinstpn, Miss.; Deal, Tex.; Caldwell, Tex.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Meridian, Miss.; Jackson, Miss.; Herbert L. Goodwin, Columbia, S. C.; Bronx, N. Y.; Charlie Banister, Campbell, Dixiana, Ala.; Catherine ine Green, Sharpsburg, Ky.; Melba H. Hudson, Memphis, Tenn.; Mary B. Gillette, Strawberry Plains, Tenn.; Isabelle D. Payne, Princeton, N. J.; Maude B. Johnson, New Orleans, La.; Flora M. Maxwell, Louisville, Ky.; Corporal—Barbara J. Campbell, Bloomington, Ind.; Viola H. Ezell, Catawba, N. C.

T/5—Mildred E. Cason, 313 11th avenue, N. Nashville, Tenn.; Willie Mayfield, Marshall, Texas; Rose M. Case, 1356 Fulton street, Norfolk, Va.; Ethel V. Berryman, Middleburg, Va.; Bessie L. Herd, Birmingham, Ala.; Mildred L. Hoke, Bryson City, N. C.; Clotile Sinegar, Port Arthur, Texas; Clementine Armstrong, New Orleans, La.; Alma F. Jordan, Jacksonville, Fla.; Bernice P. Gordon, Pompano, Fla.; Sarah E. Henderson, Fort Smith, Ark.; Alberta Bennett, Orange, N. J.; Geneva Davis, Liberty, Texas; Georgia M. Milner, Shreveport, La.; Louise Thomas, Tupelo, Miss.; Deborah Seals, Kilmichael, Miss.; Genevieve M. Keller, Vacherie, La.; Mary L. Gray, Hemphill, Texas; Odell D. Weathers, Stamford, Conn.; Essie D. O'Bryant, Augusta, Ga.; Dorothy T. May, Lakeland, Fla.

9-23-44

PRIVATES FIRST CLASS

Private, first class — Alice V. Cooksie, Wolfe City, Texas; Catherine M. Lee, St. Augustine, Fla.; Clara M. Alcorn, St. Lockland, O.; Dorothy Felton, Macon, Ga.; Minnie G. Cross, Bradstown, Ky.; Jessie E. Mullins, Columbus, Ga.; Dorothy E. Allen, South Richmond, Va.; Juanita Bradley, Kansas City Mo.; Hazel E. Threadgill, Sedalia, Mo.; Mary J. Byrd, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Catherine I. Cottman, Philadelphia, Pa.; Susie I. Middlebrook, Montevalla, Ala.; Anna L. Green, Lovington, Va.; Queen V. Henderson, New York City; Frances R. Holmes, RFD No. 5, Fayetteville, N. C.; Ernestine E. Hunt, Greggton, Texas; Eloris Jerry, Balcher, La.; Alvia Jones, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Georgia Joseph, New Orleans, La.; Nettie D. Simmons, St. Martinsville, La.

First Air-WAC Sworn in Here

Call — Kansas City, Mo.

4-27-44

Miss Martha E. Cartwright, 313 N. Walnut St., Olathe, Kas., has the distinction of being the first Negro to be sworn as a member of the Women's Army Corps at the Air-Wac recruiting office at 114 E. 10th St.

She was officially sworn in by Lt. S. E. Fritts last Saturday morning.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Cartwright, 22-year-old Miss Cartwright, who attended Olathe high school, is now the second member in a family of 10 children who will be serving in the armed forces. A brother, John, is stationed at the army base at Fresno, Cal.

The rceruit will be shipped May 3 for her basic training.

WAC DISBANDED AT FT. DES MOINES

Bystander — Des Moines, Iowa

7-27-44

The First WAC Training Center's 26-piece all-WAC Negro band which was disbanded at Ft. Des Moines on Jluy 18, had made a remarkable record since its organization last September. 7-27-44

News releases from the Public Relations office at Fort Des Moines revealed that the band had played many engagements.

The most recent story of the activities of the Negro band was released durng June by Public Relations office. It read as follows:

"First WAC Training Center's 26-piece all-WAC Negro band, now in demand for public appearances and a stand-by in parades and ceremonies on the post, has had a remarkable growth since it was organized in September, 1943.

"At that time the group consisted of 16 women and no instruments. Only one of them was semi-skilled in band work, the rest having had a musical background unrelated to this particular field. 7-27-44

"The lack of instruments during their first month of organization was turned from a handicap to an advantage, however, for meanwhile the women were trained as a chorus to improve their ability to read music by note. As a result, audiences now have the double pleasure of en enjoy their lovely vocal harmonies as well as their band music.

"Responsible for their first training was Master Sgt. Joan Lamb, then director of the 400th Army Band (all-WAC) at Fort Des Moines. Miss Mary Waterman, Warrant Officer, succeeded Sergeant Lamb, March 2, 1944. Miss Waterman is now commanding officer in charge of both bands. In her absence, Pvt. Lenora J. Hull, assistant band director, takes charge of their trainnig. Individual members of the 400th Army Band also have assisted those in WAC Band No. 2 in mastering the technique of their instruments. 7-27-44

"Lieut. Thelma Brown is officer in charge of WAC Band No. 2, having succeeded Lieut. Alice McAlpine in November 1943.

"Since Pvt. Lillian F. Brown, drum major, led the band in its first parade on the Post in March, it has gained rapidly in popularity, expertly filling the gap when the 400th Army Band is away on tour, and representing First WAC Training Center at many public appearances off the Post.

"Invitations for such appearances began to come in rapid succession following a concert given at the Fort Des Moines hotel. The band was invited to be the guests of the Kiwanis club in Burlington, Ia., where they presented a concert and chorus May 11. The following week they participated in the annual tulip festival at Pella, Ia., with a concert and drill exhibition in addition to playing for the Company of WACs from Fort Des Moines who took part in the parade.

"WAC Band No. 2 filled five engagements in connection with the visit of the Air-WAC Caravan May 25-29, three at the Shrine Auditorium in concert at the Des Moines Air Depot in connection with the opening of the fifth War Loan Drive.

"All of these appearances are in addition to the parades and ceremonies for which they play on the post. Among these was a concert of Easter music featuring both band and choral music presented at the Boomtown Army Chapel; they also provided the music for the ceremonies at the Post Cemetery on Memorial Day.

'More recent engagements for WAC Band No. 2 include concerts at Gladbrook, Ia., June 13; and at Stewart, Ia., June 14, both in connection with the current Fifth War Loan Bond Drive. They are scheduled to present an open air concert Sunday, June 18, at 4 p. m., at Good Park, Des Moines, under sponsorship of Keo-Way USO." 7-27-44

The climaxing engagement for the Negro band took place in Chicago on June 16 when the Negro women marched in the NAACP War Conference parade and played at Washington park; then gave a concert at the Internatioanl House at Chicago University.

NEGRO WAC BAND INACTIVATED; CITIZENS PROTEST TO PRESIDENT

[redacted] — Houston, Tex.

3-5-44

FT DES MOINES, Ia. (ANP). Negroes throughout the nation have been asked to protest to President Roosevelt to have the recently inactivated Negro WAC band re-organized.

After nine months of intensive training, followed by numerous appearances in parades and concerts, these 26 young women representing every section of the country and many Negro colleges and universities, are now being scattered into various training groups.

Argus — St. Louis, Mo.

10-13-44

Released by U. S. War Department, Bureau of Public Relations

CAPT. A. NOEL CAMPBELL

Commanding officer of WAC Detachment No. 2 at Camp Forrest, Tenn., is the winsome member of a service-minded family. Her oldest brother, Capt. T. M. Campbell is assigned to a Tank Destroyer unit at Camp Hood, Texas; her youngest brother, 1st Lieut. William A. Campbell, is with the AAF in Italy; one sistar, Virginia C., is a cadet nurse at Lincoln Hospital, New York City; and another, Elizabeth, has reported at the University of California for special work in hysical therapy. Captain Campbell's father, Mr. T. M. Campbell, Sr., a field agent for the Department of Agriculture, is stationed at Tuskegee, Ala., while her mother is hostess at the Booker T. Washington Home, national shrine of the great educator. (U. S. Signal Corps Photo.

any Protest WAC Band Demobilization At Fort

By Starder—Des Moines Tribune

7-27-44

The disbanding of the Negro Women's Army Corps band at the First WAC Training Center at Ft. Des Moines, on July 18, has resounded over the country.

Telegrams have been going over the wires to Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People ;to Col. Oveta C. Hobby, at WAC headquarters in Washington; to Secretary Stimson and to Col. Frank U. McCoskrie, commandant at the First WAC Training and to other influential leaders of the nation.

Local groups interested in equality of opportunity" for all persons in the military service have held conferences.

John Coleman, president of the Des Moines Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People sent a message to NAACP headquarters.

Walter White's message to Secretary Stimson urging reconsideration read: 7-27-44

"We submit that original refusal to permit Negro WACs to play in the regular Fort Des Moines band was undemocratic and unwise. To disband now the Negro band which was then formed as compromise measure adds insult to injury and will be a serious blow to morale of Negro WACs which is already low because of failure to assign colored WAC officers to duties comparable to their rank, failure to promote colored WAC officers some of whom have been in their present grades two years, segregation and discrimnation at Fort Des Moines as in use of swimming pool and other facilities, refusal to send colored WACS to overseas duty despite requests by theatre commanders with one of which I am personally familiar, and other discriminations. We urge that orders be issued immediately that Negro WAC musicians be admitted to 400th army band at Ft. Des Moines."

7-27-44

Morale Lowered

"I need not tell you that this one act has lowered the morale more than any one incident since the establishment of this Fort as a WAC training center," Mr. Coleman informed Roy Wilkins, assistant secretary in the NAACP headquarters.

"As regards the telegram sent you relative to the deactivation of Negro WAC band, we have not been able to ascertain all the facts. Unofficially we were informed army regulation prohibits the sustaining of two bands at a fort of the size now in training at Fort Des Moines; and that if sufficient Negro WACs could be inducted to increase the present number now in attendance to 800 or more, this band would ye reorganized.

"Whatever action you deem necessary and advisable we will gladly pursue," Mr. Coleman said.

7-27-44

Racial Justice Group Meets

Called together by their chairman. Ike Smalls, the Racial Justice committee of the Des Moines Interracial Commission, met and sent messages to Colonel Hobby at WAC headquarters in Washington, Col. McCoskrie, commandant at Ft. Des Moines. In the group were: Atty. S. Joe Brown, Atty. James B. Morris, Freddie Hawkins, Frank Dillon, Don Douglass and D. R. Peterson.

The Racial Justice Committee directed Colonel Hobby's attention to the fact that the Negro band had been disbanded and that the "members assigned to other duties, which will make it impossible hereafter for those young women who have been acquitting themselves so well as musicians to further exercise their talent along this line." 7-27-44

Mr. Smalls, the chairman of the committee, informed that "a committee of Des Moines Negro and white ctizens which I happened to head were assured about a year ago, that the Negro WACs would not be barred from any activity at Ft. Des Moines Training Center that was open to white WACs, and that there is still a WAC band functioning out there."

The Racial Justice Committee suggested that "since it will no longer be possible to maintain the band, heretofore composed of Negro WACs, exclusively, that the Negro WACs who can qualify, be admitted to membership in the other band which is still functioning at this center." 7-27-44

To Commandant

The Racial Justice Committee's letter to Colonel McCoskrie, commanding officer at Ft. Des Moines, signed by Mr. Smalls, who a year ago was president of the local NAACP, read:

"As you will doubtless remember, about a year ago .I headed a committee from the Des Moines Interracial Commission and the Des Moines branch of the NAACP, which held a conference with you concerning reported discrimination against the Negro women in your organization, at which time you assured us that while there was separation there ws no discrimination; but that everything that your organization offered to white women, was also open to Negro women who could qualify."

"However, I was informed yesterday that there would no longer be opportunity for the Negro women who were musical to play in any band at the center; and in a conference with the other members of the Racial Justice Committee of the Des Moines Interracial Comission, it was unanimously agreed that I should write you and also Col. Hobby at Washington, calling attention to the fact that since there is still a band at your center, Negro women will be deprived of an opportunity that is open to white women, unless they are admitted to membership in the band which is still functioning there."

Colonel McCoskrie Replies

A prompt response arrived at the office of the Racial Justice Committee chairman this week, from Colonel McCoskrie. It read: 7-27-44

"This is to acknowledge your letter of July 20 regarding the demobilization of the Negro WAC band.

"I regret that the reduction in overhead throughout the army, which also affects this station, caused the demobilization of the band. At the time it was organized, there was ample personnel in the training center overhead to carry the band. However, since the overall Army allotment of bands provides for only one band at each station and the 400th Army Band had already been designated at Fort Des Moines, our No. 2 band had to be demobilized.

"I think you have gained the wrong impression of training at this station. At no time have we ever offered musical training to anyone, except the Negro band. Only accomplished musicians who have a great deal of musical training in band instruments play in the 400th Army band and the strength of that band is limited to 29 members. 7-27-44

"I hope that at some future date a Negro band will be reorganized," Commandant McCoskrie concluded his letter.

Don't Believe Negro WACS Will Be Sent To So. Pacific; Whites Are

Amsterdam News 8-12-44
New York Age

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent
Representing the New York Amsterdam News and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)
(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

GEN. MacARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS (By Courier) — With the arrival of white members of the Women's Army Corps in the Southwest Pacific commend, speculation has arisen as to whether Negro members will be sent into the area. Although questioned, Army officials refused to be quoted at this writing, it seems very unlikely that any are scheduled. From work the white members are reported doing it is quite obvious why Negro members are unlikely to be called. 8-12-44

Several weeks ago WACs arrived somewhere in Australia. Immediately a forward echelon was sent into New Guinea. It was learned that they are now being used in a clerical capacity at air bases, hospitals, base commands, finance offices, supply depots, and other installations where it is feasible to use women to replace men needed in other capacities.

Up to the present time Negro members of the armed services stationed here have seen very little of this type of duty. Very few, if any, have been assigned to base command clerical staffs. And the trend at present does not indicate that this condition will be altered.

Whether the table of organization of any Negro unit is flexible enough to allow the infiltration of women personnel is not known by this reporter. Whether it is, it is very unlikely that Negro WACs will be used. 8-12-44

The question has arisen. On seeing other WACs, spruced out in regular ODs and parading through the streets here, our troops asked the question, "Wonder if the clean-cuts from Fort Huachuca are coming over?" The question remains unanswered.

Long Line of "Firsts" Follows This New York WAC Lieutenant

Amsterdam News 8-12-44
New York City, N.Y. 10-14-44

Lt. Mayo, daughter of Mrs. Mamie E. Young of 120 West 116th Street, New York City formerly taught at the Fort Valley State College in Georgia and Shaw University at Raleigh, North Carolina. She won a master's degree at Columbia University's Teachers' College in New York City in 1939 after being graduated from South Carolina State University in 1934. 10-14-44

A second lieutenant in the Women's Army Corps recently added another "first" to her lengthy record of "first events" compiled since joining the WAC.

Lt. Lucille Y. Mayo, of this city, gro women to complete their basic entered the WAAC in September training at Fort Des Moines, Ia. 1942 and became the first woman Born in Charleston, South Carin the American Women Volunteer olina, Lt. Mayo lived there until she Service Unit 12 to enlist in the completed high school in 1930. She Women's Army Auxiliary Corps. Re- moved to New York City where cently when she took command of a detachment of Negro Wacs at the Air Service Command Training Center in Fresno, Cal., she became the first WAC to be quartered at the Training Center.

WAC dispatcher at Huachuca's motor pool, made the first trip from the pool with the first Negro WAC at Fort Benning, Ga., and was a member of the first group of officer candidates from the enlisted ranks to be commissioned at Fort Des Moines.

Following "Firsts"

Combat Soldiers In Action

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

Negro Troops Help Invade French Coast

6-16-44

EUROPEAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS.—(ANP)—When the invasion blast hit the wall of Hitler's fortress Europe last Tuesday, combat Negro soldiers stood ready to do their share in ridding the continent of Nazism. No official information has been revealed, however, as to how many are in action in France.

Highly trained to handle many kinds of complicated weapons of modern warfare, thousands of Negro combat troops went through rigorous training in the downs and hills of Britain, hardening themselves to the assault.

These colored troops man anti-aircraft batteries of Bofors and anti-strafing machine guns, lay smoke screens to cover the advancing fighters, and lay field wire under enemy shelling in order to get the message through.

Man Artillery Guns

Heavy artillery guns manned by Negroes stood ready to pound the enemy, softening up the forward fortified zones, lessening the hazards for the infantry foot sluggers and the tank busters, and the thousands of other troops that swarm against the foe.

Many invasion troops were transported to the beach heads in landing craft assembled in British ports by colored port battalions.

One Negro unit that has been undergoing highly skilled training for months, both in England and the United States, was prepared for a painful thrust when the Nazis show themselves on the continent.

6-16-44

One colored anti-aircraft battalion made up of four batteries took extensive instruction at a British school to learn the latest methods used by the British gunners to schoot down the German

ners to shoot down the German

An Accurate Hitter

One phase of this training included what is called "dome training," in which a large dome built on the style of a planetarium enabled the gunners to sight model planes skirting across the simulated sky. The battalion intelligence officer said of Cpl. Willie Walters, a Bofors gunner from Route 2, Roxboro, N. C., "He's one of the most accurate hitters I've ever seen manipulate a Befor."

6-16-44

The rigid training in identification of both friendly and enemy planes made every soldier in the entire battalion able to recognize any airplane they are apt to see during the invasion.

A battery of these troops was the first United States anti-aircraft unit to fire at German raiders over England during World War 11. The flak from a burst of 31 shots sent the lone raider high-tailing it back toward Germany before a single bomb was dropped.

Lt. Gen. Leslie McNair, commanding general of the United States Army Ground forces, commended this battalion for its fine record and military proficiency.

Smoke Hides Troops

Huge blankets of artificial smoke belching into the sky from Negro operated smoke generators can not only screen the invasion troops from hidden Nazi pill-boxes and machine guns nests, but will also protect them from bombing and strafing and reconnaissance by the luftwaffe.

Much of the effectiveness of smoke screens depends upon the direction of the wind, its velocity and atmospheric pressure, but trained meteorologists like Staff Sgt. Paul L. Reid of Pittsburgh, have the responsibility of forecasting correctly all those changeable factors. Every half hour a meteorologist takes a reading of the wind direction and speed and atmospheric conditions, all of which are used to calculate future operations.

The generators, mounted on rubber shod vehicles, are highly mobile and move about on the beaches and terrain to the exact spot desired for smoke coverage. They have had plenty of actual practice operational experience.

Get Message Through

Erecting advance communications lines to forward obesrvaiton posts on the very edge of the enemy's territory is the role undertaken by signal corps construction units like the Negro battalion that for months has been getting actual practice by erecting lines for the British General Post office, to carry war messages throughout the United Kingdom.

The temporary field lines leading up to the front lines are reeled off moving trucks, and when it comes apparent the truck can advance no further into the fighting area, the reel may be carried forward by foot soldiers, while covered by riflemen and machine gunners. These lines connect battalions and regiments and combat teams with divisional headquarters, so that the commanding general's message goes through to every unit.

As the ground forces move forward, other sections of the signal corps battalion erect permanent lines, like the 135 miles of telephone lines one section constructed across English country side in eight days. A secret to this speed is the earth borer that drills a hole in less than three minutes, and a flying cable operated from the crane of the truck that hoists the pole into place, ready for the linemen to lay the wire.

Erecting lines is by no means the end of the job. They have to be serviced and kept in constant repair. The cable-splicers and repeater station mechanics are ever on the alert, ready to check and repair any spot on the whole circuit of wires. A line foreman in this colored signal battalion is T.-Sgt. Paul Green of Philadephia, and he, like a majority of the other soldiers in this signal corps construction battalions, has had civilian experience with America's large telephone companies.

All these Negro units work with the assuring confidence that comes from tough and thorough training.

Supplies in larger quantities have since been going in. Bulldozers "moving and like ants" are already in operation clearing beaches and surrounding areas of debris and other obstacles. Preparations were going forward to the repair of the few damaged installations—few because the landing areas were primarily beaches. The army spokesman did not consider that the fighting had progressed well enough to permit the establisment of docks yet.

Not until the positions taken have been sufficiently assured will it be possible to establish docks into which sea-going and other craft will be able to run. Negro port battalions, however, with the engineers are alerted to handle this difficult task which must be carried out under continuing attack from the enemy. One correspondent in the sector of the initial landings described the situation as more hazardous than at Anzio.

Engaged in Rescue Operations

Some 4,000 British and American vessels were engaged in the heavy bombardment of shore installations and battery positions. The Coast Guard was the first to actually confirm the presence of Negroes in the opening battle.

"Negroes are serving on every type of craft in the coast guard," said the CG spokesman, "and we have every kind of craft in that area."

They were on attack transports, ISI (landing ship, infantry), LST (landing ship, tanks), cutters and everything else. The opposition from enemy water craft was minor, but Negro gunners were at their positions firing away.

Others were engaged in rescue operations in the channel waters. According to Carrol Barber, coast guard correspondent, who was aboard one of the 83-foot cutters operating in a flotilla, the number of casualties by drowning was cut down measurably by the efforts of the guard.

First Confirmed Name

The first confirmed name to come out of the battle area was that of Robert Reed, stewards mate 2nd class, 4035 Woodland Ave., Cleveland. He is the only Negro member of a five-man gun crew that threw salvos into the enemy's positions.

A signal corp telephoto received by the navy department on the day of the invasion identified Ferrel Browening in Dallas, manning a five-inch naval gun that also raked the shore.

The navy department was not prepared to say whether or not its crack Seabees (construction battalions) had gone in or not. Nor could it be said with any definiteness that Negro Seabees are in the area. The department did say, however, that Negro boys are in there pitching at their battle stations about three battleships and two cruisers which thus far have been identified as being in action. The battlewagons are the Navada, Arkansas and the Texas; the cruisers are the Augusta and the Tuscaloosa.

All of our aircraft was missing on D-Day. The one fighter group and one squadron were engaged in strafing in Italy.

Today's Guest Column

by Alphaeus Hunton

(Pinchhitting for Max Yergan)

American Labor and the Colonial Postwar World

Daily Worker, New York, N.Y.

4-22-44

THE problems confronting the several labor conventions, to be climaxed by the CIO convention in November, are many and critical. Domestic problems, especially the question of how to guarantee postwar economic security for America, loom large. While it is essential for labor to deal fully and effectively with these homefront matters, I wish to suggest that it is likewise imperative for the trade unions to speak out more clearly and emphatically on matters of foreign policy than they have ever one before.

"Foreign policy, both political and economic," Philip Murray told American trade unionists in one of his addresses last year, "is as much our concern and can affect us as directly as the wages we are paid and the hours we work." The problem of insuring full employment and prosperity for American after the war is inseperably linked with the problem of furthering international cooperation toward building a world-wide system of economic security and democracy. Labor must simultaneously concern itself with domestic issues and questions of foreign policy as part of one common task.

4-22-44

IN ADDITION to postwar considerations, there are other immediately pressing reasons why organized labor in this country must today give due attention to foreign affairs. Present developments in India are once more approaching the showdown stage. The political crisis within that country will be sharpened by the impending all-out Allied assault against Japan. The duration of that campaign and its cost in human lives will depend very largely upon whether the Indian and other subject peoples of Asia are fully enlisted on our side of the struggle. And that in turn depends upon whether these peoples are given guarantees (not stale promises) that they are in fact fighting for their own freedom. CIO conventions and several of the major international unions have in the past repeatedly supported the demands of the Indian people. The present need is action toward speedily implementing the resolutions previously adopted.

4-22-44

If India is a pivotal problem for winning the war, Africa represents a key question in winning the peace. That great continent, the least developed in all the world, is fraught with dangers of imperialistic conflicts. The already begun during the war, is a certainty. rapid development of Africa's great resources, What is yet uncertain is whether that development will be to the advantage of African people and in the interest of world-wide prosperity, or whether it will take the form of sharp competition between American trade and investment there, which has recently seen an immense increases, and that of Britain and the other colonial powers in Africa. In view of the fact that Africa represents a critical testing-ground of international collaboration in which this country must play a leading part, it is to be hoped that the CIO will give to African problems attention and constructive action similar to that which it has manifested on Latin American affairs.

4-22-44

THE forces of American imperialism backing Dewey's candidacy and striving to disrupt the continuing coalition of the United Nations are the enemies of American workers as much as of colonial and semi-colonial peoples. These reactionaries foresee no better world than that of Hoover's when workers and nations were "free"—free to starve.

In contrast with their dark prospect is the of "world-wide collaboration with the objective of security for all; of improved labor standards, economic adjustment and social security." The task of American labor, working in close cooperation with the democratic labor forces in all countries, is to exert maximum influence toward the shaping of a world which will no longer be one-third free and two-thirds slave. The time for American labor to apply itself to that task is now.

Combat Soldiers In Action

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

Negro Troops Help Invade French Coast

6-16-44

EUROPEAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS.—(ANP) — When the invasion blast hit the wall of Hitler's fortress Europe last Tuesday, combat Negro soldiers stood ready to do their share in ridding the continent of Nazism. No official information has been revealed, however, as to how many are in action in France.

Highly trained to handle many kinds of complicated weapons of modern warfare, thousands of Negro combat troops went through rigorous training in the downs and hills of Britain, hardening themselves to the assault.

These colored troops man anti-aircraft batteries of Bofors and anti-strafing machine guns, lay smoke screens to cover the advancing fighters, and lay field wire under enemy shelling in order to get the message through.

Man Artillery Guns

Heavy artillery guns manned by Negroes stood ready to pound the enemy, softening up the forward fortified zones, lessening the hazards for the infantry foot sluggers and the tank busters, and the thousands of other troops that swarm against the foe.

Many invasion troops were transported to the beach heads in landing craft assembled in British ports by colored port battalions.

One Negro unit that has been undergoing highly skilled training for months, both in England and the United States, was prepared for a painful thrust when the Nazis show themselves on the continent.

6-16-44

One colored anti-aircraft battalion made up of four batteries took extensive instruction at a British school to learn the latest methods used by the British gunners to schoot down the German

ners to shoot down the German

An Accurate Hitter

One phase of this training included what is called "dome training," in which a large dome built on the style of a planetarium enabled the gunners to sight model planes skirting across the simulated sky. The battalion intelligence officer said of Cpl. Willie Walters, a Bofors gunner from Route 2, Roxboro, N. C., "He's one of the most accurate hitters I've ever seen manipulate a Befor."

6-16-44

The rigid training in identification of both friendly and enemy planes made every soldier in the entire battalion able to recognize any airplane they are apt to see during the invasion.

A battery of these troops was the first United States anti-aircraft unit to fire at German raiders over England during World War 11. The flak from a burst of 31 shots sent the lone raider high-tailing it back toward Germany before a single bomb was dropped.

Lt. Gen. Leslie McNair, commanding general of the United States Army Ground forces, commended this battalion for its fine record and military proficiency.

Smoke Hides Troops

Huge blankets of artificial smoke belching into the sky from Negro operated smoke generators can not only screen the invasion troops from hidden Nazi pill-boxes and machine guns nests, but will also protect them from bombing and strafing and reconnaissance by the luftwaffe.

Much of the effectiveness of smoke screens depends upon the direction of the wind, its velocity and atmospheric pressure, but trained meteorologists like Staff Sgt. Paul L. Reid of Pittsburgh, have the responsibility of forecasting correctly all those changeable factors. Every half hour a meteorologist takes a reading of the wind direction and speed and atmospheric conditions, all of which are used to calculate future operations.

The generators, mounted on rubber shod vehicles, are highly mobile and move about on the beaches and terrain to the exact spot desired for smoke coverage. They have had plenty of actual practice operational experience.

Get Message Through

Erecting advance communications lines to forward obesrvaiton posts on the very edge of the enemy's territory is the role undertaken by signal corps construction units like the Negro battalion that for months has been getting actual practice by erecting lines for the British General Post office, to carry war messages throughout the United Kingdom.

The temporary field lines leading up to the front lines are reeled off moving trucks, and when it comes apparent the truck can advance no further into the fighting area, the reel may be carried forward by foot soldiers, while covered by riflemen and machine gunners. These lines connect battalions and regiments and combat teams with divisional headquarters, so that the commanding general's message goes through to every unit.

As the ground forces move forward, other sections of the signal corps battalion erect permanent lines, like the 135 miles of telephone lines one section constructed across English country side in eight days. A secret to this speed is the earth borer that drills a hole in less than three minutes, and a flying cable operated from the crane of the truck that hoists the pole into place, ready for the linemen to lay the wire.

Erecting lines is by no means the end of the job. They have to be serviced and kept in constant repair. The cable-splicers and repeater station mechanics are ever on the alert, ready to check and repair any spot on the whole circuit of wires. A line foreman in this colored signal battalion is T.-Sgt. Paul Green of Philadephia, and he, like a majority of the other soldiers in this signal corps construction battalions, has had civilian experience with America's large telephone companies.

All these Negro units work with the assuring confidence that comes from tough and thorough training.

Supplies in larger quantities have since been going in. Bulldozers "moving and like ants" are already in operation clearing beaches and surrounding areas of debris and other obstacles. Preparations were going forward to the repair of the few damaged installations—few because the landing areas were primarily beaches. The army spokesman did not consider that the fighting had progressed well enough to permit the establisment of docks yet.

Not until the positions taken have been sufficiently assured will it be possible to establish docks into which sea-going and other craft will be able to run. Negro port battalions, however, with the engineers are alerted to handle this difficult task which must be carried out under continuing attack from the enemy. One correspondent in the sector of the initial landings described the situation as more hazardous than at Anzio.

Engaged in Rescue Operations

Some 4,000 British and American vessels were engaged in the heavy bombardment of shore installations and battery positions. The Coast Guard was the first to actually confirm the presence of Negroes in the opening battle.

"Negroes are serving on every type of craft in the coast guard," said the CG spokesman, "and we have every kind of craft in that area."

They were on attack transports, ISI (landing ship, infantry), LST (landing ship, tanks), cutters and everything else. The opposition from enemy water craft was minor, but Negro gunners were at their positions firing away.

Others were engaged in rescue operations in the channel waters. According to Carrol Barber, coast guard correspondent, who was aboard one of the 83-foot cutters operating in a flotilla, the number of casualties by drowning was cut down measurably by the efforts of the guard.

First Confirmed Name

The first confirmed name to come out of the battle area was that of Robert Reed, stewards mate 2nd class, 4035 Woodland Ave., Cleveland. He is the only Negro member of a five-man gun crew that threw salvos into the enemy's positions.

A signal corp telephoto received by the navy department on the day of the invasion identified Ferrel Browening in Dallas, manning a five-inch naval gun that also raked the shore.

The navy department was not prepared to say whether or not its crack Seabees (construction battalions) had gone in or not. Nor could it be said with any definiteness that Negro Seabees are in the area. The department did say, however, that Negro boys are in there pitching at their battle stations about three battleships and two cruisers which thus far have been identified as being in action. The battlewagons are the Navada, Arkansas and the Texas; the cruisers are the Augusta and the Tuscaloosa.

All of our aircraft was missing on D-Day. The one fighter group and one squadron were engaged in strafing in Italy.

Today's Guest Column

by Alphaeus Hunton

(Pinchhitting for Max Yergan)

American Labor and the Colonial Postwar World

Daily Worker—New York, N.Y.

4-22-44

THE problems confronting the several labor conventions, to be climaxed by the CIO convention in November, are many and critical. Domestic problems, especially the question of how to guarantee postwar economic security for America, loom large. While it is essential for labor to deal fully and effectively with these homefront matters, I wish to suggest that it is likewise imperative for the trade unions to speak out more clearly and emphatically on matters of foreign policy than they have ever one before.

"Foreign policy, both political and economic," Philip Murray told American trade unionists in one of his addresses last year, "is as much our concern and can affect us as directly as the wages we are paid and the hours we work." The problem of insuring full employment and prosperity for American after the war is inseperably linked with the problem of furthering international cooperation toward building a world-wide system of economic security and democracy. Labor must simultaneously concern itself with domestic issues and questions of foreign policy as part of one common task.

4-22-44

IN ADDITION to postwar considerations, there are other immediately pressing reasons why organized labor in this country must today give due attention to foreign affairs. Present developments in India are once more approaching the showdown stage. The political crisis within that country will be sharpened by the impending all-out Allied assault against Japan. The duration of that campaign and its cost in human lives will depend very largely upon whether the Indian and other subject peoples of Asia are fully enlisted on our side of the struggle. And that in turn depends upon whether these peoples are given guarantees (not stale promises) that they are in fact fighting for their own freedom. CIO conventions and several of the major international unions have in the past repeatedly supported the demands of the Indian people. The present need is action forthwith speedily implementing the resolutions previously adopted.

4-22-44

If India is a pivotal problem for winning the war, Africa represents a key question in winning the peace. That great continent, the least developed in all the world, is fraught with dangers of imperialistic conflicts. The already begun during the war, is a certainty. In contrast with their dark prospect is the rapid development of Africa's great resources, What is yet uncertain is whether that development will be to the advantage of African people and in the interest of world-wide prosperity, or whether it will take the form of sharp competition between American trade and investment there, which has recently seen an immense increases, and that of Britain and the other colonial powers in Africa. In view of the fact that Africa represents a critical testing-ground of international collaboration in which this country must play a leading part, it is to be hoped that the CIO will give to African problems attention and constructive action similar to that which it has manifested on Latin American affairs.

4-22-44

THE forces of American imperialism backing Dewey's candidacy and striving to disrupt the continuing coalition of the United Nations are the enemies of American workers as much as of colonial and semi-colonial peoples. These reactionaries foresee no better world than that of Hoover's when workers and nations were "free"—free to starve.

In contrast with their dark prospect is the of "world-wide collaboration with the objective of securityfor all; of improved labor standards, economic adjustment and social security." The task of American labor, working in close cooperation with the democratic labor forces in all countries, is to exert maximum influence toward the shaping of a world which will no longer be one-third free and two-thirds slave. The time for American labor to apply itself to that task is now.

As Commander Decorated Benning Wacs

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.
47M
3-18-44

COLUMBUS, Ga.—(SNS)— Sixteen members of the Women's Army Corps at Fort Benning were decorated recently with the Good Conduct Medal by Brig. General Wm. H. Hobson, commanding officer of the post. This award is the second won by these colored members of the WAC as they all were formerly members of the WAAC and earned a service ribbon for having joined the WAC.

The colored WACs at Benning who were decorated are members of WAC Detachment Station Complement, Section II, under the command of Lt. Lucille Moore of New York City. 3-18-44

Thoe who received the awards which denote faithful service in the Army for a year since Pearl Harbor are: T-4 Theresa P. Elliott, Decatur, Ill; Sgt. Josephine M. Frye, Charlottesville, Va.; Pvt. Rosalie Gravely, Huntington, W. Va.; S-Sgt. Norene Harris, Tribbey, Ky; Pfc. Emma Hughes, Kansas City, Mo.; Cpl. Lillie M. Jackson, New Orleans, La.; Pfc. Louise Jackson, South Norfolk, Va.; Pfc. Denzell Jordan, Dallas, Tex.; Pvt. Audrey Lindsey, St. Augustine, Fla.; 1st Sgt. Ella T. Madison, Birmingham, Ala.; S-Sgt. Delores Meacham, New York, N. Y.; Pvt. Marion Moore, Franklin, La.; T-4 Cora Parks, Dallas, Tex.; T-5 Margaret L. Rowlette, Columbus, Ohio; Pvt. Mary Sanford, Dallas, Tex.; and Sgt. Alberta Simms, New Orleans, La.

PM - New York, N.Y.
12-24-44
47M
Wacs

2d Lts. Geneva H. Culpepper, Marjorie S. Mayers of New York and Thelma L. Fisher, members of the first contingent of Negro nurses to reach Australia, leave camp for a trip to town.

'Our WAC's Are Not Powder Puff Soldiers'--Holloway

Courier - Pittsburg, Pa.

By Pfc. BESSIE M. HOLLOWAY

FORT KNOX, Ky.—The Women's Army Corps, now nearly two years old, but still in its infancy, has met the test. . . It was not just an idle dream. . . Despite its tender age, its progress since its creation, May 15, 1942, by an act of Congress introduced by Rep. Edith Nourse Rogers, can be measured with the stride of Seven League boots.

There are 62,859 officers and enlisted women in the WAC as of Jan. 1, 1944, compared with 20,943, Jan. 1, 1943. They are on duty at more than 200 Army posts, camps, stations and air bases throughout the world, and are proving beyond a reasonable doubt that they can do a man-sized job and do it well.

Miss Holloway

NO POWDER PUFF ARMY

This is no powder puff army. These women are not fighting the enemy with the wiles of womanly charm . . . They are filling essential positions formerly held by men. These women do 239 different Army jobs.

Included in the total number of enlisted women and officers are approximately 3,000 Negro women. Here at Fort Knox the Negro WAC component of the 1550th Service Unit is giving a good account of itself.

Heading the Negro WAC section is First Lieut. Vera A. Harrison, a Wilberforce university graduate, and one of the original 39 Negro officers graduated from the first Officers' Candidate school at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 28, 1942.

Assisting her are Second Lieut. Evelyn Edwards, a recent Tallagega college graduate; Second Lieut. Zelda Webb, of Baltimore, and First Sgt. Hazel Luby, of Philadelphia.

Negro WACs here fill more than a dozen different kinds of jobs. Four of the lot are mail clerks,

Pvt. Uola Lamb, of Norfolk, Va., a Pittsburgh enrollee. Marie Yountz. Pfc. Rosa Diggs, Pvt. Mattie Griffin, Paraloma, Ark., types of Army vehicles, from two to be assigned as chauffeur company chauffeur, used to keep faced Louisiana dress model, and First to be a Post was Technician Fifth house for her father back in Surearned her living as a seamstress on the Post Medley, of Clarksville, folk, Va., while 22-year-old Pvt. in New Orleans. Grade Alice Dothan, Ala., claims Pfc. Erma Pinkney swapped her job GIRLS REPLACE MEN Ming, another driver. Be- in a cleaning plant for one This Fall saw the first influx ips for the Post Ordnance the U.S.A. of Negro WAC chauffeurs at Fort Pvt. Bessie Sampson, of COOKS DO FINE JOB Knox. There are at present more ham, Ala., acts as company Next to the chauffeurs' group, than 30 WAC drivers handling all an. the largest group here is composed a defense worker in Green- of Army cooks. Tall, stately Tech. onn., to chauffeur at this Fourth Grade Cartalance P. White ost, is the story of Pvt. was an assistant director of foods in a New York City establishment before she donned the white uniform she now wears as one of Uncle Sam's cooks. At home in Washington, D. C., T/4 Anna Hinton was an elevator operator . . now she's a cook.

1-22-44

T/4 Isabella Monroe, of Tulot, Ark., looks her youthful 22 years, but finds her youth no handicap to her Army career. T/4 Ida Lewis, of Toledo, Ohio, also 22, is a graduate, too, of the Army Bakers' and Cooks' school at Fort Des Moines.

In the ordnance shops, maintenance shops and offices, "the girls in olive drab," are working together toward a common goal.

Calm, poised Pvt. Vivian Bowman, an ordnance plant worker, enlisted in California last May; T/5 Annette Simmons, shipping and receiving clerk, hails from New Orleans. She was recently promoted upon the recommendation of her operating officer after being on the job only one month.

Handling war materials is nothing new to Sgt. Theresa James, of Newark, who was an explosives operator before she enlisted last January; ex-teacher and clerk, Pfc. Elsie Pierce, of Roanoke, Va., and Washington, D. C., was trained to be a chauffeur but was selected to serve as typist for the ordnance shops. Motor Transport-trained Pfc. Bessie Holloway is a personnel clerk.

T/5 Henriette Adams, of Louisville, Ky., and Pvt. Willie Smith, of Dekalb, Texas, and T/5 Lucy Berry, of New York, find plenty to do in ordnance shops.

A few service club or theatre employees like Pfc. Emily Bostick, of New York; Pfc. Ruth Brown, of Beaumont, Texas; T/5 Janie Hanson, of Eufaula, Ala., or Sgt. Ellen L. Browne, of Brooklyn, work nights until 10 or 11 p. m.

QUARTERS RESEMBLE CITY 1-22-44

WAC quarters at Fort Knox resemble a tiny little American city, with its inhabitants living together in three wooden two-story buildings, commonly called barracks. Here social class distinctions are forgotten . . . Nobody cares what you were or who you were "back home." The only thing that matters is whether or not you're a "good soldier."

Center of most activity in the Negro WAC area is the day room. Pretty striped draperies in gay colors, soft lights and loungs chairs make the room cozy and comfortable. Around the heater in the center of the large room, more tales are swapped than around the country store cracker barrel.

A "no charge" telephone is provided for communicating with friends on the post. "Reverse the charges" for long distance calls.

For the most active, table tennis is provided or there's always dancing to the juke box recordings by Lunceford, Harry James or Count Basie.

Another low wooden building just across the road from the orderly room, is the reception room where dates are kept with post soldiers. This room, too, is equipped with radio, ping pong table, games, newspapers and magazines.

Weekly dances are held at the recreation hall next door to the Post Exchange where the volume of trade is terrific. Between the Service club, where cokes are favorites, and Post Theatre No. 7, is the pretty little white boarded chapel, where Chaplain Frank Shaw is present to lend an ear to those in need of comfort and words of encouragement. Enlisted men and women furnish the weekly programs. A wealth of talent can be discovered in a Post chapel on a Sunday morning.

Chaplain Shaw's assistant is a WAC, Pvt. Florita Davis, of Jacksonville, Fla. 1-22-44

Wylda Plummer, of Chicago, mimeographs and acts of chauffeur for the chaplain.

This may be a man's world, but the women of the Women's Army Corps, imbued with the spirit that dominated the lives of other American women who have fought side by side with their men in other wars, will go down in history as pioneers, and part and parcel of one of the greatest experiments ever made . . . vigilant, courageous women who know that if this is to remain "the land of the free." America must win.

Diary of a Private

78 WACs Work 8-Hour Shifts

Afro-American - Baltimore, Md. 2-5-44

By PVT. JOAN WILLIS

[EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the tenth in a series of articles on the life and activities of a WAC private. She has completed basic training and is now in the field at a Southwestern army camp.]

We have two barracks housing 78 girls. We work many hours and on different shifts, so that the barracks have to be clean and quiet for girls coming off work when most of us are going on in the morning. Some work on Sunday.

When going on our jobs, we wear the A uniform, or the specified uniform for cooks or hospital work. On time off, we wear fatigue clothes, slacks or overalls. Unlike basic training, we are seldom dressed alike.

Physical Day

Probably the only time one sees the entire group dressed alike is for parades—one every month. Although hats are required, they are seldom worn when off duty. All the girls favor the overseas cap rather than the OD (olive drab) hat that was issued.

Once every month we have a physical day, when the doctor comes around.

There is little similarity between basic training at Fort Des Moines and field work here.

Details Light

We stand reveille at 6:30, have breakfast at 7. From 7:15 to 8:30 we clean our barracks and dress for work. About 12 noon, we have lunch.

At 1:45 we return to work. Work day ends about 6 and supper is at 6:15. The rest of the day, God bless it, belongs to us.

The details are very light and K.P. (kitchen patrol) comes very seldom. When it does get around to me, I am on for a half day. Non-coms only are charge-of-quarters.

The only real cleaning is done on Friday night or early Saturday morning. Formal inspection is held then, although we have some form of inspection every day.

Movie Dates

There is only one movie house here, but WAC's and soldiers do not have to stand in line. Thus, it is that we always have movie dates. The place is very crowded and poorly ventilated.

The area surrounding our barracks houses the special training regiment. These are the illiterates who are going to school for the first time. 2-5-44

The one service club in our area is out-of-bounds after 5:30. About 9 miles from us is a place called Harmony Church, where the fellows for the most part have finished basic training.

In the personnel section of the Reception Center, filing, discharge and transfers, records (service records), payrolls, morning reports, returns, correspondence and special orders are taken care of.

The soldiers are section leaders and sergeant majors. Some do not seem anxious to teach us and some still don't like the idea of girls coming in to do their work, while they get shipped out, possibly overseas, that much quicker.

Salute Every Uniform

There were so many officers at Fort Devens, Mass., that the WAC's saluted everything in uniform, including messengers, cab drivers and Western Union boys.

One WAC driver gets all the breaks because of her childlike innocence. Once she drove her big army truck down the street, as an officer stepped from the curb and almost got knocked off. The girl backed up, blessed him out, and drove on.

Speeding down the highway, she had several MP's on her tail. (The speed limit is 15 miles.) He caught up with her, asked politely: "Did you know you were doing 45?" "Yeah, I know it," was the reply. Astonished to get this frank and simple answer, the MP told her to drive on.

Best Clerks

WAC's stationed at Fort Sheridan, Ill., boast the best detachment of 75 clerks in the field. Our unit was not wanted in the sixth corps area which embraces Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan, but finally Fort Custer, Mich., reluctantly accepted us.

We proved our worth, and when the area reception centers were consolidated and sent to Sheridan, the big-shots insisted that we go along. Our leaving Custer made room for the German prisoners of war, who in dirty blue fatigue uniforms, marched in singing.

They all appeared to be very young, and finally got used to seeing colored girls in uniform.

WACs Ask For Recruits But Won't Crack Jimcro

Peoples Voice-New York, N.Y. 1-29-44

DES MOINES, Ia.—While Negro girls throughout the country are being urged by recruiting officers to join the Women's Army Corps, nothing is being done to offset present discriminatory practices against them within the Corps. It was revealed here last week that an officers' pool has been formed on the post consisting of Negro and white officers formerly stationed at Daytona and various other places. They are in a building awaiting re-assignment. While white officers have quarters throughout the building, it is charged that Negro officers are in a small squad room upstairs, segregated from the others.

It is reported that there are 13 Negro girls in a room designed to hold a normal capacity of eight, and an emergency capacity of twelve. 1-29-44

REFUSED BOOK

It was also charged that one of the Negro non-coms teaching on the staff of the "Opportunity" school here was refused a reference book to take out from Service Club 1, a "lily-white" club. According to information received, Negro girls are supposed to try their own service club first, and if it does not have the book they get a note and are allowed to go over to the white service club library.

Wac Photographer In Douglas, Ariz.

Defender—Chicago, Ill. 4-15-44

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Pvt. Luvenia C. Miller, photographer, who received the B.S. degree at Hampton Institute in 1934, has been assigned to the public relations office of Fort Douglas Army Air Field in Douglas, Ariz., "The Flight Pattern," officials D.A.A.F. publication, announced recently. A graduate of the New York Institute of Photograph, she was the first colored woman on WAC duty in the photographic department at the WAC training center in Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

WAC Discrimination Is Claimed At Des Moines

Courier-Pittsburgh, Pa. 2-5-44

FORT DES MOINES, Iowa — (ANP) — Negro WACs are being discriminated against here, according to current reports.

An officers' pool has been formed on the Post here. These officers, both white and Negro, were formerly stationed at Daytona Beach and are now living in a building known as "O. C. Row," awaiting assignment.

The white officers are permitted to live in any section of the building, while the Negro officers are confined to a small squad room which is segregated from the rest of the building, with 13 colored in a single room that was designed for a capacity of nine, according to the charges.

A Negro non-commissioned officer, a member of the teaching staff of the Opportunity school, was recently refused a reference book from Service Club No. 1. The assistant librarian of the club did not even white girl to withdraw the book despite the fact that she needed it to prepare her teaching program for the following day, it is reported.

Contends Army Evades Issue On Negro WACs

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 1-16-44

Only 4,000 Women Out of 62,889 Enrolled Negroes

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—There may be a good side to the Women's Army corps—certainly no better than the army itself—but the answers to a series of questions submitted to the war department by the Associated Negro Press recently failed to reveal it. Specific figures were unavailable, and hazarded guesses were about the best that could be provided on matters in general.

Needless to say, war department policy is applicable to the corps just as much as it is to any of the three forces that comprise the military. In short, the views of Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, WAC director, correspond faithfully to the pattern already laid down for the recruiting, training and disposition of Negro men in the army.

ONLY 4,000 ENLISTED

On Jan. 1, there were 62,859 officers and enlisted women in the WAC, the department announced. The goal for 1943 had been 150,000. The answer to a question regarding the number of Negro women enrolled brought the reply in December that "less than 10 per cent of the corps is comprised of Negro women." A sufficient number of eligibles had not applied, it was explained. From a reliable source it was learned that up to July, 1943, there were roughly 4,000 Negro officers and enlisted personnel. 1-16-44

No special appeal had been made nor were Negro officers being used to find recruits during the major part of the year, however, toward the end of 1943 a few were given recruiting details. This might have been done before, the department said, except that as fast as officer material became available, the women were assigned as instructors and to minor commands for which "there would have been complaints" had white officers been assigned.

TRAIN TOGETHER

On the other hand, candidates for officer training are given the benefit of an integrated atmosphere, even at Oglethorpe, Ga. "Because of the small units there, Negroes are integrated because there are not enough of them to make a unit of their own," was the dept's. answer. "That can be done where you have a small number; but when you have a large unit everyone is happy (when separated)."

A booklet used last year for recruiting purposes said WACs were performing 155 important army jobs. Col. Hobby finds now that that figure has since been boosted to 239 jobs at more than 200 posts, camps, stations and air bases in continental United States and overseas. There was nobody in the war department willing or in a position to give the approximate number of specialized courses in which Negroes are to be found. An over-all estimate was offered that "about 25 per cent of the complete list of 155 jobs got about 75 per cent of the corps." 1-16-44

BARRIERS ERECTED

Fact of the matter is that there are artificial limitations placed upon Negroes seeking training in certain special courses. Eligibility for all is based on aptitudes, civilian experience and background, it was explained. Then the needs of a company are agreed upon and only sufficient personnel to meet those needs and in those categories are allowed to obtain the training. Hence, if a company has no need for various technical and professional services, mechanical, trade and manual performance, Negroes don't get the training as x-ray technicians, chemist, photographer, weather observer, airplane specialist, welder, and other jobs. 1-16-44

White WACs, on the other hand, may receive almost any type training for which they can meet the basic requirements of eligibility and be assigned to a job. WACs are never sent to a post in groups of less than 50 unless there are others there already. Housing and recreation facilities dictate this policy. But neither will Negro WACs be sent to a post where there are no other Negro WACs. The net effect of this, so far as training is concerned, is to actually limit the courses Negro women may take to those needs of the company in which they are assigned.

PUT IN COOKING SCHOOL

1-16-44

Most Negroes find themselves in the motor equipment school, the cooking school or the administrative school. There is no laundry school as this work is preformed by contract with a laundry firm.

The war department is not responsible for this information, but it has been learned that more than two-thirds of Negro WACs fall into grades four and five (the lower ones) in the literacy tests whereas only a little more than one-fourth of the whites are so classified. This may or may not have something to do with the amount of training Negro WACs can absorb in specialized classes.

One of the questions put to the war department was this: "Why have not Negro WACs been sent abroad just as have others?" Director Hobby herself is source of the disclosure that at the present time there are 3,002 WACs serving overseas. They are disposed as follows, she said: North Africa, 1,739; England 1,143; and smaller numbers in the Southeast Asia Command at New Delhi, India; at Cairo, Egypt, and in New Caledonia.

NEGROES NOT REQUESTED

The written answer to the question was this: "WAC units are shipped overseas in answer to specific requests from theater commanders. No Negro WAC units have been requested to date." The reply went on to say that no such assignments are contemplated for the near future 1-16-44

At present Maj. Harriet West and Maj. Charity Adams are the ranking Negroes in the WACs. During the summer, it is understood, there were then about 110 Negro officers among the total personnel. She will now set the broad, general personnel policies for the WAC here and abroad.

Of the approximately 50 WAC officers who were in Col. Hobby's headquarters staff, only 4 have gone along with her to the personnel division of the general staff. No one of these four is a Negro.

But that isn't our point. We'd like to see a Negro officer on the general staff, yes. We aren't even complaining about the assignment that is in prospect for Major Harriet West, one of the two highest ranking Negroes in the Women's Army Corps. We think a Negro should be in such a spot, too. 3-18-44

But since the WAC is being reorganized and integrated — and since the undemocratic policy of segregation into white and colored units exists despite our fighting a war against the Hitlerian theories of "Aryan supremacy" and "divide and conquer"—why can't we have a Negro WAC in charge of the Negro division?

One reason may be the fact that such a person would be equivalent to a division commander, which would rate a rank of full colonel. But is there any law against that?

This person could take over the whole thing—step up the recruiting campaign for Negro WACs, which is now being given no attention by anyone, find assignments for the 30 or more Negro officers languishing at Des Moines with nothing to do, plug for overseas service for Negro WACs, set personnel goals and standards, and help remove a stigma which has attached itself to the corps so far as Negroes are concerned since its inception.

As a political move, it could be surpassed only by eliminating the color line in the American Army—which isn't in the cards just yet.

And while we're on the Army, let's look at the significance of Rep. Andrew J. May's objections to the Army using the pamphlet on the "Races of Mankind" as orientation material for its instructor personnel. 3-18-44

Rep. May is the Democratic Congressman from the 7th District of Kentucky. He is also Chairman of the House Military Committee. He has boasted of blocking the use of the pamphlet by the Army because his ire was fanned by a statement in it to the effect that a survey showed the average Negro in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut has a higher intellect than the average white in Kentucky, Arkansas and Mississippi —not because they are in the North or the South, but because of the differences in educational advantages. 3-18-44

We are willing to wager that for individual differences, one doesn't have to leave Kentucky, Arkansas or Mississippi to find Negroes with higher intelligence than Rep. May. In his own state we'd put our chips on Rep. Charles Anderson of the State Legislature, for example.

"We're going to keep our eyes open to see that this pamphlet does not go out to our soldiers through War Department channels. If it does," he said, "somebody is going to have to do plenty of explaining."

What has not appeared in the papers is the fact that Rep. May is from a district which has a potential Negro vote of 3,543. In the last election, he won by a bare majority of 540 votes. The shift of 271 Negro votes could have defeated him then.

What "explanation" is Rep. May going to have in Novem-

Perhaps it would be wise for Congressman May to transfer his allegiance to South Carolina, where the State House of Representatives passed that "nasty" (or Nazi) resolution in support of "white supremacy."

The best answer to the State of South Carolina in an editorial in the Washington Post, which concluded: 3-18-44

"It is a lonely war that the South Carolina House of Representatives would have its great State wage. Divorced from the splendid company of the United Nations, who proudly number black and white and brown and yellow and red men among their

UN-COVERING WASHINGTON

Tribune - Philadelphia, Pa.

By HARRY S. McALPIN

White House Correspondent
(Released By NNPA)

3-18-44

For the past two weeks, we've been talking about the White House press conferences. From time to time, as developments justify it, we'll do more of that type of thing. But now, let's "uncover" some of Washington.

—0—

Without a lot of fanfare or publicity, the WAC has been fully integrated into the Army. It happened officially on March 1. Col. Oveta Culp Hobby, the WAC director, has been promoted to the general staff corps.

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 1-28-44

Jobs For All Of Us

The pressing need for additional Negro women WACs is a cause for serious regret by those of us concerned with our people giving their strongest support to every phase of the war effort.

In a recent advertisement appearing in our Saturday's issue of January 22, it was pointed out that there are many jobs open to Negro women in the WAC, WAVES, SPARS, Marines, Army Nurse Corps and Navy Nurse Corps.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience, but who have had a high school education. Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had some college training.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no college training, but who have had experience in clerical work, typing, stenography, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in clerical work, typing, stenography, etc., but who have had experience in domestic work, cooking, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in domestic work, cooking, etc., but who have had experience in factory work, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in factory work, etc., but who have had experience in agricultural work, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in agricultural work, etc., but who have had experience in other types of work, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in other types of work, etc., but who have had experience in no work, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in no work, etc., but who have had experience in nothing, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in nothing, etc., but who have had experience in anything, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in anything, etc., but who have had experience in everything, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in everything, etc., but who have had experience in something, etc.

Many of these jobs are open to Negro women who have had no experience in something are over 239 types of army jobs available. All kinds of special skills are needed—clerical workers, medical technicians, teachers and even women without experience.

Answering the question as to whether there are enough WACs, the advertisement gives a positive no! "Many thousands more WACs are needed. And unless more women join at once, it states that the War Department cannot meet the demands which come in daily from the Army ground forces," General Marshall stated.

Thus, if you are a colored woman between the ages of 20 and 50 years and without children under 14, then you are needed in this vital and necessary Army service. The need is great and the opportunities are good.

Negro Wac Given Part In New Picture

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga. 1-25-44

A "SERGEANETTE" is Butterfly McQueen as she heads her group of WACs on the set of David O. Selznick's "Since You Went Away." The stellar cast includes Claudette Colbert, Joseph Cotten, Jennifer Jones, Shirley Temple, Monty Woolley, Lionel Barrymore and Robert Walker.

1-25-44

Wacs Do Fine Job In Taking Over Ga. Reception Center

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 1-13-44

Assume Difficult Tasks Without Fanfare To Relieve Many Soldiers

FORT BENNING, Ga.—Nearly one-third of all members of WAC Detachment, Station Complement, Section II, is assigned to the various departments of The Reception Center, according to Lt. Lucille Y. Mayo, commanding officer.

Arriving on the post early last fall, the WACs lost no time in going about their jobs to which they have applied their skill with satisfaction and effective results. Approximately 125 made up the contingent, including twelve cadres which came here on September 3. Their arrival at Fort Benning was marked by a ceremonial welcome that the WACs still remember as a highlight of their careers as members of the Women's Army Corps.

Assigned to Reception Center Headquarters are Pvts. Jennie Byrd, of Springfield, Ohio, and Emma Hughes of Kansas City, Mo.

Five WACs assist in the work of compiling, filing records in the dispensaries, and interviewing service men. They are Pvts. Lillian B. Armstrong, Rogerville, Tenn.; Ruth M. Bingham, Memphis, Tenn.; Cpl. Delores Meacham, New York City; Pvt. Cleo Murray, of Detroit; and Pvt. Edna Sanders, of New York City. 1-13-44

Six WACs are assigned to the Personnel Section which takes care of payrolls and discharges, two major jobs. They are: Pvts. Winifred Brady, of Detroit, a graduate of Michigan State Normal; Pearl L. Lasenby, Newark, N. J., a graduate of Morris Brown college, Atlanta, Ga.; Pvt. Maude Nious, San Antonio, Tex., graduate of Tilliston College, Austin, Tex.; Dorothy Walker, S. Sioux City, Neb. and former student of Tuskegee Institute; Sgt. Norene Harris, Tribby, Ky., a graduate of Rosenwald high school, Harlan, Ky.; and Pfc Dora Wheaton, Jersey City, N. J., a graduate of Lincoln high school, Jersey City.

In the Reception Center mail room section are Pfc. Wilhelminia Edmunds, of Columbia, S. C.; Pvts. Nellie Harmon, Atlanta, Ga.; Ollie Johnson, Wrens, Ga.; Denzell Jordan, Dallas, Tex.; Rosa Murray, Raleigh, N. C.; and Velma Riddick, Brooklyn, N. Y., the latter a graduate of State Teachers College, Elizabeth City, N. C. Pvts. Harriette Turner, Cleveland, and Ollie Johnson, were public school teachers as civilians. The latter, graduate of Florida A. and M College, also served as cafeteria manager of Dorsey high school, Miami, Fla. 1-13-44

Other WAC assignees in the Reception Center include Pvts. Beverly Carrington, of Cambridge, Mass.; Carrie Miller, Newton, Ga.; and Theada Weddle, Jefferson City, Mo., all three of the Classification Section; Pvt. Lavina Brewton, Spartanburg, S. C., Quartermaster; Mattie Edmond, Baton Rouge, La., Tailor Shop; Pvt. Elliott, Decatur, Ill., Insurance Section; Pvts. Lola Harris, Memphis, Tenn.; Mildred Watkins, Englewood, N. J.; Grace Jackson, San Antonio, Tex., and Hilda Marshall, New Orleans, La., Tailor Shop; and Pvt. Catherine Wiley, Beaumont, Tex., Quartermaster.

10 NEGRO WACS ARE RECRUITED AS DRIVE BEGINS

Tribune Chicago, Ill. 1-30-44

500 Women Sought in Five Weeks.

Ten south and southwest siders, the first of 500 Negro WACs to be recruited from the Chicago area in the next five weeks, left recently for Fort Des Moines, Ia, for basic training.

Pvt. Isabelle G. Francis, 4416 South Park way, was appointed recruit leader for the group on the trip to camp. The other enlistees were Ruby Jones, 4619 Prairie avenue; Lucia Pitts, 5156 Michigan avenue; Onita Gravois, 4619 Prairie avenue; Leovy Dixon, 119 East 37th street; Geraldine Johnson, 9549 Wentworth avenue; Elinor M. Nesby, 6630 Kimbark avenue; Theola Jones, 4645 Evans avenue; Bernice Robinson, 4647 Prairie avenue, and Bernice E. Huggar, 6119 Ada street.

The drive for more Negro WACs is being directed by Capt. Ruth L. Freeman, herself a Negro, and one of those who trained in the first WAC companies. 1-30-44

Citizens Committee Helps.

She is being assisted by a citizens' committee headed by Atty. Edith Sampson, 3518 State street. In appealing to south and southwest side Negro women to join the service, Mrs. Sampson said, "The army is calling for women citizens to join the women's army corps. Eligible Negro women should enroll and make available their skills to the nation in this hour of need.

"New skills may be learned, skills that will be more important in the post-war world. Our men are engaged with all the vigor, courage, and energy they possess to help our country win the war. It is essential that Negro women likewise assume their full responsibility. We must demonstrate to the world, and to America in particular, that we are capable of carrying our full share in every avenue of service open to us," she added.

Name Workers.

The program committee of the citizens' committee aiding the recruiting drive includes A. N. Fields, chairman; Olime M. Diggs, Lucius Harper, Capt. Edward Gillespie, adjutant of the Illinois reserve militia, and Mrs. Lovonia H. Brown, director of the Women's Army for National Defense. 1-30-44

Members of the steering committee for the campaign are: Alton Davis; Mrs. Jeanette T. Jones, counsellor, Du Sable High school; Edigins, member of the National Counson Love; Mrs. Fannie Carter, presicil of Negro Women; Mrs. Jane ident of the Chicago Northern Dis-Kemp, Mrs. Grace Knighten, and trict Federation of Colored Women's Odell C. Turpin. clubs; Mrs. Lottie Davidson, grand worthy matron of the Order of the Eastern Star; Mrs. Mattie Hampson, Women's Army for National Defense; Mrs. Mame Mason Hig.

TOP, LEFT— Tribune

SUPERVISES REPAIR OPERATIONS AT Q.M. SUB-DEPOT— Second Lieutenant Cornelia T. Brangman (WAC) Quartermaster Corps, officer-in-charge of the equipage repair division at the Jersey City Quartermaster Repair Sub-Depot, New York City, inspects damaged mess kits in process of repair. Lieutenant Brangman is responsible for supervision of repair operations on a wide variety of items, including canvas, web, and metal equipage. Philadelphia, Pa.

TOP, RIGHT—

DEPOT TRANSPORTATION OFFICER— Second Lieutenant El Freda Le Beau (WAC) Quartermaster Corps, chief of receiving and shipping division and depot transportation officer at the Jersey City Quartermaster Repair Sub-Depot, New York City is pictured supervising an outgoing shipment at the depot. 12-28-44

BOTTOM, LEFT—

SEMI-SKILLED MACHINIST—Private Sarah A. Parker of 3606 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, is getting on-the-job training in the sub-depot machine shop at the Sioux City (Iowa) Army Air Base. She has been a member of the Women's Army Corps for one year and six months. —(Army Air Forces Photo from Bureau of Public Relations).

BOTTOM, RIGHT- 12-30-44

INTERVIEWS JOB APPLICANTS—Lieutenant Stella G. Garvin (WAC) Quartermaster Corps, chief of civilian personnel division, Jersey City Quartermaster Repair Repair Sub-Depot, New York City, has a busy job interviewing applicants at the rapidly expanding repair sub-depot. The sub-depot is now operating with more than 2,000 employees. —(U. S. Signal Corps Photos from Bureau of Public Relations).

12-30-44

French WAC's Spurnel Dates; Fine Soldiers Say Officials

AFRO-American
Baltimore, Md.

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, Md.---Fort Meade's "Little France" became smaller this week as a contingent of 17 young women, all natives of Martinique, Guadaloupe and other French possessions in the Caribbean, wound up thier stay here and moved on for other assignments with French WAC forces.

8-19-44

The arrival of the colonial group brought the total strength of the French WAC detachment here to 30 members. The detachment's strength has varied, increasing as new groups arrive for outfitting and a short course in basic military essentials, and decreasing as orders send them elsewhere.

Have Never Seen France

The new group differed in several respects from other units here most of whom are natives of France, and who left Allied jobs and schools to aid in the liberation of their homeland. The colonial contingent has never seen France but displayed as much enthusiasm for the cause of its liberation.

Major difference, however was the factor of previous military training. The newcomers were experts in close order drill and acquainted with the nature of company and military duties. Since they were not assigned separate quarters close to the headquarters of the French detachment. The recruit French WACs have quarters with American WACs of the 1322nd Service Unit.

8-19-44

The new group spent most of its time brushing up on military fundamentals and getting outfitted with some parts of the uniform they did not receive when they joined. Their uniforms of khaki required in Martinique differ from that worn by other French, mainly in the cut and design of the jackets. Another distinguishing factor is the wearing of three-quarter length hose.

Seek Overseas Duty

All of the members of the contingent were anxious for overseas assignments as nurses, truck drivers or typists. None of the group spoke English and hence probably will serve with French forces.

When the first French WAC contingents arrived at Fort Meade several months ago, they dubbed their quarter "Little France". They quickly adapted themselves to the military environment and more often than not volunteered for the monotonous and arduous company chores, an attitude which won them the admiration of their American companions.

Spurned Dates

Conducting themselves with exemplary propriety they often form gay parties which tour Washington. They prefer seeing the sights of the nation's capitol, which they say is "in it's way as beautiful as Paris," and dining at places which serve French dishes, rather than ordinary dates to theaters and night clubs.

Dental Technician

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa. 12-9-44

Corporal Sara B. Little, 83 Poplar street, Asheville, N. C., a dental technician at the base hospital of the Sioux City (Iowa) Army Air Base, is pictured at work assisting Capt. Williams, Dental Corps. A member of the WAC since May 1943, Corporal Little was assigned to the first group of Negro air-Wacs. She received training at the state laboratories in Lansing, Michigan, where she studied laboratory bacteriology. Prior to this training she attended Bennett College in Greensboro, North Carolina for two years. Later, she went to West Virginia State College at Institute, where she received a bachelor of science degree in home economics. — (Army Air Forces Photo from Bureau of Public Relations.)

FT. HUACHUCA WACS AT WORK

Defender — Chicago, Ill. 6-3-44

T-5TH BETTY JOY

Efficient and attractive WAC who works in the Adjutant's office at the Fort, as stenographer and special order clerk. She joined the Women's Army Corps in April, 1943, and received her basis training at Fort Devens, Mass. Besides her work at Post headquarters, Cpl. Joy finds time to participate in the musical revues sponsored by the Special Service Division, and was recently featured in "G. I. Rhapsody."

OFFICERS OF AIR WAC DETACHMENT

Afro American — Baltimore, Md. 5-13-44

Lt. Blanche L. Scott, sitting, formerly of Washington, commander of Sioux City Army Air Wac's, is shown above with Sgt. Minnie B. Gay, formerly of Philadelphia.

WAC's in Transportation Corps at New York POE

Baltimore, Md.

Afro American
10-21-44

47 M

These WACs are doing vital work with the Transportation Corps at the New York Port of Embarkation. Front row, left to right, Pvt. Helen Clark, Youngstown, O.; Pfc. Gloria Parris, Bainsbridge, Ga.; T/5th Sylvia LaGrande, Roanoke, Va.; S/Sgt. Juanita Goodloe, Waco Tex.; Second row, Pvt. Lois Coston, NYC.; Pvt. Alice Ford, Pittsburgh; Pfc. Rosemary Thompson, Washington; T/4th Mamie Doss, Chicago; Pvt. Margaret Goins, Philadelphia; Third row, Pfc. Evelyn Lozi, Long Island, N.Y.; T/5th Dorothy Williams, Pittsburgh; Pfc. Vivian Brown, Toledo, O.; T/5th Adeline Bell, Pittsburgh; Pvt. Venise Dawson, Cambridge, Mass.—(Signal Corps Photo)

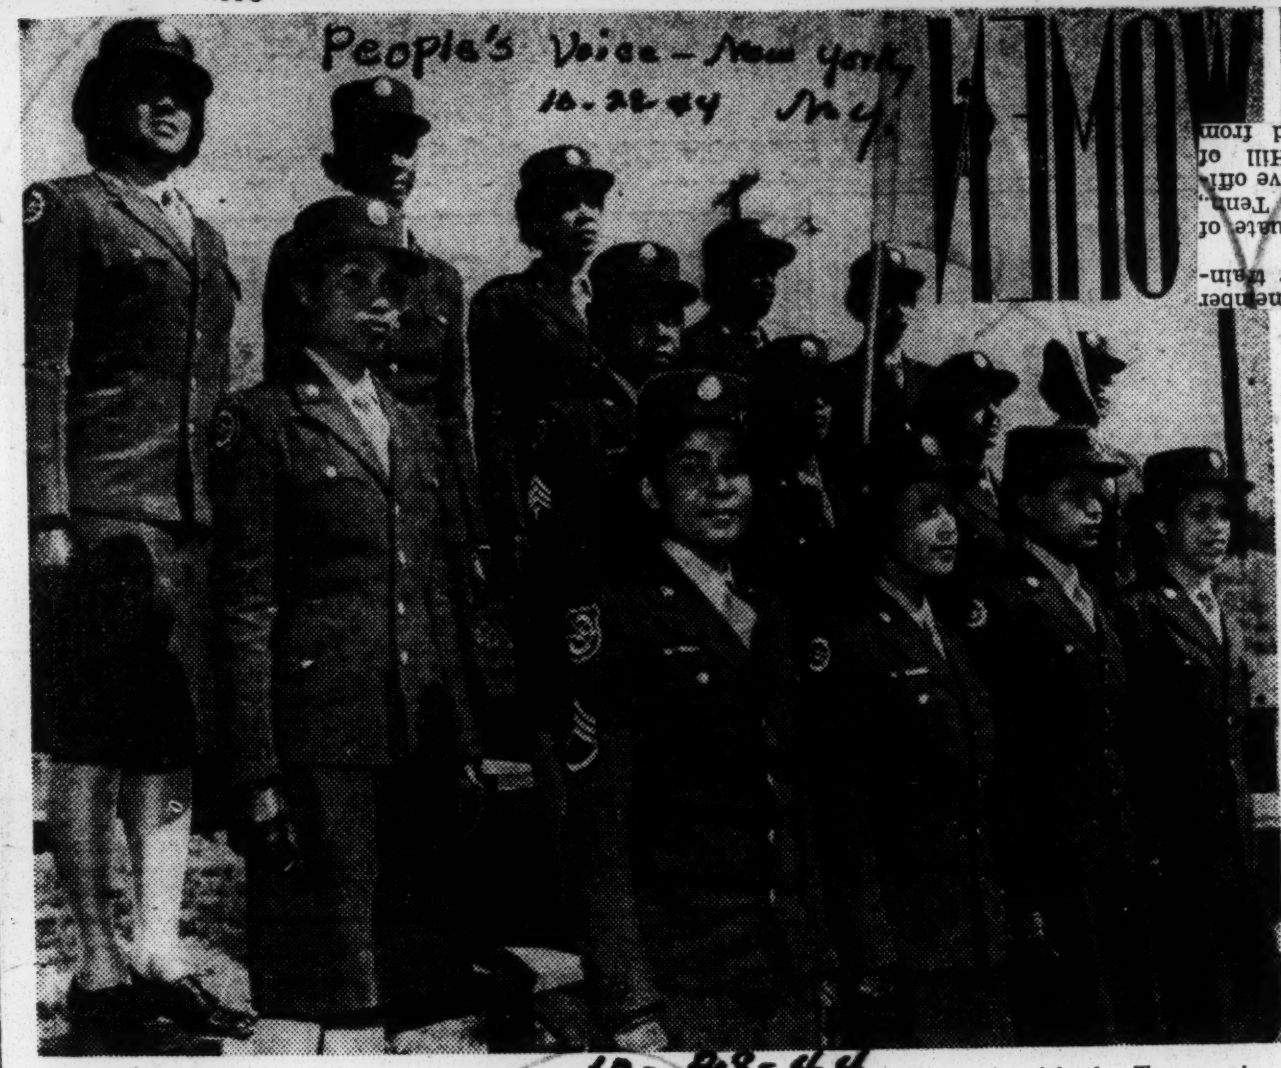
47m-1944

WAC

9-9-44

Tribune—Washington, D.C. 9-9-44

NATION'S MOST POPULAR—Capt. Loretta Freeman, one of the nation's leading WAC recruiting officers, is successfully filing her quota at her new streamline headquarters in the Commonwealth Edison Building, Forty-seventh Street, Chicago. Captain Freeman is a native of Texas. She is a good pal of Sgt. Joe Louis, headed a WAC unit which made Duke Ellington their "Pin Up" boy of 1943, and has appeared on more bond rallies, social, civic, and religious programs than any other WAC member of her race. A score of Gobs from the Great Lakes Training Station recently gathered at Servicemen's Center No. 3, and made her their "Chin Up" girl for the duration.



People's Voice—New York 10-28-44

LOOKING AS SMART as brand new pennies, these WACS are doing vital work with the Transportation Corps at the New York Port of Embarkation. Front row (l to r) Pvt. Helen Clark, Youngstown, O.; Pfc. Gloria Parris, Bainsbridge, Ga.; Tech. 5 Sylvia La Grande, Roanoke, Va.; Staff Sgt. Juanita Goodloe, Waco, Texas. Second row, Pvt. Lois Coston, New York City; Pvt. Alice Ford, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pfc. Rosemary Thompson, Washington, D.C.; Tech 4 Mamie Doss, Chicago, Ill.; Pvt. Margaret Gains, Philadelphia, Pa. Third row, Pfc. Evelyn Lozi, Long Island, N.Y.; Tech. 5 Dorothy Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pfc. Vivian Brown, Evelyn Lozi, Long Island, N.Y.; Tech. 5 Dorothy and Pvt. Venise Dawson, Cambridge, Mass. (In view of this week's Navy Department ruling, PV expects soon to be able to publish pictures of Negro WAVES.)

10-28-44

2 Rapists of WAC Are Sentenced

Afro American Baltimore, Md. 11-4-44

FORT BENNING, Ga.—Two of five soldiers accused of raping a WAC have been found guilty.

One was sentenced to life and the other to twenty years. The three other cases are pending.

The five men attacked a WAC and her companion as they were en route to a dance. Severe criticism has been made of one soldier who, because of threats against him, made no attempt to save the girl from the five attackers.

Army Graduates 9 Negro Women

Daily Worker, N.Y. 11-13-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz., Nov. 13.—Nine Negro women have just been graduated from the 9th Service Command's school for physical therapy here, six coming from the enlisted ranks of the Womens Army Corps and three from civilian life. Each is a graduate of an accredited college and holds a degree in physical education or science.

11-14-44

The three civilian cadets reported for training Oct. 1, 1943. After six months of theory they were transferred to the Fort station hospital for an additional six months. Six WACs last January joined the first class, spending six months in classroom study and three months as apprentices at the hospital.

Nine additional women are training at the Bushnell General Hospital, Brigham City, Utah.

WAC Promoted

Tribune—Philadelphia 12-23-44

Dorothy Sanders, of Greensburg, Pa. are among 56 colored WACS and Inez C. Chapman of Lansdowne, Pa., who recently were promoted to privates first class at the Air Service Command.

They arrived here last September with the first detachment of colored WACS stationed in California's San Joaquin Valley. Pfc. Sanders and Chapman received their basic training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

Born November 15, 1921, Pfc. Sanders resided with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kirkland, at Greensburg, Pa., before entering the Army. She attended Greensburg

Born February 18, 1904, in Philadelphia, Pa., Pfc. Chapman, resided at 132 Bartram avenue before entering the Army. She is a graduate of the Lansdowne High School.

Puerto Rican WACs To Be Trained Here

Amsterdam News New York, N.Y. 11-25-44

ATLANTA—More than 100 Puerto Rican senoritas, as WAC recruits, have been flown by the Army Air Transport Command to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., for basic training, headquarters Fourth Service Command has announced.

Each of the planes carried an Army nurse to follow the practice of strict chaperonage of young unmarried daughters still followed by many Puerto Rican families. These young women were recruited by a party of four Negro WACs who went there in September, after they had received many inquiries from the island on how they might join the WAC.

11-25-44

Upon completion of basic training at Fort Oglethorpe, these Puerto Rican women, like American WACs, will be assigned wherever they are needed according to their qualifications an dspecial skills.

New York WACs Among Those Assigned To Western Fort

N.Y. Amsterdam News 12-2-44

Among those welcoming the very first WACs at the Fort Lewis railroad station were Lt. Col. J. H. Sherman of Babson Park, Fla., 14th engineer group commander, and Capt. Janet Eisenach of Milwaukee, Wisc., commanding officer of the present Fort Lewis WAC detachment, who extended a warm greeting to the new arrivals.

Under the command of Capt. Irma J. Cayton a group of 145 young women arrived recently at the Army Service Forces training center in Fort Lewis, Wash., the first Negro members of the Corps to serve there. As the girls debarked from the train, their first words were for new station is Pfc. Josephine Hutty of New York City, whose husband, Pfc. James A. McCall, is a member of Company I, 555th engineer training battalion.

Captain Cayton is a graduate of Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., and the detachments executive officer, First Lt. Violet W. Hill of Batavia, Ill., was graduated from

47m-1944

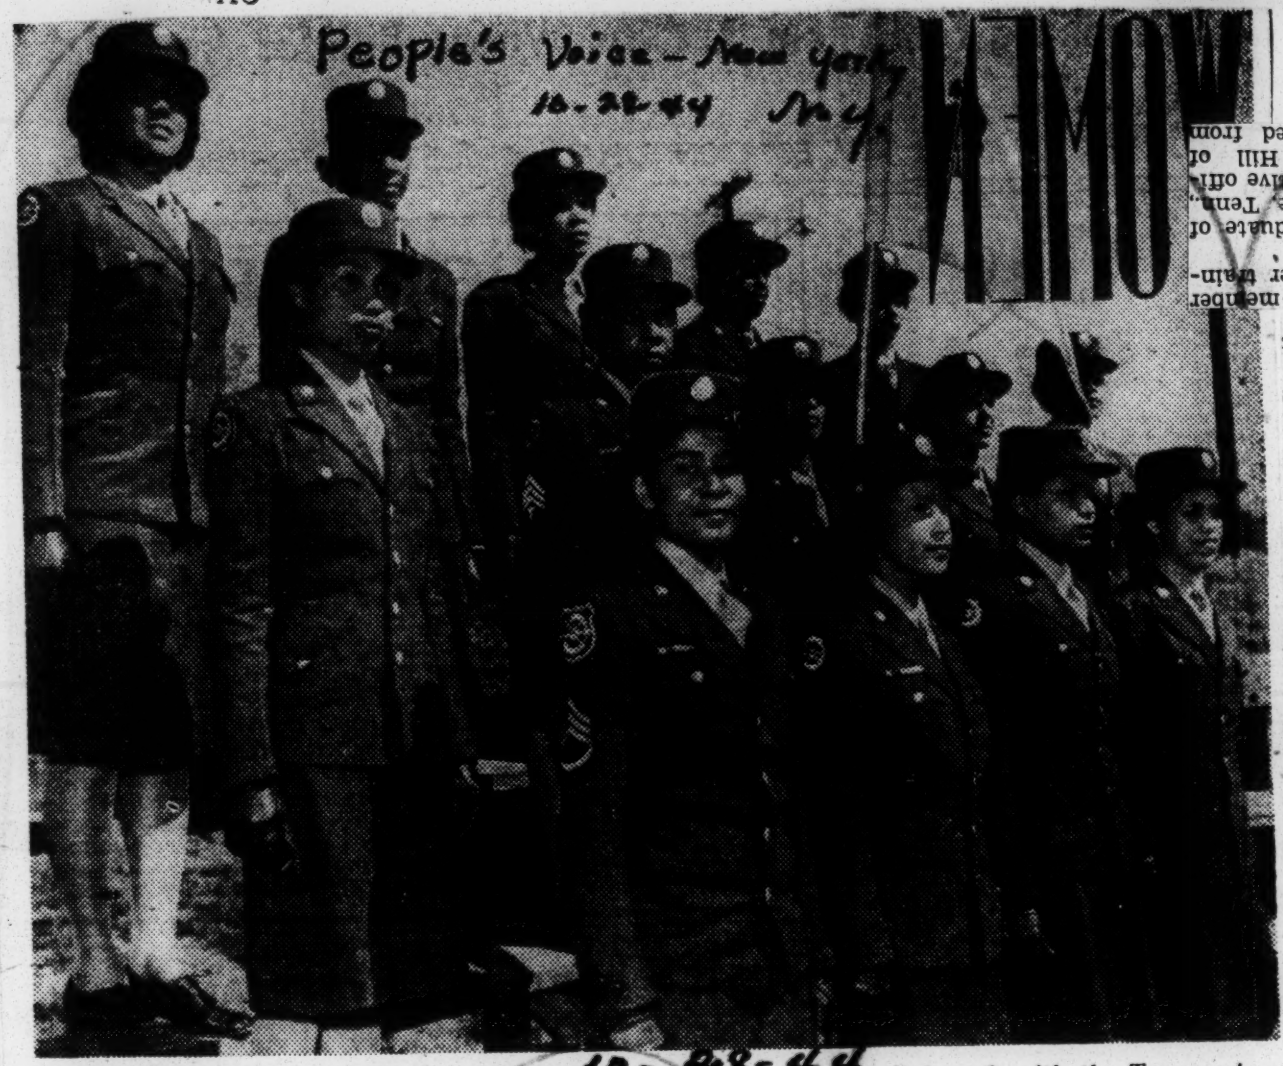
WAC

9-9-44

47 W

Tribune—Washington, D.C. 9-9-44

NATION'S MOST POPULAR—Capt. Loretta Freeman, one of the nation's leading WAC recruiting officers, is successfully filing her quota at her new streamline headquarters in the Commonwealth Edison Building, Forty-seventh Street, Chicago. Captain Freeman is a native of Texas. She is a good pal of Sgt. Joe Louis, headed a WAC unit which made Duke Ellington their "Pin Up" boy of 1943, and has appeared on more bond rallies, social, civic, and religious programs than any other WAC member of her race. A score of Gobs from the Great Lakes Training Station recently gathered at Servicemen's Center No. 3, and made her their "Chin Up" girl for the duration.



People's Voice—New York 10-28-44 Navy

MOW

LOOKING AS SMART as brand new pennies, these WACS are doing vital work with the Transportation Corps at the New York Port of Embarkation. Front row (l to r) Pvt. Helen Clark, Youngstown, O.; Pfc. Gloria Parris, Bainsbridge, Ga.; Tech. 5 Sylvia La Grande, Roanoke, Va.; Staff Sgt. Juanita Goodloe, Waco, Texas. Second row, Pvt. Lois Coston, New York City: Pvt. Alice Ford, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pfc. Rosemary Thompson, Washington, D.C.; Tech 4 Mamie Doss, Chicago, Ill.; Pvt. Margaret Gains, Philadelphia, Pa. Third row, Pfc. Evelyn Lozi, Long Island, N.Y.; Tech. 5 Dorothy Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pfc. Vivian Brown, Evelyn Lozi, Long Island, N.Y.; Tech. 5 Dorothy and Pvt. Venise Dawson, Cambridge, Mass. (In view of this week's Navy Department ruling, PV expects soon to be able to publish pictures of Negro WAVES.)

10-28-44

2 Rapists of WAC Are Sentenced

Afro American Baltimore, Md. 9-12-44

FORT BENNING, Ga.—Two of five soldiers accused of raping a WAC have been found guilty.

One was sentenced to life and the other to twenty years. The three other cases are pending.

The five men attacked a WAC and her companion as they were en route to a dance. Severe criticism has been made of one soldier who, because of threats against him, made no attempt to save the girl from the five attackers.

Army Graduates 9 Negro Women

Daily Worker N.Y. 11-14-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz., Nov. 13.—Nine Negro women have just been graduated from the 9th Service Command's school for physical therapy here, six coming from the enlisted ranks of the Womens Army Corps and three from civilian life. Each is a graduate of an accredited college and holds a degree in physical education or science.

The three civilian cadets reported for training Oct. 1, 1943. After six months of theory they were transferred to the Fort station hospital for an additional six months. Six WACs last January joined the first class, spending six months in classroom study and three months as apprentices at the hospital.

Nine additional women are training at the Bushnell General Hospital, Brigham City, Utah.

WAC Promoted

Tribune—Philadelphia 12-28-44

Dorothy Sanders, of Greensburg, Pa. are among 56 colored WACS and Inez C. Chapman of Lansdowne, Pa. who recently were promoted to privates first class at the Air Service Command Base in California's San Joaquin Valley. They arrived there last September with the first detachment of colored WACS stationed in California's San Joaquin Valley. Pfc. Sanders and Chapman received their basic training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa.

Born November 15, 1921, Pfc. Sanders resided with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kirkland, at Greensburg, Pa., before entering the Army. She attended Greensburg

Born February 18, 1904, in Philadelphia, Pa., Pfc. Chapman, resided at 132 Bartram avenue before entering the Army. She is a graduate of the Lansdowne High School.

Puerto Rican WACs To Be Trained Here

Amsterdam News New York, N.Y. 11-25-44

ATLANTA—More than 100 Puerto Rican senoritas, as WAC recruits, have been flown by the Army Air Transport Command to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., for basic training, headquarters Fourth Service Command has announced.

Each of the planes carried an Army nurse to follow the practice of strict chaperonage of young unmarried daughters still followed by many Puerto Rican families. These young women were recruited by a party of four Negro WACs who went there in September, after they had received many inquiries from the island on how they might join the WAC. 11-25-44

Upon completion of basic training at Fort Oglethorpe, these Puerto Rican women, like American WACs, will be assigned wherever they are needed according to their qualifications an dspecial skills.

New York WACs Among Those Assigned To Western Fort

N.Y. Sunday News 12-3-44

Among those welcoming the very first detachment of WACs at the Fort Lewis railroad station were Lt. Col. J. H. Sherman of Babson Park, Fla., 14th engineer group commander, and Capt. Janet Eisenach of Milwaukee, Wisc., commanding officer of the present detachment, who extended a warm greeting to the new arrivals in words of welcome.

Under the command of Capt. Irma J. Cayton, a group of 145 young women arrived recently at the Army Service Forces training center in Fort Lewis, Wash., the first Negro members of the Corps to serve there. As the girls debarked from the train, their first words were for new station is Pfc. Josephine Hutty of New York City, whose husband, Pfc. James A. McCall, is a member of Company I, 555th engineer training battalion.

Captain Cayton is a graduate of Fisk University in Nashville, Tenn., and the detachment's executive officer, First Lt. Violet W. Hill of Batavia, Ill., was graduated from Wilson junior college in Chicago. Both officers were commissioned in July, 1942, at Fort Des Moines, Ia., with the first class of WAC officers to enter the service. They have served together continuously since with WAC detachments at Fort Huachuca.

"Most of our girls are between 21 and 25 years old," Captain Cayton disclosed, "and their skills range from clerk-typist to artist." Lieutenant Hill, whose husband is serving in the European theater of war, explained that the majority are drivers, clerk-typists, and supply clerks, with stenographers, cooks, mail clerks, and administrative aides in smaller numbers.

But it will not be all work and no play for Fort Lewis' first Negro WAC detachment. Invitations to special dances in their honor had been extended by representatives of at least a half-dozen engineer outfits before the girls had been here two hours. But First Sgt. Lawrence E. Carter of New York City, veteran of 27 months in the Alaskan theater, made sure that Company K, 56th ETB's invitation to a special dance tonight at Service Club No. 4 was the first to be accepted.—Sergeant Carter met the train.

Philadelphia Tribune

First WACs In Air Corps "Take Over" In Sioux City

8-13-44

ARMY AIR BASE, Sioux City, Iowa—Parachute riggers, radio operators, clerks, medical technicians, airplane mechanics, photoghaphers—these are but a few of the skilled jobs held by members of the latest Army unit to be added to the personnel at the Army Air Base here, the War Department has announced.

These soldiers, coming from all parts of the United States, especially eastern states, are members of the first colored WAC company in the Army Air Forces, and the second largest group of WACs in the Second Army Air Forces. They have taken over a wide variety of duties quickly and efficiently.

Commanding officers of the company is First Lieutenant Elizabeth Hampton, former case-work supervisor, of Los Angeles, California. First Lieutenant Blanche L. Scott, of Washington, D. C., is company adjutant.

First sergeant of the company is Minnie B. Gay, a student of Temple University, whose husband is editor of the Philadelphia TRIBUNE.

Activated at Wallu, Washington from WACs trained at Fort Des Moines and Fort Devens, Mass., the company was transferred from Walla Walla to Wendover Field, Utah, and then to Sioux City.

St. Louis Argus—Missouri

11-17-44

FIRST NEGRO WACS—To enter the AAF Training Command's School of Photography at Lowry Field, Colo, arrived on the Field this week. They are Pfc. Indialee Branch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Imman Davis of 4350 St. Ferdinand avenue, St. Louis, Mo., Stowe College graduate and wife of Cpl. Wilks S. Branch, with the 5th Army in Italy,; Pvt. Lavonic Browne, daughter of Mrs. Viola R. Brown of 614 East Hendrie street, Detroit, Mich., and sister of a 5th Army GI in Italy; Pvt. Mary Jane Beach, formerly of Chicago, Ill., and wife of Cecil Q. Beach, an aviation cadet at Tuskegee, Ala. The AAF School of Photography is one of the highest ranking technical schools operated by the Training Command and is one of the most difficult for any man or woman in uniform to attend.

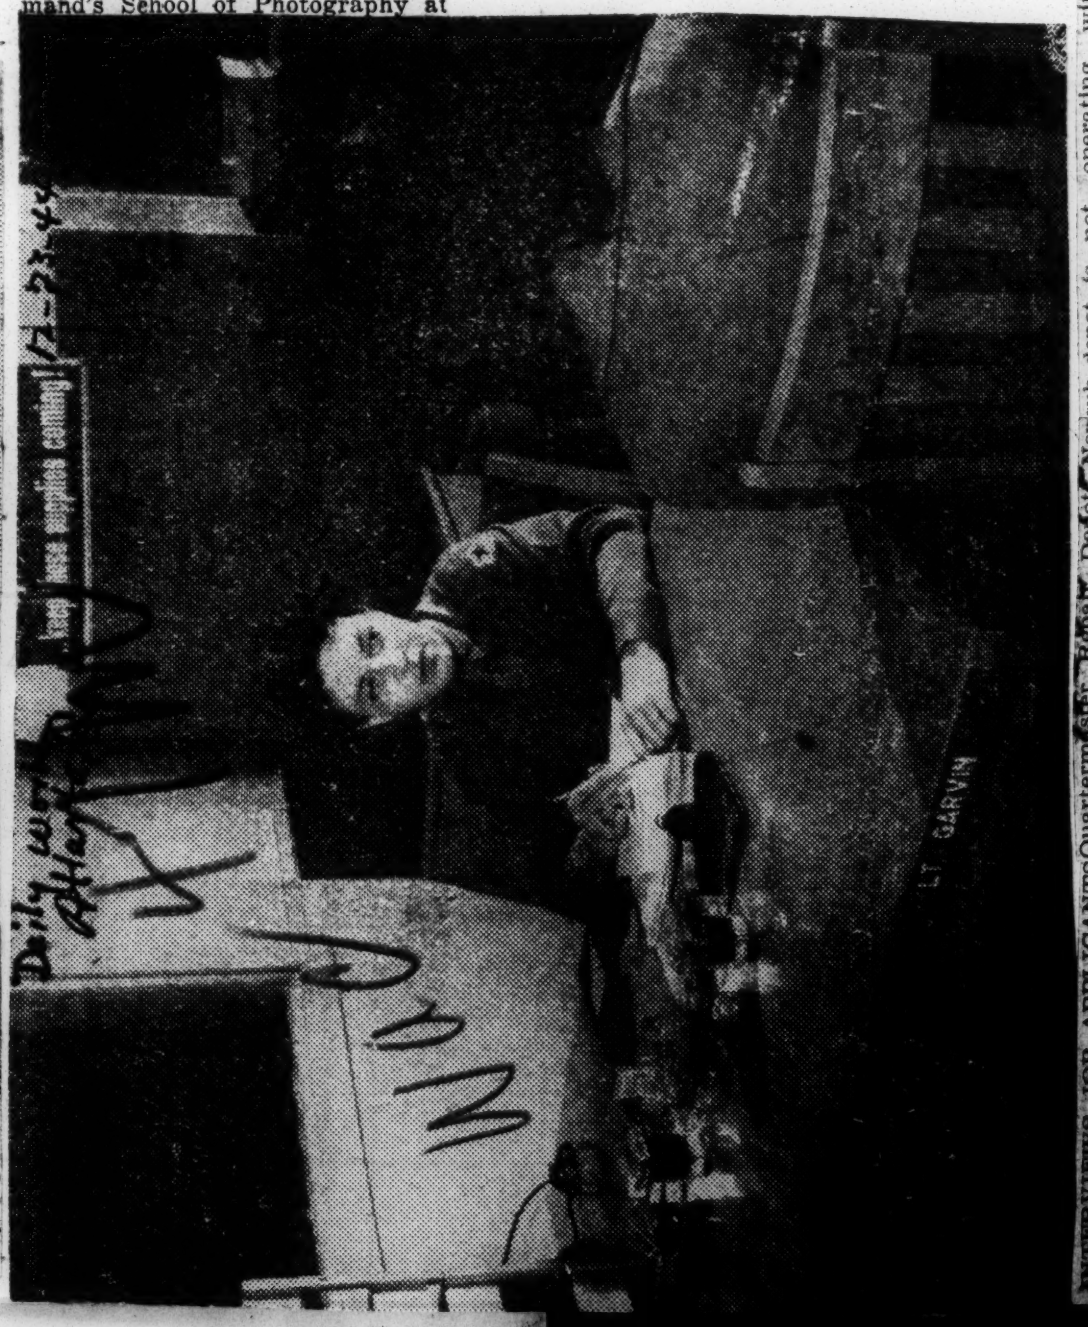
Part Of Our Fighting "Men"

Amsterdam News—New York, N. Y.

11-26-44

THESE WACS ARE DOING VITAL WORK with the Transportation Corps at the New York Port of Embarkation. Front row, left to right: Pvt. Helen Clark, Younstown, Ohio; Pfc. Gloria Parris, Bainsbridge, Ga.; Tech. 5 Sylvia La Grande, Roanoke, Va.; Staff Sgt. Juanita Goodloe, Waco, Tex. Second row, left to right: Pvt. Lois Coston, New York City; Pvt. Alice Ford, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pfc. Rosemary Thompson, Washington, D. C.; Tech. 4 Mamie Doss, Chicago, Ill.; Pvt. Margaret Goins, Philadelphia, Pa. Third row: Pfc. Evelyn Lozi, Long Island, N. Y.; Tech. 5 Dorothy Williams, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pfc. Vivian Brwn, Toledo, O.; Tech. 5 Adeline Bell, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Pvt. Venise Dawson, Cambridge, Mass.

11-25-44



Daily Worker

INTERVIEWS JOB APPLICANTS Quartermaster Depot Newsub-depot is not operating with Lt. Stella G. Garvin (WAC) York City, has a busy Job Inter-more than 2,000 employees.—(U. S. viewing applicants at the rapidlySignal Corps Photo from Bureau of

Physical Therapy Aides

World – Memphis, Tenn.
11-10-44

Left to right: Second Lieutenants Valieanne Taylor, Atlanta, Georgia; Lilyanne Plummer, Washington, D. C., and Muriel Joy Davis, Evanston, Illinois, are the first civilian cadets to be graduated from the Ninth Service Command's School for Physical Therapy and Medical Technicians at Fort Huachuca, Arizona. Upon completion of one year of training and practical work, they were commissioned on October 23 as second lieutenants, A. U. S., Medical Department. (Photo by U. S. Army Signal Corps.)

11-10-44

Wacs

Six Wacs Are Among 9 To Receive Bars

World – Memphis, Tenn
11-10-44

FORT HUACHUCA, Arizona — (SNS) — The first Army-trained Negro physical therapy aides were commissioned as second lieutenants, Medical Department, at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, upon their graduation October 20, from the Ninth Service Command's School for Physical Therapy and Medical Technicians the War Department announced Monday.

Prior to the graduation of the class, made up of six enlisted members of the Women's Army Corps, three civilian cadets, only three Negro women held commissions in the Army as physical therapy aides.

On October 1, 1943, the first three civilian cadets reported to Fort Huachuca to begin training. After six months of theory, they served at the station hospital as apprentices for another six months.

WACS ADDED 11-10-44

Last January 10, six Wacs were added to the first class. They spent six months in classroom study, and served a three months' apprenticeship at the Fort's station hospital, during which time their work was closely supervised by Major Phillip T. Johnson of Washington, D. C., who was recognized in civilian life as one of the nation's foremost physio-therapists, and other officers of the Medical Department.

Colonel Midian O. Bousefield, Medical Corps, commandant of the school at Fort Hauchuca, points out that physio-therapy is rapidly gaining a forward place in the medical world.

The former civilian cadets who were sworn into the Army October 20 are Second Lieutenants Muriel Joy Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Davis, 1501 Oak Street, Evanston, Illinois, Lilyanne Plummer, daughter of Mrs. Rosa Plummer, 310 "I" Street N. W., Washington, D. C. and Valjeanne Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Taylor, 383 Forrest Avenue, NE., Atlanta, Georgia. They are now at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin.

11-10-44

These Wacs were commissioned Second Lieutenants Anna Lee Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Ida Belle Rogers, 595 Polk Street, Memphis; Edythe Bingham, daughter of Mrs. Amanda R. Bingham, 206 Jackson Street, Talladega, Alabama; Ruth R. Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Jones, Cofield, North Carolina; Bernice Lockhart, daughter of Mrs. Birdie Lockhart, 429 Church Street, Hot Springs, Arkansas; Mary Lou Shannon, daughter of Mr. Ollie Shannon, Madison, Arkansas and Mildred Robinson, daughter of Mrs. Ida G. Robinson, 1319 Central Avenue, Baltimore, Maryland.

11-10-44

Each of the newly-commissioned physical therapy aides is a graduate of an accredited college, holding a degree in physical education or science. All have been assigned to Army hospitals in the United States.

'Wainwrights' Reach Ft. Des Moines and Part

Iowa Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

Negro women from New York state who were recruited along with 200 other New Yorkers as members of a company of women who would honor the name of General Wainwright who is in a Japanese prison camp, by banning themselves together, living and training as one separate company, found another story when they reached Fort Des Moines WAC Training Center, on Nov. 1, it was learned this week.

11-16-44

Though honored and feted in New York's Grand Central Palace, photographed and praised for being a group of white and colored women who would set a precedent by being able to live and train together to serve their country, the Negro Wainwrights learned that they are the onlookers while the white Wainwright WACs carry the banner of their company, live in a separate building which is designated the "Wainwrights."

11-16-44

Arriving at Ft. Des Moines the Wainwrights separated—the white women went to the special Wainwright barracks, known as Company 13, and the 12 Negro women were placed in a Negro company, No. 6.

"Though we share none of the Wainwright honors here we are forced to wear the armbands and take a good razzing because we cannot take any part with the Wainwrights," one member said.

"Even Col. Hobby hoped that the white and colored girls would get along in one company," the discouraged Negro Wainwright WAC added

Follows Footsteps

Courier
News, N.Y. N.Y.
5-6-44

PVT. HILDA P. GRIGGS, the fifth member of her immediate family to become a member of one of the military services, is a daughter of Mrs. Ethel B. Pratt, of 519 W. 4th St., Palmyra, N. J., and a recent graduate of the Army Clerk's School at First WAC Training Center. Private Griggs is a graduate of Palmyra High School. Before enlisting in the WAC, she was a stock clerk at Blauner's Department Store in Philadelphia, Pa. She was also a machine operator in Riverside, N. J. Her brothers, 2nd Lt. Maurice Griggs, Sgt. Edward Griggs and Pvt. Joseph Griggs, are members of the Army, while A S Warren Griggs is serving with the Navy.

Mixed WAC Unit Fizzled Out in Iowa, Girls Say

The People's Voice
New York N.Y.
11-25-44

By KEN JESSAMY

Bringing into glaring focus need for legislation to abolish jimcro in the armed forces, is the report that Negro women, recruited from the New York area to join the Women's Army Corps as members of the Jonathan Wainwright Company, are incensed at the jimcro treatment they are receiving at WAC training headquarters at Fort Des-Moines, Iowa. 11-25-44

At the induction ceremonies held here early this month at Grand Central Station, WAC recruiting headquarters, the company which was reported away from the colored girls who came out orders from Colonel McCroskie, with the Wainwright group have been put by themselves . . . that PV could not reach Col. Mc Croskie who was reported away from his post on temporary duty. them intend to write to 480 Lexington av (WAC quarters) and ask the why, since the WAC recruiting office at they were under the impression Grand Central Palace, when called

Last week PV contacted Lt. David Friedland, Public Relations Director at the women were placed in a Negro company, No. 6. PV received a letter and speeches by military personnel stressed the fact that this company would establish a precedent. in that it would be the first WAC division to have Negro and white country, a service for which they ironically enough, in face of the facts, volunteered.

Bystander

On arrival at Des Moines, however, the Wainwrights were separated—the white women went to the special Wainwright barracks, known as Company 13, and the 12 Negro women were placed in a Negro company, No. 6.

Last week PV contacted Lt. David Friedland, Public Relations Director at from one of the white women went PV could not reach Col. Mc Croskie who was reported away from his post on temporary duty. them intend to write to 480 Lexington av (WAC quarters) and ask the why, since the WAC recruiting office at they were under the impression Grand Central Palace, when called by PV on Monday, said that she was ignorant of the conditions at Des Moines, adding that at Grand Central they were only concerned with recruiting and had nothing to do with training regulations.

11-25-44

Call – Kansas City, Mo.
8-11-44

8-12-44

WACS AT CAMP FORREST.—Not all the jobs in WAC Detachment No. 2 stationed at Camp Forrest, Tenn., are at the Station hospital. There must be a staff of non-commissioned officers to assist company officers in the administration and efficient running of the detachment. Pictured with Capt. A. Noel Campbell of Tuskegee, Ala., are, left to right. S.-Sgt. Hattie R. Metz of Gainsville, Fla., supply sergeant; Sgt. Marcell Booker of Richmond, Va., mail clerk; 1st Sgt. Clovis Gooodloe of Waco, Texas, first sergeant of the detachment; S.-Sgt. Josephine Hartzog of Philadelphia, Pa., mess sergeant; and Cpl. Amelia Outen of Columbia, S. C., personnel clerk.—(Photo by U. S. Army Signal Corps.)

Colored WACs Guarded From White Troops

Journal & Guide
Norfolk Va.

Army Takes Action After Threatened Trouble

8-12-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—A 24-hour guard has been placed by the Army around the Negro WAC area at Camp Forest, Tenn., and the area declared "off limits" to all white soldiers in accordance with an order of the Inspector General's Office of the War Department, following threatened rape and invasion by white paratroopers.

The incident first came to light about a month ago when there was threatened trouble between the white paratroopers and Negro soldiers at the camp from the outcome of the molestation of the Negro WACs. The post denied, however, that any such problem was involved—but the posting of the 24-hour guard would seem to substantiate the charges.

6-17-44

Lt. Minafield is a graduate of Atlanta High School, and Clark University. She enlisted in the WAC's while a teacher in the Atlanta high schools, in 1942, and was sent to Des Moines, Iowa, for basic training. On completion of the course was ordered to First WAC Training Center at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, from there she was sent to Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, where she received her commission as 2nd Lt. in March, 1944. Lt. Minafield was assigned to the Philadelphia Signal Depot and placed in the Inventory Control Branch, where she released a man for overseas duty.

Jailing of WAC Soldier Protested

Baltimore Md. 10-14-44
FORT BENNING, Ga.—An investigation has been requested in the case of a Wac private who, with an Army service company was arrested and held in a cell with thirty-nine other women for twenty-four hours on a people and was forced to sit on the concrete floor. At the trial, charge of disorderly conduct.

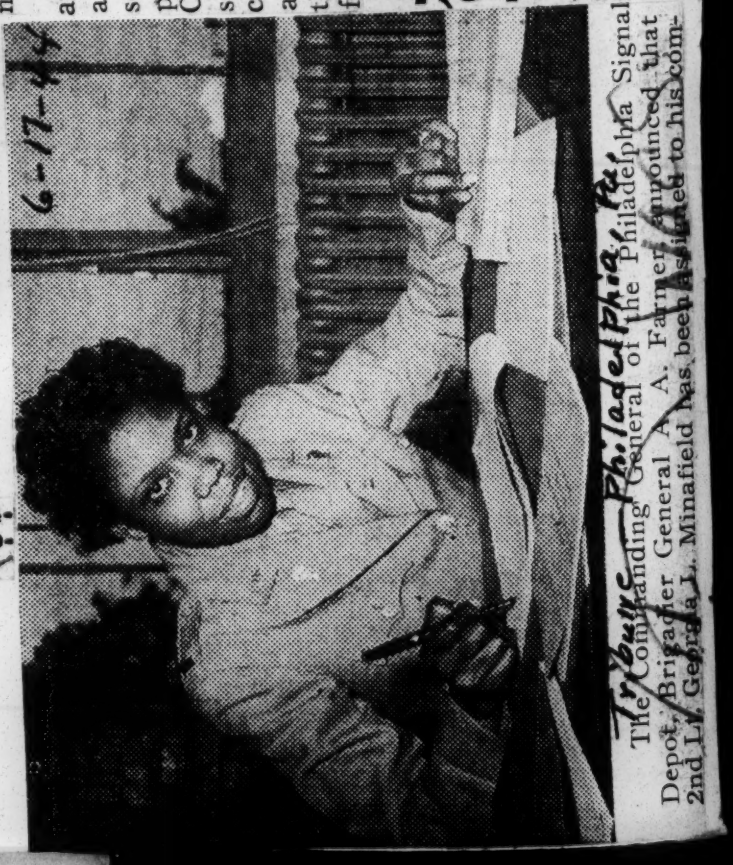
According to reports, the two were riding in a taxicab from Columbus when a State policeman halted them within two miles of this military reservation and ordered them to police headquarters where they were searched and held without any charge being preferred.

Forty in One Cell

The Wac said she was placed in a cell with thirty-nine other women for twenty-four hours on a people and was forced to sit on the concrete floor. At the trial, the arresting officer charged that the soldier and the Wac were conducting themselves in a disorderly manner in the taxicab.

Both pleaded "not guilty" and were turned over to the provost marshal's office and brought back to the post, where they were released to their respective commanding officers. 10-14-44

There were no military authorities present during the trial and only the testimony of the prosecuting witness was heard.



6-17-44

Philadelphia Inquirer

The Commanding General of the Philadelphia Signalin company Depot, Brigadier General A. A. Farmer announced that geant, was 2nd Lt. Georgia J. Minafield has been assigned to his comby PV on Monday, said that she was ignorant of the conditions at Des Moines, adding that at Grand Central they were only concerned with recruiting and had nothing to do with training regulations.

11-25-44

Call – Kansas City, Mo.
8-11-44

3-10-44

WACS AT CAMP FORREST.—Not all the jobs in WAC Detachment No. 2 stationed at Camp Forrest, Tenn., are at the Station hospital. There must be a staff of non-commissioned officers to assist company officers in the administration and efficient running of the detachment. Pictured with Capt. A. Noel Campbell of Tuskegee, Ala., are, left to right. S.-Sgt. Hattie R. Metz of Gainsville, Fla., supply sergeant; Sgt. Marcell Booker of Richmond, Va., mail clerk; 1st Sgt. Clovis Gooodloe of Waco, Texas, first sergeant of the detachment; S.-Sgt. Josephine Hartzog of Philadelphia, Pa., mess sergeant; and Cpl. Amelia Outen of Columbia, S. C., personnel clerk.—(Photo by U. S. Army Signal Corps.)

Colored WACs Guarded From White Troops

Journal & Guide
Norfolk Va.

Army Takes Action After Threatened Trouble

8-12-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—A 24-hour guard has been placed by the Army around the Negro WAC area at Camp Forest, Tenn., and the area declared "off limits" to all white soldiers in accordance with an order of the Inspector General's Office of the War Department, following threatened rape and invasion by white paratroopers.

The incident first came to light about a month ago when there was threatened trouble between the white paratroopers and Negro soldiers at the camp from the outcome of the molestation of the Negro WACs. The post denied, however, that any such problem was involved—but the posting of the 24-hour guard would seem to substantiate the charges.

6-17-44

t. Minafield is a graduate of Atlanta High School, Clark University. She enlisted in the WAC's while her in the Atlanta high schools, in 1942, and was to Des Moines, Iowa, for basic training. On com-on of the course was ordered to First WAC Training r at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, from there she was to Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, where she received her mission as 2nd Lt. in March, 1944. Lt. Minafield was ned to the Philadelphia Signal Depot and placed in nventory Control Branch, where she released a man verseas duty.

mand

Jailing of WAC Officer Protested

Soldier Protested Jailing of Wac Officer

Baltimore, Md. 10-14-44

FORT BENNING, Ga.—An investigation has been requested in preferred.

Forty in One Cell

The case of a Wac private who, while riding in a taxicab from Columbus when a State policeman halted them within two miles of this military reservation and ordered them to police headquarters where they were searched and held without any charge being

According to reports, the two were riding in a taxicab from Columbus when a State policeman halted them within two miles of this military reservation and ordered them to police headquarters where they were searched and held without any charge being preferred.

Forty in One Cell

The Wac said, she was placed in a cell with thirty-nine other women and held in a people and was forced to sit on the concrete floor. At the trial, only the testimony of the prosecuting witness was heard.

The arresting officer charged that the soldier and the Wac were conducting themselves in a disorderly manner in the taxicab.

Both pleaded "not guilty" and were turned over to the provost marshal's office and brought back to the post, where they were released to their respective commanding officers. 10-14-44

There were no military authorities present during the trial and only the testimony of the prosecuting witness was heard.

6-17-44

Philadelphia, Pa.

The Commanding General A. A. Farmer announced that geant, was Depot, Brigadier General Signalin company 2nd Lt. Georgia L. Minafield has been assigned to his com-jail for charge of

Mrs. FDR Concerned, Col. Hobby Regrets, but Prejudice Keeps These Wacs from Foreign Posts

Afro American - Baltimore, Md. 12-2-44

While white service women are serving in every theatre of war, colored Wac's are confined to the U.S., due, according to Col. Hobby's office, to prejudiced theatre commanders. The colored Wac's are doing the same type of work white Wac's are doing overseas. Form left to right are Pfc. Sally Alexander, at a New York Port of Embarkation, rated as an expert stock clerk; Technician Fifth Grade Annie Lawson of Washington, La., is shown preparing patient on X-ray table while Technician Fifth Grade Gertrude C. Hunt of Decature, Ill., adjusts machine. Being a fast, efficient typist is but one of the qualifications of Pvt. Evelyn Anderson of New City assigned to Base Photo Laboratory at Walla Walla Army Air Field, Wash.

12-2-44

12-2-44

Ft. Benning WACs Observe Their First Anniversary

Tribune — Memphis, Tenn.

9-22-44

Lt. Corrie Sherard Of Atlanta Commanding Officer, Gives Party

FORT BENNING, Georgia — First anniversary of the WAC Detachment, Station Complement, Section II, at Fort Benning, was observed with a reception at Service Club Four. Presented for recognition were members of the Detachment who arrived on the Post wtih the first contingent of WACs last September 14, a year ago.

Arrangements for the celebration were made by First Lieutenant Corrie S. Sherard, of Atlanta, Ga., commanding officer of the Detachment. Celebrants, for the most part servicemen from the Reception Center, Harmony Church Area and other units of the Post gave the WACs a rousing round of applause as their birthday cake, topped by a glowing candle, was brought to the center of the lobby. Overhead the decoration was a riot of colors that matched the attraction of the chic, off-duty uniforms of the servicewomen.

9-22-44

USE SWING BAND

For music the WACs had the first swing orchestra of the 218th Army Band. The musicians dedicated several selected numbers as tribute to the occasion.

More representative of the first anniversary of the WAC Detachment, however, were the accomplishments made during the past year. WACs have been performing with a high degree of skill and efficiency a variety of jobs at Station Hospital, Reception Center, and their own Detachment.

9-22-44

At Station Hospital WACs are assigned as Laboratory Technicians, Hospital Orderlies, Dental, Surgical, Medical and X-Ray Technicians. There are eighty-six service women in the Reception Center, assigned to the following sections:

Reception Center Mail Room, 12; Personnel Section, 10; Insurance, 13; Quartermaster, 8; Headquarters, 5; Dispensaries, 23; Classification, 4; Records, 10 ;and Special Service Office, 1.

ACTIVATED LAST FALL

They also perform special duties as sales clerks, mimeograph operators, and beauty culturists. One member of the Detachment is assistant to the Librarian of Library Number 4.

The WAC Detachment was activated last fall with a contingent of 125 service women, all of whom came to Fort Benning from the First WAC Center, Des Moines, Iowa. Since then, the strength of the Detachment has been built up with newly trained WACs from Des Moines, and specialists from Station Hospital, Fort Huachuca, Arizona.

9-22-44

Second Lt. Lucille Y. Mayo served as the first commanding officer of the Detachment, having arrived on the Post September 3, 1943, with an advanced cadre of twelve WACs. She was succeeded this spring by First Lt. Sherard, former commanding officer of WAC Detachment, Section II, Fort McClellan, Alabama.

WOMEN COMMENDED

Post officials have made frequent visits to the WAC Area, and commended the service women for the contributions they have made to the war efforts. Brig. Gen. William H. Hobson, Post Commander of Fort Benning, awarded thirty members of the Detachment with good conduct medals. Secretary of War Stimson included the WAC Detachment on his tour of Fort Benning.

9-22-44

Other officers are 2nd Lt. Patricia S. Gunter, Executive Officer of the Detachment; Technical Sergeant Ella T Madison, First Sergeant; Sgt. Mildred R. Lar Sheay, Company Clerk; Sgt. Bernice Lee, Supply Sergeant; and Staff Sergeant Alberta Simms, Mess Sergeant.

1st Lt. Jack Davis in an interview here last week. Lt. Davis is making an appeal for women to join the WACs and he emphasized both the need for women to serve the country and the advantages which accrue from such service to the WAC herself.

WAC Recruits Badly Needed; Stress Advantages To Girls

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va.

9-16-44

NORFOLK—"The war is not over yet and there is still an urgent need for recruits in the Women's Army Corps," declared public relations officer for the

ADVANTAGES LISTED

9-16-44

For instance, he points out, women who join the WACs get specialized training in all kinds of jobs; they get pay while they are learning; they have the chance to request where they want to be stationed and almost invariably get assigned near their homes; they will leave the Army with valuable vocational training which will make it possible for them to get good jobs after the war; they can earn ratings rapidly and get increases in pay with every rating; and they will leave the Army with veteran preference in job opportunities and with every protection afforded male soldiers by the GI bill of rights and other post-war, veteran legislation.

9-16-44

These opportunities, he declared, are added to the chance to serve the country and to do an effective job toward winning the war. Lt. Davis believes that many women could advance their own interests considerably by joining the WACs and at the same time advance the interests of their country.

Requirement for qualification are not difficult to meet. The WAC requires the same physical standard that the Army sets up.

The mental requirements can be met by any person with two years of high school and by many who have had no high school training. The age limits are 20-45.

9-16-44

GO TO DES MOINES

The WAC recruits are given six weeks basic training at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., or Fort Des Moines, Iowa. In the case of colored recruits, the WAC sends them all to Fort Des Moines for the obvious reason that they would enjoy life in Iowa better than in Georgia. They are paid all the time and then, after the basic training, are given specific duties and specialized training in any job they like to do.

Lt. Davis emphatically warned against indifference to the Army's needs because newspaper headlines seem to suggest that the war is nearly over. He says there is much yet to be done before victory is assured and that now is as good a time as ever to get in the Army and to take advantage of the benefits offered to the individual.

Young women in the Eastern Virginia area are urged to come to the WAC headquarters, Room 415, Norfolk Post Office Building, or to write or call that office. Every effort will be made to process the candidate and to get her enlisted in the WAC. While Lt. Davis represents the area which includes Norfolk, Portsmouth, Suffolk, Newport News, Smithfield, Lawrenceville, and all other towns down to the North Carolina line, he urges that there is a need for WAC recruits from all areas of the country and suggests that women who are interested should get in touch with their local WAC recruiting office, usually located in the federal post office building in their town.

9-16-44

Army Reverses Decision; Iowa WAC's to Keep Band

Afro American, Baltimore

9-26-44

WASHINGTON

The decision to disband the WAC band at the WAC Training Center, Fort Des Moines, Iowa, has been reversed, it was learned last Saturday.

At the Fort, this week, it was reported that WAC's, both colored and white, had urged the keeping of the band, because, said they, "It had more rhythm and could be drilled to easier than the first band."

Morale Builder

Colonel Frank U. McCoskrie, commanding officer of the WAC Training Center, recommended that the band be not disbanded because its benefit to morale outweighed in importance the necessity for the transfer of its personnel to other assignments at this time.

The War Department approved his recommendation and decided to continue the band. It had previously taken the position that the decision to disband the band was in furtherance of the war effort on the ground that the acute need for personnel did not justify the retention of so many Army bands.

Would Combine Two

The colored band has never been officially authorized, but was organized locally, as only one band is allotted to one post. The authorized WAC band at the Fort Des Moines WAC Training Center is the 400th Army Service Forces Band, consisting of white personnel. Suggestions were made in various quarters that colored musical talent be integrated into the white WAC band.

In the band are:

Cpl. Novella J. Cromer, clarinet; Pfc. Audrey Gross, tenor sax, of Baltimore;

Pfc. Romaine Saunders, clarinet and Pfc. Maude C. Blackwood, French horn, Philadelphia;

Pfc. Violet Moore, trumpet; T/5 Gloria V. Davis, trombone and T/5 Lillian P. Brown, clarinet, all of NYC;

Pfc. Jane R. Holloway, drums, of Washington, D.C.; Pfc. Inez Stroud, sax, Greensboro, N.C.; Pfc. Lenora L. Dial, tuba, Mumford, Ala.;

T/5 Constance A. Hurlins, trumpet, Verona, N.J.; Pfc. Yvonne L. Payne, cornet, Richmond, Va.; Pfc Rachel Stewart, French horn, Brooklyn, N.Y.;

Pfc. Celestine McNeil, drums, Pensacola, Fla.; Sgt. Lenora J. Hall, director, Jacksonville, Fla.; and Lt. Thelma Brown, band officer, Arcadia, Fla.

WACs at Maxton, N. C.

Amsterdam News, New York, N.Y.

Sir: I am writing you in behalf of the members of Squadron D-1, the colored WACs at this base. The aforementioned soldiers are the first colored WACs and the only colored WACs in the 1st Troop Carrier Command, which has eight bases in different parts of the U. S.

11-23-44

The inclosed information should be noted for your future reference and immediate guidance: There are 120 enlisted women and 2 WAC officers, both first lieutenants. Their positions range from telephone operators on the flight line, clerk-typists in the Base Military Personnel Office, drivers of staff cars, command cars, etc., for the Base Transport Office, control tower operators for the airplanes, nurses aides in the station hospital, etc. They hail from all parts of the country, from all walks of life and are deserving of a little publicity.

The public relations officer of this base was supposed to have given the above information to the Associated Colored Press about three months ago, when the cadre for aforesaid WACs arrived here, but hasn't yet accomplished said promise. I suggest you either contact Lt. Camille F. Thomas, commanding officer, Squadron D-1, Lmaab—Maxton, N. C., or yours truly at the address listed below, informing us what you will do about it, if you can. There are also 350 colored enlisted men here at this base, of which I am one. Some are overseas returnees. I will either hear from you directly or through action taken through the BEC this base.

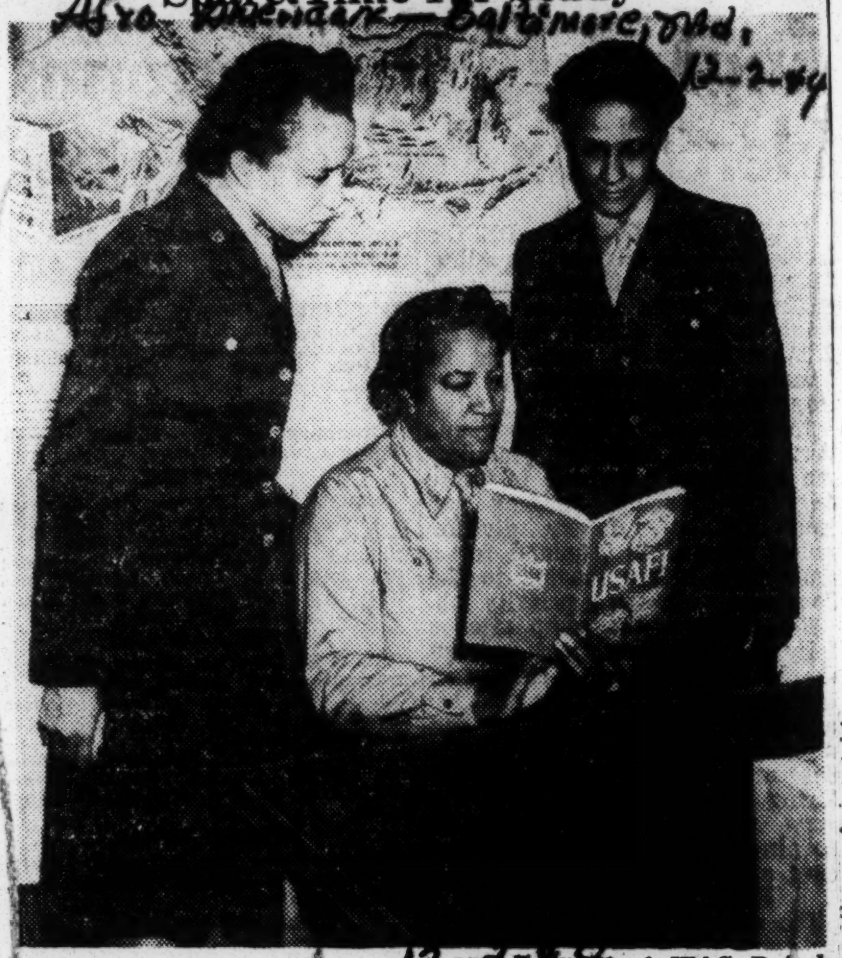
11-23-44

Cpl. Vincent H. Syphax,
Military Personnel Office,
Lmaab-Maxton, N. C.

Spare Time for Study

Afro American, Baltimore, Md.

12-2-44



Captain Harriette B. White, commanding officer of WAC Detachment No. 2, stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C., is shown with two members of the Women's Army Corps, who are taking courses in survey in English literature and shorthand offered by the United States Armed Forces Institute through the information and education branch at Fort Bragg. Shown from left to right are: Pvt. Male L. Hall, Lexington, Va., Captain White and S/Sgt. Florine B. Upton, Sweetwater, Tenn.

WAC Prejudice Laid to Foreign Service Command

Afro American, Baltimore, Md. 12-2-44

Mrs. Roosevelt Intercedes; Told Hobby's Office Is Tied by Lack of Requisitions from War Theatres

WASHINGTON

The absence of colored WAC's abroad was charged to the prejudice of commanders by the office of Col. Oveta Culp Hobby in a statement to Mrs. Roosevelt, this week.

The First Lady had interceded on behalf of the AFRO-AMERICAN which requested her to help break the bottle neck that is keeping colored WAC's at home while whites are being dispatched to all quartesr of the globe.

She was informed by War Department officials that WAC's are sent out when requested by commanders and that so far, none of the generals have requested colored WAC replacements.

In the meantime, white WAC's are serving in England, France, North Africa, Italy, New Caledonia, Australia, New Guinea, Hawaii, Egypt, India, Labrador, Casablanca, and China.

12-2-44

Lt. Col. Jessie P. Rice said in reply to the letter of Miss Malvina C. Thompson, secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt: "Col. Hobby shares Mrs. Roosevelt's feeling concerning overseas service for colored members of our corps. The War Department sends overseas only personnel requisitioned by the theatre commanders and no colored personnel has been requisitioned.

"Consideration of this situation was recently requested and we hope favorable action will be taken by theatre commanders."

Puerto Rican WACs Arrive

Pittsburgh Courier

11-25-44

ATLANTA—(ANP)—More than married daughters still followed by 100 Puerto Rican senoritas, as many Puerto Rican families. These WAC recruits, have been flown by the Army Air Transport Command to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., for basic training, headquarters of the Fourth Service Command announced.

Each of the planes carried an Army nurse to aid in the practice of strict discipline of young women at the post.

Puerto Rican women, like American Wacs, will be assigned wherever they are needed according to their special qualifications and skills.

47m-1944 Wacs

Fort Leonard Wood WACs Fine Cager Tossers

THE BASKETBALL TEAM of WAC Detachment No. 2, Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., which has been beaten by only one of the post teams it has met this season.

Six Wacs Are Among 9 To Receive Bars

FORT HUACHUCA, Arizona (SNS) — The first Army-trained Negro physical therapy aides were commissioned as second lieutenants, Medical Department, at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, upon their graduation October 20, from the Ninth Service Command's School for Physical Therapy and Medical Technicians the War Department announced Monday.

Prior to the graduation of the class, made up of six enlisted members of the Women's Army Corps, three civilian cadets, only three Negro women held commissions in the Army as physical therapy aides.

On October 1, 1943 the first three civilian cadets reported to Fort Huachuca to begin training. After six months of theory, they served at the station hospital as apprentices for another six months.

WACS ADDED

Last January 10, six Wacs were added to the first class. They spent six months in classroom study, and served a three months' apprenticeship at the Fort's station hospital, during which time their work was closely supervised by Major Phillip T. Johnson of Washington, D. C., who was recognized in civilian life as one of the nation's foremost physio-therapists, and other officers of the Medical Department.

Colonel Midian O. Bousefield, Medical Corps, commandant of the school at Fort Huachuca, points out that physio-therapy is rapidly gaining a forward place in the medical world.

The former civilian cadets who were sworn into the Army October 20 are: Second Lieutenants Muriel Joy Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Davis, 1501 Oak Street, Evanston, Illinois, Lilyanne Plummer, daughter of Mrs. Rosa Plummer, 310 "I" Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. and Valjeanne Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George S. Taylor, 383 Forrest Avenue, NE., Atlanta, Georgia. They are now at Camp McCoy, Wisconsin.

These Wacs were commissioned Second Lieutenants Anna Lee Rogers, daughter of Mrs. Ida Belle Rogers, 595 Polk Street, Memphis; Edythe Bingham, daughter of Mrs. Amanda R. Bingham, 206 Jackson Street, Talladega, Alabama; Ruth R. Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Jones, Cofield, North Carolina; Bernice Lockhart, daughter of Mrs. Birdie Lockhart, 429 Church Street, Hot Springs, Arkansas; Mary Lou Shannon, daughter of Mr. Ollie Shannon, Madison, Arkansas and Mildred Robinson, daughter of Mrs. Ida G. Robinson, 1319 Central Avenue, Baltimore, Maryland.

Each of the newly-commissioned physical therapy aides is a graduate of an accredited college, holding a degree in physical education or science. All have been assigned to Army hospitals in the United States.

WAC Assigned To Post Publication Office

At Fort Huachuca, Arizona, Pfc. Pearle Florence Roberson is the clerk for the Post Publication Office. Pfc. Roberson is a graduate of Lewis Business College in Indianapolis, Ind. She took two years nurse training at the Red Cross Hospital, Louisville, Ky., and was registrar at the Sunshine Beauty College, Indianapolis, before entering the service.

WAC Guilty Of Bigamy; 1-Year Term Suspended

HAMPTON—Mrs. Pearl Jackson Wilson, a member of the Women's Army Corps, was found guilty of bigamy in the Elizabeth City County Circuit Court last week, and given a sentence of one year in the penitentiary by Judge John

MARRIED AGAIN 6-24-44

Wilson, at which time she gave her home address as Richmond. She was arrested in Danville Testimony showed that Wilson allegedly married William Richardson on December 10, 1933, and, without the dress as Cascade. She was divorce, married Odell Wilson on June 29, 1942, with a license obtained in the office of Clerk of Court R. E. Weymouth who is on the sick list.

However, impressed by the defendant's good character, the court suspended the sentence upon good behavior and gave Mrs. Wilson permission to rejoin her Army command.

SGT. HAZEL E. GILES

Pretty St. Louis Wac who was the first Negro girl to graduate from the Army hospital at Hot Springs, Ark. She was the highest ranking Wac in a class of virtually all whites. She is now at Regional hospital No. 2 at Ft. Jackson, S. C. She recently visited her mother in St. Louis while on a furlough.

First Air WAC Company Averages Test of 108.5

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

ARMY AIR BASE, SIOUX CITY, Iowa — Parachute riggers, radio operators, clerks, medical technicians, airplane mechanics, photographers—these are but a few of the skilled jobs held by members of the latest Army unit to be added to the personnel at Sioux City Army Air Base, the War Department announced, this week. 5-13-44

These soldiers, coming from all parts of the United States, especially Eastern States, are members of the first colored WAC company in the Army Air Forces, and of the second largest group of WACs in the Second Army Air Force. They have taken over a wide variety of duties quickly and efficiently.

Average Test 108.5

Prepared by the Army for many vital jobs, more than half of the colored WAC company are college-trained women, the average age is 24, and their average on the Army's Classification Test was 108.5. More than one-fourth of the group made over 110, the mark required for officers' training. A large number of the WACs are ex-school teachers or were formerly in government work.

5-13-44

Typical of the young women who have taken over the WAC barracks at the air base is First Lieutenant Elizabeth Hampton, commanding officer of the company, whose home is Los Angeles, Calif. Lieutenant Hampton was a member of the first Officers' Candidate School class to graduate from Fort Des Moines, in 1942.

Washingtonian Is Adjutant

The company adjutant, Lieutenant Blanche L. Scott, 1826 H Street, Northwest, Washington, D.C., received a promotion from second to first lieutenant March 7, several weeks before the company was transferred to Sious City. Lieutenant Scott attended Howard University, Washington, D.C., for three and a half years, and received her gold bars in the first WAC class to be chosen from the ranks, which graduated January 9, 1943. Both lieutenants are former recruiting officers.

First sergeant of the company is Minnie B. Gay, a graduate of Temple University, whose husband is editor of a Philadelphia weekly newspaper.

47m-1944

WACS

Six Former Wacs Get Bars as Physical Therapy Aides

Afro-American Balt, Md. 11-11-44

57 M WACS

Six former members of the Women's Army Corps, graduates of the first class for physical therapy aides at the Ninth Service Command's School for Physical Therapy and Medical Technicians. The class, which began January 10, was graduated on October 20 after six months of Theory and three months of apprenticeship at the station hospital, Fort Huachuca, Arizona. The graduates received commissions as second lieutenants in the Medical Department. Left to right: Second Lieutenants Ruth R. Jones, Cofield, North Carolina; Anna Lee Rogers, Memphis, Tennessee; Mildred Robinson, Baltimore, Maryland; Mary Lou Shannon, Madison, Arkansas; Edythe Bingham, Talladega, Alabama, Bernice Lockhart, Hot Springs, Arkansas.

47n-1944

Toward Freedom

Daily Worker—New York, N.Y.

A RECENT V-Mail letter from "Somewhere in New Guinea" jolted my conscience quite a bit. Perhaps you need to know about it too.

Bill Taylor, former chairman of the Communist Party of Baltimore, writes, in part:

"A friend sends me your column. . . . I was wondering if sometime you couldn't write one on the need for letters to the soldiers overseas. I say this because I have noticed that everyone in my Company has been writing to everyone he knows. Hundreds of letters go out, but only a few come in. 7-10-44

"Letters are important for us as they (1) keep us in touch with the 'States' and (2) give us something to read. You see, we don't have much reading matter here. Books are rare, and the only big thing we have are movies.

"Speaking of movies, imagine sitting at an outdoor theatre. It starts to rain like hell, but only a few leave. The bulk of the men and officers just sit there and get soaked, because movies are some diversion to us.

"Letters mean the same thing to the men here. Those folks back home who say they don't have time to write should remember this: We too don't have eight-hour days. We work day and night sometime, but we find time to write letters."

* * *

THIS is my second letter from Bill since his outfit left camp to be shipped. The first remains unanswered.

Which reminds me of another unanswered letter about "Toward Freedom" from London. Its author is probably in France now. Then, too, there is that long unanswered letter from a former student who was in North Africa when he wrote. By now he may be marching somewhere north of Rome.

There are others. I am ashamed to admit it, and do so because I suspect that my negligence is by no means unique.

We win-the-war actives on the civilian front get so darned busy with the urgent tasks of today—and tonight!—that some of us just "can't find time" to write letters—unless they're to GOP presidential aspirant, Governor Thomas E. Dewey, urging him to free Morris Schappes. 7-10-44

We say that we are doing "everything in our power to back-up the boys overseas." We buy war bonds, donate blood, fight discrimination, spur war production, solicit funds for the Daily Worker and The Worker, ring door-bells for the election of FDR and a win-the-war congress, and so on with the never-ending s ies of immediate tasks.

* * *

My Letter from GI Bill—
THEY Find Time To Write
by Doxie Wilkerson

MEANWHILE, the concrete personalities of GI Joe and Bill and Jim, with whom we once worked and played and fought, tend to recede into the background of our consciousness. They get metamorphosed into a sort of collective "boys overseas" whom we must do everything to "back-up." We lose contact with them as persons. 7-10-44

It is easy to forget that the resolute morale of our fighting men is one of the most imperative requirements of victory, and that nothing contributes more to build and sustain such morale than frequent and newsy letters to the fighting men we know.

Perhaps (and I hope) YOU do not need this little sermon. Anyway, it was good for me to write. I have just gone through my file of "Correspondence—pending," and pulled out all the GI letters it contained. Every one of them will be answered before you read this week's column. Moreover, I have already begun to inquire about the overseas addresses of fellows who have not written to me, but to whom I surely should write.

It may not be a bad idea for you to do a little checking-up too. Just remember Bill Taylor's closing words to me: "We work day and night sometime, but we find time to write letters."

Negroes Form Eight Per Cent Of Attack Team

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Do Excellent Job In Their Major Roles

7-10-44

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCES — (SNS) — American Negro soldiers, now constituting nine per cent of U. S. troops in Normandy, are contributing generously to the Allied effort, the War Department announced Tuesday. Before D-Day, troops of color made up eight per cent of the Americans Forces in the European Theater of Operations.

True to the indominable spirit of the American soldier, Negro fighting men are doing an excellent job in the many operational phases assigned to them.

Major General Cecil R. Moore, Chief Engineer, European Theater of Operations, recently stated that Negro soldiers have played a major role during the past two years in the accomplishment of Engineer tasks, especially in the Aviation Engineer battalions.

General Moore said that men of a battalion had volunteered their free time for six weeks in order to expedite special programs of construction.

Dump truck companies, general service regiments, and Ordnance units are performing most commendable service. The Ordnance Department has reported that more than half the total troops handling ammunition are Negro soldiers, and they are doing an efficient job.

An Engineer fire fighting company is credited with saving millions of dollars worth of such vital supplies as gasoline, paint, lumber and other stocks in depots of the United Kingdom. 7-10-44

There are two Negro Signal Construction Battalions in Normandy that have attracted praise from all who have inspected signal installations there. These units did a grand job of rehabilitating German communication lines and instruments for our use, and, in the process, captured a number of prisoners.

OF MEN AND WAR

Tribune—Washington, D.C.

By MORRIS L. MURRAY, U.S.A.

(Editor's Note: The following article is the second of a series based in letters of Morris L. Murray, former Washington Tribune employeee, now somewhere with the United States Army in Italy, to his father, F. Morris Murray; his aunt, Mrs. Ethel Murray, presently connected with The Tribune. The articles contain anecdotes, funny incidents, and other information about a soldier's life which make interesting reading.) 7-22-44

Miss Lena Horne has done more for the Negro race overseas than the 99th Pursuit Squadron or any other fighting outfit, as far as race relations are concerned. We over here think of her in terms of being the "Cordell Hull" of the race. Without a doubt, she is one of the most popular women in the world. No other Negro personality has attained the respect, admiration and popularity that is Miss Hornes' in so many parts of the world.

Lena Hornes' name is a by-word among G-I's. She's more than a pin-up girl to American soldiers, both white and colored. Lena represents a certain "sweetness" of American womanhood that touches the hearts of America's soldiers all over the world.

The three most popular pin-ups overseas are Betty Grable, Chili Williams, and Lena Horne. You find the pictures of these three American beauties everywhere, even in Italian restaurants and shop windows. The most popular pin-up of Miss Horne is the full-pager published sometime ago by Esquire. Pushing this picture is the one published in Coronet, showing just the face of Lena, throwing that heart-warming smile, that has endeared her in the hearts of America's fighting men. 7-22-44

Contrary to opinion back home, Lena Horne's popularity far exceeds that of Miss Hazel Scott here in Italy. Hazel is very popular around Negro soldier centers, and now and then one will spot her photo among other units; but this is not so with Miss Horne. Her picture is everywhere. On jeeps, two-tonners, dump trucks, and I have even seen it on a tank destroyer, headed to blast the Jerries to hell and back.

When not in the lines, the average G-I in this theatre of operations sees three movies weekly. They are mostly musical comedies and practically all of them feature Lena Horne. When she appears on the screen the audience goes into howls. The soldiers scream out compliments that run from out-and-out proposals to "My God, ain't she a gorgeous creature?"

Yes, Miss Lena Horne is a "gorgeous creature." But more than that, we over here regard her as an international representative of the loveliest sepia beauties in America. Miss Horne is not regarded by the American Army as a "colored actress," but as one of the loveliest and talented

He is Pvt. Joseph Spears, of Mobile, Ala.

"All the medics in our outfit had been killed, Pvt. Spears said. "I was crawling toward my lieutenant to try to drag him back to cover when I was hit in the right shoulder.

"The lieutenant was killed," he stated. "but I was able to crawl back to cover and was saved."

8-25-44

Negro Forces Total 700,000 Of Which 5,000 Are Officers

Courier-Journal

8-8-44

Somewhere In France, Aug. 7 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Oliver Davis, only Negro general in the U. S. Army, told war correspondents today there are 700,000 Negro troops in the United States forces, with approximately 5,000 commissioned officers, and that he was looking to the day when there would be at least 10,000 Negro officers.

Commenting on racial differences, General Davis said, "When I was wounded on Bougainville in the Solomons while attempting to rescue his lieutenant under fire is years ago recovering from injuries at Finney get along General hospital, Army medical but now establishment here.

Negro Soldier Wounded In Rescue Attempt

THOMASVILLE, Ga., Aug. 24. (AP)—A Negro infantry soldier who was wounded on Bougainville in the Solomons while attempting to rescue his lieutenant under fire is recovering from injuries at Finney General hospital, Army medical establishment here.

And None Have Done More For War Effort

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

7-13-44

Some of our war wounded will ride in comfort in this new field ambulance, the gift of 76 physically handicapped school children of the Nation's Capital. Although restricted to crutches and wheel chairs and forced to receive school instruction at home or in district hospitals, the little shut-ins insisted on doing what they could for the war effort. The ambulance, purchased with $2,022 in war savings, was presented to the Army at appropriate ceremonies last week in the Freedmen's Hospital annex.—(Official Treasury photo by Harris & Ewing.) 7.13.44

Our Troops Do Over Half Ordnance Job

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

8-1-44

HEADQUARTERS, EUROPEAN THEATER OF OPERATIONS — In supplying the fabulous amount of ammunition needed by our fighting units, Negro Ordnance troops are handling considerably more than half the total Ordnance job in the European Theater of Operations, the War Department announced today.

Trained for technical duties in Ordnance Supply, these troops also are doing their part in the combat zone as well as at the many base supply units in the United Kingdom. They are serving under their own non-commissioned officers and, in many cases, under Negro officers who have earned commissions in the U. S. Army Ordnance Department. 8-1-44

"These troops are performing very efficiently both here and on the continent," according to Lieutenant Colonel John B. Goodell, Chief of Ammunition Supply in the office of Major General Henry B. Sayler, Chief Ordnance Officer. "They have been with us a long while and we are proud of their work on this important and exacting task of ammunition supply," he added. 8-1-44

Another Ordnance function at which Negro troops are serving in the ETO is the supply of vehicles, including tanks, armored cars and trucks of all types which Ordnance must bring forward in a never-ending stream to replace combat losses. Negro troops on the continent maintain an uninterrupted flow of the machines needed by our fighting forces.

Soldier Gives Life To Save Isolated Artillery Unit

Register - San Antonio, Tex.

3-17-44

By The Associated Negro Press

NEW YORK, N. Y.—The story of how a colored soldier died in the mountains of Italy to help save an isolated American artillery unit from annihilation was told to 18,000 people at Madison Square Garden during a Red Cross War fund rally last week.

The account, given by George W. Goodman, an overseas director of the Red Cross, was one of the dramatic high lights of the enthusiastic war-spirited meeting.

An American unit, somewhere in the tortuous mountain front of Italy, faced massacre. Unless it could lay down a continuous barrage of shells against the Nazis, superior in number, they were certain to advance. The unit was desperately in need of shells.

Word had been sent by the commanding officer that a convoy of shells had to get through to the unit in a hurry or the infantry would surely be overwhelmed.

"At 4:30 as the day began to break, officers standing anxiously outside of headquarters scanning the moutain road saw a truck lurch into sight, swaying from side to side as if out of control," Goodman said. "Then appeared the second, the third, the fourth and the fifth. They were all coming like mad, but the one in front held the officers spellbound. 3-17-44

"But in a few seconds, this leading truck swung into the clearing and jolted to a stop. A huge Negro soldier threw himself from behind the wheel, saluted the colonel with a broad smile, and said, 'Am I on time, colonel?' But before the colonel could reply, the Negro toppled over dead.

"As they rolled him over they found that the left side of the man's body was riddled with machine gun bullets; that his left arm had been practically torn from the socket. The soldier had tied a piece of rope about his arm and lashed it to his body. 3-17-44

"As the colonel inquired of the dead soldier's convoy comrades what had happened, they continued to unload the shells with tears in their eyes, and all that any of them could be induced to say was 'We had a helluva time getting through those Jerries, but he led, and we had to follow.'"

Ike Commends Negro Troops

Tribune - 7-31-44

Atlanta Daily World

ADVANCED COMMAND POST, SHAEF, July 30.— (AP) — Negro troops of an antiaircraft balloon battery and a quartermaster truck company today drew official commendation from Gen. Eisenhower for their work in Normandy since D-Day.

"Your battalion landed in France June 6 under artillery, machinegun and rifle fire," Eisenhower said in a citation to the troops. 7-31-44

"Despite the losses sustained, the battalion carried out its mission with courage and determination and proved an important element of the air defense team. The cheerfulness and devotion of its officers and men have been commented on by personnel of other units. This report is most gratifying to me. I commend you and the officers and men of your battalion for your fine efforts which have merited the praise of all who have observed it."

Eisenhower spoke to the quartermaster company of its landings against intense enemy opposition, and said: 7-31-44

"Nevertheless you salvaged most of your equipment at once and within three days 90 per cent of your vehicles were operating on a 24-hour basis, a scale which was maintained for five weeks. I want you to know that I appreciate your splendid work."

Bishop Gregg Ends Tour of War Fronts

Bee - Chicago, Ill.

2-20-44

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. — (ANP) — After returning from a 50,000 air-mile trip Sunday, Bishop John A. Gregg, whose tour of battle fronts has included all except Russia, reported that colored troops are everywhere and that he is proud of their fine record.

Bishop Gregg, who has probably covered more air-miles than any other member of the cloth, was appointed by President Roosevelt to visit the various war fronts upon the recommendation of the Fraternal Council of Churches, which represents approximately 5,000,000 members.

SOLDIERS PRAISE BISHOP

Praised by the soldiers for his cheerfulness, who also marvel at his endurance, the noted A.N.E. prelate discovered that his wide experience and extensive traveling were a great asset when he made his first tour in the Pacific war area. He scored hits with the boys by his remarkable memory of particular places in cities like Kansas City, Memphis, Atlanta, Cleveland, Indianapolis, New York, Chicago and Detroit. 2-20-44

Dubbed as the "flying bishop" and "daddy" by the soldiers, Bishop Gregg showed a determination to visit them wherever they were, willingly penetrating the jungles of India, enduring the hot African sun and the Italian mud to have a chat with the boys, hear their grievances and take messages back home.

"I am proud of their fine record in this global war for they are everywhere, he said, as he expressed gratitude to President Roosevelt and the Fraternal Council of Churches for making his tour possible.

Guard Lauded By Gen. Hayes As Camp Ends

Washington, D.C. Post

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Aug. 1 (AP).—The Maryland State Guard comprised of Baltimore one of the nation's best State guard broke its 10-day encampment at Negroes and led by Capt. William Brady, had won the Dwight H. this Army post today, drew its pay trophy for the best-kept and started for home. 8-2-44 Mohr "What you are doing here will quarters and kitchens in the en- not win the war," General Hayes campment. told the guardsmen, "but what you Maj. Gen. Philip Hayes, Third may not do here might help lose Service Command head, reviewed General Hayes paid tribute to the war. . . If disaster comes later, the guardsmen yesterday as it was General Mohr, guard because of your training here you announced that the eleventh bat- commander, whom he described as will be the better able to cope talion, commanding officers. 8-2-44 with it."

47n-1944

DUMBARTON OAKS PARLEY GETS UNDER WAY

Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius greets Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, area specialist, division of international organization and security, State Department, as he arrives at the historical peace parley now under way at Dumbarton Oaks in the Washington suburb of Georgetown where the three powers—Soviet Russia, Great Britain and the United States—met to explore a lasting system of organized and peaceful relations among nations. Dr. Bunche is serving as a member of the American technical staff. Looking on are Special Assistant to the Secretary of State Leo Pasvolsky, Joseph C. Grew, former ambassador to Japan, and Venice Tipton Spraggs, Chicago Defender Washington staff correspondent

Dumbarton Oaks Parley Seeks Peace Formula In Historic Virginia Setting

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—Reports coming out of the informal peace discussions now moving into the second week out at the Dumbarton Oaks estate, in historic Georgetown, indicate a general accord and unanimity of thinking among the three powers surprising even to the most optimistic observers.

Delegates to the Dumbarton Oaks conference, coming from Soviet Russia, Great Britain and the United States, are trying to discover how a lasting system of organized and peaceful relations among nations may be established.

At the request of the Soviet government which is not at war with Japan, China is not sitting in on this first phase of the conference, but will hold a separate series of talks with the American and British delegates when Russia bows out of the picture.

Hope For Agreement

It is expected that agreement in this first phase of the parley on the broad principles for international peace and security will be reached shortly. Earlier doubts as to whether these great nations could see eye-to-eye on a formula have apparently been abandoned.

The setting for the historic meeting is one of the 18th century charm. A cordon of military police thrown around the place, with pistols dangling from their sides, brings it up to date.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull began the parley droning away over the microphone in a scarcely audible drawl: "The principle of the sovereign equality of all peace-loving states irrespective of size and strength as partners in a system of order under law must constitute the foundation of any future international organization for the maintenance of peace and security."

His words conjured up shades of a former resident of Dumbarton Oaks, John C. Calhoun, who more than 130 years ago during his term of office as Secretary of War, Vice President, and Senator from South Carolina, lived here through courtesy of his brother, James. This avid proponent of slavery nursed a fanatic belief in sovereign equality also. He believed that the right of the state should take precedence over the Union, exercising the right to nullify any act of Congress it chose. His was a belief in sovereignty which led to slavery and oppression of Negroes.

Mr. Hull was talking about a sovereignty which leads to freedom. A freedom in which such Negro countries, members of the United Nations, as Ethiopia, Liberia, and Haiti might share.

Russian Delegation Youngish

A seventeenth century chimney-piece, taken from the castle of Theobon at Loubes-Bernaicin, France, formed an imposing frame for the Russian delegation. Although youngish in appearance, they are capable. The genial smile of the young Red army general was a contrast to the determined faces of some of the others. As Ambassador Andrei A. Gromyko, leader of the group, began his speech, their expressions became immobile.

He warned, "In order to maintain peace and security, it is not enough to have a mere desire to harness aggressors and the desire to apply force against him if it should be demanded by circumstances. In order to guarantee peace and security it is absolutely necessary to have resources with aid of which aggression could be prevented or suppressed and international order maintained."

The swishings of the huge Dumbarton Oak broke the momentary silence. The MP guarding the door unconsciously adjusted his holster.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, permanent British Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, heading the British delegation recruited from the "humble official level" took over at this point treading on a middle ground between Mr. Hull's advocacy of justice and right of the small powers and Ambassador Gromyko's emphasis on the responsibility of the great powers.

The conference is expected to last for three weeks.

Bunche On Technical Staff

Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius is heading the American delegation. Dr. Ralph J. Bunche area specialist, division of international security and organization, State Department, the only Negro participating in the conference, is serving as a member of the American technical staff. He will give expert advice on broad territorial problems and dependent territories generally, including African, Pacific and Carribean. Dr. Bunche, a resident of Washington, is a former Howard university professor.

The scene of the epoch-making conference is one of the largest Georgian estates remaining within the District of Columbia. It is used at present by Harvard university as an almost monastic retreat for scholars in early Christian, mediaeval, and Byzantine research, having been given to the university along with the transfer of 16 acres of land and about 18,000 research volumes by its former owners, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bliss.

Ancient Setting

The room in which the meeting is being held has a beamed ceiling brought from the Chateau de Chimery. Five red Verona marble arches lead into the garden. An Italian cassone of the fifteenth century with Pastiglia panels, and an immense sacristy cupboard from the villa at Caprola, near Rone, constitute the major pieces of furniture.

Benches covered with the original heraldic velvet coverings from the Cathedral of Zamora in Spain flank the walls. Most of the paintings have been removed for the conference, but several remained on the walls between the arches. Ancient candelabra are placed intermittently.

A stone statue of the Madonna and Child by Reimenschneider, and a wooden polychrome figure of the Madonna were bits of statuary remaining. Silver brocaded drapes fringed in soft rose and moss green framed the high windows.

The exterior of the stately mansion is adorned with carved stone ornaments, classic cornices and crowning pediments. It has a double-pitched roof. The gently sloping knolls have been landscaped to form a picturesque period background.

Built In 1801

An orangery, a brook with miniature waterfalls, and orchard and a pew walk are on the estate. It has a tennis court and a private swimming pool. A waterwheel, and millstone stables and caretaker's house complete the illusion of a self-contained estate of a century or more ago.

The house, built in 1801, takes its name from the Rock of Dumbarton on the Clyde in Scotland which was the place of origin of the first owner of the new-world property, Ninian Beall. Beall obtained the estate by Royal grant in 1700. The name Oaks was given it by Henry Fitch Blount who bought it in 1891. It was rechristened the name Dumbarton Oaks in 1920.

As far as could be ascertained, the present conference on International Organization is the first major meeting to convene there.

The Army's "No Segregation Order"
A War Department order has just put an end to the most insulting, outrageous and unjustifiable policy that any Government other than Germany has practiced against its own nationals and defenders. The order, issued July 8, forbids any discrimination or segregation, based on color or race, in Post Exchanges, transportation facilities and Army theatres or places of amusement located in Army camps.

Although we are pleased by the War Department's order we are not satisfied, as the "no-segregation order" has not gone far enough. All forms of differences based upon color must be eliminated. Separate units for Negroes must go, and Negroes in the armed forces must be protected against injustice and abuse from Southern civilians. Negroes have been trained for officers with whites in training camps all over the country without incident Negro enlisted men can serve with equal harmony alongside white enlisted men if the Government only has the will and the courage to make the "order." THIS IS THE JOB AND THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

* * *

The Army and Federal Government has also remained silent when Southern civilians have been guilty of every kind of insult and atrocity against Negro soldiers . . . from segregation to murder. The Federal Government may be barred by States' Rights from directly changing local laws and practices, but it can use the powerful weapon of declaring "out of bounds" for soldiers, any district or community that segregates or otherwise abuses Negro troops. All these communities near camps are more or less financially dependent upon soldiers' trade.

9-9-44 * * *

The Government's excuse for segregation in the Army has been that it cannot, in the midst of a war, revolutionize the opinions and convictions of people and it must therefore conform Army camp practices and policies to local prejudices and hates.

* * *

The Courier has contended against the cowardice, injustice and absurdity of this attitude. It has been ridiculous for the United States Government to say that it has the power to force Negroes to bear arms, take them from their homes and camp them in the South, but is powerless to protect them from the prejudice of their fellow white soldiers, over whom the Government also has the power of life and death. Instead of conforming to Southern prejudices the Federal Government must not only force the Army but Southern communities in vicinities of camps to conform to justice and fair play to Negro soldiers.

* * *

If the Army were to take a forthright position on behalf of Negro troops, envision its effect on the Negro problem throughout the Nation, by intermingling 800,000 Negroes with 10,000,000 whites on the basis of the individual rather than by race, the Army could serve as the greatest medium in abating race prejudice.

9-9-44 * * *

Many public officials throughout America have a justifiable fear of increased racial prejudice after the war. It happened after the last war, and this increased racial hate can, in a measure, be attributed to the prejudices engendered by Army practices. Tens of thousands of men and women who knew little or nothing of segregation and race prejudice were perverted to accepting them by the Army. Segregation was practiced even in Army camps located in States where State laws protected civilians from segregation. This is true of Camp Dix, located in New Jersey. The Federal Government, through the Army, was extending jim crow into communities that were attempting to free themselves from its curse.

* * *

It is beyond dispute that the Armed forces have been a greater propagator of prejudice than any other agency in this country. Everywhere our Armed forces go they carry their color hates and prejudice and disseminate them among the people. In Australia, England, Hawaii and France, American soldiers and sailors have carried the torch of color hate and intolerance. In every land they have touched, prejudice against Negroes has increased. The eminent position America has gained in world affairs has been used to reduce the status of American Negroes and darker people the world over. These malicious practices can also be stopped if the Federal Government would vigorously penalize the offenders.

* * *

If the Federal Government does nothing to supplement the present "no-segregation order" it will rightly be suspected of playing politics rather than being motivated by justice and fairness. The order was issued July 8th, just two weeks after the Republican National platform had declared for an investigation of prejudicial practices against Negroes in the armed forces. All prejudice against Negroes in the armed forces must be wiped out if an investigation is to be forestalled, and if the present Government is to receive political benefits for magnanimity.

9-9-44 * * *

Negroes are aware that the most hurtful and insidious forms of prejudice and segregation are those carrying the label of their government. If your own Government classifies you as inferior, it is a potent example for the private individual, industry and foreign peoples.

* * *

Negroes must fight unrelentingly every form of Governmental prejudice. We must demand without compromise absolute equality for Negroes in the Armed services. We must gain for them all the dignity and prerogatives their sacrifices and services warrant.

* * *

Robert Ingersoll said that, "A flag that won't protect its protectors is a dirty rag that contaminates the air in which it waves." Fight to save your country from this accusation.

Dumbarton Oaks Aims Discussed

N.Y. Amsterdam News N.Y. 11-18-44

Council on African Affairs Issues Statement in Effort To Shed More Light on Meet

In an effort to shed further light on the Dumbarton Oaks Conference regarding the race problem and the future of the colonial peoples, the Council on African Affairs this week declared that the conferences were concerned not with principles but with international machinery for establishing and implementing principles.

The Council on African Affairs is led by Paul Robeson, chairman; Max Yergan, executive director, and W. A. Hunton, educational director. The statement, which was first published in the Council's journal, "New Africa," said in part:

The Council's Statement

"Sharply critical observations on the Dumbarton Oaks plan for a United Nations organization to maintain peace and security have been voiced by several Negro commentators and newspapers because of the plan's failure to affirm the principle of racial equality and its lack of reference to colonial representation in the assembly of nations or to the question of dependent peoples in general.

"The Council on Africa Affiairs deplores these omissions as much as anyone. But we most certainly do not agree with those who, on that basis alone, regard the cause of democracy as lost and see the proposed organization as an instrument for the perpetuation of imperialism and the colonial system.

"In the first place, the Dumbarton Oaks conference was a meeting not of top-ranking officials to establish principles, but rather of government technicians to frame international machinery for establishing and implementing principles. The conferees did not define an aggressor nation, but they proposed a Security Council to prevent aggression. And while they did not refer specifically to imperialist exploitation or racial discrimination, they did recommend an Economic and Social Council, made up of representatives of 18 elected nations from the Assembly, to "facilitate solutions of international economic, social and other humanitarian problems and promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms.

"Secondly, as Secretary Cordell Hull has emphasized, "the proposals in their present form are neither complete nor final." They will be further developed before being placed before the United Nations Conference for full consideration. And at that time, not only China, but Ethiopia, Liberia, Haiti and the democratic Latin American countries will have opportunity to present recommendations for insuring the world organization's effective action on the problems of imperialism and racialism."—m.

47n-1944

Fisk Host To Global Post-War Conference

Courier - Pittsburgh, Pa 12-1-44

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—In an effort to educate youth for participation in the activities of a post-war world community, Fisk university will assemble on its campus, April 19-22, prominent speakers and artists from different areas of the globe who will take part in the various seminars and performances during the Spring Musical Festival, it was announced here recently by Harold C. Schmidt, director of the Department of Music.

There will be representatives from China, India, the Pacific Islands, Europe, Africa, the Caribbean Sea, South America as well as the United States.

ROLAND HAYES FEATURED

A significant feature of the festival celebrations will be Roland Hayes, artist of pre-eminent international reputation as a tenor, who will perform a concert.

His Excellency the Haitian Ambassador to the United States, Andre Liataud, and Dr. Hu Shih, a former Chinese ambassador, are two of the distinguished visitors who will speak and lead in seminar discussions on world affairs during the festival week.

TWO-DAY SEMINAR

As part of the study of the "symphony of world cultures," there will also be a two-day seminar discussion on the subject of "Missions and the Socialization of Non-European Peoples."

Leaders in these discussions are Dr. Edwin W. Smith, former president of the Royal Anthropological institute of Great Britain and Ireland, and at present Special Consultant and Lecturer at the Fisk University Institute of African Studies; Miss Fatima Massaquoi, a Vai from the Republic of Liberia; Ramokoena Motsi, a Bechuana from South Africa; Dr. Emory Ross, executive secretary of the International Missionary Association on Africa, and Dr. Hugh Stuntz, president of Scarritt college.

HONOR MEMORY OF DR. PARK

Dr. Charles S. Johnson, professor of sociology and director of the Department of Social Sciences at Fisk, will read a posthumous paper by the late Dr. Robert E. Park, the great American sociologist, on the role of Christian missions in the building of a common world culture and civilization.

Art as a cultural element in the world community, illustrated by music and film, will be presented by Colin McPhee, noted American artist, who has devoted many years to a study of the cultures, music, arts, and dances of the Pacific Islands and also of the civilization of India and China.

Lilavati, celebrated film star and dancer from India, will perform a concert, accompanied by a drummer. Mr. McPhee will narrate and interpret the performance.

Dumbarton Oaks

Weekly Review — Birmingham, Ala. 12-30-44

What happened at Dumbarton Oaks? Men met there and talked about the problem of world peace. They represented the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China. They agreed on many points.

What is the main point? That all the peace-loving nations shall take part in an organization called the United Nations, with one delegate from each country. All the delegates will be on the General Assembly. Eleven of them will be on the Security Council. The delegates from the United States, Great Britian, Russia, China and France will always be on the Council. The others will take turns. The Assembly will discuss things and give advice, but the Council will really have the say.

12-30-44

What will the Council do? Whatever it thinks must be done to keep a war from starting. When two or more countries get into a dispute, the Council will do its best to get them to settle the dispute without fighting. If that doesn't work the Council will decide which country is a fault and will try to make it behave by not letting trains or ships or airplanes or mail enter it from the outside, or leave it; and by other measures of that kind. If still it doesn't work, the Council will then use armed forces to make the country that is trying to start a fight—or has started one— back down. Since the Council will have behind it the forces of many nations, the idea is that no one country, or even two or three, will ever be strong enough to get a big war started.

Will the Council have its own armed forces? No. It will be permitted to use the armed forces of the various countries, the ones that are handist when they are needed.

Were other points agreed upon? Many. For instance, the Council and the Assembly can deal with things like election of new members, size of armies and navies and air forces, general welfare world trade, and so on. But the main idea is to prevent war.

Will all nations have equal power? No. The bigger nations, for instance, will always be on the Council. They haven't decided just how the voting will be done, but they intend to let the big nations have more say-so.

12-30-44

Must we take it or leave it? No. Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin will probably talk it over and agree on points not yet decided. Then there will be a meeting of all the United Nations where everybody will talk, and out that will come the final agreement with all points covered. Then each country will discuss it — in our case, our Congress will do the discussing, and will decide for us whether we want to join in this effort to prevent wars. And as time goes on it will always be possible to make changes, just as we have made changes in our own Constitution.

Is this to prevent wars? Not necessarily. But if we really mean it when we say we want no more wars, here is our chance to make a real start on a set-up that will get us what we want if we work at it.

African Council Replies To Dumbarton's Critics

People's Voice — New York Pa. 12-30-44

In a letter to the editor of the "Amsterdam News," which he made public last week, Dr. W. A. Hunton, Educational Director of the Council on African Affairs, severely criticized a series of accounts of the Dumbarton Oaks Conference carried in that paper, including one over the signature of A. M. Malliet. He charged the array of false and unauthenticated assertions and numerous baseless opinions of unnamed 'observers,' all of which represent not merely dishonest and publicly harmful journalism but vicious and dangerous Hitlerite propaganda."

Dr. Hunton said, "From no one else except Herr Goebbels and those in this country who echo him will one hear the Amsterdam News' interpretations of the Dumbarton Oaks Conference as "a confab to divide the spoils of the war."

The letter concluded: "Is the Amsterdam News for international unity? If so, it should provide honest news on international affairs. To aid the cause of the colonial peoples it is necessary to strengthen, not disrupt, unity among the nations of the world."

Further developing the line of thought set forth in Dr. Hunton's letter, an editorial in the November issue of New Africa, official organ of the Council on African Affairs states that the Dumbarton Oaks proposals are neither complete nor final, adding:

11-11-44

"They will be further developed before being placed before the United Nations conference for full consideration. At that time not only China, but Ethiopia, Liberia, Haiti, and the democratic Latin American countries will have opportunity to present recommendations for insuring the world organization's effective program on the problems of imperialism and racialism."

Asserts Negroes Lethargic About Peace Table Spot

Memphis World

Writer Doubts Negro Will Be In Delegation

11-24-44

Tenn.

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Unless the "current and abiding state of lethargy among American Negroes" is quickly shaken, what passes for a clamor for a voice at the peace table will "go unrecognized, not to mention unhonored."

This is the view set forth by Ernest E. Johnson, Washington correspondent for the Associated Negro Press, in the lead article in the November Crisis titled "A Voice at the Peace Table?" Johnson pooh-poohs the idea that a Negro may be included on the American delegation but places within the realm of possibility the assignment of a few technicians to the delegation.

Whereas Haiti, Ethiopia, and Liberia, all black nations, will be represented at the peace table, the writer claims that "among them there has been no exchange of views nor collaboration" on the matter of expressing the viewpoint of colored peoples of the world.

11-24-44

In this same issue of Crisis appear two other provocative articles on foreign affairs, one by Max L. Hudicourt, called "Jim Crows Menaces Haiti", and the other by George Padmore, London correspondent, titled "Anglo-American Plan for Control of Colonies."

150 Leaders Petition FDR

Courier - Pittsburgh, Pa. 12-30-44

NEW YORK—A petition signed by 150 prominent Negro and white citizens was sent to President Roosevelt and the State Department, urging that in the further development of the Dumbarton Oaks plans, this Government press for the United Nations' adherence to "essential undertakings and principles" which would enable the hundreds of millions of people throughout Africa and other dependent areas to "play their full part in a system of world-wide democracy and prosperity."

The statement was prepared and forwarded to Government officials by the Council on African Affairs in New York.

12-30-44

The signers of the statement represented a cross-section of American cities, and included Prof. Robert Dale Woolbert, Dr. Arthur Upham Pope, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Arthur B. Spingarn, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Dr. H. A. Wieschhoff, Roscoe Dungee, Congressman-elect Adam Clayton Powell, Jr.

Other signers were Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Max Porlow, Dr. Alain Locke, Fannie Hurst, Prof. Henry Pratt Fairchild, Henry Epstein, Theodore Dreiser, Blair Boles, Dr. Gene Weltfish and officers of the Council on African Affairs, Paul Robeson, Dr. Wm. Jay Schieffelin and Max Yergan.

Representatives of the legal profession signing the statement included Judge Anna M. Kross, Judge Charles E. Toney, Dean William H. Hastie, Charles H. Houston, Raymond Pace Alexander and Earl B. Dickerson.

12-30-44

Christian Asso- clinic in Harlem. eH said that the 144 West 138th problem was further complicated by the fact that there are fewer Social Agencies, than six Negro psychologists in Welfare Council the country and that there are no funds or scholarships available to at many Negro train more.

The meeting, sponsored by fifty- four social health, educational and mental hygiene welfare organizations serving Harthe Young Men's ciation auditorium, 144 Street, to members of Harlem Council of Soc- executive director of the Urban League of Greater New York, de- Planning out that many Negro veterans suffering from

ing a Problem After War

Mr. Lewis

HELP FOR NEGROES URGED

Returning Troops Seen as Cads

N. Y.

cared last night in an address at plored the lack of a men lem ,was also addressed by Mrs. Ethel Ginsburg, assistant director of the Veterans Service Center at 10 East Fortieth Street .

WORLD VIEW

Chicago Defender 11

By JOHN ROBERT BADGER

11-25-44

Critics of Dumbarton Oaks Chicago, Ill.

"PASS THE 'POSSUM," said the Reverend Johnson, reaching for his fourth helping. And the amazed guests began to realize that while they had been chattering about the new church building, the parson had attended strictly to the principal business at hand.

The good Reverend Johnson's wisdom might be used with profit by many a newspaper commentator, including those oracles of the Negro press who think it smart to damn everything which doesn't have a "For Colored" label on it. Specifically, the present critics of the Dumbarton Oaks conference might more profitably attend to "first things first." 11-25-44

The business at hand at Dumbarton Oaks was NOT colonies, nor questions of race or color. It is true that the Chinese attempted to get a proposal for racial equality on the agenda. It is also true that the Soviets considered defining "aggression" so as to include the persecution of national minorities. I do not know if the Soviet representative ever actually articulated this view or sought to have it inculcated in the official declaration. But, in any event, the conferees decided to concentrate on the more urgent and pressing business, namely that of projecting an organization that could and would keep the peace, by force if necessary.

Foundation for Other Things 11-25-44

WHO DARES to argue that this is not number one business for Negro-America as well as for all other people? It ought to be elementary for a schoolboy that unless peace can be maintained, there is slight chance of eradicating racial and color prejudices, or of abandoning colonialism.

Those who howl because the conferees didn't spend their time arguing about colonialism, when they had not reached agreement on the number one business before the world, are merely running off at the mouth. An agreement to observe racial equality, signed, sealed, gold-embossed, gilt-edged and framed in platinum, wouldn't be worth a Confederate dollar bill if there were no agreement to keep the peace.

Given an agreement and an effective organization to prevent a recurrence of the Japanese rape of Manchuria, the Italian conquest of Ethiopia, the German and Italian intervention in Spain, the German seizure of Austria and Czechoslovakia — given this foundation, mankind can then begin to tackle the other questions that cause misery to so many millions.

How Colonialism Will Go

A MORE CONSTRUCTIVE approach to the question would impel Negro observers to think realistically about the question of colonialism, and to use their influence in support of those trends and forces which can and will effect progressive changes in the colonies. I think it should not pass notice that Wendell Malliet of the New York Amsterdam News and other critics of the Dumbarton conferences were on the Thomas E. Dewey bandwagon. In other words, the critics of Dumbarton Oaks were allied with the worst enemies of any kind of agreement between the four big powers, as well as with the most irresponsible purveyors of racial hatred during the recent campaign.

Given a long period of peace, the backbone of colonialism will be broken. During such a peaceful period the great industrial colonial powers will require ever-expanding markets. They will be forced to expand the markets of colonial countries. That means they will have to industrialize those countries, so as to raise the living standards of the colonial peoples. This industrializing process will necessitate a democratizing, educating process in the colonies. First things first: peace, then industrialization, then education and self-rule. That is the course history will take, according both to past experience and present indications.

1326 Leaders Petition for International Rights Bill

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

12-16-44

NEW YORK. — Thirty-two colored leaders are among the 1,326 signers of a statement issued by the American Jewish Committee urging an international bill of rights to serve as a post-war guarantee of religious and individual rights for all persons throughout the world just as the American Bill of Rights is a guarantee of individual liberties for Americans.

Approved by President Roosevelt and signed by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, Vice-President Henry A. Wallace, Supreme Court Justices Owen J. Roberts and Frank Murphy, the declaration was made public by Judge Joseph M. Proskauer, presdient of the committee, on the 153rd anniversary of the ratification of the American Bill of Rights.

It callsf or the recognition of the individual human being "as the cornerstone of our culture and civilization" and the establishment of the "new world" on the basis of the "dignity and inviolability of the person."

Labor, Business Leaders

The list of signers of the Declaration, representing a cross-section of American life, indicates the unanimity of American opinion in behalf of a world organization guaranteeing the individual rights of man by an international bill of rights.

12-16-44

Among the signers are 172 high public officials, including representative governors, mayors and members of Congress, and 348 churchmen of all faiths, including 36 bishops of the Episcopal, Catholic and Methodist churches.

Labor leaders like William Green, AFL president, and Philip Murray, CIO president, are joined in support of the declaration by Eric A. Johnston, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, and Robert Gaylord, president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Among Colored Signers

Colored leaders signing the declaration include:

Eugene A. Clark, Washington; Miles W. Connor, Baltimore; E. Franklin Frazier, Washington; Lester Granger, New York; Leslie P. Hill, Cheyney, Pa.; Langston Hughes, New York; Dr. Noma Jensen, New York; Canada Lee, New York; Edward S. Lewis, York York;

12-16-44

Dr. Alain Locke, Washington; Dr. Adam C. Powell, Jr., Sidney Redmond, New York; J. W. Seabrook, Fayetteville, N.C.; Channing Tobias, New York; W. J. Trent, Salisbury, N.C.; Dr. Louis T. Wright, New York.

Sees Peace Table Seat Being Lost by Default

Afro American Baltimore, Md.

NEW YORK (ANP) — Unless the "current and abiding state of lethargy among colored Americans" is quickly shaken, what passes for a clamor for a voice at the peace table will "go unrecognized, not to mention unhonored," 11-25-44

This is the view set forth by Ernest E. Johnson, ANP Washington correspondent, in the November Crisis. Johnson poohpoohs the idea that a colored person may be included on the American delegation but places within the realm of possibility the assignment of a few technicians. 11-25-44

Whereas Haiti, Ethiopia and Liberia, all black nations, will be represented at the peace table, the writer claims that "among them there has been no exchange of views nor collaboration" on the matter of expressing the viewpoint of colored peoples of the world.

Pittsburgh Courier, Pa.

Negro Women Attend Post-War Meet In D.C.

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa.

12-23-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Negro women served as spokesmen for three organizations among a total of 31 national organizations attending a conference on post-war adjustments of women workers, under auspices of the Women's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, this month. The Negro spokesmen included: Mrs. Anne Arnold Hedgeman, representing the United Council of Church Women; Mrs. Jenetta Welch Brown of the National Council of Negro Women, Inc.; and Miss Helen Hosstetter, who represented the National Association of Colored Women.

Miss Frieda S. Miller, chief of the Womens' Bureau, presided, and called attention to the increased employment of women in industry, from a little more than 13 million in March of 1940 to a total of 16,880,000 in March of 1944, an increase of more than 3,000,000 women in the labor force in four years.

Afro-American Balt., Md.

Dumbarton Oaks Plan Defended

11-11-44

NEW YORK. — In an editorial in the November issue of "New Africa," the Council on African Affairs, headed by Paul Robeson and Max Yergan, denies that the Dumbarton Oaks agreement evades the problems of imperialism and racial discrimination.

Recalling Secretary of State Hull's statement that the proposals are neither complete nor final, the editorial points out that the conferees were not concerned with principles but the "international machinery for establishing and implementing principles."

Council Proposed

Instead, it says, they did recommend an economic and social council to "facilitate solutions of international economic, social and other humanitarian problems and promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms."

Admitting that it deplores the omissions, the council declares that it considers the 90 per cent agreement of the four powers as "the keystone of international cooperation for achieving world democracy.

Asserts Negroes Lethargic About Peace Table Spot

Atlanta Daily World

Writer Doubts Negro Will Be In Delegation

Atlanta, Ga.

11-24-44

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Unless the "current and abiding state of lethargy among American Negroes" is quickly shaken, what passes for a clamor for a voice at the peace table will "go unrecognized, not to mention unhonored."

This is the view set forth by Ernest E. Johnson, Washington correspondent for the Associated Negro Press, in the lead article in the November Crisis titled "A Voice at the Peace Table?" Johnson pooh-poohs the idea that a Negro may be included on the American delegation but places within the realm of possibility the assignment of a few technicians to the delegation.

Whereas Haiti, Ethiopia, and Liberia, all black nations, will be represented at the peace table, the writer claims that "among them there has been no exchange of views nor collaboration" on the matter of expressing the viewpoint of colored peoples of the world.

In this same issue of Crisis appear two other provocative articles on foreign affairs, one by Max L. Hudicourt, called "Jim Crows Menaces Haiti", and the other by George Padmore, London correspondent, titled "Anglo-American Plan for Control of Colonies."

47n-1944

POST-WAR FASHIONS?

Racial Equality Called Major Issue After War

St. Louis Argus—Missouri

Roger N. Baldwin, director of the American Civil Liberties Union, New York City, told an audience at the Wheatley Branch Y. W. last Friday that the issue of racial equalities is the major problem of civil liberties growing out of the war.

Baldwin stated "Contrary to popular assumptions that race differences are inherent, examination of the evidence will show that they're essentially economic. They arise either from the subjection of one race by another or from the competition of one race with another. Racial divisions are maintained for the benefit of the dominant race."

"In American trade unions, despite historic racial discrimination still rife, the more progressive sections are successfully fighting against race discrimination, recognizing the equality in work of all men.

Sees Justce As Obstructed

"But American law in relation to racial fights is founded upon a gross injustice — segregation. The courts have adopted the fiction that separate accommodations satisfy the constitutional requirement if they are equal. But they are never equal, as anyone can testify who has seen a jim crow coach or visited a Negro school or examined the appropriations for Negro schools and the salaries for Negro teachers. 11-17-44 Equality before the law is impossible until the theory and practice of segregation is abolished."

"The job of achieving racial equality is primarily one for the minorites themselves. The ferment in the Negro population during the war represents demands which will not subside at the end of the war. Equality of sacrifice during the war has created a stake in our democracy which must not be denied them —nor will they accept this denial. The Negro asks nothing more than equality before the law. Social equality is to them not an issue. But they refuse to be "kept in their place" in a status inferior to white men in public service, in private employment and in their political and civil rights."

Hypocrisy of Nations

weekly—New Orleans, La. 11-18-44

NOT so long ago, statistics experts set the population of the darker races as constituting approximately three-fourths of the world's population. Of this three-fourths, 400,000,000 were Africans or of African descent, 458,000,000 Chinese; 70,000,000 Japanese and 352,000,000 Indian.

If there is power in force and safety in numbers, we have wondered how this mighty majority became subjected under white rule? But they did, and now the $64 question, which most whites don't even think about, is how a world peace can be planned which will enable all nations and all races to live together as brothers without one infringing upon the rights of another.

The men at the helm of the ship had better start thinking fast and right about what can be done to alleviate the burdens of the darker brother throughout the world. They should have learned by now that to ignore these rights in formulating a world peace can only bring down the wrath of the war gods upon their heads. The case of Haile Selassie, who haunted the corridors of the last League of Nations begging for equal recognition, has made history. He said then that because of their selfishness the big three would again become involved in another world conflict, in Africa millions of blacks writhe under the rfdom and complete subjection to greedy whites.

11-18-44

g recently on China, Leslie Balogh Bain said, er how persistently the Western Allies try to r faces from the growing crisis in China and pre-all that ails our Far Eastern ally is that China out to be a much greater and far more compli-olem than any thus far encountered in this war.
ver believes that unless China's political tension ed before the end of hostilities to enable her to a strong, united nation around whom all Asia the fermenting forces in China and Indonesia le within a decade and usher in World War III."
leading nations, it would seem that France, more has her heart in this "four freedoms" business.
And he was right.
Britain carries out her end of the battle for democracy emerge as a s may rally, the will explode w
Of the lead than any has

Recently she outlined a program for her African colonies which will do much to better their education, health and elevate the masses to finally rule themselves.

And in the United States, one-tenth of the nation wonders why the slogan "War for Democracy" is still being used when Negro soldiers, sailors and marines are discriminated against in the armed forces while poll taxers and race baiters parade through the country with spreading the disease of race prejudice.

The time is at hand for these nations to decide whether they want a genuine world peace or World War III.

Col. Woodruff Chisum, Commanding Officer 15th Regiment, Explains Status Of Unit

Col. W. Woodruff Chisum, Commanding Officer, 15th Regiment, New York Guard, realizing that there is much confusion in the minds of many people in the community as to the difference in meaning of the organizations which, during the history of the State of New York, have been variously called "The Militia; "The New York Guard"; "The National Guard" and lastly again "The New York Guard," frequently spoken of as "The New York State Guard," has decided to make a determined effort to clarify the issue.

Actually there is no basic difference in any of the organizations which have been designated by those names. They have always been made up of voluntary citizen soldiers of New York State, commencing when it was a colony. There has been a straight line of New York State soldiers, which has always remained unbroken since 1775.

Many individuals are of the opinion that the present State Guard is an organization which is only something over four years old. They believe it dates from the time the National Guard was called into service in 1940. That is definitely incorrect. When the Federal Government, because of the dual oath of the National Guard—which is first given to New York State, and secondly given to the Federal Government—called out the State troops of New York for Federal service, the State Government immediately reformed all of the Guard regiment so that their straight line of State service was never broken. Actually the present 15th New York Guard regiment is the direct descendant of its original unit which was organized in 1917, and it is worthy of note that Col. Chisum served with and during every organizational change from the organization of the regiment.

The defense troops of the original 13 colonies were known as "The Militia" or "The Minutemen." They were voluntary citizen soldiers organized for the defense of their localities, colonies, or later their states. Early in 1900 the "National Guard" came into being. The "National Guard" was and still are State troops who have taken the oath of allegiance to both the Federal and State Governments. For 169 years the New York Guard has been the Military Corps Elite of the United States.

Be smart! Join the Famous Fifteenth Regiment. Register at the Armory, Fifth Avenue and 142nd street, New York City, any evening from 8:00 to 10:00

Army Point System May Keep Negro GI's Overseas

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Negro soldiers serving in non-combat outfits and who have been overseas just as long as, or longer than, combat soldiers will not enjoy the same opportunities for being demobilized, the War department revealed on Thursday.

Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson told his news conference that discharges will be effected upon the basis of a system of points earned through service in combat. The system is one, he said, which developed "in accordance with the feelings of the troops themselves. The man in the combat service has an advantage," he added.

Patterson had been asked how this system will affect men who, without choice, have been required to serve in the service units, who will have spent an equal length of time overseas, and who as a matter of choice would prefer being in a combat organization.

Adjusted Service

"On the adjusted service rating card credit is given for combat service," he stated. "I think it is indicated by the campaign ribbons. That is a reflection of combat service that is clearly credited on the service cards. The man who wins that credit by service in a combat unit gets credit other soldiers do not get."

The War department announced its demobilization plan early in September. First priority in this readjustment program will be the transfer of elements from theaters no longer active to the Pacific war zone, or from the United States to the Pacific war zone.

The plans developed after months of study takes into account all possible variable factors. The plan for the return of non-essential soldiers to civilian life will start with the assembly in the United States of men declared surplus to the needs of each overseas theater and to the major commands in the United States.

Plan Adopted

As part of the plan adopted, an "adjusted service rating card" will be issued to all enlisted personnel after the defeat of Germany. On this card will be scored the following four factors that will determine priority of separation:

1. Service credit—based upon the total number of months of army service since Sept. 16, 1940.

2. Overseas credit—based upon the number of months served overseas.

3. Combat credit—based upon the first and each additional award to the individual of the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service cross, Legion of Merit, Silver Star, Distinguished Flying cross, Soldier's medal, Bronze Star medal, Air medal, Purple Heart, and Bronze Service stars (battle participation stars).

4. Parenthood credit—which gives credit for each dependent child under 18 years up to a limit of three children.

The value of the point credits are to be announced after the cessation of hostilities in Europe. In the meantime, the point values are being kept under continuous study. The total score will be used to select surplus men from the theaters overseas and in the United States.

Here's Army's Anti-American No J.C. Order

It Forbids Segregation in PX, Bus, Theatre

POLICY CHANGED

Colored Soldiers to Get Better Treatment

WASHINGTON

While Gov. Chauncey Sparks of Alabama awaited an answer to the message he sent President Roosevelt protesting against a War Department "restricted" directive forbidding race segregation in recreational facilities on Army posts and on transportation facilities owned or operated by the Federal Government, on or off a post, Representative John E. Rankin (Dem., Miss.), read it into the Congressional Record.

The War Department's secret order provides a penalty for publication. This did not deter Rankin.

The directive itself represents a change in Army policy. Previously the Army had followed local custom in the South and permitted commanding officers to provide separate recreational facilities or segregate colored soldiers from white soldiers in the same facility.

Segregation Forbidden

Under the new directive, race segregation is forbidden in post exchanges and theatres and on buses owned or operated by the Federal Government, on or off a post, camp or station, regardless of local civilian custom.

Substance of this order was published in the AFRO a month ago when it was posted at Fort Benning, Ga. Alabama papers got hold of it just last week.

Representative Rankin, dubbed the leader of the "white-trash bloc" in Congress, said on the floor of the House, Thursday, that the directive was an attempt to wipe out segregation throughout the South and predicted that it will precipitate race riots.

Called "Standing Policy"

At the War Department, a spokesman explained that the directive was a general letter to all Army establishments directing attention to the department's standing policy against race discrimination.

The War Department would not release the text of the directive, explaining that it was in "a restricted classification," but Representative Rankin was so choleric because of the order that he inserted its full text in the Congressional Record. It follows:

"Restricted" Order Published

War Department,
The Adjutant General's Office,
Washington, D.C., July 8, 1944

Subject: Recreational Facilities.

To Commanding Generals, Army Air Forces, All Service Commands, Military District of Washington:

1. Reference is made to letter A.G. 353.8 (March 5, 1943) OB-S-A-M, March 10, 1943, subject as above, in which it was directed that all personnel, regardless of race, would be afforded equal opportunity to enjoy recreational facilities on each post, camp and station.

2. While in general the spirit of the above-mentioned letter has been observed, occasional reports indicate that practices exist on some installations that are not in harmony with its provisions.

3. Exchanges: While exchanges and branch exchanges may be allocated to serve specific areas or units, no exchange will be designated for the exclusive use of any particular race. Where such branch exchanges are established, personnel will not be restricted to the use of their area or unit exchange, but will be permitted to use any other exchange on the post, camp or station.

END TO J.C. ON BUSSES

4. Transportation: Busses, trucks, or other transportation owned and operated either by the Government or by a governmental instrumentality will be available to all military personnel regardless of race. Restricting personnel to certain sections of such transportation because of race

If subsequent inspection of the installation indicates that proper remedial measures have not been taken, the commanding general of the service command will initiate action to ensure full compliance with the announced policy.

7. The commanding general, Army Air Forces, will bring the contents of this letter to the attention of each commanding officer of the installation that such discrimination is contrary to War Department policy.

By order of the Secretary of War:

J. A. ULIO,
Major General, the Adjutant General.

47n-1944

THE HORIZON

America Should Use Force In Co-operation with Other Nations to Maintain Peace

By P. L. PRATTIS

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

WHY is America so hesitant and skeptical about lining up with some form of international organization to keep the peace? Asking the question assumes that America really is; that is, that the rank and file of Americans has thought this international stuff through and through and is highly dubious about it. To establish a base for an argument, I should like to state that I think that America should do all she can to see that such an organization is perfected and that she should also join and do her utmost to make it strong. So far as I have been able to learn, the merits of such an organization or the wisdom of belonging have never been presented fairly to the American people and the American people have never been able to express themselves on the issue, cleaned of all externalia. When fair play for the Negro is sought, the seeker, if white, is often asked: "Would you want your daughter to marry a Negro?" Of course, the question has nothing to do with fair play. And when American co-operation with an international organization for peace is sought, the seeker is asked, "Do you want some super government sending American boys into war?" That has nothing to do with trying to keep the peace.

Mr. Prattis

OPPOSITION POLITICAL

THE opposition to American co-operation with such a world organization is basically political. This opposition has used the prospect of a few thousand American soldiers co-operating with a world "police force" to alarm and confuse Americans in the street. It just happens that Democrats have been the protagonists and Republicans the antagonist of such co-operation. The roles could easily have been reversed by the challenge of events. If Republicans were clamoring for a world organization, backed by force, the chances are that the Democrats would be passionately against it.

But the partisan interests of political leadership ought not to control the thinking of all other Americans on the issue. It is certainly reasonable to assume that an army or peace force, made up of the nationals of most of the nations of the world, could, if it had the authority to act, prevent any one or two nations from getting out of line and starting wars as Italy did in Ethiopia, Japan did in Manchuria and Germany did in Poland. America's contribution to such an agency or force need not be any larger, if as large, as our former peace-time army. And with that small contribution we would have an assurance of peace and not the prospect of recurring wars which call for the sacrifice of the lives of hundreds of thousands of the best of our youth.

NAVY USED FORCE

THERE are those who say that giving the power to send our boys on such police missions would violate the Constitution which gives the Congress the right to declare war. The point is purely technical. If necessary, we could clear the path by amending the Constitution. But that is scarcely necessary in the light of our past experience. Our Navy has been used belligerently throughout our history without authorization from Congress. When Commodore Perry sailed into Japanese waters, backed up by six warships, and made demands upon the Japanese government in 1854, he clearly committed an act of aggression (or war) which the American Congress had not authorized and which the Japanese government was too weak to resist. This weakness enabled Commodore Perry to win a war without bloodshed.

The chances are that any world police force would have to do nothing more than to make a "show of force" to possible aggressors. We have made such a show of force in the past in many South American harbors. Only a couple of months ago, a so-called rebellion in Cuba was quickly quieted when the American ambassador to Cuba let it be known that American warships would go into action if the rebels didn't behave. We weren't at war with Cuba and Ambassador Braden had no authority to threaten Cuban rebels with American guns. But he did and he got away with it. And there was no rebellion.

CAN SAVE LIVES

AMERICA ought to belong to such a world peace organization. No nation, like ours, which harbors the vigilante and mob spirit, should flinch before the prospect of having an international posse to suppress disorders, before they get started. We can save American lives through the application of international force and use, for the pursuits of peace, the wealth we have been pouring into the maw of war.

Data Show Negroes Met War Tasks

By JAMES W. FORD

All the American people should be made aware of the full significance of the figures just released by the War Department of the contribution of the Negro people to the war.

As of Sept. 30 there is a total of 701,678 in the Army, of whom 411,368 are serving overseas. There are 49,483 in the infantry; 36,302 in coast and field artillery; 867 in the cavalry; 133,180 in the engineers; 73,686 in the air corps and 408,160 in all other branches of the service.

There were 5,804 commissioned officers including the following non-combat commissions: dental corps, 101; nurses, 247; other medical corps, 463; chaplains, 236. The above facts are only known by a very small section of the American people, and a small section knows about the conduct of Negro troops overseas and on all of our fighting fronts. The many Army citations of the deeds of the courageous fighting of Negro troops in this war remain almost solely in the files in the War Department, or are only elaborated upon fully in the Negro press for the Negro people.

When Congress passed the Selective Service Act in 1940 the Government declared, in reference to Negro citizens, that inasmuch as they constituted one-ninth of the population, they would have to provide their proportionate share of manpower.

POLITICAL ASPECT

The figures of the War Department now show that they have fully met their share of responsibility. But it is not a matter of mere statistics. What is equally significant is the political aspect of the question and the understanding which the Negro people have of the nature and character of the war in which our country is engaged. They know that this is a war against fascism and that the national survival of this country is at stake. They understand that only complete destruction of fascism in this war can assure continuation of human progress, and that all other considerations should be subordinated to this central objective.

As a result of the correctness of the course pursued by the Negro people they have made great advances and they have becme one of the strongest sources of democratic strength in the country. They have understood that securing equal rights was inseparable from winning the war. The Negro people are justly proud of their contribution to the country's war, and so must be all sections of the democratic coalition in the nation.

This is what attaches so much importance to the figures released by the War Department. A full understanding of this by wider sections of the peoples is necessary for further strengthening national unity to win the war.

PROBLEMS STILL UNSOLVED

There are still unsolved and pressing problems. The most glaring is segregation in the armed forces and injustices to Negro soldiers. And these grievances must be wiped out. It is inconceivable that in a total of 700,000 Negro soldiers there are only 5,0000 commissioned officers. There are too few Negro troops in combat arms of the service and they are grieved about this. Certainly the figures given of the number of Negroes in the medical, nursing corps and other auxiliary services are insignificant.

Certainly the treatment of the nineteen dishonorably discharged Negro Seabees is unfair and a disgrace. What is still more disturbing are the court-martial findings against 50 Negro Navy men on the west coast and court-martial of the Negro soldiers at Seattle. All printed information about these trials show bias. The solution of all these problems is the conclusion to be drawn from the figures released by the War Department in the interest of national unity to win the war.

Petition to Roosevelt Urges Peoples Voice New York, N.Y. That Africa Benefit in Plans

A petition signed by more than 150 prominent Negro and white citizens was sent Friday to President Roosevelt and the State Department, urging that in the further development of the Dumbarton Oaks plans, this government press for the United Nation's adherence to "essential undertakings and principles" which would enable the hundreds of millions of peoples throughout Africa and other dependent areas to "play their full part in a system of effective policies for the paid and right of self-determination within world-wide democracy and prosperity."

The statement, which was prepared by the Council on African Affairs in New York, set forth the following four recommendations:

- that the proposed United Nations' organization establish effective machinery for the non-colonial territories" and
- that the United States "take the lead in raising the living standards for all the inhabitants of the African people;
- that the "guiding principle" of all administrative measures of all forms of rights for all the inhabitants of or by its agencies;
- that the signers of the statement include: Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Arthur B.

12-23-44

Spingarn, Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, Dr. Robert C. Weaver, Dr. H. A. Wieschhoff, Roscoe Dungee, Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Dr. Alain L. Locke, Fannie Hurst, Earl Browder, Henry Pratt Fairchild, Henry Epstein, Theodore Dreiser, Carey McWilliams, Blair Bolles, Rockwell Kent, Paul Robeson, Dr. William Jay Schieffelin, Max Yergan.

Judge Anna M. Kross, Judge Charles E. Toney, Dean William H. Hastie, Charles H. Houston, Raymond Pace Alexander, Earl B. Dickerson, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick Dr. Sherwood Eddy, Bishop William Y. Bell, Bishop David H. Sims, Dr. Harry F. Ward and officers of fraternal, civic and labor organizations

NEGROES AT THE PEACE TABLE

Chicago, Ill.
Chicago Defender

Some Negro leaders have become all hot and bothered in recent weeks because the recent Dumbarton Oaks conference on a world peace organization concluded without a declaration on the much-bandied-about question of racial equality. 12-2-44

Some of our more unrealistic brothers thought that perhaps Soviet Russia or China would throw the problem into the international arena. They have been disillusioned in a hurry.

Now comes Ernest E. Johnson, the Associated Negro Press Washington correspondent, to present a new view in an article in the November issue of Crisis. Johnson gives due credit to the Chicago Defender for its pioneering job in its recent symposium on the question, "Should Negroes Sit at the Peace Table?" and then goes on to criticize the Defender for not showing "more concern in its columns for the subsequent presentation of questions which have arisen." 12-2-44

Certainly Johnson must be good enough of a newspaperman to know that news cannot be doctored out of the air, that when nothing happens that's not news. The facts are that Negro leadership has been asleep at the switch in the question of race representation in the peace.

Johnson admits as much and then goes on to offer as a final hope to the American Negro the possibility that three black nations — Liberia, Haiti and Ethiopia — will be able to represent the Negro viewpoint at the peace table, if there is a peace table.

This hope is completely at variance with the past record of the three countries, none of which can be called a true democracy and none of which has recognized its kinship with thirteen million black Americans. 12-2-44

How can the rulers of these countries represent the Negro peoples the world over when it is questionable whether they represent their own peoples? In both Haiti and Liberia, Wall Street seems to have assumed a commanding position that has relegated the natives to the place of virtual colonials. Ethiopia will come to the peace table as one of the few remaining kingdoms in the world, anxious only to win relief and succor from the United Nations to enable the tiny African country to recover from the horrors of Italian invasion.

To practical, thinking Negroes, there is but one outlook. Having failed to capitalize and follow up on the frank Defender agitation for protection of the Negro's interests in the peace, it would be unwise at this late hour after Dumbarton Oaks to hope for a place at the peace table. 12-2-44

However, it is never too late to wage a determined and relentless campaign of constant reminder to the statesmen of the world of their pledges in the Atlantic Charter and other historic documents written during the darkest hours for world civilization.

Part of that reminder will be given when the Negro Newspaper Publishers' Association mission to Africa reports to President Roosevelt their findings of colonial conditions in Africa. Plans for a new Pan-African Congress should be rushed to conclusion to avoid the mistakes made after World War I, when eleventh hour parleys failed to accomplish any good purpose at Versailles.

For Negro America and their colored brothers throughout the world, the future lies within their own hands rather than in any peace table promises, valuable though these pledges may be.

In every land where colored peoples are oppressed, the battle lines for racial democracy must be more firmly drawn and the fight waged with more determination and strength.

Nazi Prisoners Ignorant Of Negroes In U. S. Army

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
8-12-44

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH THE FIRST ARMY IN NORMANDY — German prisoners captured in the Saint Lo region this week state that they have never seen Negroes in Germany and solemnly declare ignorance of the fact that Negro troops were fighting against them in Normandy.

This writer, in an interview with five Nazi prisoners of war, selected at random from the cages where thousands are awaiting transportation abroad, found these self-styled "master race" soldiers now completely subdued and only too eager to talk through interpreters.

Professing no knowledge of Hitler's "Mein Kampf" description of the Negro race, they stated that they had not read all parts of the book. These five prisoners were among the thousands taken during the initial Allied break-through when our armor smashed the German western defense line in the Saint Lo area. 8-12-44

Returning from the front lines, I was conducted through the prisoner cage where an officer selected the prisoners. He began friendly conversation in the racy vernacular of the Berlin alleys. They eventually warmed up as we lay puffing cigarettes in a barbed wire-fenced cow pasture.

Under the regulations of the Hague convention, war prisoners are required to tell only their name, rank and serial number to captors but our officers know that on certain occasions, they will volunteer and talk freely. I was not too certain of their sincerity but one of the guards who knows the Boche said that they were intelligent and that he believed their statements to be fairly accurate.

The youngest of the group—wounded in the head, was only 14 when Hitler's meteoric rise to power began. Three others, older than he, had been dressmaker, druggist and restaurant owner. They were amazed to learn that Negroes represented one-tenth of the United States population and when told that the fraction amounted to approximately 14,000,000 Negroes, they shook their heads and said, "Ich verstehe nicht" (I don't understand). 8-12-44

The captives refused to believe the statement that 700,000 Negro troops were fighting with our armed forces, saying that they had been led to believe differently and that we were the first Negroes they had seen. Questioned concerning their attitudes, all agreed that they couldn't predict the outcome of the war but would be satisfied if their Fuehrer lost the conflict. 8-12-44

They expressed hope that the United States supervise the peace terms and dreaded the thought of Russian entry into their fatherland. They had no knowledge whatever of the Russian gains. All had fought in the Russian campaign and denied the tales of atrocities that the Russian people had been subjected to. They believed that after the war, they would be returned to their homes where the work draft would have them building as before the hostilities began.

While we talked, the steady explosions of our artillery, immediately behind us, pounding enemy installations not far distant kept us jumping. As we ended conversations, everyone suddenly ducked and lay flat. A swishing, whistling sound overhead, followed by a deafening explosion, terrified the Germans. As they shuddered, military police explained to befuddled correspondents, "That last one was a German shell."

In Enemy Terrain

We had passed our unit and were proceeding into enemy territory on the outskirts of Saint Lo. Back through the ruins and rubble of the heavily shelled town we hastily rolled to each unit high on a hill atop poles, oblivious to the shelling going on down below.

Pvt. Clarence Workings of Gallatin, Tenn., said: "Hell, it's war. And while we are not on the front, we are in tough spots. We have our heroes, too."

Proudly he pointed out Privates Bernard Henderson, New York City, and Percy Cox, Petersburg, Va., who the week previous, while working on top of a pole near the town of Valognes, suddenly looked up from their work to see 15 Germans, members of a scouting party, and fully armed, stealthily creeping up the hill. 8-12-44

Unhooking their spiked shoes, the two Yanks slid down and jumped into a hedgerow where their automatic guns could well be concealed. Stopping breathlessly and waiting, not knowing whether they had been sighted, but with guns poised for a last-ditch battle, they saw the Jerries emerge from behind trees, marching in a column, single file.

Capture 15 Germans

With their automatics, the two Negro privates leaped forward, yelling. Their sudden coup resulted in the capture of the entire group of 15 Germans and without a single shot being fired.

The Yanks marched their prisoners off to camp and returned to work atop the poles.

"It's all in a day's work," remarked Pvt. Lester Walker, 4744 Forestville avenue, Chicago, a company clerk, as he sat in a tent pounding away on a letter to his wife Clare. Far removed from exciting and dangerous front-line wire stringing, but near enough to know that the Jerries strafe, bomb and shell nightly, Pvt. Walker took me through an apple orchard, with each tree heavily burdened with fruit and each tree sheltering a fox-hole, where the men have cunningly designed sleeping quarters.

"Wherever there are troops, there are Chicagoans," said Pvt. Richard Sayers, 5820 Indiana avenue, as we met several fellows I had seen before. 8-12-44

There were Frederick Southern, 3230 Lake Park avenue; Irvin Collier, 424 E. 42nd street; Paul C. Amos, 109 E. 49th street; Gomez Charleston, 4839 Champlain avenue; Ernest Tucker, 417 E. 45th street; Henry Hamilton, 464 E. 33rd street, and Staff Sergeant Lee Brezan, former Gary, Ind., policeman.

Fox-Hole Headquarters

Later, as the rain fell in sheets, settling the thick carpets of dust on the roads, clogged with trucks, tanks, jeeps and ambulances, I lay wet to the skin in an open truck. We rolled up in front of my fox-hole, where headquarters were.

The wires had been set up by the very men whom I had just visited and over these wires my copy would be transmitted home.

I couldn't help but think that stringing wire while being shelled with snippers taking pot-shots at the linemen, and moving cautiously among mines and booby traps might not be combat fighting, but it was the nearest thing to it, I have seen thus far.

47n-1944

Public Expects Worst in Post-War Race Relations

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

Only 23% Believe Races Will Get Along Better Together, While 39% Say Worse

8-26-44

[The National Opinion Research Center is an opinion finding organization. As such, it simply reports the results of national surveys made by its personally trained staff of over 200 interviewers throughout the United States. The center is an academic institution working under a grant from the Field Foundation and the University of Denver. The survey used included 2,523 confidential interviews. Statistically, these are sufficient to be within 3 per cent correct 997 times in 1000.]

DENVER, Col. (Special) — The average white American is much more likely to be pessimistic than optimistic regarding the future of colored-white relations in the United States, according to recent survey findings of the National Opinion Research Center.

Although over a third of those questioned do not definitely commit themselves, more persons expect worse relations (39%) than expect better ones (23%) between colored and white in the post-war world. Twenty-three per cent reply "same" and 14 per cent, "undecided."

NORC asked a nation-wide civilian cross-section of white Americans:

"After the war, do you expect N—— and white people to get along with each other better, or not as well as they did before the war?"

8-26-44

	All	"Better" or "Worse" Only
Better	23%	37%
Not as well	39	63
Same	23	—
Undecided	14	—
Qualified answer	1	—
	100%	100%

Those who volunteer "same" include two groups: (1) persons who think the situation bad now and feel it will continue to be bad after the war — 14% — and (2) persons who consider the colored-white situation perfectly satisfactory now and see no reason why it should change — 9%.

63 Per Cent Pessimistic

When only those who committed themselves in one or the other direction are considered, 63 per cent think the races will not get along as well after the war and only 37 per cent think they will get along better. The greatest differences are sectional.

In the New England and Atlantic States opinion divides exactly 50-50, while in the Pacific and Mountain States, 58 per cent expect white and colored to get along not as well after the war as they did before.

8-26-44

In the Midwest, 62 per cent, and in the South, 82 per cent express this negative view.

When the people were asked to give reasons for their opinions, a divergence of attitudes reveals itself. These reasons appear so important that only typical quotations can give the flavor of feeling across the nation.

Post-War Employment

The reply of a Chicago chemical engineer summarizes the ideas of many respondents who expect a worse racial situation:

"After the war there won't be many jobs. The colored workers will be pushed out first and if he tries to protest, there will be trouble. As long as jobs are plentiful, he is O.K. because he is needed. When jobs are scarce, no one bothers with him."

Only a few think that good war jobs for colored people will lead to better feeling after the war.

A Minneapolis auto mechanic says: "Defense work has given colored workers a lot of chances and education they never had before." According to the wife of a sheet-metal worker from The Bronx, "Colored workers have been given more opportunities during this war and whites see they are capable."

Army Association of Races

A number of respondents believe that the association of white and colored in the army will lead to better post-war relationships.

A streetcar motorman in Chicago says: "Because the two races have fought in the army together, they will appreciate each other more. And if the colored group doesn't push too hard, white people will someday see that a democracy must treat everyone alike."

8-26-44

A research chemist in Brooklyn replies: "The mixing of both white and black races in the army tends to break down some barriers."

Others of those interviewed take the opposite point of view. The wife of a Brighton, Colo., truck driver answers: "Our boys have been thrown together with colored men in camps and it makes them dislike them more."

A farmer's wife near Wichita looks for trouble because "the Southern soldiers are rude to the Northern colored soldiers." A woman college student in Brooklyn feels that "segregation in the army only irritates the situation."

Other Wartime Associations

A considerable number of people feel that greater knowledge of each will help white and colored to get along together better.

A Chicago stenographer thinks: "Because of the war, the two races are mingling more and more. Whites will have a broader knowledge of the needs and abilities of the colored group and will have more tolerance."

A New York City file clerk observes: "Colored and white should get along better now that they have had an opportunity to work together."

8-26-44

A naval construction superintendent in Portland, Oregon, says: "From the intermingling and scattering around more now will come better understading."

The opinion of an Oklahoma City business executive is typical of those who disagree: "The intershift of population of white and colored is resulting in more misunderstanding of how to handle colored people."

Sectional Feeling

A number of Southerners believe that Northern interference and misunderstanding tend to intensify the "N——o problem."

A South Carolina housewife remarks: "If the Northerners would only let colored people alone — but they will stir them up." A county official in Houston, Texas, feels: "The damnyankees mingle with the colored people too much and spoil 'em."

A contractor in the same city expresses this viewpoint: "The colored citizen is slowly getting better chances to get jobs and he'll want them after the war, and the Southern whites will rebel."

8-26-44

Some specifically mention the question of colored Americans voting. For instance, the wife of a farmer near Austin, Texas, comments: "It looks like they might have trouble with the n-----rs the way they've started things. They're trying so hard to get the vote on everything."

Changes in White Attitudes

Some whites expect the war to bring about basic changes in white attitudes toward colored people because:

"They are fighting for us just as our white boys are fighting. They should have the same freedom as whites because they're fighting for us.

"It's one of the points we are fighting for — no race or religious prejudices. This war should teach us a lesson on how to get along with people regardless of color, creed, or nationality. This war will humble a great many people."

A civil service examiner in Washington, D.C., puts it this way: "I think the colored Americans' contribution to the war will be appreciated. If we continue as a democracy, we will have to accept them." In New Jersey a young man discharged from the army says: "When a man fights, he gets different ideas."

A greater number of whites, however, believe that it will take more than a war to change human nature.

8-26-44

A Massachusetts engineer thinks: "People will feel after the war as they did before, and forget what we are fighting for."

Other respondents comment: "Nothing will ever change southern prejudice. I dont think the war will make any difference. The war has not had any great effect on any of the Americans."

Propaganda

A number of people consider definite planned propaganda to be at the root of most colored-white problems. A few of these people think such difficulties are "enemy-inspired" and will end after the war.

The wife of a Pennsylvania industrial chemist, for example, answers: "Much of the feeling against colored citizens is agitated by fifth columnists and will be over with the armistice."

Most, however, expect conditions to become worse because of the activity of colored leaders, labor agitators, the present administration in Washington, and others.

8-26-44

A Tennessee farmer believes: "This race social equality agitated from Washington will cause trouble." The wife of a Brooklyn newspaper dealer says: "During the war colored people are being stirred up by people who want to educate them."

Some question the wisdom of widespread discussion of colored and white differences. An Oklahoma baking manager feels: "There's too much talk about possible trouble. I don't like the publicity in that connection."

Equality

A considerable number of people look for more trouble than ever as a result of wartime privileges colored persons have enjoyed.

A radio program director in Tulsa summarizes the problem as follows:

"There will be a conflict between the supremacy of the white and the newly-found sense of freedom of the colored group due to the war." A southern grocer thinks: "After the war colored people are going to demand the equality we preach and don't practice."

8-26-44

A woman old-age pensioner in Chicago answers: "I'm afraid colored people will have had a taste of equality in the army and in war jobs and will demand their rights as citizens. The white people will try to stop them, and there will be trouble."

Negro Named On United Nations Relief Position

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

6-12-44

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration this week appointed its first Negro on the all-important distribution staff.

The appointee is Malcolm A. Jackson, a native of St. Croix, Virgin Islands, educated in Dewitt Clinton high school of New York, and in Wagner College and Columbia university.

Jackson is a distribution officer for the European mission reserve and upon completion of his probationary orientation period of four to six months, will leave for overseas duty, probably in the Scandanavian countries. His basis salary will be $4,400 with ample additional allowances for living expenses when on duty.

The appointment and the use of Jackson in a non-racial category represents a new approach on the part of government, and in Jackson's words, it is "gratifying and significant." Other Negroes under consideration for appointment include Lester Granger of the National Urban League, T. Arnold Hill of OPA, and Ira DeAReid of Atlanta university.

8-12-44

Jackson was sent to the Virgin Islands by the National Youth Administration as a vocational teacher in September 1941. From August 1942 until July 1944, he served as a rationing executive and director of information for the OPA in Virgin Islands.

Here is a member of Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, a Bachelor of Science in education from Columbia, and a Mason. He speaks Danish and German.

ASKS NEGRO IN POST-WAR ARMY

Defender — Chicago

12-23-44 $11.

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Congressman William E. Dawson (D.) of Chicago confirmed this week that he has called upon the war and navy departments to immediately institute studies "by appropriate officers" looking to the establishment of basic policies with regard to the inclusion of Negroes in the post-war military establishment of the United States.

Pointing out that both branches of the service have taken specific steps toward making determinations regarding its post-war organization, the Congressman posed the question as to whether anyten into since 1940 were due to plans have been outlined or are the lack of advanced planning." He contemplated for Negroes. maintains that "the intelligent the specific contents of his letter planning now will not only make utilization of are fighting for democracy out should also through the world."

ture in many ures that have ge and depress and civilians,
red." 2-24-44 said the lved." "The issued involved. "The Negro manpower, but she result in a departure procedures operated to discourage and and for a more efficient utili
Secretary Stimson and Navy Secretary Forrestal were revealed but he did state what he called the "general context of the policies and communications."

ROGERS SAYS:

There Must Be No Favored People in The Post-War World

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

By J. A. ROGERS

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

REGARDING what I said on power politics last week, a very good friend of mine objects to my view on Stalin's treaty with Hitler in 1941. Russia, he said, was not prepared at the time and Stalin did it for reasons of national security and because the English had been plotting against him. He pointed out, as I said once in this column, that Hitler's trump card in getting that treaty was the dictaphone records of his secret conversations with the British and what they had said against Russia. It was a very nasty mess and had I been in Stalin's place I would have done the same. Stalin really chose the lesser of two evils.

Mr. Rogers

But my purpose was not so much to say why this or that had been done as to say what must be avoided so that there will be no more double-dealing in politics. For instance, I could go on to say that Chamberlain, Churchill, and others raised Mussolini, hoping to plate him because he had built up a powerful submarine navy across England's so-called life-line. Pope Pius XI praised Mussolini because the latter had permitted him to create some sort of religio-political state, while Pierre Laval, of France, and Stanley Baldwin, of England, agreed to Italy's rape of Ethiopia for the same reason that Neville Chamberlain handed Czecho-Slovakia over to Hitler. Yes, and even collaborationists like Petain and Laval can be beautifully explained if you will only see the selfish ends they try to serve.

WHITE NATIONS MUST RELINQUISH LANDS

As I said last week, no European peace treaty since the days of the Caesars has been able to prevent wars. All of them have been failures, and therefore if this peace conference should be a success it will have to proceed on radically different lines from the others.

FRANKLY, though the operation will have to be a very major one if we are not to have another war soon. First, nations now in lands to which they have neither geographical nor biological right must relinquish rulership to the natives, that is, even as Europeans rule in Europe, so Africans must rule in Africa, and Asiatics in Asia; that even as the latter when they come to the white man's lands come as "guests," so must it be when the white man goes to their lands. Even today in parts of Africa and Asia, natives are treated worse than dogs, an injustice that is going to cry louder to the heavens as years go on. In South Africa are 5,000,000 blacks in virtual slavery. The immense wealth they create go to the whites. A color bar bill confines them to menial and semi-skilled labor. Recently one Negro there was made a warrant officer, which is below a second lieutenant, and it was world news.

THERE MUST BE NO FAVORED PEOPLE

There must be no favored people, white, yellow, or black, but human dignity for all. For instance, West Indian troops now training in the United States were issued instructions that they should have no affairs with white women, and that if a white woman spoke to them first they should not reply. Yet no similar instructions were issued to white Americans now living at naval bases in the West Indies, some of whom run riot among the colored women there, with nothing being said about it. In England and Italy, because a few Negroes go with white women, there being no other women about, there is a furore. On the other hand, one hears nothing about the white soldiers and their affairs with colored women in the South Seas, Africa and India. Colored women do not count. They are fair game for anyone. Only white women are sacred. Most unjust!

To destroy Hitler's doctrine of Aryan superiority and let the older one of Anglo-Saxon color superiority stay is like operating on a boil and letting a cancer remain.

THIS fact is clear: Power politics has always failed to prevent wars. Handing Manchukuo and French Indo-China to Japan; Ethiopia to Italy, and Czecho-Slovakia to Hitler did not prevent war. Stalin's treaty with Hitler did not prevent the ravaging of Russia and the killing of over 10,000,000 of her people. Nor did the dicker of Petain and Laval with Hitler save either France or themselves. And as for Hitler, see what his great cleverness and planning has brought to his people! Power politics, like crime, does not pay.

Do the peace makers know this? They certainly do. If they do not act accordingly they'll just be eating up the taxpayers' money, and bringing on another war because peace conferences have been one of the greatest causes of war in the past.

Refuses To Back Down On Order

9-9-44

WASHINGTON — (ANP) —There appears to be no disposition on the part of the War Department to recede from the position it has taken in the non-segregation directive sent to all Army posts early in July, in spite of the ranting and protests on the part of Southern legislators and governors.

Last week Representative Newsome, of Alabama, entered into the record the protest of Governor Chauncey Sparks, of his State, sent to President Roosevelt, on Aug. 27, asking that the opinions of Southerners be invited before it is made effective.

LIBERALS HAIL ARMY DIRECTIVE

Up to last Thursday the White House had not replied to the Sparks telegram. A spokesman there acknowledged receipt and simply said that the matter "is in the mill." There was no clarification as to whether there would be an answer or not.

Meanwhile, as rabid segregationists continued to rail against the War Department directive, liberal elements were hailing it as "an important step forward in the fight to abolish discrimination based on race, color or creed from the armed forces and from our country." The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties has been notable in this respect. 9-9-44

In a letter to President Roosevelt, which referred to "these ossified white supremists" who would suspend the order, the federation told him that "the great majority of Americans abhor the views and tactics of this group," and assured him of continued "support to your leadership of our country."

Estelle Massey Riddle Conducts Survey In West

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

3-18-44

LOS ANGELES—On nationwide tour in the interests of the United States Cadet Nurse Corps, Estelle Massey Riddle, Consultant on Negro Nursing for the National Nursing Council for War Service, arrived in Los Angeles Monday for a series of conferences, speaking engagements and radio talks. She plans also to conduct a survey of the area as regards the present opportunities given race nurses, and en route East she will inspect nursing facilities at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and Camp Livingston, La. The visitor's headquarters are in New York.

According to the consultant, the Cadet Nurse Corps program offers excellent opportunities to young women everywhere. There is absolutely no race bias involved.

The course entails 30 months' service and is in no way connected with the Army or the Navy. Instead trained cadet nurses perform vital war services by helping to relieve graduate nurses for more highly skilled duties. In many cases Federal scholarships are granted for advanced study.

The corps members receive uniforms, tuition fees and monthly personal allowances. 3-18-44

During Mrs. Riddle's stay she will be the house-guest of Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Bailey of the city.

47n -1944

Germans Show No Color Line

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

All Prisoners Treated Alike, Say Repatriates

WOMAN IN GROUP

Arrived Last Week Aboard Gripsholm

3-25-44

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

JERSEY CITY — Twelve colored and 650 other persons returned Wednesday to America on board the Swedish Steamer Gripsholm after their release from a Nazi prison camp.

Of the twelve, nine were permitted to land and three are being held at Ellis Island for further investigation.

They reported that they were well treated by the Nazis; that there was no color line in Germany; that they had no desire to go down and sample the jim crow of the South.

All Treated Alike

Leon Brooks, who went to France with the 303rd Stevedore Unit, American Expeditionary Forces, World War I, and stayed there after the armistice as a wine salesman, said:

"Black and white make no difference to the Nazis. We were all treated alike, occupied the same quarters, eating, sleeping and spending our leisure time together. There was no jim crow on the Gripsholm either."

Brooks married a French girl who was not interned with him. He hopes to rejoin her as soon as the war is over. He has a sister, Mrs. Ethel Martin, in Cleveland.

No More South

Another repatriated American who is not going South is 62-year-old George Welch, a native of Edenton, N.C., who has been in France, Scotland and Wales for the past forty-two years. He is a singer and pianist. He spent twenty-two months in a Nazi prison camp. 3-25-44

"After all these years," he said, "I don't think I would like the South."

Moslem Movie Actor

When six-foot two-inch Reginald Berry came down the gang plank, one of the customs guards wanted to know "Is that Paul Robeson?"

Berry grew a goatee after he became a Moslem. He served as a professional wrestler and physical culture instructor in Prague, Czechoslovakia and for a time, he said, was employed by a Dutch studio, Bavaria Pictures, and had major roles in such movies as "Carol Peter" and "Auf Weidersehen."

A native of Kansas City, Berry went to Europe in 1928. His wife, a Bohemian girl, and eleven-year-old son are interned in Liebenan.

Berry's Moslem name is Omar Ibn Rhaman. His twenty-five months were divided among three prison camps at Compiegne, Tittmoning and Laufen. 3-25-44

Arrested in Holland

Jacob Taylor, light heavyweight boxer, who said he won the title in Cuba by defeating Battling Siki in 1923, fought in various European countries until 1933. Then he opened a sport and massage institute in the Hague, Holland, where he was arrested by the Nazis in 1941.

He spent twenty-five months in two German prison camps and described conditions there as fair and the food as poor. "It was mostly cabbage soup and potatoes." Taylor said he was one of Jack Dempsey's sparring partners for the Bill Brennan fight.

With Leslie's Blackbirds

Mrs. Evelyn A. Haymann of Philadelphia went to Europe thirteen years ago, she said, as a member of Lew Leslie's "Blackbirds."

Sengelese soldiers taken as prisoners by the Germans, she declared, are now doing forced labor inside the Reich. Her husband is Joe Haymann, a member of Louis Armstrong's orchestra.

She reported traveling throughout Europe as a dancer after leaving the "Blackbirds" and said she settled in Holland five years ago. Her description of the German invasion was "We just woke up one morning and there they were." 3-25-44

50c For an Egg

According to Mrs. Haymann, one egg in Holland is fifty cents; cigarettes, $15 a pack; socks, $30 a pair; stockings, $45 a pair.

Henry Crowder, Washington pianist, said he had spent the past twenty-six years in London, Paris and cities of Belgium and Frederick Johnson, New York, who went abroad with Sam Woodie's band and later organized Freddie Johnson's Harlemites' band, were other repatriates. Johnson was much concerned about learning the Harlem lingo. "I've got to get 'hep,'" he said, "to the 'jive talk.'"

3 Held on Ship

Johnny Mitchell, former Baltimore musician, did not disembark and it is believed he is among the three who were returned to Ellis Island for further investigation. The other two are Maceo Jefferson and John Walch, both of New York.

Mitchell, a guitarist who formerly played in Baltimore with the late Joe Rochester and Ike Dixon, went abroad in 1925 and played with various orchestras on the Continent. 3-25-44

Another repatriate, Robert Baker, said he fought Max Schemling in Germany, but was not surprised when the referee awarded the decision to the German.

"Wouldn't Talk"

One passenger who refused to talk to newsmen was George W. Cook, Jr., of Washington, son of a former dean of Howard University. In French he said he was too tired; that he would stay with Dr. and Mrs. D. O. W. Holmes, president of Morgan State College, and his wife in Baltimore. At a late date he had not arrived there.

Saw 3,000 Jews Killed

Eugenia Ruthkowski, Buffalo, told the AFRO she had seen race hate in Germany. "I saw 3,000 Jews killed in one day," she declared. 3-25-44

Irwin Safir, white, New York, said: "The French are glad to see Paris bombed unless they happen to be under the bombs."

Sixteen-year-old Mary Arvanities, interned in Greece, said butter costs over $33,000 a pound; shoes, $154,000 a pair; a suit of clothes, $550,000; a pound of meat, $2,000.

Nazis Intern Two of 99th Flyers

JERSEY CITY, N.J. — Belief that two pilots of the 99th Fighter Squadron are interned at Ostintting, Germany, was expressed by two persons returning to America this week on the Gripsholm. 3-25-44

Reginald Berry, interned for twenty months in Compiegne and Tittmoning prisons, told the AFRO he was witness to an air battle on February 6 during which two flyers bailing out within sight of the camp were captured and taken to Ostintting. Henry Crowder of Washington, prisoner at the camp with Berry, verified his statement.

Treatment Accorded To Chinese Clue To Fate Of Colored Peoples

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.

A FEW DAYS AGO CHINA quietly took her place as a conferee at the great Dumbarton Oaks Conference. Her very presence in this august body of world leaders has already created widespread speculation among darker races the world over. The big question seems to be "What kind of treatment will China be given"? 10-14-44

It is clear, however, that the participation of China in the planning of the new world order gives the Conference a great opportunity to make the coming peace a lasting one. China wants and deserves the same consideration accorded other nations no matter how strong or how powerful they may be. She has shed her blood by the gallons in the cause of world democracy. She withstood the agony of lean, dark days when democracy appeared to be on the verge of complete collapse. She has maintained her faith with the Allied cause, when she might have chosen the easier road of collaboration with the Japs.

She has done this because of a burning desire for full economic and political equality among world powers. To deny the Chinese people the considerations to which they are entitled will be an inevitable invitation to another war.

The conference should keep constantly in mind that China not only represents 350,000,000 Chinese people, but is likewise the hope of millions of other dark people the world over. These people, long the victims of widespread exploitation by stronger nations, are looking eagerly to the Dumbarton Oaks Conference for an equal opportunity in the new world alignment.

To rebuff China, to give her second-class consideration will be tantamount to telling the darker people of India, Africa and other sections of Asia, "You still are not ready for equality." 10-14-44

Ask Equality As Post War Guide

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

PHILADELPHIA—(ANP)—Equality of all its nationals without regard to race or creed, is urged in a memorandum submitted by the American council for Judaism to Secretary Hull, as a guiding policy in post-war aid to foreign countries. 10-28-44

"Such a condition to the extension of American aid would be an effective, practical demonstration of our determination to foster the principles of democracy in the post-war world," Lessing J. Rosenwald, president of the council, said.

"We trust that the United States of America, in accordance with its traditions, and in its own enlightened self-interest will exert its fullest influence for the universal acceptance of this concept of full equality of rights and obligations," Rosenwald added.

In those sections which are void of sovereign status, the United States was asked to exercise itself by guaranteeing that "immigration shall not be limited by racial or religious qualifications, and that self-government shall be speedily established as soon as population demonstrate a capacity for self-government." 10-28-44

The memorandum stipulated that the determining factor for immigration in these territories should be "in accordance with their expanding economic capacity and political stability."

What the Negro Hopes For In the Post-War World

The Nation — New York, N.Y. 10-21-44

BY HENRY LEE MOON

Former Regional Racial Relations Adviser to the Federal Public Housing Administration

WHAT the Negro hopes for in the post-war world is simple and obvious. His hopes may be summed up in a phrase—full equality and the end of Jim Crow. In this, the race is united as never before. Indeed, the attainment of that goal is today more than a mere hope. It is now the grim determination of all elements within the race. We must have the right to work, to be upgraded, to occupy any position for which we may be individually qualified by training, experience, and skill. In the field of politics, the Negro expects those political rights guaranteed to every American by the Constitution. Denial of political rights imposes a status of second-class citizenship, which the Negro is no longer willing to accept. Finally, and urgently, we must have equal educational opportunity. Our children must have facilities and instruction equal to those offered to other children of the nation.

Our struggle must be for equality with meaning. Such equality requires the raising of the social, economic, and cultural levels of the common people throughout this country. In a word, that means we must have a new society in which poverty can be abolished and racial conflicts eliminated. If we are to end job discrimination, we must first achieve full, stable employment. Then there will be no mad scramble for jobs; no need to exclude large bodies of workers because of race, sex, creed, or national origin; no fear of insecurity. Were there decent homes enough for all the people of America, it would be impossible to crowd Negroes or other racial minorities into the back alleys and filthy slums of our great industrial cities. Our slums and blighted areas could be cleared. 10-21-44

Despite the bitter opposition of entrenched reaction, President Roosevelt's program of social legislation has contributed immeasurably to the advancement of the common people of this country. The New Deal has not only recognized the need for raising the economic, social, and cultural levels of the masses of the American people, but it has also been aware of the special disabilities under which the Negro minority lives. Discrimination in employment has been curbed. Negro personnel has been appointed in many agencies to see that Negroes enjoy full benefits of the legislation.

It is for this reason that I believe the majority of Negro voters will recognize 10-21-44 the need for reelecting President Roosevelt and giving him the kind of Congress that will enable the Administration to go forward in this drive for equality of opportunity.

Pacific War a Race Mixture

8-11-44

Call—Kansas City, Mo.

Color Line Vague As Net Tightens Around Japs

(This is the first in a series of Articles written for ANP to acquaint readers with intimate facts of the Pacific War.)

By WILL V. NEELY
(ANP Foreign Correspondent)

WITH THE U. S. TROOPS IN THE PACIFIC. (ANP) — The war now in progress in the Pacific can, when it is recorded in history, be considered the war of the races.

It is a war where several races are being pitted against the influx of the Japanese. To appreciate the true meaning of what is going on in the Pacific, one needs only to glance at the record. 8-11-44

China, with her millions powerful, yet struggling against a nation of aggressors, realizes that the Japanese grew in power even under her very shadow while she passed through the years in confusion.

China holds the key to the now free world. Across her sprawling lands, men are fighting and dying to regain the torch of freedom so vital to her peoples.

To the aid of China came the big nations, realizing that to lose China was to risk the future of the Asiatic-Pacific world.

Against Aggression

Yet, China in her deathhold against aggression was not alone. There was huge Australia with a total population about the same as New York City.

At the start of the war, Australia rushed her fighting men to the middle east and to Africa to stem the tide of Rommel and his German hordes. From England to Egypt, the Australian soldier did his part to represent his homeland and the homeland of millions who were to come into the war later. 8-11-44

This left Australia pitifully weak in fighting men but not weak in fighting spirit.

The Japs knew of Australia's weakness. They thought invasion of her soil would be an easy task. First, they would take New Guinea and then——

American planes sighted and sank the invasion forces before they had a chance to carry out the threat.

After the arrival of Gen. McArthur, Australia took a new lease on life. American soldiers began to arrive and for the first time in history, Negro troops set foot on Australian soil. With the defense of Australia came the task of moving back the Japanese in New Guinea. 8-11-44

Fighting Grand

New Guinea became the fighting ground for the Australians, and American white and Negro troops. Supplies were rushed to the Jap infested jungle. Australian infantry moved forward while American infantry completed the incirclement.

Negro engineers and quartermaster troops made roads through murky jungle paths. The net tightened. The whites and Negroes were pitted against the Japanese.

Negro troops arrived in Bougainville, Lae, Guadalcanal.

They also arrived in India and Burma and China. Mixed races fighting and working together for one common cause—Democracy!

And so the net still tightens. It is a huge football game with the navy making the passes and being followed up by the Marines and the army, or perhaps the army or marines making the passes and being supported by the Navy.

It is a mixture of races, this war in the Pacific. 8-11-44

When the book of time is closed and the world is at peace again—the peoples of all races can thank God that when freedom is at stake, the color line is as flexible as the horizon.

DuBois Hits Dumbarton Oaks Plans

Tribune—Savannah, Ga.

10-26-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In a statement to the conference of Americans United for World Organization, held at the department of state October 16, in which several hundred were in attendance, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, representing the NAACP, raised the whole issue of colonies and imperialism bringing out the inadequacy of proposals made on each.

Basing his summary remarks on study of the published proposals of the Dumbarton Oaks conference, in regard to colonials, Dr. DuBois said, "It virtually says to six hundred million human beings, if not to a majority of mankind, that the only way to human equality is the philanthropy of masters who have historic and strong interest in preserving their present power and income." In outlining precisely, details for the basis of his conclusion, Dr. DuBois elaborated as follows: 10-26-44

"As I have gone through the published proposals at Dumbarton Oaks, I am depressed to realize with what consistency the matter of colonies has been passed over. In chapter one, paragraph three, the emphasis is on the fact that this is a union of nations, not races, groups or organizations of men, not recognized as nations; in chapter two, paragraph one, peace-loving 'States' alone may join the union; in chapter six, 10-26-44 apparently an aggrieved party must be a state in order to complain or appear before the council; similarly, in chapter seven, no colonies as such can appeal for hearing before the International Court of Justice. Elaborate effort is made to protect states from aggression, but I find no prorovisions in chapter seven even to consider aggression of a nation on its own colonial peoples while apparently international military force can be called in to suppress revolt. Indeed in paragrph seven of 10-26-44 that chapter it seems definitely to say that colonial disputes lie entirely beyonr the jurisdiction of this proposed government of men. The econom ic and social council set up in this chapter offers some ray of hope. It can recommend and consider complaints and situations, but there is no direct power to investigate conditions. The council is appointed by eighteen states with no colonial participation indicated."

Among 10-26-44 organization representatives, Dr. DuBois was one of the few recognized for a statement, by Under Secretary of State Stettinius. Judge William H. Hastie also represented the NAACP at this meeting, designed for discussion, relative to proposals for an internation al organization to maintain peace and security.

47n-1944

Negro In Uniform Infuriates South

Amsterdam News — New York, N. Y.

4-1-44

Mrs. Agnes Meyer, Wife of "Washington Post" Publisher, Exposes Story of "Negro and War"

Describes Murders In Dixie of Soldiers By Ignorant Whites

Woman Attacked By 'Bama Driver

Army Almost Helpless In Face of Situation Existing in Southland

4-1-44

The Negro and the War
By AGNES E. MEYER

The following is the first in a series of three articles by Mrs. Agnes Meyer, wife of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, on "The Negro and the War." The series begins in The Amsterdam News by special arrangement with The Washington Post and The New York Herald Tribune in which the articles appeared in their issues of Sunday, March 19 and Sunday, March 26. As Mrs. Meyer's concluding article is the most important of her discussion of the Negro question, The Amsterdam News begins publication of the final article first and may reprint the first of the series later. Of special importance to Negroes and others is a lengthy statement by John J. McCloy, Assistant Secretary of War, which will appear soon, setting forth the fixed policy of the War Department upholding and maintaining segregated units in the nation's armed forces. Mr. McCloy's statement is believed to be first official pronouncement by the government on racial segregation of the Negro in the U. S. Army. —Editor's note.)

4-1-44

Two problems have strained to the utmost the relationship between the Army and the Negro population. In the South the uniform worn by a Negro affects the ignorant white population as a red rag does a bull; what is worse, a large part of the South is very crude in its attitude toward murder, particularly when the victim is a Negro.

The white police and state constabulary who are supposed to uphold the law are the chief offenders. The number of brutal murders which have not been punished is shocking. In addition to the killing at Alexandria, La., Negro soldiers were murdered at Little Rock, Ark.; El Paso, Tex.; at Mobile, Ala., where a bus driver was the assailant; at Columbia, S. C., and in several other places where the murderers caped conviction.

In Montgomery, Ala., a Negro my nurse was beaten by two lice officers. Her nose was broken d her whole body badly bruised. The excuse was that she had re- sed to leave the back seat of a s so that white passengers could ve all the places. These acts of olence continue unabated.

Daily Insults Endured

4-1-44

Only the serious cases come to e Army's attention — shooting, lling, rioting. But the daily in- lts that have to be endured in lence are even more disastrous Negro morale. The Negro soldier leave must wait until all pass- gers have been accommodated efore he can secure transportation. e must get out when his seat is eeded by a white traveler.

Last Christmas hundreds of Ne- ro soldiers passed their entire rlough waiting, waiting in vain. hey never got home. Southerners ave said to me quite frankly: You've got to teach a nigger in niform that he's still a nigger." n many Army posts the Negro oldiers prefer to remain in camp nd sacrifice the recreation im- ortant as a relief from constant iscipline rather than run the risk f insult or injury.

But even within the camps there re frequent cases of gratuitous in- ult to the Negro, especially from outhern officers, of whom there is preponderance in the United tates Army. The impact of military ustice upon the Negro soldier is fre- uently one - sided, revealing mild unishments of whites who have ommitted offenses against Negroes -and severe sentences for Negroes ho have offended whites.

Prison-Camp Example

When a Negro is the offender in ivil life, the punishment is also requently twice as severe as that neted out to the white man. The best example of the way the Negro oldier's feelings are disregarded in the South occurred at the German Prison Camp McCain in Mississippi. Here the facilities, toilets and drinking fountains were labeled "For whites only." The Germans and white Americans were in one class, the American Negro in another.

4-1-44

No wonder the Germans say they don't know wh we are fighting them, as their ideas on race and ours are the same.

To be sure, many white people are alarmed or incensed over the impertinent behavior of Negroes in uniform, and of Negro civilians as well. These frequent exhibitions of bad manners and the crimes which are the only news items about Negroes in the white press, worry the Negro leaders even more than the white people, for they realize that excesses on the part of any individual are blamed upon the whole race.

Their Army chaplains, clergymen, school teachers, and the Negro newspapers are doing all they can to impress upon their people the need for restraint in deportment and dress; but they have often expressed to me the hope that the white population would try to understand the magnitude of their problem.

4-1-44

After all, people who have lived an impoverished slum existence are bound to show signs of aggression when jobs and money suddenly become more plentiful, and when the world which formerly ignored their existence suddenly discovers that it cannot fight a war without their help.

The Army authorities are deeply concerned over the depredations committed against Negro men and women in the service, and have taken many steps to end them. Statements of policy have been issued to commanding officers, and Major General J. A. Ulio, the Adjutant General, has drawn up a stiff memorandum clarifying the Army powers on arrests and prosecutions.

But when state and local officials are not only weak but indifferent, the Federal authorities are seriously handicapped.

Transportation difficulties present the worst problem. The Army has tried to use its own motor equipment in extreme situations, but the supply is necessarily inadequate. Several post commanders have cleaned up their situations by telling the local officials in no uncertain language that they would stand no nonsense. But this is effective only when the local community has enough pride and decency to create a public opinion that supports commander's orders.

4-1-44

Bogged Down by Politics

I have seen Army generals bogged down by the political crooks that run cities just outside their doors I have been in one Southern county containing a very large camp, where the murder of a white man or Negro is a less serious offense than stealing a pig; on the theory, no doubt, that there are too many people and very few hogs.

In the face of such a low morality the military is helpless. Even if the Army took over such communities, I doubt whether they could clean them up, so ingrained, so secretive is its vice, and so clannish is the population. Only somebody who has been in touch with this somber and un-American atmosphere can understand how hard it is to control and that the Army has an unbelievably difficult situation on its hands.

4-1-44

But that is no comfort to the Negro mothers whose sons have been insulted, beaten or murdered.

The might of the United States Army is the greatest power in the world in the eyes of these mothers, and naturally they do not understand why that power cannot protect their sons if it wishes to do so. Nothing but an aroused nationwide public opinion can stop this lawlessness.

The country no longer can remain indifferent to the moral callousness of certain elements in the South, especially where it concerns the Negro. If the Army can teach our soldiers how to treat the natives of Patagonia, New Guinea and Africa, perhaps it can eventually handle the much more difficult task of teaching such Americans how to treat their Negro fellow-citizens.

In justice to the Southern states, it should be added that I found there not only the worst conditions for the Negro but among a small percentage of the people the greatest progress in thinking and behavior toward him.

In one Southern war center I found the only equitable division betwen whites and Negroes that came to my notice, of the housing, schools and recreational facilities furnished by the Federal government.

4-1-44

Near several camps the Southern communities contributed their services generously to the entertainment of the Negro soldiers, and with a kindliness I never encountered in the North. A social revolution is dawning below the Mason and Dixon Line, set in motion chiefly by a rapidly expanding industrialism that has created huge population shifts, shaken prejudices and created an intellectual ferment more profound and more promising than the effects of the war upon the North.

It is a pity that active sympathy for the Negro is receding in the rest of the nation just as this Southern liberalism is getting under way.

The popular resentment of the Negro race undoubtedly has focused itself upon the Army with an irrational force, because of the maltreatment of husbands, sons and brothers by the Southern communities. Minor factors increased this popular resentment.

4-1-44

At the beginning of the war Negro volunteers were often rejected because separate Negro camps were not ready, and these rejections were not very courtesously made by some of the local draft boards. As the Negro Army grew, the screening process was not yet perfected, with the result that some college professors and professional men were assigned to menial tasks.

—M. R.

NEGRO CHOSE PRISON TO LIVING UNDER NAZI RULE

Plaindealer — Kansas City, Kans.

8-11-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—J. Edgar Hoover tells in a signed article in the September issue of The American Magazine how a Negro, caught in the Nazi invasion of Holland, consented to become a German spy in South America to escape Hitlerism, but once back in the Western Hemisphere surrendered even thought knew it meant imprisonment and tricked his German-born co-cospirator into giving himself up.

Both now are in a South American penitentiary. The "lesson here for Hitler and all who believe in tyranny," said the Director of the Federal Buerau of Investigation, is that a Negro "born in a free world and conditioned to freedom so hated Naziism . . . that he was willing to return to poverty and even imprisonment rather than suffer it longer. And a German, (the co-conspirator) whose father had been executed by his government had taken tyranny lying

The Negro had gone to Holland as a stowaway in peaceful days but after the German invasion he was recruited for espionage. Trained thoroughly in radio transmission, codes, secret writing, and identification of ships and planes for espionage in South America, he and the German-born spy were shipped across the South Atlantic.

They paddled ashore separately in rubber boats with instructions to proceed by different routes to a rendezvious, relates Mr. Hoover. He writes:

8-11-44

"When the Negro was on free soil again, he buried his equipment,. marked the spot carefully, and set out at a jog for the near- est town. At dawn he came to a village and breathlessly asked the first man he met for a policeman.

"'I am a policeman,' the man said.

"'There is a big German boat down at the beach yonder,' the Negro said, 'and there is a German spy who has just landed.'

"Unfortunately the Negro spoke the native language poorly—his Dutch and English were much better—and the policeman did not understand him, but after scouting around a few moments, returned and said he had found a man who could speak Engish. Ironically, their passport the man he had found was the other spy.

"Confronted by his fellow con- spirator, the man was seeking to travel. The German finally agreed . . .

"On their w to the station, the Negro simply laid down the pistol and blurted out the whole story. The German, enraged, denied everything but later, when the Negro led police to the beach and dug up the buried equipment, the German confessed."

AN ARMY OF AFRICANS

Guardian — Boston, Mass.

Native soldiers of the Royal West African Frontier Force are in action on the Burma front. They have advanced in the Kaladen Valley by successful attacks on Apaukwa, south of Kyautaw, and earlier they had beaten all Japanese counter attacks east of Kyautaw. They reached India shortly before the Burma offensive began but had been well seasonsed for their present assignment by having lived for months in the dense jungles of their native land. The British Information Service says that they are "the finest jungle fighters in the world."

3-25-44

This is, indeed, high praise; and its significance becomes clearer as we consider the kind of raw material from which the Force was successfully built and the unprecedented complexities of modern mechanized warfare. On the other hand, the efficiency of her African troops thus acknowledged reflects no small amount of credit upon Great Britain. For three years the natives underwent training directed by British officers and non-commissioned officers, who braved tropical diseases, endured living conditions in isolated stations and continued to "carry on" in that spirit of doggedness which is commonly associated with the British character. Trained continuously in secret, the Force was known in West Africa as the "Forgotten Army." When finally it was ready, whot had been accomplished was astounding.

Dark Continent natives had become drivers, fitters, carpenters, electricians, stenographers, survey assistants, and others had joined engineer companies, the medical services and anti-aircraft batteries. "Within a short time after its arrival in India," the British Information Service states, "the Force was already adding to the great tradition of the West African Frontier Force which was formed by Lord Lugard near the end of the last century to preserve the internal security of British possessions in West Africa."

3-25-44

The transformation of "green" Africans into a formidable modernized fighting force will be viewed with unruffled calm by the scientific anthropologist. To him it means nothing more than an expected confirmation of his well-based conclusions which recognize the equality of all mankind however widely separated and distant may be the dwelling places of the "sons of men." To many average Americans the puzzling statement of a War Secretary belittling the colored American soldier becomes more baffling than ever as they learn what Britain has done with her African colonies. Our colored inductees are unquestionably better equipped educationally than African tribesmen. It appears glaringly clear, then, that the excellent results exhibited by the African soldier are due to a high-quality system of military training, administered with patience and an unremitting faithfulness to duty.

Secretly Trained Africans Fighting Japs On Burma Front

Journal + Guide — Norfolk, Va.

3-18-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Trained in secret for three years and now in action on the Burma front where they are scoring daily successes against the Japanese, the native soldiers of the Royal West African Frontier Force are the finest jungle fighters in the world, the British Information Service has told the Office of War Information.

According to official British communiques, these West African troops — fighting 5,000 miles from their native villages — continued their advances in the Kaladen Valley on the Burma front by attacking Apaukwa, south of Kyauktaw, on March 2 and capturing a majority of the enemy positions. Earlier they had repulsed Japanese counterattacks east of Kyauktaw.

The strong contingent of the Royal West African Frontier Force arrived in India shortly before the Burma offensive opened, the BIS said, but the units had lived almost continually in dense jungle country for months before they embarked on the Indian assignment.

3-18-44

FOUGHT ITALIANS

The present campaign is only one of a number participated in by various units of the Force. Early in the war, two West African infantry brigades — one from Nigeria and the other from the Gold Coast — were put into the field against the Italians in Abyssinia and played an important part in the liberation of that country.

The placing of these two brigades in the Abyssinian field left the four West African colonies practically defenseless during the early days of the African war, the BIS stated, but when the triumphant native troops returned to West Africa, they found that an entirely new army had been organized in their absence.

It was an untrained army at that time, the BIS pointed out. The majority of the British officers and non-commissioned officers were still learning to adapt themselves to African conditions. The thousands of Africans who had voluntarily joined the Force were enthusiastic, but untrained in modern warfare.

3-18-44

Heartened by the Abyssinian victory and undaunted by the complexities of mechanical warfare, the Force settled down to the task of making itself a first class fighting outfit.

There was plenty of good fighting material. The Hausas of Northern Territories of the Gold Coast had long been recognized among the finest colonial troops in the world.

MORE LITERATE TRIBES HELP

For its technicians and tradesmen, the Force turned to the more literate tribes near the sea coast —the Yorubas and Ibes of Nigeria, the Fantis and Gas of the Gold Coast, and the town-dwellers of Sierra Leone and Gambia. Many trained schools were opened.

Under British and African instructors, thousands of young recruits quickly learned to be drivers, fitters, carpenters, electricians, stenographers and survey assistants. Others joined engineer compaines, the medicial services, or anti-aircraft batteries that guarded West Africa's important airfields.

3-18-44

The main burden of training during the last two years of silence in the African jungle schools fell on the comparatively small number of British officers and NCOs serving in West Africa, the BIS said. For them it was an exacting life, with tropical diseases and long periods of service in isolated stations. Secrecy surrounded what was being done. The Force was known in West Africa as the "Forgotten Army."

FORCE WAS READY

3-18-44

Finally, however, the Force was ready. And within a short time after its arrival in India, it was already adding to the great tradition of the Royal West African Frontier Force which was formed by Lord Lugard near the end of the last century to preserve the internal security of British possessions in West Africa.

In the last war the Force served with distinction against the Germans in the Cameroons and East Africa.

CONVERT NEGRO TROOPS TO ENGINEERING UNITS

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

3-26-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—It was officially learned here Monday that the 931st Field Artillery Battalion has been converted into a Combat Engineer Battalion and redesignated the 1698th, and that officers of the disbanded 184th Field Artillery Regiment, known as "the Old Eighth" from Illinois, have been transferred to service with the 92nd Division.

Other information also discloses that the 795th and 732nd Field Artillery Battalions have been relieved of their field artillery duties and are now receiving engineer training. The 732nd was transferred to Camp Pickett, Va., while the 795th is stationed at Fort Jackson, S. C.

3-26-44

17 Paratroopers Still Jugged

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

3-25-44

COLUMBUS, Ga.—Seventeen members of the 555th Paratroopers are in the guard house awaiting general court-martial. Infantry are in charge.

Trouble began in a hundred men when news that they were being transferred to McCall, N.C. Two of them were shot by MP's. Most of the non-commissioned officers were busted.

Meanwhile, colored gunners of the 234th Battalion, of Camp Davis, N. C., commanded by Lieut. W. Andrews, of Glendale, Calif., who was succeeded by Lieut. Col. Chester G. Bouwkamp has been converted into a Combat two months ago, and a skeleton cadre of key enlisted men from the 235th Searchlight Battalion of the 613th Regiment, of Camp Stewart, Ga., commanded by Major Galen P. Eaton, of Stonington, Maine, have received warm praise from military authorities for their unusual firing records.

The 234th, only recently mastered a three-day field problem it underwent, to test the theories of firing methods it had been taught at Camp Davis. The men of the 235th were rated "Excellent," scoring 91 in artillery training and an overall average of 86 in all phases of training.

3-25-44

OUTSTANDING ABILITY

47n-1944

Other Editors Write

POST WAR PLANNING

There is much talk about Post-War planning...Everybody is making preparations to live after the present war comes to an end. It is smart to plan for the future, those who prepare for the future are more able to make adjustments to the world than the fellow who only lives for a day.

There are many things that could be said about Post-War planning, but we only wish to make one suggestion.

Our great task in the Post-War world will not be solving the racial problem so much, but rather getting our own house clean....If we can give our people more education, common sense, vision, intelligence, honesty, dependability, efficiency and decency, we will be able to participate in a Democracy. Our status will demand that recognition be given us along all lines. We must keep up the fight to defeat racial barriers, but we must not neglect to keep up the fight to set our own house in order.

Of course, there are thousands of us who can measure up to any requirements of good citizens in all phases, but there are also thousands walking in darkness holding the entire race back. Our great task is going to be keeping the young jitterbug element, the hoodlum, both old and young, the hair-brain radical, the political crooks, the ignorant and the Uncle Tom under control and elevate them to a status that will not take away the social, economic, political and religious gains already achieved. In order to go forward, we must give the problem within our race some real attention throughout this country.

The task is not being neglected, but we wish to call attention at this point to the fact, that too much cannot be done in getting our own house right.

The Plaindealer

—o—

GET READY TO HOLD YOUR JOB

The public should be concerned about conversion from war to peace time activity. Congress is concerned to the extent that several bills have been introduced calculated to get people back to normal. None other than the one providing unemployment benefits for a certain class of workers actually and directly apply to most of the people.

Already we have seen some cutbacks in employment in certain war industries. As we come closer to the defeat of our enemies these cutbacks will be greater and we shall have a lot of readjustments to make.

The question of jobs is of paramount importance for if people can be employed at gainful occupations other things will go along; people will be sane and patient enough to work out a lasting program.

While jobs have been plentiful, most employers have been forced to work employees who are not only unqualified for their respective jobs, but also lack many of the ordinary habits that go to make up a good worker. And these same people have been shortsighted enough to fail to take advantage of opportunities they never had before.

Of course, what will happen is that those employees who failed the employer during these times of national emergency will be the first fired upon returning to normalcy. And this is true for both Negroes and whites.

Often we have complained that generally Negroes were the last hired and the first fired. That is true in a great many instances. But the By-stander believes that the Negro himself can do much to keep his job by proper conduct. We found during the depression that generally speaking, those people who were industrious and took care of the responsibilities in the past, had jobs while genarlly the shiftless, irresponsible were on relief. Of course there were a lot of good reliabl people on relief; there were exceptions. There just were not jobs left to go round.

Realizing that the churches, clubs and lodges have a lot of influence in any community, we believe that much of the program of each should be devoted to the job of advising and helping people to appreciate that there is a serious problem ahead and the question of whether they hold a job when the rush comes, depends greatly upon them.

—:o:—

ONE LAW, ONE JUSTICE

It may be a hard thing for some people to learn, but it is nonetheless true, that the people of this country, whether they reside in Jersey or in Georgia, will come of age, and so be ready for a real peace, only when they realize that ONE LAW, ONE JUSTICE, ONE LIBERTY is the indispensable basis of a stable and civil society.

To the extent Amercans, as any people, see law and justice and liberty as divisible, to that extent they make their life a thing of divisio nand wasteful conflict.

One law, one justice, one liberty: this is the thing without which there is no civility, no social dignity, no continuity of the higher human heritage.

What of the Parties?

If there is any one thing political parties should be together on, as given matter, it is this necessary basis of sane social intercourse.

Still, the most argued about section of the two major party platforms this summer is that on the Negro.

Opinion differs as to the respective merits of the sections, but it is clear that neither party would have to be bothered with the "Negro problem" if the top leaders of the major parties had gone to their conventions ready to accord the Negro citizen his full rights under the law—the United States Constitution.

The "problem" exists primarily because America is at war with itself in the basic concept of its promise and function as a nation.

How there is to be victory in the peace so long as America is at war in its vitals is something we want to be told.

New Jersey Herald News

Postwar Reconversion And The Negro

Journal & Guide — Norfolk, Va

8-19-44

THE VOTE on the GEORGE states' rights postwar reconversion bill in the U. S. Senate on August 11 offers plain evidence of what the Negro may expect to be up against, and the type of development which he must, more than ever, be on guard against and take steps now and hereafter to forestall by every legitimate democratic process.

The vote on the GEORGE bill, following rejection of a similiar but somewhat more acceptable bill sponsored by SENATORS MURRAY and KILGORE, found the Democrats of the South, with only four exceptions, and a controlling bloc of Republicans lining up together to gyp the Negro out of his equitable share of benefits under the reconversion program.

Coming on the heels of the conventions of the two major parties, neither of which offered really strong and unqualified platforms dealing with minority rights, this has especial significance as the first act of the two parties following their protestations via party planks on the Negro question, 8-19-44

What the GEORGE bill would do is to turn over to the individual states absolute control of relief for unemployed persons during the postwar period—but with the federal government underwriting the expenses, however.

How important this is can be seen from the fact that there are about 20,000,000 war workers and 10,000,000 service men involved.

IT IS SHOCKING to witness the unanimity with which the GOP members of the Senate embraced the states' rights doctrine, used by the South primarily in the past to evade its plain duty to distribute equally the benefits and rights of government. 8-19-44

The Republicans need no reminder that in the southern states, where eight million Negroes reside, those in power will grasp such an opportunity as the GEORGE bill provides to further depress the living standards of colored civilians and returned war veterans during the postwar period. It will be a sorry picture—an army of black veterans who've been fighting for democracy to return and be forced, through such devices, into virtual or actual serfdom.

And that is what will happen. It has always happened in the South in the distribution of public funds, for education, for health, for relief, for agricultural aid, for housing, and similiar functions. The records show the denial to, or great disparity in the distribution of such funds and other aid between the races in the affected area. 8-19-44

Interested agencies and individuals are already asking GOVERNOR DEWEY, the GOP presidential candidate, and PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT to comment on this vital legislation. Their answers and the final disposition of the legislation will be useful criteria by which voters, particularly in the pivotal or balance-of-power states, will determine the candidate to support in November.

Every citizen interested in his birthright should write to his congressman and senators and frankly insist that a more civilized type of legislation be devised. None of the present legislation, that already rejected by the Senate nor that passed by the Senate, is really adequate

Ex-Combat Men With 93rd Jump Island to Aid 24th

Afro-American 8-12-44

Master Techniques of Jungle Warfare, Shifted When Island Loses Importance

Baltimore Md

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the South Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

Baltimore, Md.

SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC (Via Courier) — Temporarily relieved of semi-combat duty on an island in the New Georgia archipelago of the Solomons Islands, a portion of one of the 93rd Division's combat teams is relieving a part of the 24th Infantry in vital non-combatant guard and maintenance functions on another island.

Soon after arriving overseas, this portion of the division began to add the names of Guadalcanal, Banika, Vela Lavella, Gonanga, Baga and Gizo to their vocabularies.

They found Gizo, the only real city in the group, dotted with modern houses and were awed at the sight of a lawnmower and of a few of the Polynesian natives the movies had led them to believe people all the Pacific isles.

Little Contact with Enemy

On one tactically important island the unit split up to guard an airdrome. They saw the enemy moving about on adjoining islands, even watched them fishing in small native-made boats but had close contact with only a single son of the Rising Sun.

The comic bit of scuttlebutt the unit is now telling is that the Jap, a straggler, had been wandering around the island for weeks or even months.

For a week a patrol dragnet searched for the Jap. They found his cave and evidences that he had been able to swipe some American rations at some time or other, but they didn't find the Jap.

Waited to Surrender

A crack Ft. Bragg-trained anti-aircraft unit got credit for the capture when the emaciated and more than half-starved Jap stood on the roadside waving to after-movie crowds for someone to pick him up.

8-12-44

Security patrols from the unit walked the trails of the unit's island and several adjoining ones. In this manner they became partially jungle wise. Other parts of the group kept the supply lines open and still others practiced scouting and other jungle tactics.

In time the unit earned a commendation for efficiency on combat maneuvers, proving their ability to master the savagery of the bush and deal with its diseases.

No Longer Needed There

It was shifted off the island because of its diminishing tactical importance following the successful operations of other parts of the division at Bougainville, Green Island and Emirau Islands.

Now it is guarding fuel and ammunition, loading it on or off barges and ships, shuttling it forward to airmen and infantrymen in our farthest advanced sectors.

Only award winner, so far, is S/Sgt. William Tate, Coshocton, Ohio, a mess sergeant, who earned the Soldier's Medal when he saved the life of a white sailor after a navy craft had blown up in a harbor near where his unit was stationed.

Colored Officers

Colored officers in the segment of the team include Baltimoreans, First Lieut. Christo Waller, 1823 Eager Street, husband of the former Laura Singleton and ex-Morgan State football and track star; First Lieut. Thomas J. Wheaden, 2407 Madison Avenue; Second Lieut. Booker T. Williams, 1515 Argyle Avenue; First Lieut. Edward D. Hinkson, 2520 Druid Hill Avenue.

Washingtonians are First Lieut. Samuel E. Tyree, 1205 Linden Street, Northeast, and First Lieut. Oswald V. Monroe, 215 T Street, Northwest.

All-CIAA Star

Other officers contacted by this correspondent include:

Capts. Napoleon B. Helm, Cincinnati; Reden R. Williams, Tampa, Fla.; First Lieuts. William H. Kearney, Bridgeport, Conn., former Virginia Union all-CIAA football star; William T. Harper, Orange, N.J.; Barney Q. Duncan, Chicago; Joseph Hairston, Phenix City, Ala.;

8-12-44

Second Lieuts. William H. Youngblood, New Bedford, Mass.; Romeo A. Cherot, Ann Arbor, Mich.; James T. Hollin, Montgomery, Ala.; Shirley W. Gregory, Chicago; Joseph Sarpy, Alexandria, La.; Richard L. Crawford, Chicago; Alfred A. Rousselle, Wilmington, Del.; Alonzo D. Mitchell, Long Island, N.Y.; Benjamin Hicks, NYC; Roger Smith, Andrews, S.C.

Warrant Officers Gentry Heslep, Tucson, Ariz., and Floyd W. Pettie, Salina, Kan.

Know Their Weapons

Enlisted personnel in this unit, like that in every infantry group of a combat team, is trained in handling the regulation rifle, light and heavy machine-guns, light and heavy mortars, bazookas and flame-throwers. Among men whose homes are on the East coast are:

BALTIMORE

Pvt. Herbert C. Smith, 556 St. Mary Street; T/Sgt. Johnnie Baxter, 1313 N. Bond Street.

WASHINGTON

S/Sgt. Henry Braxton, 1014 Florida Avenue, Northeast; T/Sgt. Floyd Finney, 1739 Q Street, Northwest; Pvt. Isham Thompson, 31 Florida Avenue, Northeast.

PHILADELPHIA

Pvt. Harry Dent, 8418 Bartram Avenue; Pfc. Maynard Washington, 761 Moore Street; Pfc. Patillo Greenwood, 1726 N. Nineteenth Street; Pfc. Samuel Stribling, 1807 W. Montgomery Avenue; S/Sgt. Eddie Sears, 2039 Wharton Street; Pfc. William Seville, 32 S. Cecil Street;

Pfc. Nathaniel Lynch, 1900 N. Twenty-first Street, Pfc. George Poyner, 4055 Samson Street; Pvt. Harrison Gamble, 1833 W. Master Street; Pfc. Curtis Thompson, 1419 W. Stiles Street; S/Sgt. Richard Floyd, 954 N. Warnock Street; S/Sgt. Eugene Darden, 3636 N. Smedley Street; Pfc. James W. Baylor, 423 S. Forty-second Street.

8-12-44

VIRGINIA

S/Sgt. Henry Q. McDaniel, Roanoke; S/Sgt. Paul Dickerson, Chilowie; Sgt. Earvin Wilkerson, Bedford; T/5 James Smith, Buchanan; Pfc. Edward Davis, Appomatox; Pfc. Ernest Hairston, Lynchburg; Pfc. Bennie Lamb, Virginia Beach; Pfc. Hiram Terry, Nathalie; Pfc. George King, Blair;

Sgt. Vincent Davis, Norfolk; Sgt. George L. Roberts, Norfodk; T/5 Clarence E. Bias, Roanoke; Pfcs. Josephus Hicks, Norfolk; William Motley, Danville; T/5 Thomas Dandridge, Quinton; T/5 Jeremiah Sanders, Portsmouth; Pfc. Alexander Brown, Sanderston; Pfc. Herman Powell, Suffolk;

S/Sgt. Russell Walker, Norge; Cpl. Herbert Kelly, Norfolk; Pfc. James Armstead, Farmville; Pfc. Henry W. Jones, 353 Hurt Street, Petersburg; Pfc. Thomas Millner, Ridgeway; Pfc. John Prince, Franklin; Pvt. Joseph Costen, Portsmouth; Pvt. Roy Washington, Troy.

NORTH CAROLINA

Pfcs. Thomas Bostick, Burlington; Anderson Cartwright, Camden; William Jenkins, Bethel; Lindsay Anderson, Guilford; McCallum Clifton, Red Spring; Pvts. Herbert Branch, Warsaw;

Clemon Burnett, Burlington; Willie Turner, Reidsville; William Venable, Oxford; William Price, Allen's Alley; Sim R. Meadows, Kinston; Joseph Gaylord, Plymouth; William Bowser, Gatesville; James O. Byrd, High Point;

James M. Knox, Winterville; Willie Weaks, Winston-Salem; Marshall Wallace, Mt. Holly; William Roudy, Maxton; Daniel Edwards, Ayden; James Dobbin, Smithville; Robert Kerr, Albermarle.

Post-War Plan Urges Equal Opportunity

Amsterdam News New York N.Y.

Senator Wagner Outlines Nine-Points Program for All—Regardless of Race

6-3-44

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Equal opportunity in public and private activity for of our people, regardless of race, creed or color, was among the cardinal requirements of democracy listed by Sen. Robert F. Wagner, (D. of NY), in an "I Am an American Day" speech this past Sunday.

He was outlining a nine-point program of post-war objectives. He said later that he believed the principles he enunciated would be embodied in the Democratic platform at the convention in July, and hinted that his views had the approval of the President.

Nine Point Program

His nine points were outlined as;

"First and foremost is the organization of the world for peace. . .

"Our SECOND objective is the vigilant preparation of our nation at all times to defend our liberty and security. . . .

"Our THIRD objective is to maintain in the future as we have in the present, a government which is the servant of the people and not its master.

"Our FOURTH objective is the maintenance and prudent expansion of the whole system of Social Security. . . . .

"FIFTH, we must enlarge the scope of Social Security so as to make available to rich and poor alike the benefits of modern medical science. . .

6-3-44

"SIXTH, one of our immediate tasks is the mobilization of both public and private means to clear away our slums, build in their place decent housing and bring a home it can love within the reach of every family.

"SEVENTH, a cardinal requirement of democracy is that every boy and girl shall have an education which is not limited by the ability of their parents to pay for it. All our children must have an equal chance to make the most of themselves. . . .

"EIGHTH, the same reasons dictate the necessity of equalizing opportunity in public and private activity for all of our people, regardless of race, creed or color. In a democracy, merit and merit alone should determine the heights to which any man can reach.

"Our NINTH goal is the preservation and extension of the great freedoms to think, to speak, to write and to worship without molestation so that man may attain that high dignity which the divine plan comprehended when He created him."

"Adequate Provisions For Returning Servicemen" Proclaimed At Annual Conference Of Natl. Urban League

N.Y. Age

COLUMBUS, Ohio—The determination of the Selective Service System to make adequate provisions for the return of Negro veterans to civilian life was stressed by Colonel Campbell Johnson in an address before the National Urban League in its 34th annual conference here last week.

The theme of the Conference was "Victory Through Unity." "The Selective Service System," said Colonel Johnson, "will make every effort to carry out its responsibility for the placement of returning veterans without regard to color."

Lester B. Granger, in summing up the activities and findings of this 34th Annual Conference of the National Urban League, said: "The Negroes in America and the entire nation are plagued by many perplexing problems, but we are encouraged by the willingness and the eagerness of thoughtful persons, both north and south, to give unreservedly of their energies in the solution of these problems."

The Conference, which attracted nearly 300 registrants from 40 or more cities in which Urban Leagues are located, recommended "A direct frontal assault against those practices inconsistent with democratic principles." Edward S. Lewis, executive director of the Urban League of Greater New York and chairman of the Committee on Findings of the Conference, was vigorously applauded as he read the concluding statement of the introduction to the findings. "This Conference further places itself on record as reaffirming unqualified opposition to all discriminatory modifications of citizenship in any phase of our common American life."

The Conference also recommended the setting up of industry councils representing labor, management, and government, co-

Frank [illegible] the fact "that housing conditions among Negroes and other minority groups amount to a national scandal." The Conference called for legislative action and program policy in the elimination of racial restrictive covenants, and for the rejection of

47n-1944

G. I. Bill of Rights And What It Means

Weekly — New Orleans La.

9-16-44

Here, in its main sections, is what the GI Bill means to you:

Who Is Covered

In general, all men and women are covered who have been in active military or naval service 90 days or more since Sept. 16, 1940, and prior to the end of the war. You may apply for benefits upon receipt either of an honorable discharge or a discharge without honor.

Those receiving dishonorable discharges may not apply for benefits. However, a special board is set up under the law to review discharges upon application by a veteran.

Where to Apply

The Veterans Administration is the enabling authority under the bill. Upon discharge, you contact the VA branch nearest your home, tell them your story, show your papers, get them any other pertinent information they want and let them do the rest.

9-16-44

How to Finish School

The law says that any veteran who entered the service when he was 25 or younger will be given the means to complete his education, if he so desires. Any older veteran will have to prove his education was interfered with by going into service.

The Government will pay you up to $500 a year for tuition, books, laboratory fees, etc., for a minimum of a year's schooling in public or private colleges, universities, trade or business schools or secondary schools.

In addition, you will receive $50 a month subsistence and $25 a month extra if you have dependents. No matter how many dependents you have, however, the $25 will be for all of them.

Depending on the length of service, and on regulations still to be set up by the Veterans Administration you will be able to apply for a maximum of four years' schooling.

9-16-44

If you go to a school where tuition is free, such as the University of California or the City College of New York, an equitable method of paying you a part of the $500 set aside for school expenses will be worked out. If you go to a school where annual tuition is more than $500, such as most of the Ivy League colleges and universities, it is probable that the Government will put up the $500 and let you pay the rest of the tuition yourself.

If you choose to work days and go to school at night, the chances are you'll qualify for a part-time tuition and partial subsistence.

The most important qualification in this business of education is—you'll have to get passing marks in all subjects. If you flunk, no more education.

Incidentally, while you're completing your schooling, you'll be given an annual 30-day leave at the same rate of subsistence.

Since recent studies have shown at least 60 per cent of the men in the Army are under 26, the great bulk of soldiers are eligible for the educational provisions. It is generally true, moreover, that most men older than that have completed their education or don't want to go back to school anyway.

9-16-44

How to Get a Loan

If you want to build, purchase or repair a home, open a small business or professional office or buy, refurbish or repair a farm, you will be able to get a Government-guaranteed loan from a public or private lending agency.

The interest will be not more than four per cent, generally, and the loan will be repayable in 20 years. Naturally, you'll have to show some ability to repay. Moreover, there will be a Veterans Administration check-up on your project, whatever it is, to make certain you won't be gypped.

The Government is willing to guarantee the principal up to 50 per cent of the principal, provided the guarantee does not exceed $2,000. The Veterans Administration will absorb the interest for the first year on the amount guaranteed.

If you already have an original loan from a Government agency, such as the FHA, the Veterans Administration may guarantee the entire amount of a secondary loan specifically to cover a required 20 per cent down payment on the purchase price of a home. In that case, however, the interest rate may be 5 per cent.

9-16-44

What this means is that a good many soldiers will be able to build their own small homes with the aid of the Veterans Administration and the FHA and pay off the carrying charges in the usual manner.

The exact details and procedures obviously haven't been worked out yet by the Veterans Administration, but by the time you're ready to apply they'll be prepared to give you full and specific assistance.

How to Get Job Insurance

In the first two years following your discharge or the termination of the war, whichever is later, you will be able to apply for unemployment insurance, if you are out of a job, or if you earn less than $3 a week.

The flat rate of weekly payments is $20.

If you have served in the armed forces for 90 days, you are entitled to eight weeks of unemployment insurance. For each additional month of service, you are entitled to four weeks' additional pay.

9-16-44

The most you will get is 52 weeks unemployment insurance in the first two years.

If you receive any State unemployment insurance, that will be deducted from the Federal pay. You must, of course, show willingness to take a suitable job at prevailing regional wages.

If you go on strike, you lose the job insurance benefits but you will not be obliged to take a job where a strike is in progress. The job insurance provision covers self-employed veterans as well as those who work for someone else.

9-16-44

How to Get a Job

The bill sets up a job-locating agency within the U. S. Employment Service and the director of the agency will be chairman of the Veterans Administration. The War Manpower Commission also will be an intrinsic part of the job-locating project.

If you are looking for a job, the best thing to do under the terms of the bill will be to consult your nearest Veterans Administration bureau for directions and they will refer you to the proper source at the U. S. Employment Service.

Hospitalization

New hospital facilities will be provided by the Veterans Administration, which is authorized under the terms of the bill to spend $500,000,000 for that purpose specifically to care for returning service men and women.

9-16-44

In addition to the above benefits, the veteran retains his rights to the mustering-out pay benefits of $100 to $300 cash, liberal benefits for disability in military service or pensions to his survivors in case of death.

Kentucky Governor Names Negroes On Postwar Board

Amsterdam News — New York

10-28-44

LOUISVILLE (ANP)—Among the 25 leaders in various Kentucky professional and business fields named by Gov. Simeon Willis to serve on the post-war board, President R. B. Atwood, of Kentucky State College, Frankfort, and the Rev. W. P. Offutt, Louisville, were named.

Representatives of agriculture, labor, industry, education, business and government form the group, which will "study and investigate the physical and human resources of the state."

10-28-44

Created by executive order, under plans outlined recently in a broadcast "report to the people" by the chief executive, the commission will "consider and coordinate the plans and recommendations of all other planning bodies, including private and governmental bodies, as related particularly to the opportunities and problems of Kentucky."

It will, according to the governor's order, formulate plans and make recommendations for the full development of resources for the aid o all interests of the state.

Plans of Work

The commission will provide it own organization, plans of work and financing, and it may create any committees and sub-committees it deems ecessary to facilitate its work. Such committees may include any "suitable persons," whether members of the commission or otherwise.

The research department of the University of Kentucky and all departments and agencies of the state government were requested to cooperate with the group.

10-28-44

The recently created Negro Affairs Commission, composed of 12 members of which Atty. Charles W. Anderson, Jr., Dr. Maurice F. Rabb, the Rev. William H. Ballew, Prof. William H. Perry, Robert E. Black and Mrs. W. H. Fouse are the Negro representatives, has organized and is now functioning in order that practical solutions to problems confronting Negroes in Kentucky in the fields of education, health, housing, economics and civil affairs, may be recommended to the governor at least 90 days before the 1946 session of the general assembly.

DuBois Displeased About Commission Of Colonies at Dumbarton Oaks

10-21-44

By Harry McAlpin

Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, noted educator and writer, told a meeting of Americans United for World Organization, held at the State Department here last week, that the Dumbarton Oaks Conference on the future peace organization had depressed him by its passing over the matter of colonies in its deliberations.

In regard to colonials, he said, the conference "virtually says to six hundred million human beings, if not to a majority of mankind, that the only way to human equality is the philanthropy of masters who have historic and strong interest in preserving their present power and income."

10-21-44

Depressed

Criticizing the proposals made at the Oaks, Dr. DuBois declared: "As I have gone through the published proposals at Dumbarton Oaks, I am depressed to note, paragraph one, chapter two, paragraph six, apparently an aggrieved party must be a state in order to complain or appear before the Council; Similarly, in chapter seven, no colonies as such can appeal for hearing before the International Court of Justices.

10-28-44

No Protection

"Elaborate effort is made to protect states from aggression, but I find no provisions in chapter seven even to consider aggression of a nation on its own colonial peoples while apparently international military force can be called in to suppress revolt."

Undersecretary of State Edward Stettinius presided at the meeting, attended by several hundred persons. Dr. DuBois was one of the few recognized as a statement.

W. African Frontier Force Has Best Jungle Fighters

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
3-18-44

A member of the Royal West African Frontier Force in bayonet practice at the engineer training center, Bukuru, Northern Nigeria.

WASHINGTON

Trained in secret for three years and now in action on the Burma front, where they are scoring successes daily against the Japanese, the native soldiers of the Royal West African Frontier Force are considered the finest jungle fighters in the world.

The British Information Service, in a communique to the Office of War Information this week, said that these troops continued their advances in the Kaladen Valley on the Burma front by attacking Apaukwa, south of Kyautaw, on March 2, and capturing a majority of the enemy positions.

Others in Action

Earlier they had repulsed Japanese counter attacks east of Kyautaw. They arrived in India shortly before the Burma offensive opened, the BIS said, but lived almost continually in dense jungle country for months before they embarked on the Indian assignment.

3-18-44

The present campaign is only one of a number participated in by various units of the force. Early in the war, two West African infantry brigades—one from Nigeria and the other from the Gold Coast—were put into the field against the Italians in Abyssinia and played an important part in the liberation of that country.

RESCINDS 'ATTACK' SENTENCE

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
July 1, 1944

General Wins Praise For Returning Soldier to Full Duty Cleared of Charges

By RANDY DIXON,
War Correspondent

LONDON, England — Cpl. LeRoy Henry, whose death sentence for an alleged rape was disapproved by General Dwight D. Eisenhower, has been returned to full duty and completely cleared of the charge by order of General Eisenhower. This action follows Eisenhower's earlier disapproval of the findings of the court-martial. He rescinds the sentence without remand because of insufficient evidence either to support the conviction or to warrant a re-trial.

This action of the General is certain to lend the morale of the Negro soldiers in this theatre soaring far above the existing levels and permanently entrench him in their minds as a fair and fearless leader. Under military law, Eisenhower had two courses open to him—retrial or disapproval without remand. His decision was the latter.

By GEORGE PADMORE,
London Correspondent

LONDON, England — General Dwight D. Eisenhower, affectionately known among Britishers as "Ike," has saved the good name of American military justice by direct intervention in rescinding the death sentence of Cpl. LeRoy Henry and has won for himself public eulogies not only as a brilliant soldier, but also as a great humanitarian and upholder of the highest ideals of American democracy.

Now that the great wrong has been righted, it can be disclosed that British publications interpreted the sentence of the corporal as a frame-up resembling the Scottsboro case. Consequently American prestige suffered a great setback. Only Eisenhower's action has retrieved the situation.

LONDON PAPERS PRAISE GENERAL

The London Tribune writes in a lead editorial, "Eisenhower possesses many attributes of true greatness. Among these, not the least is a sense of pity and a quick sympathy with anyone suffering from injustice. He revealed these in a notable fashion when he intervened to save a Negro from execution. Those familier with certain aspects of American politics realize that he risked attack from some elements in America.

"It seemed to us that a grave injustice might be done by the woman concerned and to the reputation of the United States in this country if the sentence of death had been carried out on the evidence adduced at the trial. It is therefore especially gratifying that Eisenhower took such a view. Now ordered are a consideration of the circumstances and the sentence. The final outcome of this case is beneficial all around. Eisenhower has gained in stature and the Negro community feel that they are no longer unprotected and exposed to the racial prejudice of a court-martial."

ASKS U. S. ARMY TO PUBLISH FACTS

The liberal weekly, New Statesman and Nation, says, "The United States Army would do well to publish fully the facts about the sentences for rape in this country. Since it is notoriously true that in many parts of the Southern States the Negro stands no chance of fair play on such a charge and that this injustice is defended by many white soldiers, it is not surprising that British public opinion seems assured that the American military courts will follow the same pattern.

"If, as seems to be the case, the Army authorities here are in fact doing their best to obtain race equality within the Army overseas, the sooner the facts are known, the better it will be for all parties."

John Paton, secretary of the British National Council for the Abolition of the Death Penalty, issued the following statement explaining that the British parliament gave American military authorities the power of sentencing death says, "These sentences are being passed under powers granted by Parliament under the visiting forces act of 1942 which, in effect, gives the American Army in Britain extra-territorial rights.

PARLIAMENT CANNOT INTERVENE IN U. S. CASES

"When the act was under discussion in Parliament, it was clearly stated that the penalties to be imposed for offenses would be in accordance with the American penal code which for some offenses like rape in certain States, though not in all, is more severe than ours. Consequently the death sentences now being passed for rape have profoundly shocked large numbers of people to whom the operation of the act has come as a complete surprise.

"So far as reports show, all charges for the single offense of rape have been against colored soldiers and in all these cases the verdict of guilty has been followed by the maximum sentence of death. It is inevitable that under these circumstances the suspicion should be aroused that race prejudice is operating, although it is fair to say that a careful reading of the reports reveals no evidence of it.

"But it is a sriking fact that in all cases reported in which the death sentence has been passed, the condemned man has been a Negro. It is significant also that in the districts where the cases have been tried and where the local press has fully reported them, and therefore where the population might reasonably be presumed to be incensed against the offender there has been widespread and spontaneous protest by various bodies, shop stewards, groups of factory workers and by many individuals.

"This same disquiet has expressed itself in questions from members of Parliament to responsible ministers who, however, profess no jurisdiction in the matter. Eisenhower ought to be made aware of the repugnance with which large numbers of people in this country would view the actual infliction of the death penalty in these cases."

MEDICAL EXPERT GIVES OPINION

Analyzing the case from a medical and psychological aspect, Dr. Clifford Allen, leading British psychiatrist, says, "I do not think that the average man realizes how many women there are who are likely to make unfounded accusations of sexual assault. As a psychiatrist, I have encountered hysterical cases in which this accusation is made for exhibitionistic reasons.

"Much more dangerous are those cases of schizophrenia in which the delusion that rape has occurred appears without any symptoms. These delusions of being raped are very common among female schizophrenics and no doubt the presence of colored soldiers would be woven into the psychosis."

Similar medical and legal expert analyses have appeared in the press throughout the British Isles since the rape cases involving Negro soldiers have aroused widespread attention.

Signalman Captures 20 Germans

Tribune — Houston, Texas
9-12-44

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPA)—In typical fashion of ridiculing even when reporting heroism of Negroes, the United Press reporter Henry T. Gorrell, with U. S. Armored Forces Attacking Coutances, France, has filed a story in which is included what he calls the "prize capture of the day" in those parts.

According to Gorrell, the "prize capture" was made by a Negro signalman who was stringing wire during the night when a German approached him. "Jumping," reports Gorrell, "he shouted 'Who dat?' and began firing his rifle. Twenty more Germans, who had been thinking it over, tumbled out of the bushes and surrendered."

The signalman is not identified. A signalman entrusted with the stringing of wire is likely to be a chap with some educational background even among white. Among Negroes, he is even more likely to have a background to compare with Gorrell's and possibly says "who's that" as clearly.

8-12-44

Whites Talk Flat Also

There are many Negroes who say "who dat?" There are possibly more whites, numerically, who talk as flatly. No one ever tries to reproduce in print the broad, flat enunciation of Southerners, if they are white. But it seems to be a source of "fun" to make sport of any Negro by ridicule, even when he is risking his life for black and white.

Dumbarton Oaks Remains Silent On Race Issue

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa.
10-21-44

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON —(ANP)—The two matters of singular importance to colored peoples of the world, apart from the general principle of maintenance of peace, were left untouched by the Dumbarton Oaks conference, and the tentative proposals which are now being reviewed in the capitals of the united nations throw no additional light on the subject.

These matters are, first, the mandates system; and second, the question of an equality plank.

In making public the text of the proposals last week official quarters referred to it as being "90 per cent complete." It was later freely admitted that the disposition of mandates was one of the matters falling within the category of the unfinished ten per cent.

10-21-44

As regards an equality plank, this too was considered outside the realm of the immediate discussions. It has been generally acknowledged now that the Chinese did make a proposal on the equality of races and nations. It is also true that proposals dealing with various cultural and economic problems came to the attention of the conferences.

CHINA ASKS RACE RIGHTS IN PEACE

Defender — Chicago, Ill.
9-16-44

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—China will propose the equality of all races and states as a principle which should be upheld by a world security league when she moves in for her say at the exploratory big-power discussions on world security organization now underway at Dumbarton Oaks.

A similar proposal was made by Japan, then an ally, at the peace conference following World War I and got little support.

It is understood that China's position on racial and state equality is supported by all independent nonof an international police force. It also might affect such things as the executive council of an international security league under the immigration barries against various races.

9-16-44

European states. The racial equality proposal, if Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador to Great Britain, heading the Chinese delegation arrived in Washington last week. He has handed out the Chinese memorandum to the United States and Britain. It is similar to that of Russia. It proposes the creation to act under these press it, may arouse far discussion because it directly affect the status of areas in Asia and Africa.

It is expected that China will the discussions this coming

The proposal goes beyond that of both the United States and Great

It is proposes the creation

47n-1944

Negro Signal Corps units in France are doing an excellent job getting messages through. Their work in rebuilding Nazi lines and instruments has been commended on many occasions. Lower left photo shows Technician Fifth Grade Dexter Clayton, of Sulphur Springs, Va., and Master Sergeant Nelson T. Ewing, of Louisville, Ky., tying wire to a pole after sag is taken up. In center photo, linemen fasten ends of wire to clamp block prior to stringing lines. Two young natives observe the wire stringing in photo at right.

—U. S. Signal Corps Photos.

ON THEIR WAY TO THE INVASION OF SOUTHERN FRANCE

Soldiers of the Seventh Army join with sailors in singing a hymn aboard an LST

War Dept.'s Report on Negroes

By JAMES W. FORD

THE War Department's report on the number of Negroes in the armed forces of the United States and the part they are taking in the all-over fighting shows the big role they play in the defense of the nation. They are listed in all departments of the Army.

The report shows 698,911 Negroes serving in the Army on June 30, 1944. More than one-half — 361,456— are serving overseas. This is 150,000 more than served overseas in the last war. There is a rise in the number of commissioned officers as compared to the last war. Negro soldiers are in every branch of Army service. This widely diversified use of Negro personnel never happened before in the history of the Army. Heretofore the policy was to regulate Negro personnel to non-combatant service, mainly laborers corps.

Today the report shows Negroes are performing heroically and brilliantly in the highest and most technical branches of the Army, notably the Air Corps.

Negro Nurses

The first contingent of Negro officers of the Army Nurse Corps has just arrived in the European Theater of Operations. The contingent was greeted by Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, America's ranking Negro officer. Capt. Mary L. Petty of Chicago heads the contingent. During four years as chief nurse, she supervised a station where an average of 20,000 men were in constant training.

Serving under Capt. Petty are 63 officers from all parts of the country. They have a glorious record. Fifteen members of the unit have had previous foreign duty in the African campaign.

There are Negro Chaplains, serving both Negro and white soldiers.

There is Staff Sgt. John R. Gibson of New York City, whose company delivered the first cargo of supplies to Soviet Russia. He has just returned to the country after serving 18 months with a Quartermaster regiment in the Persian Gulf Command.

A Negro processing unit is functioning perfectly at the Air Corps Command at Boca Raton, Fla. The report gives a detailed listing of names and addresses of hundreds of Negro soldiers and their deeds.

The breakdown of the report on the Negroes in the Army shows 44,869 in the infantry; 38,517 in the use of Negro personnel by the coast and field artillery; 1,473 the Army. They show how ex- in the cavalry; 123,789 in engineers tensive the process of the integra- corps; 79,027 in Air Corps. tion of Negroes is going on. It is The balance, 406,236, are listed a reflection of what is going on as "all others." It would have been at the home front too: The Amal- well if these had been further gamated Association of Street and broken down as to the number Electric Railway Employes in Los in the signal corps, marines and Angeles voted to accept Negroes other branches of the Army. into the union.

It shows the democratization of the Army in reference to Negroes is making headway.

Credit is due our commander-in-chief, President Roosevelt, whose policies and leadership are forcing serious attention to this problem. This report also reflects the patriotic response of Negro citizens in loyalty, in efficiency, in military elan.

As one who served in the last war, I can say that the difference between the integration of Negro soldiers in the Army in the last war and today is the difference between night and day.

If the integration of the Negro soldier in the Army is to be further strengthened and morale of colored citizens on the home front raised, the right of Negro as well as white soldiers in the use of the voting ballot must be sustained.

Right to Vote 8-22-44

Meaning of Data 8-22-44

These figures reveal a revolution

ed and facilitated in time for them to vote in November.

A further democratic duty is to eliminate Jimcrow. If the pattern dramatized at Philadelphia of Jimcrow and organized resistance to the Negroes' full participation in the war effort is continued, then obstructionists will succeed in holding back the war. Those who hoped to profit by the Philadelphia disturbance are the same people who hope to profit by keeping the ballot out of the hands of soldiers. 8-22-44

Every obstructionist who Jimcrows Negro soldiers in the Army should be brought to task.

Jimcrow should be wiped out of the Army and full civil and military rights guaranteed to Negro soldiers.

It is inconceivable that a contingent of 689,911 Negro soldiers has only a complement of 5,987 colored commissioned officers. The Negro Army personnel should be increased in the number of generals, colonels, majors, captains, lieutenants and on down the line. Tens of thousands of lower rank soldiers carry officers' qualification in their knapsacks.

The breaking down of Jimcrow, stepping up promotions and the further distribution of Negro soldiers as full combatants will hasten the breaking of the back of the Hitler machine and the wiping out of Nazism. Full support of the commander-in-chief will help to bring about complete and full integration of Negroes into every phase of American life and make our Army truly democratic.

"improvement of both on an equal basis." 8-25-44

The president was asked by the governor to "give consideration to the opinions of those of us who are trying to be helpful—those of us whose efforts will be neutralized by such orders."

The governor's protest followed publication here that segregation of the races in the Maxwell Field post exchange had been terminated on War Department orders.

Public relations officers declined comment.

Negro Division With U. S. Fifth

Constitution—Atlanta, Ga. 8-28-44

ROME, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Elements of the all-Negro 92d division have been in action with the U. S. Fifth Army, and the division's first man to give his life in the Italian theater was a captain, commander of a company, who was killed by mortar fire while going forward in a reconnaissance mission, it was learned today.

The 92d, activated in September, 1942, at Camp Breckenridge, Ky., arrived in Italy July 13 as a completely self-sustaining combat organization with its own artillery, antiaircraft and communications and supply. 8-28-44

Lt. Philip Grayson, assistant personnel officer, of Columbus, Ohio, said it was equipped "with everything we asked for."

The division was fed into the line within a fortnight after its arrival. The name of its commanding officer was withheld.

The division's chaplain, Lt. Allen L. Johnson, of Mississippi, described the men as "the best bunch" he ever saw.

"That's right," said Sgt. Robert E. Bazemore, of Portsmouth, Va. "We're going to make news."

PAT ON BAN OF JIM CROW

9-16-44

Patterson Tells Alabama Governor Order Still In Force

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The War Department stood pat this week on its order prohibiting Jim Crow in post theaters, post exchanges and government-operated buses.

Replying to protests by Dixie solons against the directive, Acting Secretary of War Robert Patterson wrote in a letter to Gov. Chauncey Sparks of Alabama:

"All soldiers, regardless of race, must be afforded equal opportunity to enjoy the recreational facilities, which are provided at army posts, camps and stations."

He added that the War Department is "not an appropriate medium for affecting social readjustment."

Same Suffering

"The thought has been," Patterson said in his letter, "that men who are fulfilling the same obligations, suffering the same dislocation of their private lives, and wearing the identical uniform should, within the confines of the military establishment, have the same privileges for rest and relaxation."

Flagrant violation and disregard of the War Department's order banning segregation is reported meanwhile at Fort Benning, Ga.

According to this report, the War Department's order was issued to all units, and was read and explained by all unit commanders to their troops. 9-16-44

Try to Win Rights

Following this, some of the soldiers attempted to exercise their rights. One soldier attempted to ride the "white" bus, but was refused transportation. Others went to the Main theater and to the various post exchanges formerly earmarked for whites only. Some attempted to be served in the Patio Grill.

Everywhere except in the theatres, the reaction was the same. They were told, politely, that Negroes were not acceptable in these places.

of the South. 8-27-44

Starnes said "The people of the South and of the country know this order had its inception in the political program of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the Communist party and other left-wing and radical groups."

Gov. Chauncey Sparks and other members of the state's delegation in Congress already have protested the recent memorandum, which called attention to the Army rules against segregation.

Starnes, a veteran of the First World War, said the "order was issued without consultation with or the approval of the people of the South.

"Time and again the War Department," he said in his wire to Secretary Stimson, "has issued orders to our armed forces requiring them to observe the local customs and traditions of friendly, neutral and even enemy countries.

"What a sad commentary upon the attitude of the War Department when it issues an order which requires the violation of the customs and traditions of a great section of our country, and is sure to breed disorder and disunity." 8-27-44

In his telegram to the president, the Alabama representative pointed out that the South had been vigorous in its support of the defense program and the president's foreign policies before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

power-driven sewing machines buttonholers and feed-off arm machines, employs 135 skilled, unskilled and clerical workers of all races and creeds.

The plant, which originally contracted to complete 16,000 garments, now produces 30,000, Olander J. Smith, president, said this week, adding that the plant had been given a perfect production record by the quartermaster inspection division. 7-15-44

No Union Difficulties

Admitting problems in recruiting trained precision workers, Kenneth Tate, personnel director, said there is no union trouble and that they do not expect to fire any racial group after the war.

Mr. Smith attended the University of Wisconsin and received his law degree from Northwestern University. He is married and father of two daughters and two sons, one of whom is with the army in England.

Gov. Sparks Protests War Department's No-Segregation Rule

News—Birmingham, Ala. 8-25-44

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(AP)—President Roosevelt has been asked to intervene against a War Department order to eliminate racial discrimination in post exchanges and other facilities on Army posts.

Gov. Sparks, in a telegram to the president asking that he give his "personal attention" to the matter, declared the order posted at Maxwell Field "breaks down the essential principle of race relationship in the South."

"As governor of Alabama," Sparks said, "I protest such an order, which violates a statewide practice and believe it aggravates, rather than helps."

The governor declared the order handicapped leaders in their attempts to bring about a better relationship between the two races and

Highest Sum

Soldier Awarded $62,500 for Bus Accident in Alabama

Courier—Pittsburgh, Pa.

BIRMINGHAM (ANP)—Damages totaling $62,500 for personal injury were awarded here Wednesday to Pvt. Jesse Lewis, of Dallas, by a jury in Judge Whit Windham's court, believed to be the highest sum ever accorded a Negro in Alabama by a District court.

Lewis was injured while on furlough from Greenville, S. C., at the time of his accident, which occurred when a Greyhound bus, on which he was a passenger, collided with an A. B. and C. train, on September 8, 1943. His injuries resulted in amputation of his right leg.

ARMY STANDS

Defender—Chicago, Ill.

Starnes Wires F.D.R. About Segregation

New Age-Herald Birmingham, Ala.

GUNTERSVILLE, Ala.—(AP)—Rep. Joe Starnes(D., Ala.) wired President Roosevelt and Secretary Stimson Saturday asking that the recent War Department ruling against segregation in Army installations be rescinded as "a violation of the customs, traditions and laws"

War Dept. ends PX segregation

Tribune Los Angeles, California 9-9-44

WASHINGTON—Led by Gov. Chauncey Sparks of Alabama, the reactionary elements of the South are up in arms against the belated, but welcome, War Department order of last week-end, officially ending segregation in its post exchanges, theatres and buses.

In a history-making order the War Department declared such practices as designation of exchanges, transportation or theatres "for the exclusive use of any particular race" at an end, "regardless of local civilian custom".

President Roosevelt has been asked to intervene against the War Department's order by Gov. Sparks in a telegram in which the Chief Executive is asked to give the matter his "personal attention". The wire followed posting of the order at Maxwell Field in Alabama.

"As Governor of Alabama," Governor Sparks said, "I protest such an order, which violates a statewide practice and believe it aggravates rather than helps."

The Governor declared the order handicapped leaders in their attempts to bring about a "better relationship between the two races" and "improvement of both on an equal basis."

The President was asked by the Governor to "give consideration to the opinions of those of us who are trying to be helpful—those of us whose efforts will be neutralized by such orders."

ORDER QUOTED

The order read, in part:

"Post exchanges—While an exchange or a branch exchange may be allocated to serve specific areas or units, no exchange will be designated for the exclusive use of any particular race. Where such branch exchanges are established personnel will not be restricted to the use of their area or unit exchanges, but will be permitted to use any other exchange on the post, camp or station.

"Transportation — buses, trucks or other transportation owned and operated by the government:

Restricting personnel to certain sections of such transportation facilities because of race will not be permitted either on or off a post, camp or station, regardless of local civilian custom.

"Army motion picture theaters may be allocated to serve certain areas or units, but no theater or performance in any theater will be denied to any group or individual

Colored War Plant Makes Army Garments, Hires 135

American—Baltimore, Md. 9-9-44

CLEVELAND (ANP) — The army and lend-lease contracts produces military garments under two sons, one of whom is with the army in England.

American Enterprises Association, here. Located in the Hart Building, one of the few war plants owned and operated by colored people, the five-month-old plant, with 110

47n-1944

Nazi Internment Adventures

4-15-44 JULIUS J. ADAMS Amsterdam News 4-8,44

Three men laughed as they drank champagne at the La Mar Cheri, uptown night spot a week ago and reminisced about the joys and sorrows they had experienced together and talked of a possible reunion of a group that went to Europe several years before the war, was split up after the Nazis over-ran the Low Countries and finally got back safely in the good old U. S. A.

John Mitchell, stubby guitarist who was a favorite as a member of Willie Lewis's band in principal cities on the European continent, and last of the aggregation to get back home . . . having returned recently on the S. S. Gripsholm—was doing most of the talking. The other men—Lewis and Billy Burns, also a member of the band listened attentively.

When the Nazis conquered the low countries, Mitchell and the band were in Amsterdam, having left Paris in 1939. This is his story:

"We left Paris and had gone to Ostend for the Summer season when the war cloud gathered. The last of August all British tourists were asked to return home at once. Free to find another engagement, the band decided to go to Holland, confident that it would remain neutral.

Disturbs His Peace

"I was lying in bed listening to the Chesterfield program when suddenly I heard rumbling noises in the distance. It was the Germans; they had crossed the frontiers and were bombing the airports. I switched off short-wave and tuned into Hilversum—the local Dutch station. The announcer was saying—'calling all air defense . . . 80 German planes are over Lieden. I was startled. After a few minutes another announcement said, 'about 100 planes over Rotterdam. I leaped out of bed and ran through the house shouting.' It happened, it happened, the Germans have invaded Holland." 4-15-44

"That was in May. Nobody was allowed to cross the borders, so the band was forced to stay in the country, but no effort was made to stop the group from working.

"One night," Mitchell said, "while we were playing at a cafe in Groningen, a Dutch Nazi officer came in and told us 'this is your last night.' The band returned to Amsterdam."

Splits 'Em Up

"Gradually Americans were allowed to return, and members of the band began splitting up, some coming back to the States, others going elsewhere. Joe Heyman, saxophone player went to Egypt; Willie Lewis, the leader and Billy Burns, trombone player came home. That was in May 1941. Mitchell said he stayed behind to look after some business.

"On December 11", Mitchell said he was attending a birthday party in Amsterdam, "drinking champagne and enjoying good food when someone produced a newspaper with the headline announcing Germany's declaration of war against the United States."

Back in his rooms about 8 p. m. the same evening, Mitchell said he was resting when he opened the door in response to the bell and found two 'good-sized' men, who said they were detectives.

4-15-44

"I didn't expect you until tomorrow", Mitchell said. "You came earlier than I thought."

"It's nothing", one replied, "you'll be gone only two days."

"Should I take a handbag", Mitchell inquired.

"No, the detective emphasized, "you'll be back soon."

"Not even a toothbrush," Mitchell insisted.

"No," said the detective, a trace of impatience in his tone. "It's nothing."

Outside, Mitchell was placed in a patrol wagon, where he found several other Americans. They were taken to a prison where they remained six weeks. Conditions were bad, the barracks were cold and the food was poor and skimpy. At the next prison . . . a former Dutch resort converted into a camp . . .

Mitchell said he made many friends in the internment camp, but was elated late in February when he and about 40 others were told they had 24 hours to get ready to return home. Mitchell said he could have been ready in fifteen minutes.

On the way across France to Portugal, Mitchell said their train passed the one carrying Germans home who had been interned in the United States.

Mitchell was not any too talkative about the Germans. He did praise the Red Cross and the YMCA for their work in behalf of those in internment camps. He wouldn't say what he plans to do, but believes if the old gang got together again with Willie Lewis wielding the baton, the band would be able to go places.

4-15-44

The original members of the band were Johnny Russell, Joe Heyman, Willie Lewis, Louis Bacon, Billy Burns, Herman Chitterson, June Cole, Tommy Benford, Henry Mason and Mitchell.

When Old Friends Meet

4-15-44

WILLIE LEWIS, left; Billy Burns and John Mitchell all interned in Europe after war started, got together at LaMar Cheri last week for a little reunion. All were members of Lewis' band in Holland when the Nazis over-ran that country.

What Negroes Are Doing

Age-Herald Birmingham

BY OSCAR W. ADAMS

4-30-44

The National Urban League has been assured by the War Department that Negro counselors will be utilized in the re-employment and rehabilitation of Negro veterans and that the league's active cooperation would be welcomed in connection with other aspects of the question.

Friday Julius A. Thomas, director of industrial relations for the league, along with other representatives, conferred with Col. George Evans, in charge of counseling and placement for the Army.

"We were able to get the counseling service to recognize its responsibility to the Negro veteran to the extent that they are going to do some special training of counselors," Thomas said following the talk. "They are going to use numbers of Negro counselors, and the Urban League is going to help by preparing printed matter for their use."

Local branches will supplement the work of the Army, he added, and the league will be recognized as an "official source" on jobs and training.

Lt. Charles Davis is the first Negro to enter a counseling school. He is at Ft. Dix and, along with others, will ultimately be assigned to a demobilization center or Army hospital.

The league plans to confer with Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, on other phases of the problem.

* * *

GEN. MARY McLEOD BETHUNE, as head of the Woman's Army for National Defense, last week issued directives for the organization's first annual convention, to be held at Parkway Ballroom in Chicago Sept. 12-13. The group is known as the Wands.

With the conference theme "Working for Victory, Planning for Peace," Gen. Bethune declared: "The Wands must reinforce its present program and set new goals for the postwar era. We women have more to lose in this war than any other group and we have more to gain."

* * *

THE NETTIE J. BROWN Surgical Dressing Depot, located at 561 Jasper Road, formerly the Old Folks and Orphans Home, is making surgical dressings for wounded soldiers in our overseas forces.

The depot is operated by the American Red Cross, with Mrs. Geneva Blackman in charge of the work room and Mrs. Alma Johnson chairman.

Over half Negro troops overseas

Tribune—Los Angeles Calif.

8-28-44

WASHINGTON — There were 698,911 Negroes serving in the Army on June 30, of which 361,456 were serving overseas, the War Dept. announced today. This indicated an increase of 34, 845 above the Feb. 29th total of 664,066. Since August 31, 1943, the Army had accepted 116,050 additions to its Negro personnel.

The announcement revealed a sharp rise in the number of Negroes assigned to overseas theaters, with other principal increases occurring in components of the Army service forces.

Following is a partial breakdown of the Negro personnel of the Army: Infantry, 44,869; coast and field artillery, 38,517; cavalry, 1,473; engineers, 128,789; air corps, 79,027; all others, 406,236; total 898,911. Commissioned officers represented 5,957 of this number, including: dental corps officers 102; nurses, 213; other medica corps officers, 508; chaplains, 239

GI's Give Views on Post-war Plans

Afro American Baltimore, Md. 9-16-44

By MAX JOHNSON

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN ITALY.—Now that all indications point to an early end of this European war, our troops here are spending more anxious hours speculating to what extent their efforts to establish democracy overseas have helped forward it on the home front.

More and more soldiers have been besieging me lately with pointed queries on this score. This is a brief composite picture of what your GI Joe here is thinking about the matter, as culled from their opinions and queries put to me. 9-16-44

All Opinions Positive

These men, I find, are either optimistic or pessimistic. When a soldier has lived in combat for several months, he doesn't view an issue from a wishy-washy standpoint. He looks at it firmly, either one way or the other.

News of the recent Philadelphia strike has clouded visions of the optimists, however, and added weight to argument of the pessimists. This strike has probably given rise to more concern among those here who read of it than some unfavorable conditions which they face daily. 9-16-44

Will Right Wrongs

Those still optimistic contend that returning soldiers of both races will be the salvation factor to right whatever wrongs still are practiced. They argue that combat together has taught each about the other and furnished a measure of mutual respect hitherto lacking.

For proof they point to the liberal reaction of air corps personnel here as a result of association and fighting a common enemy together with Col. Benjamin O. Davis's fighter group.

No Longer Mere Servants

They hold that action of the Pessimists Cite Uprisings

They point out that the government itself is often slow to take that too many unfavorable conditions stand on these issues; that tions are allowed to exist in sting court battles are still Allied-held territory overseas ry to obtain just rights which are in sharp reverse of the provided for by long-democratic principles for which hed laws; that separation this war is supposedly being fought by those on our side.

Back of all this argumentation by both elements is the primary speculation as to whether each will be able to return home and provide happiness for his family on the basis of his merit as a man. 9-16-44

Those optimistic servicemen over here agree with the pessimists that anything short of this at the close of the war will bring a partial victory which will certainly require later decisive action to bring about a lasting peace.

Outbreak Looms in 477th Over Abuses

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

Tensions Caused by Emphasis on Color, Restriction on Flyers

By HARRY McALPIN

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Third and last in a series on Godman Field, Ky., where the 477th Bombardment Group is preparing for overseas duty.] 9-16-44

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — The premium put on a white skin, the disregard of official orders, and the general atmosphere have had an unhealthy reaction, declared many of the men who are flying and maintaining the B-25's in the 477th Bombardment Group, recently moved from Godman Field, Ky., to Atterbury Field, Ind.

A colored captain said: "If this continues, this whole thing is going to crack. Tensions are just about at the peak now. This good record which has been established will be broken."

Declaring that he feared, most of all, neurotic cases, he added: "Some of the men have said they are not going to take any more stuff off certain officers. They threatened to handle situations themselves."

"Not only will such reactions bring disgrace on the whole unit," he concluded, "but some of the flyers may crack up in the air if they become psycho-neurotic cases." 9-16-44

March on Theatre Stopped

On August 23, the evening after he made his remarks, this officer and two other colored persons had to exert every bit of their persuasive powers and authority to prevent over 200 enlisted men marching on the theatre at Fort Knox, adjoining Godman Field.

Their reaction was a protest to the absolute disregard there of the War Department's order banning segregation and exclusion of colored from army post facilities.

Photostats of affidavits made out by enlisted men at Godman Field, concerning the theatre incident and attempts to segregate them on busses between Louisville and Godman Field, have been turned over to a War Department official.

Prisoners Treated Better

In one of them a colored corporal affirms that when he asked Capt. Wilbur C. Wilson, in charge of the Fort Knox theatre, why "Italian parolees could sit where they wanted and we could not," he was given a refund ticket and sent away.

A flight medical officer, commenting on the situation, said: "Proof of the low morale is the high venereal disease rate among the men. Medical authorities recognize the fact that contented men do not have high venereal disease rates." 9-16-44

Col. Robert Selway, the group commander, on the other hand, says that the high VD rate simply means infected people are being allowed to get to the men.

No Check of Civilians

He said there is no checking of passes for civilians on the busses pulling into Fort Knox, the bus station, and that there is no fence between Knox and Godman.

To combat the high VD rate, he issued a memorandum on August 4, in which he outlined measures for regaining control of the VD rate, which were placed into effect immediately.

8 p.m. Curfew for Women

By the order he barred all colored women from Godman Field after 8 p.m., unless they were personally escorted by an officer, or married to enlisted men assigned to Godman Field, or domiciled on the Fort Knox reservation.

The order further limited dances to Saturday night, called for 11 p.m. bed checks by squadron and section commander, who were told to circulate around the base in order to maintain good order.

"Color" Always Included

The designation of "color" in the order is a habit with the colonel, according to reports of the officers and men. 9-16-44

Among recent incidents antagonizing the men was the withdrawal, on the colonel's orders, of a colored crew which was inspecting his ship, getting it ready for a flight.

Insistence on white crews and refusal to fly with colored pilots have caused serious reactions, they say, although since then he has flown with two colored pilots to combat the reports that he refuses to do so.

Flyers Restricted

Although regulations permit a flyer in training to land for overnight stay, when his training program requires such, at any field within a 500-mile radius of his base field, the flyers of the 477th are limited to four fields.

477th Holds Records

Despite the situation, however, the 477th Bombardment Group has the best safety record, the best maintenance record, and the best flight per plane record in the First Air Force. 9-16-44

Col. Selway brags about this fact, but the men insist that the record exists not because of Col. Selway, who gets the credit for it in Washington, but in spite of him.

Also a subject of conversation among the flyers is the fact that one of the white supervisors was publicly commended by the colonel for a single-engine landing, whereas none of the colored pilots have received such commendation. 9-16-44

Never Commended

Not even the latest one made in one of the heavier model B-25's, which the pilot brought back on a single engine for 60 miles with a crew of nine men aboard without mishap, was cited, they add.

Despite all the handicaps, problems and humiliations, however, every man in the 477th Bombardment Group is determined to make good, giving in the hope that "rescue" from this Southern atmosphere of segregation and separation, and a different type of commander will be forthcoming soon.

93rd Takes Over Position Vacated By 24th Infantry

Tribune — Philadelphia, Pa. 5-6-44

By FLETCHER P. MARTIN
U. S. War Correspondent

(Representing the Philadelphia TRIBUNE and Negro Newspaper Publishers Association)

(Copyright—Reproduction prohibited)

With American Forces On Bougainville (By Courier) In a move to extend the beachhead, giving more water frontage and stabbing enemy supply routes, the base command pulled the 24th Infantry from its position and swung it around to meet Japanese opposition near the mouth of the Torokina facing the Coral Sea. Fire fighting was heatedly progressing when the Negro infantry took itsposition. 5-6-44

As an Easter morning sun peeped over the camel-humped ridge the infantry broke camp. Within two hours after covering the distance to the new sector, patrols had been despatched to clean out immediate surroundings, mortar positions dug, the enemy contacted. Mortars were racing skyward and falling on enemy emplacements 3000 yards south. 5-6-44

Before the last of the motor vehicles move off the hill, elements of the 93rd division had taken possession of the old 24th emplacement, and digging in, also the 93rd had sent a combat patrol to scour the region. Armed with automatic rifles and two light machine guns, the patrol moved off in the direction where two smoke grenades had sent up clouds of white smoke—possible signifying that the enemy was near.

Lt. Gil Lloyd (chaplain of Chicago) and your correspondent were among the last to pull off. The jeep was loaded down with supplies, including rations, shelter halves, grenades, and rifles. Storm clouds had changed the beautiful Easter morning to dull grey. Rain followed. Artillery roared, so did the thunder.

The path led between towering jungle foliage. Winding in and out between craters and stench, the jeep finally entered the perimeter. Among many emplacements we drove finally coming out on the beach. We arrived just on time to swing aboard a "duck" (floating GMC) and went southward. Rain lashed the Coral and the duck rolled with each foamy wave. 5-6-44

On shore pill boxes had been smashed by our naval guns. In the background trees showed shell marks. Along the beach ran barbed wire, dividing the perimeter from 'no man's land. We were well outside of the safety zone. Small humps in the grey sand on shore indicated that dead were buried there. Carrion birds scaring lazily overhead strengthenced the belief.

The 'now' beachhead seethed with Negro troops. Supplies were being moved inland. Our sector ran for several thousand yards down the beach. In the same direction flanking us as it rushed into the sea was the Sava river—thought to be one of the main enemy supply routes. 5-6-44

The first—and most important task was to set up gun positions. Our small perimeter had to be secured before chow-rest—even coffee. The jungle dark was approaching. We and burned outr 'bridge' behind us. A frothing Coral sea was to the rear. In front lie acres of black, shell blistered jungles. To the left flank machine gun spuoting continued. Shoves scooped the sand.

Down the beach is the native village of Naravia. Most of that etta has been cleaned out, but small bands of the enemy are still known to be lurking in the vicinity. From that point came the sharp reports of rifle fires. Also came the odor of decaying flesh. Blow flies were thick and persistent. 5-6-44

Our temporary command post was a bomb crater. S-Sgt. Robert Mitchell (New Orleans) was in the middle making the hole deeper. His office was on his back—dispatch case. Several feet from Sgt. Mitchell, M-Sgt. Frank Ferguson, of New York City, was digging, sweating and abusing the language.

Mortars were hurriedly placed in positions. Rocket projectiles were soon enroute down the beach. We could hear the dull thud of explosion. As this went on one unit moved into the jungles stringing communication wire. Back of the command post what was left of an enemy soldier was lying sprawled out in a crater. Also was foung the remains of a heavy Jap machine gun. Evidently the gun had received a direct hit, the muzzle was smashed.

There was so much work going on at once until it was confusing—to your correspondent. I felt as useless as a swim to an Eskimo, Darkness was fast approaching. Another Jap body was reported found. All firing soon ceased. 5-6-44

After coffee and sandwiches were served we bedded down in the damp sand for the night. The Coral swished and roared. Somebody, whispered gloomily that it was 7 o'clock. Long dark hours lie ahead.

Negro spy for Hitler surrenders

CHICAGO — Although schooled a Negro dock worker captured by to sabotage the Allied war effort, the Germans in Holland had ac- a Negro spy for Hitler surrendered espionage training but ly secured the gun of his partner, held him prisoner, urned him over to the au- issue of the Negro Digest, pub- lished here.

In an article entitled "No Spy for Hitler," Hoover reported how rector of the Federal Bureau of and turned in the September thorities upon arriving in Amer- ica.

47n-1944

Live, Work, Fight Together For Victory

Negro and white troops are living and working together in the best traditions of the U. S. Army in the all-out effort to defeat the Nazis, according to recent official War Department reports from the European Theater of Operations. These photos show commissioned and enlisted personnel of a Quartermaster trucking station. Upper photo shows officers at mess. Left to right: Capt. F. D. Robinson, Evansville, Ind.; 1st Lt. Alfonso Finch, Weldon, N. C.; 1st Lt. Walter L. Mitchum, Memphis, Tenn.; 1st Lt. C. H. Marshall, Philadelphia, Pa., and Capt. Paul L. Stagg, Alloy, W. Va. Enlisted men file into a mess hall in center photo. Bottom photo shows enlisted men at their places in the mess hall. Left to right: 1st Sgts. John H. Thomas, Baltimore, Md.; Leroy Z. Davis, New Orleans, La.; William P. Tompkins, Jamaica, New York; Samuel I. Thomas, Warren, Ark.; Robert P. Jordan, Savannah, Ga.; Walter Bowell, Columbus, Ga., and Archie N. Jones, Topeka, Kans. (Photos by U. S. Army Signal Corps.)

Yanks Sweep Into Breton Plains in 10-Mile Advance

Daily Worker N.Y., N.Y. 8-2-44

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, London, Aug. 1 (UP).—Victory-flushed American tank forces swerved suddenly eastward today in a 10-mile drive from Avranches which threatened to box up the entire French front, leaving in their wake seven destroyed enemy divisions and more than 23,000 Germans dead or prisoners with the count only partially complete.

Under the tremendous impetus of the American break-out from Normandy onto the Breton plain, the Allies swung into a coordinated offensive along a 100-mile front, driving for a knockout blow against the lines that had barred the Paris roads since D-Day.

Linking up with the American east flank, British tank forces deepened their wedge in the center of the line to 11 miles in a thundering battle involving heavy forces of artillery. Canadian troops, striking through a dense fog, launched a powerful attack at dawn southeast of Caen against the last intact section of the German line.

NAZIS FALL BACK 8-2-44

German forces which had been counter-attacking savagely at the pivot of the American line around Percy and Tessy-Sur-Vire faltered and fell back as the Allied advances on either side undermined their flanks and American anti-tank gunners in front knocked out most of their armor. The Yanks fought their way back into both Tessy and Percy Tuesday morning and their swift recapture seemed assured.

American Negro truck drivers, armed with battle knives the size of butcher's blades, and Yankee commandos carrying piano-wire garrots were pressed into service as ambush parties along the German lines of retreat, front dispatches said.

The escape of any Germans between the American coast flank and the British spearhead in the center was growing problematical as the Yanks drove south of Avranches across the Selune River, then struck east-northeast and swept into Brecy, 10 miles inland from the fallen port city at the base of the Norman cape

This armored spearhead now was only 20 miles away from a junction with British troops who crossed the Souleuvre River at Le Beny Bocage, 17 miles southeast of St. Lo, and the focal point of both drives was the important communications hub of Vire.

TAKE PONTAUBAULT

Striking as they pleased against resistance so negligible that dozens of bridges were found intact, the fast-moving American tanks first feinted into Brittany as if to try a drive across its 100-mile wide base, capturing Pontaubault four miles south of Avranches and Ducey, six miles southeast.

It appeared that their real purpose, however, was to safeguard against German flooding of the See-Selune. 8-2-44

Back up in the peninsula where a mop-up of trapped and beaten German units was being rapidly completed, American infantrymen closed in from three sides on the cross roads of Villedieu-les Poeles, 12 miles northeast of Avranches. There a desperate German rear-guard force was attempting to hold open a narrow corridor to the southeast for the exit of their comrades by-passed in the pell-mell American dash southward, but it appeared a hopeless fight.

The tremendous achievements of the eight-day offensive that sliced clear through the enemy's west flank, were underscored by German casualty figures which, although

47n-1944

Live, Work, Fight Together For Victory

Daily World - Milwaukee, Wis.
8-11-44

Negro and white troops are living and working together in the best traditions of the U. S. Army in the all-out effort to defeat the Nazis, according to recent official War Department reports from the European Theater of Operations. These photos show commissioned and enlisted personnel of a Quartermaster trucking station. Upper photo shows officers at mess. Left to right: Capt. F. D. Robinson, Evansville, Ind.; 1st Lt. Alfonso Finch, Weldon, N. C.; 1st Lt. Walter L. Mitchum, Memphis, Tenn.; 1st Lt. C. H. Marshall, Philadelphia, Pa., and Capt. Paul L. Stagg, Alloy, W. Va. Enlisted men file into a mess hall in center photo. Bottom photo shows enlisted men at their places in the mess hall. Left to right: 1st Sgts. John H. Thomas, Baltimore, Md.; Leroy Z. Davis, New Orleans, La.; William P. Tompkins, Jamaica, New York; Samuel I. Thomas, Warren, Ark.; Robert P. Jordan, Savannah, Ga.; Walter Bowell, Columbus, Ga., and Archie N. Jones, Topeka, Kans. (Photos by U. S. Army Signal Corps.)

Yanks Sweep Into Breton Plains in 10-Mile Advance

Daily Worker N.Y., N.Y. 8-2-44

ALLIED SUPREME HEADQUARTERS, London, Aug. 1 (UP). —Victory-flushed American tank forces swerved suddenly eastward today in a 10-mile drive from Avranches which threatened to box up the entire French front, leaving in their wake seven destroyed enemy divisions and more than 23,000 Germans dead or prisoners with the count only partially complete.

Under the tremendous impetus of the American break-out from Normandy onto the Breton plain, the Allies swung into a coordinated offensive along a 100-mile front, driving for a knockout blow against the lines that had barred the Paris roads since D-Day.

Linking up with the American east flank, British tank forces deepened their wedge in the center of the line to 11 miles in a thundering battle involving heavy forces of artillery. Canadian troops, striking through a dense fog, launched a powerful attack at dawn southeast of Caen against the last intact section of the German line.

NAZIS FALL BACK 8-2-44

German forces which had been counter-attacking savagely at the pivot of the American line around Percy and Tessy-Sur-Vire faltered and fell back as the Allied advances on either side undermined their flanks and American anti-tank gunners in front knocked out most of their armor. The Yanks fought their way back into both Tessy and Percy Tuesday morning and their swift recapture seemed assured.

American Negro truck drivers, armed with battle knives the size of butcher's blades, and Yankee commandos carrying piano-wire garrots were pressed into service as ambush parties along the German lines of retreat, front dispatches said.

The escape of any Germans between the American coast flank and the British spearhead in the center was growing problematical as the Yanks drove south of Avranches across the Selune River, then struck east-northeast and swept into Brecy, 10 miles inland from the fallen port city at the base of the Norman cape

This armored spearhead now was only 20 miles away from a junction with British troops who crossed the Souleuvre River at Le Beny Bocage, 17 miles southeast of St. Lo, and the focal point of both drives was the important communications hub of Vire.

TAKE PONTAUBAULT

Striking as they pleased against resistance so negligible that dozens of bridges were found intact, the fast-moving American tanks first feinted into Brittany as if to try a drive across its 10o-mile wide base, capturing Pontaubault four miles south of Avranches and Ducey, six miles southeast.

It appeared that their real purpose, however, was to safeguard against German flooding of the See-Selune. 8-2-44

Back up in the peninsula where a mop-up of trapped and beaten German units was being rapidly completed. American infantrymen closed in from three sides on the cross roads of Villedieu-les Poeles, 12 miles northeast of Avranches.

There a desperate German rear-guard force was attempting to hold open a narrow corridor to the southeast for the exit of their comrades by-passed in the pell-mell American dash southward, but it appeared a hopeless fight.

The tremendous achievements of the eight-day offensive that sliced clear through the enemy's west flank were underscored by German casualty figures which, although from complete, virtually wrote off the enemy's 84th Army Corps as a fighting force.

TWO NEGRO FIGHTING MEN MEET OVERSEAS

Times-Star, New York, N.Y. 8-14-44

Neda Kostura (left), member of Yugoslavia's Partisan fighting Germans, displaying her cap to three Wacs in a hospital in Italy, w girls are (left to right) Pvt. Assunta J. Iucci, Hollis, L. I.; Pfc. Eliz and Corp. Lavisa J. Crawford, Dayton, Ohio.

Daily Worker—Atlanta, Ga. 8-17-44

Brig. General Davis greets the Mayor of Cherbourg, France, at the opening of the American Red Cross Service Club for Colored troops in Cherbourg. The club opened August 8. (Signal Corps Radio Telephoto from London.

WASHINGTON ARMY ORDERS RESENTED

Advertiser—Montgomery, Ala. 8-25-44

Montgomery, a tolerant, liberal and intensely patriotic city, is profoundly disturbed by reports of high Army efforts to impose race customs and habits on the local military reservations that are in conflict with relationships growing out of generations of experience.

Montgomery quickly, firmly and advisedly wants to let it be known that any efforts designed, directly or indirectly, to impose any form of social equality, is something that neither this community nor any other Southern community can tolerate. This represents the thought of the better elements of both white and colored races on the subject.

If it be said that Army orders are something from which there is no recourse, the people of this community would have it understood that even Army orders, even armies, even bayonets, cannot force impossible and unnatural social race relationships upon us. It has been tried before and failed. It will fail if tried again.

Orders from Army headquarters seeking at this late date in the war to make whites and blacks mingle on a basis of social equality at the restaurant tables on the military posts or camps of this State can have no other effect than to cause friction which has been happily absent during the three years of the war up to this time. Heretofore, there has been commonsense recognition of nature's dividing lines. Any other policy can be interpreted only as due to ignorance of conditions. Certainly such orders could not come from anyone seeking the real welfare of the Negro race and the relationship between the races that all men of good will would like to see.

8-25-44

If troublemakers are responsible for this new situation, then troublemakers must be dealt with as such, because these troublemakers are a puny minority which must be shown that majorities rule here.

Since the establishment of our great airfields in this city, Montgomery's relationship has been most cordial with them and with the personnel they have brought among us. The officers and men of the fields have been the type that we were glad and proud to claim as friends and as participants in our social life. The fact that many of them were from the North or from communities where the race issue is not pronounced made no difference in the relationships, because the visitors recognized local conditions, had confidence in local judgment and had respect for customs and traditions that have grown out of many years of trial and experience in the South. Furthermore, they were on the ground. They saw the conditions and the necessity for them. They were not desk men seated in some far away place acting on some academic or idealistic impulse.

In Montgomery and in other Alabama and Southern communities race relationships are a condition and not a theory. This is said kindly and firmly and in the utmost friendship for the members of the Negro race. We want the Negro soldiers to have the same food, the same pay, the same uniform, the same courts, and the same kind of justice and the same protection as is given the white race. But political and economic and military equality are entirely different from the social equality that is implied in the new order for serving and seating of restaurant customers on the military reservations.

Our insistence upon this is in the interest not only of the white race but of the Negro race. We all know that we are to live side by side in the South, and each race is in a measure dependent upon the other. But domination by the race which is best qualified to dominate will be maintained at all costs. Efforts, even in a small way, to introduce any other practice bring only the deepest kind of resentment and encourage serious trouble.

8-25-44

These are facts which we cannot too firmly impress upon Army officials, our representatives in Washington and all men everywhere.

Race Division Terminated At Maxwell Field

Advertiser—Montg., Ala. 8-24-44

War Department Order Calls Off Segregation In Post Exchange Cafe

Segregation of the races in the Maxwell Field post exchange was terminated yesterday on instructions contained in a War Department directive which was read to civilian and military personnel, by organization officers of the post, according to information brought into the city by civilian workers.

All attempts to obtain an official elaboration on the order, its extent, and its full effect were unsuccessful. Inquiries at post headquarters elicited the brief reply, "no comment."

From a trustworthy but non-military source it was learned that the directive reaching Maxwell Field was only one of others going to every other military post in continental United States. The directive, it was said, was restricted which means that it could not be released for publication. This explained the reticence of Maxwell Field officials who were described as in the position of having to carry out orders they could not publicly discuss.

8-24-44

The Advertiser's informant took a conservative view of the situation caused by the directive's going into effect. He said the commanding officers at Maxwell Field could, in his opinion, be trusted to carry out the order without imposing a hardship on civilian personnel.

While The Advertiser did not have access to the directive, it is understood that it requires the removal of all segregation devices on the post so far as military personnel is concerned.

Civilian workers at Maxwell Field have limited use of the post exchange facilities. They are entitled to buy food and soft drinks for on-premises consumption but when they buy cigarets and tobacco they pay the State tax which is turned over by the post exchange to the State Treasury.

General Praises Negro GI Deeds

Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis of the Office of the Inspector General, only Negro general in the U. S. Army, told an Army Hour radio audience Sunday that he felt sure that "when the story of the contribution now being made by our colored soldiers is told the masses of white Americans will be more tolerant and sympathetic with the aspirations of our colored people."

The General, recently returned from a combat zone, reported numerous acts of heroism performed by Negro troops, some of them in charge of Negro junior officers.

He quoted one colonel as saying that the conduct under fire of Negro quartemaster truck troops attached to his combat team "was such that the best of comradeship was developed" between them and the white troops.

47n-1944

Negro GIs to Take Their Show to Russia

WITH U. S. ARMY FORCES IN MIDDLE EAST, May 22.—American Negro troops in Iran, supply route for U. S. war materials moving up to Russia, have organized a musical show which has become the stage hit of the Persian Gulf Command, the War Dept. announced today.

The show, which features a Hallelujah Chorus, is scheduled to go into Russia after playing to American installations in the command, some of which are located in the blistering desert country.

Appearances in the USSR are to be a return courtesy to the Russians for sending several of their shows into the Persian Gulf Command to entertain Allied soldiers.

Thirty-five men make up the cast of the show. They use a portable stage which was brought to the Middle East from North Africa. The show is billed under the name of Hallelujah Caravan and was written and directed by T/Sgt. Harold W. Arberg, 10 Morningside Dr., Montclair, N. J.

Costumes for the production were made by Lieut. Sophie Tripodi, Army Nurse Corps, of Stamford, Conn., with the assistance of several members of the cast.

On the day Russia officially adopted its new national anthem, the chorus of The Hallelujah Caravan sang it as a part of the program. The entire audience of Russians and Americans rose to its feet with a deafening applause.

New York members of the cast: Wesley C. Brown, 471 Carlton Ave., Brooklyn; Hudson D. Stevenson, 133 W. 113th St.; Joseph E. White, 106 W. 132d St.; John B. Kennedy, 180 W. 135th St., all Manhattan.

Walter White On 1,800-Mile Tour

NEW YORK.—In a message of greeting to his board of directors, Walter White, N.A.A.C.P. secretary and Chicago Defender columnist, now in England, cabled last week that he has just completed a tour of 1800 miles inspecting many installations.

"Have found much encouraging, but also much which needs correction. Expect to leave for North Africa latter part of the month. Present plans are to go only as far as Iran, with later trip to Pacific area. Expect to return to the United States latter part of April or early May."

V-Mail Photos for Fathers in Service

Mrs. Carmen Bolling and her daughter, Saundra Eileen, born last Jan. 11, live at 250 Manhattan Ave. The baby's father, Sgt. Milton Bolling, former hospital attendant, is with the Army in England.

Martin Barry was born Aug. 25, 1943, to Mrs. Sally Graber of 404 E. 8th St. His daddy, Cpl. Max Graber, a former mechanic, is with an ordnance unit of the Army in Italy.

If your baby is less than a year old and was born after your husband went into service overseas, we'll take a picture of you and the child and reprint it on a V-mail blank which you can mail to your husband. Call ST 3-2501 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. and ask for the V-Mail Editor. There is no charge for this service, which is restricted to New York City

Mrs. Florence M. Clark and her son, Franklin D. Jr., born July 18, 1943, live at 153 W. 188th St., Bronx. The father, T/Sgt. Clark, formerly in the Sun advertising department, is in North Africa.

Daniel Robert was born Aug. 2. 1943, to Mrs. Eva Musicant of 635 W. 174th St. His father, 1st Lt. Belmont F. Musicant, a physician, is with the Army Medical Corps in India.

"Champion War Mother" Is Crowned

Mrs. Olivia Jones, Mother of 17, Nine Under Arms

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Among the features of the Fourth War Loan drive in Memphis, Tenn., was the crowning of Mrs. Olivia Jones, a West Tennessee farmer's wife, mother of seventeen living children, as "Champion War Mother." Nine of Mrs. Jones' children are in the armed forces and one is deferred for farm work.

The ceremonies, performed by Bishop R. R. Wright Jr., executive secretary of the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches in America, under whose auspices the crowning was staged, attracted and estimated ten thousand persons to Convention Hall.

The principal speaker was Bishop John A. Gregg, representing all Negro churches, who was invited by President Roosevelt to visit Negro troops abroad. The bearded Bishop, nicknamed by soldiers Gregg the Great because of his prominence and his impressive bulk, has just returned from a 50,000 mile aerial tour to the South Pacific, England, North Africa, and Italy.

PICKENS, GIBSON HEARD

The huge patriotic rally, with Bishop J. A. Hamlett presiding, inaugurated the War Bond sales campaign being conducted in Memphis by the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches. This drive was given further impetus through an address by William Pickens, head of the interracial section of the Treasury's War Finance Division. Truman Gibson, Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of War, also spoke.

The "Champion War Mother" was discovered through a nationwide, four-month search conducted through newspapers. She had as her attendants at the crowning Mrs. A. B. Hendrix and Mrs. A. J. Johnson, both of Memphis, mother of four and six sons, respectively.

Although the rally was sponsored by the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches, the Methodist and the Baptist Ministers Alliances of Memphis, along with scores of civic and fraternal organizations, cooperated to assure the success of the War Loan drive. Some of these churches and organizations were represented on the roster of speakers, who included the Rev. W. H. Brewster, the Rev. N. T. Walker, F. O. Davie, and Mrs. Daisy Scott.

Says Race Can Be Proud Of Soldiers

PHILADELPHIA (ANP) — "Col[illegible] held last Thursday evening at the[illegible] branch in its membership drive[illegible] the mass meeting of the local[illegible] "the closer the men come to the[illegible] les pronounced are the[illegible] ices." Although an[illegible] airfield devoid of runways, and with its[illegible] on buildings still intact, [illegible] something new afte[illegible] the [illegible] of 24 bombings in Lon[illegible] ACF official said some [illegible] don, th NAACP [illegible] of the joy was taken from his Congress. It seemed that the men [illegible] by a perusal of the there alone of all the world, are [illegible] wspapers and a visit to little moved, and are still bound by [illegible] homecoming by [illegible] nation's newspaper [illegible] WANT THE TRUTH [illegible] He also said that white enlisted men and women are becoming more hatreds and bigtory.

URGES ACCOUNTING

The anti-poll tax was killed by the "unholy alliances' of Southern Democrats and reactionary northern Republicasn, Whites said. An apeal was made to Republican officials to try to force through the cloture vote, limtiing debate so that Bilbo could not carry through his threat to filibuster for 18 months.

The speaker warned the audience that they can call the senators to account in the Nov. elections on the basis of their actions now. 5-25-44

On the brighter side, however, White said that the morale of the men, both white and colored, was lifted by the supreme court decision in the Texas primary case. They look upon it as a step forward. In parting, the secretary told the audience that trip to the Pacific area is being contemplated.

GENERAL CLARK GREETS BISHOP GREGG.—Somewhere over there, at the Fifth Army Field Headquarters General Mark Clark greets Bishop John A. Gregg, representing the Federated Council of Negro Churches of Christ in America. T. Sgt. William C. Chaney of Williamsburg, Va., personal aide to Commanding General of the Fifth Army is standing on the right.—Photo from OWI.

Send Negro Combat Troops To Europe, Urges NAACP Head

Some 14 sore spots in relations between Negro soldiers and the War Department were uncovered by Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in a 15-week, 20,000-mile tour of the European theater of operations, just ended. He has made remedial recommendations to the Secretary of War, it was announced here yesterday.

Gen. Eisenhower's directive to abolish "off limits" of towns and taverns should be enforced in all areas, White says, for many Negro soldiers believe such directives apply specifically to them. He recommends also a special board, to include an eminent Negro lawyer with appropriate military rank, to review courts-martial cases.

Deliberately-spread stories in England that "Negroes are afraid to fight" make it essential that Negro combat troops be sent there, White says. 5-20-44

"It is unfortunate," he states, "that, with the exception of some anti-aircraft units, only Negro service units have been sent to the European theater."

He recommends that Negro medium bomber crews be sent to England "to fly in non-segregated units" and that service troops now stationed there be given refresher courses in the use of combat weapons, because "many of these troops will closely follow the assault waves of invasion, will be under fire, and need to be made competent in the use of weapons."

He says the presence of more Negro officers above the rank of captain in England would materially aid morale. 5-20-44 been used to poison the Italians against Negro American troops.

The American Red Cross is praised for doing, "in many respects, a superlative job," but "white" and "colored" clubs maintained by it not only introduce segregation to the British but deny Negro and white soldiers the opportunity of knowing one another.

The War Department attitude toward race, the NAACP head declares, "lags behind that of much of the army personnel" and, while an "advanced position" might be opposed by some persons, "it would be approved by a much larger percentage than the War Department appears to believe possible."

"PATERNALISM HIT

He calls for an end to "the paternalistic attitude on the part of some white officers toward Negro soldiers," declaring the men resent it, regardless of the degree of their education. He recommends "more news and more sympathetic handling of news dealing with Negro troops." 5-20-44

Other recommendations are that more Negro actors and singers be sent to all troops and that neither white nor Negro military police be armed except when guarding payrolls.

400 Listeners Hear Smith, Townsend

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—Although Vice President Henry A. Wallace, champion of the "common man," had star billion on a card that carried labor's heavyweights, the two ranking Negroes in the Congress of Industrial Organizations, Willard S. Townsend and Ferdinand C. Smith, told nearly 400 listeners at the "Full Employment conference" sponsored by the CIO Political Action committee here Friday and Saturday that experience of the past dictates that no program based upon an economy of abundance and full employment in the post-war period would be complete if it did not include America's Negro population.

"This committee extends the hand of fellowship in a campaign to unify the country behind a program of full employment and full democracy in America," Phillip Murray CIO president, said at the outset of his speech, made at the luncheon.

As if anticipating this statement of Murray's, Townsend, the president of the United Transport Service Employes of America, said at the morning session preceding that "you can't have unencumbered and prosperous white workers and unemployed black workers, for if you let that happen the white worker will have to carry the black worker on his back through relief."

In his prepared address Wallace said he did not propose to say what the government ought to do with regard to post-war employment. "But inasmuch as the government had to take full responsibility for getting cooperation from all groups to convert our economy from peace to war," he added, "it will have to equal responsibility in converting from war to peace."

Leading the discussion of "Full Employment and the Negro," Townsend observed that "the tradition of white men's jobs and black men's jobs is being challenged and actually being broken down in score of tight labor markets outside the south." Continuing he said, "In the south itself there are unmistakable evidence of economic advances among Negroes and this fact has been dramatically and unpalatably brought to the attention of the white community by the scarcity of Negro domestics."

"Intelligent planning must recognize that the Negro in the United States has developed more rapidly than his opportunity for participation in American life," he asserted. Townsend rejected the motion that full employment is going to remove racial tensions. It will, he believes, set the "economic stage" for effective educational programs designed to reduce the frequency and intensity of "one of the basic causes" for race conflict. In such an economy, he sees trade unions taking the lead in establishing cooperation between white and black workers, with various governmental and private agencies aiding in the program.

Smith assured that Negroes "do not place their special problems ahead of the major task of winning the war," nor do they seek an "immediate solution of their just needs," he said.

"What the Negro people want is what every decent American wants —full citizenship in a democracy," he declared. "If every trade union opened its doors to Negroes and removed the stigma of second-class membership and its attendant inequalities, you can be sure the time would not be far off when the second-class citizenship of Negroes in our democracy would be wiped out, the poll tax congressmen notwithstanding."

Dean Hastie maintained that "economic democracy" is essential to the elimination of race conflict and to the "political effectiveness" of labor. He called democracy in unions a "practical education in the American way of life."

"Like labor, Negro women have no assurance of adequate or stable income after the war," declared Mrs. Brown. "We must therefore depend upon some form of federal agency or legislation to begin now to plan for the transition period from war to peace. If left in the hands of the states, plans will get caught in a bottleneck of conflicting interests and unwholesome prejudices."

NOTED AUTHOR AND COLLEGE PROFESSOR SAYS NEGROES HAVE NO FAITH IN ALLIED CAUSE—NONE IN SINCERITY

CHICAGO—Painting a realistic picture of the average Negro's belief concerning the war and the peace and his role in the American scheme of things, J. Saunders Redding, noted author and college professor, writing in the January ssue of Negro Digest published here on the subject "What the Negro Believes," declares that Negroes have no faith in the white American's sincerity, and do not feel that the peace to come will be a peace for them.

Redding, who gained national fame as the author of the recent sensational book, "No Day Triumph," says that the ingness of whites to no glory for the Negro in pitting him; that he foe, Redding says the average man and therefore they can be Japanese are something less than human and that if the Japs because the white Jew have a God were black, should get together somehow; that if other Negroes were more like him, things would be better.

"Even the good white men

47n-1944

THE NEGRO IN THE WAR

Editor, The Journal: I want to take this occasion to congratulate you on your forthright news account of the participation of the 99th U. S. Fighter Squadron in the air battles over the Nettuno beachhead last Thursday, and your challenging and courageous editorial in Saturday's edition.

May I assure you that the success of the 99th Pursuit Squadron in its first major battle was "cause for especial pride among Negroes." Atlanta, Ga. Journal

Yet, as strange as it may seem, in a country where democracy is supposed to be the essence of life and the press prides in its freedom, after two years of war your report and editorial on the 99th Pursuit Squadron was cause for comparable and parallel pride among your many thousand Negro subscribers in this state. This ought not to be.

We hear every day over the radio or in the press that this war is being fought for the Four Freedoms. Then we hear the Georgia Democratic Committee rule that 100,000 Negro soldiers of this state cannot vote in the Democratic primary. The mothers and fathers of many of these soldiers read advertisements in the daily papers seeking workers for various war plants. They apply for the jobs, seeking to do their bit in the war effort, but are immediately told that their services are not needed. They keep on paying their increased war taxes and increasing cost of living. The letters come from the fighting fronts of the world telling of the daring and courageous work of the Negro Quartermaster Corps, Engineering Corps, Antiaircraft Units, Infantry Units, Marines, Coast Guards, Seabees, etc., then you pick up your daily newspaper, or you turn on your radio, or you view a newsreel at the movie where you read, hear or see accounts of the actions of white soldiers on the battle fronts of the world and scarcely anything about the Negro soldiers unless you look to Negro channels which are very limited and restricted. February 6, 1944

I say to the press of this great nation and other channels of communication, your challenge has never been greater than it is today. Our nation is in a death struggle for the preservation of democracy. You are the interpreter of democracy. Give it a meaning to all of the people of this state. A true picture of the part the Negro is playing in this war will go a long way towards building better race relations and general morale.

J. R. HENDERSON.

816 Fair Play Lane, N. W.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald

February 6, 1944

FILM TELLS STORY OF NEGROES IN WAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 14 — (AP) — Against a backdrop of Negro heroism throughout the history of America, the War Department has brought to the screen the story of the Negro soldier in the current war told with restraint and dignity.

The film was shown Monday to an audience comprised of representatives of the press and of numerous organizations, who were told it was the hope of the producers that it would be seen by as many millions of Americans as possible, in the interest of American unity.

It is the moving story of the American Negro as a soldier, from the time of Crispus Attucks, ex-slave and hero of the Boston massacre in 1770, to the time of Dorie Miller, who died at Pearl Harbor, and Pvt. Robert Brooks, a Negro who was one of the first American soldiers to die in the Second World War.

Films captured from the enemy in the present conflict are used in several sequences, to show the barbarity of Naziism and of the fanatical Jap. Liberal use was made of authentic Army material and historic films.

The picture was made by the special coverage section of the United States Army Signal Corps, under the supervision of Frank Capra. Capt. Stuart Heisler was the director, and Carleton Moss, who played the minister-narrator, also wrote the scenario.

The screening was at the Fox screening room here.

Randolph Negro Is Highest Paid Private In Army

South Boston, Va. News

A total of $311 a month for family allowance and his own salary makes Private Charles H. Snead, Sr., of Randolph, Va., one of the highest paid privates in the army. March 28, 1944

Snead, a rookie in Company A of the Reception Center at Camp Lee, claims a wife, eight children, father and brother as dependents. The negro's wife and children will receive $220 a month, his father and brother will have a check of $68, and he will receive $23 when he steps up to the pay table.

According to the office of Dependency Benefits in Newark, N. J., this is one of the highest family allowances in the army. Major W. R. Tabler, post fiscal director, said that the $288 check was the largest he has seen go through the office.

Walter White Confers With Gen. Eisenhower

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga.

2-27-44

Negro Troops Are Cheered By NAACP Sec'y

NEW YORK—(S N S)—Walter White, NAACP secretary now on a tour overseas, had a two-hour conference recently with General Dwight W. Eisenhower, supreme invasion commander, according to a story sent by wireless to this country by W. Randy Dixon, foreign correspondent of the Pittsburgh Courier.

Mr. White, on a tour of overseas troop installations, left England on or about Feburary 20, according to word received here February 23. Mr. White, arrived in London, January 3, and since that time has completed an 1800-mile tour of installations in England and Ireland, observing Negro troops.

He submitted a report to Generals Eisenhower, and Lee, and to Ambassador Winant, at their request. Mr. White expects to be in the North African theatre from four to six weeks and to return to the United States in the early part of May. 2-27-44

War correspondent Dixon's story to the Courier declares: "Indications are that Walter White'e six-week stay in the European theatre of operation is probably the most productive of his long career as NAACP zealot and journalist. Once General Eisenhower and White talked privately and uninterruptedly for two hours. White's visit here created more stir and interest among colored soldiers than any previous visit by an outstanding personality."

PRAISES NEGROES IN WAR

Times-New York, N. Y.

Red Cross Official Says Work Will Aid Post-War Status

2-12-44

A prediction that the part played by Negroes in combat forces and in Red Cross field work would change the status of their race after the war was made yesterday by Jesse O. Thomas, assistant administrator of domestic services at national Red Cross headquarters in Washington. He spoke at a luncheon in Small's Paradise, 2294 Seventh Avenue, at which leaders of religious, social and civic groups met to organize block canvassing in Harlem for the Red Cross 1944 war fund.

Mrs. David Challinor, vice chairman of the forthcoming drive to raise $22,386,000 in New York, warned that "in this all-out war, which is affecting every man, woman and child in this country, disunity and complacency are the only obstacles that might get in the way of our winning the war." She declared the work done by nurses' aides in Harlem Hospital "has set an example for every hospital in the city." 2-12-44

Other speakers were John P. Stevens Jr., general chairman of the Greater New York campaign; Samuel Battle, New York City Parole Commissioner, and Frank Walker, chairman of block canvassers in the Twenty-eighth and Thirty-second Precincts.

Negro Soldiers And The Fighting Fronts

Daily World-Atlanta, Ga. 3-14-44

One of the most talked about of the current issues growing out of the bi-racial pattern prevailing generally throughout the nation, and which, to a growing degree, is beginning to affect the nation's expressed love for Christian democratic principals and ideals, affecting alike its war-time and peace-time activities, is the growing demand of the Negro citizens of the country that their sons be given a greater chance to risk their lives upon the battlefields of the world, in the same degree as the sons of other citizens of the country.

That this has become a major issue in the gravely important race problem of the country may be noted by pointing to the fact that in the "Statement of War Aims of the Negroes of the Country," presented to President Roosevelt, doing his talk with a committee representing the National Negro Newspaper Publishers Association, at its Eastern Regional meeting recently held in the Nation's Capitol, this was the one issue brought directly to the attention of the President by the spokesmen for the group.

Giving due consideration to such an existing fact it is only the natural aftermath that the letter of the Secretary of War, Mr. Stimson, recently made public, giving the official reason for the failure to use Negro troops in combat, as a War Department policy, was considered, and rightly so, by Negroes in all sections of the nation, as not only an insult to the gallant and glorious history and tradition of the Negro soldier, won in sacrifice, blood and death, in every conflict in which the nation has engaged from the first skirmish of the American revolution to the present day, but, as an insult to the whole race 3-14-44

It is of little wonder then that in the wake of such an avalanche of protest and reaction on the part of the Negroes of the country, that the War Secretary has set out to deny any discriminatory motives and seeks to point out conditions justifying the denial to the Negro soldier the opportunity for which he has been trained, and which he seeks wholeheartedly both out of patriotism and the desire to further substantiate his claims to be the equal of all men, in all things, regardless of race, color or creed.

In pointing out the low educational qualification of the Negro soldiers as being the reason for his not being allowed to take his part and place on the fighting fronts of the war, the War Secretary also advances the implication that in the hundreds of thousands of Negro soldiers now in the Army there is not a sufficient number of the required educational qualifications needed to create even one or two regiments capable of service on the fighting fronts. And this, in spite of the fact that the press of the entire nation for the past several months has been filled with the exploits of Marshall Tito, and his bands of un- educated Yugoslavian partisians who having been doing the most effective fighting against the Germans, in spite of their lack of comparable education. However, admitting as true, what the War Secretary said about the low educational qualification of the Negro soldier, it would have been a fine thing for the spirit and morale of the Negroes of the country, and would have taken a lot of the sting out of his original letter had he added the further truth that the work of port battallions, labor battallions, engineers, quartermasters, require not only the highest physical qualification in men, but also the equally important willingness to do long hours of hard work too, qualifications that are to be found in the very highest degree in the American Negro soldier, but not yet, perhaps, sufficiently exercised in other groups, and that in doing such work the Negro soldier is performing a task of just as much importance to winning the war as any other soldiers. 3-14-44

Finally, as Negroes, it will pay us to keep in mind, the great importance of the job being done by our sons, less while demanding that they be given a chance to serve on the fighting fronts, we take away the significance of their job and give aid to those who may be interested in discrediting the effort and contribution of the Negro towards winning the victory.

Negro Soldier Writes Letter Of Courage To Employers Here

News-Birmingham, Ala
4-28-44

Determination, hopefulness and courage—these are three qualities which pervade a recent letter from a Negro soldier formerly employed by a Birmingham family.

"I believe that Negroes will be better citizens after the war. . . . I'm going to stay in the Army and see this thing through. It's more serious than I thought it was. . . . I am taking my training seriously."

These are but a few thoughts selected at random from this rather remarkable and cogent letter written by Pvt. Moses Hudson, stationed at the Army Air Base in New Orleans. It needs to be read more fully to grasp its portent, so with the omission of only a few personal matters, it follows:

* * *

"I AM NOW STATIONED in New Orleans. I am a member of the first platoon. We are considered one of the best in the company.

"Before I was inducted into the armed forces, I felt that I couldn't be a soldier, but now it is different. Every member of our outfit is determined to be a good soldier. We have excellent instructors. We have to work and train hard from dawn to dusk, but we are taught and shown in training films that we can make only one mistake overseas. So the only ones that we make will be over here in training. I believe, with the grim determination of the boys, the enemy would be on the run.

"You learn so much in the Army. I believe that Negroes will be better citizens after the war. They are taught how to live clean. The company commander is very proud of us. It is not often that a group of Negroes can dwell together in peace and harmony. 4-28-44

* * *

"MY LITTLE GIRL IS growing up now. She writes me letters three times a week. We miss each other. I am taking my training seriously because the better you train, the better chance you have of coming back before your dog tags.

"I think I'm going to stay in the Army and see this thing through. It's more serious than I thought it was. But I believe when the last shot is fired, we will fire it. Considering the circumstances in which we were attacked, I think that we've made wonderful progress. But I rejoice that it is as well with us as it is, and I am looking forward for things to be like they were after victory is won."

Six Colored Prisoners Are Freed By Nazis

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Were Kept In Jim Crow Camp By the Germans

3-23-44

NEW YORK.—(ANP)—When 28 prisoners were recently released from the German prison camp at Tittmoning, six were colored American citizens, it has been learned here.

Before the repatriation there were about 180 United States citizens and 120 Latin Americans at Tittmoning. Of the United States citizens 12 were Negroes. German authorities claimed that 80 more were Jews and the remainder Polish-Americans.

Jewish nationals of the United States and British are exempted from Hitler's anti-Semitic measures, but the men are kept segregated from most of their race who were from the European continent.

A separate camp for Americans of Jewish, Polish or Negro origin, as well as Latin Americans, has been opened at Tittmoning in upper Bavaris, on the old German-Austrian frontier, about 12 miles down the Sal Zach river from the general camp for American men at Laufen.

While there is plenty of food, all reports declare that it is atrocious. The American prisoner's weekly parcels help to provide proper nourishment.

The Nazi jimcrow prison camp for Jewish, Polish and colored American prisoners at Tittmoning is said to be similar to that at Laufen. It is an old castle that has been repaired. It has three - tiered bunks into various, and the prisoners sleep on straw mattresses and pillows and eat at plank tables. 3-23-44

A group of thinly clad German Jews, who may have been intellectuals and professional people before the war, were working in the bitter cold in Strasborough when the train carrying the released U. S. prisoners passed through that German city.

Negroes Win Stimson Praise

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—(AP) America's Negro soldiers, most of whom live in southern states, are contributing their full share to the war effort, with approximately 50 per cent of them already overseas or en route there, says Secretary of War Stimson. 4-20-44

Stimson made his statement in a letter which Representative Ludlow, Democrat, Indiana, said today he inserted in the Congressional Record as an answer to complaints of Army discrimination against Negroes.

Stimson reported that of the Negro troops overseas 32 per cent are combat and combat support troops, and added "they are being given every opportunity to win battle honors and demonstrate their worth in actual combat." Other points he made include:

"The Army is accepting and absorbing Negro personnel at a rate corresponding to the registration ratio of white and Negro enlisted men.

"At present approximately 9 per cent of the Army's total enlistment is of Negro personnel, but it is planned to increase this to 10.4 per cent.

"Of our total enlisted personnel 6,245,720 will be white, 709,280 Negro, and of the Negro personnel approximately 14 per cent are scheduled for assignment to combat organizations.

"Army tests have shown Negroes have had inadequate educational opportunities. 4-20-44

"A recent study of checks at reception centers showed 20 per cent of the Negroes and 74 per cent of the whites were rated in higher grades of one, two and three, while 80 per cent of the Negroes and 26 per cent of the whites fell in lower classifications."

"While these lower classifications certainly do not reflect either the intelligence of the men or their native abilities, they do indicate the nature and extent of the problem with which the Army must deal," Stimson declared.

Instruction courses have helped remedy this situation, however, with 90 per cent of 29,000 Negro trainees taking classes being accepted for advanced training, he added.

"Permit me to reiterate and emphasize that all our military personnel is distributed and employed solely in conformance with military considerations which, of course, are entirely unrelated to racial derivations," Stimson concluded.

Nazis Slew His Wife and Son; Negro, 56, Ships Out to Fight

Daily Worker-New York, N.Y. 2-26-44

By Art Shields

Harold Harper, Negro seaman and Master of Arts, told a press conference at the National Maritime Union yesterday that his cup of hatred against Hitler is running over.

The Germans killed his aged mother—whom Lincoln freed—in the London air blitz in 1941.

They lined up his 17-year-old son, with other students at the St Francis School in Louvain, Belgium in 1940, and machine-gunned him to death.

And Germans torpedoed ships under him six times.

ACQUIRES NEW ART

Mr. Harper, a highly cultured man, who knows 12 languages, including Russian, Japanese, Hindustani and the Basuto African tongue has just acquired another art to use against Hitler at sea. That's cooking.

He graduates today from the government's school for cooks and bakers in the merchant ship service.

The story of this 56-year-old graduate is an international epic.

Harold's hair-breadth's escapes began early. 2-26-44

A white supremacy mob burned down his father's house in Kansas City, Mo., shortly after he was born.

He took his master of arts at the University of Berlin before the last war and filled out a linguistic repertoire, which now includes Arabic, Greek, Gaelic, Icelandic, French, German and English and the tongues mentioned before.

FIRST TORPEDO

Young Harper was about to put his language to use as an interpreter for Cooks Tours (his job since), when the ship he was traveling to England on—the S.S. Arabic—was torpedoed off Ireland, early in the first war.

More ghastly was the blow in the Skagerrak straits off Denmark later that year.

HAROLD HARPER

More tragedy followed. While he was running an American club in Tokio in 1923, the earthquake killed his wife and 90,000 other persons. His infant son escaped—till the Germans got him in 1940.

The U.S. Consul at Louvain told Harper that the Germans just lined up, all the students and killed them.

KIDS MACHINE-GUNNED

He saw more child butchery at Malta in April, 1942, when he watched 12 children at play in a

when a torpedo touched off a shipload of explosives, killing 1,200 men and Master of Arts is fighting Jim smiles as he tells you the s and barber shops in Washington, had to their "White Trade Only" en he protested to the torney last year.

Crow. He smiled restaurants and Vancouver, W. take down their signs when he district attorne

"I'm not out just for personal revenge," he told reporters. "I'm shipping out to help prevent these things from happening again."

47n-1944

FRONT AND CENTER—Army Sports Personalities

First sergeant of the "Pioneers" of Camp Pinedale, Fresno, California. The first sergeant, known as the Chillicothe (Ohio) Flash, entered the service in September, 1942. He is an all-around athlete, having starred in football, basketball and track, both at high school and college. He majored in physical education at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama. First Sergeant Jones assisted the late Dr. George Washington Carver in setting up displays of the great scientist's many discoveries in the new museum at Tuskegee. (Drawing by Sgt. R. Schuller, Camp Pinedale.)

Negroes In War News

Whip - Miami Fla.

It is indeed unfortunate that so little of the war news from the various fighting zones tell of the activities and exploits of Negro servicemen. Many thousands of Negroes are in our nation's armed services, fighting and dying. They are in the islands of the Pacific, in Italy, and with the invasion forces in Western Europe. They are helping to write a brililant and heroic chapter in the global struggle against tyranny and aggression, but the public receives but meager news of their achievements. 7-8-44

It is true that the Negro press has war correspondents at the fighting fronts in some parts of the Pacific and elsewhere, but they are few in number. It is impossible for them to cover the activities of our Negro troops fully in all of the areas in which the war is being fought. Releases concerning the outstanding achievements of Negro fighters are sent out by the War department at Washington from time to time, but as a rule they cover only isolated exploits.

This scarcity of news about Negroes on the fighting fronts, however, does not indicate that our men are not playing their part. In the invasion of Normandy, Negroes are in there pitching with the other brave Allied heroes. They are piloting planes over France and Germany. Only recently, Thursday, a group of fighter planes manned by Negroes and led by Col. B. O. Davis, accompanied a squadron of bombers over Germany and shot down five Nazi planes.

Our boys are also rendering heroic serviee on landing barges plying back and forth across the English Channel, also as infantrymen, members of construction battalions, engineer corps and in handling anti-aircraft guns on the decks of Allied naval ships.

As the war progresses, it is sincerely hoped that war releases will be more liberal in the coverage of Negro action on the fighting fronts of the world.

Heroism, Devotion to Duty Of Negroes Lauded by Army

PM - New York, N. Y.
6-25-44

The War Dept. in an announcement today lauded the work of Negroes serving in the U. S. armed forces and pointed out several instances of outstanding service for which awards have been made.

For gallantry displayed in action on the Anzio Beachhead, Capt. James L. Jones, Army chaplain from Dallas, Texas, has been awarded the Silver Star and the Purple Heart. The citation declared that "the inspiration afforded by his unselfish devotion and personal sacrifice is in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service of the United States."

On one occasion Capt. Jones went to the aid of two wounded men in the face of constant enemy bombardment, and on another raced 500 yards through heavy enemy fire to assist in extinguishing a fire at a Quartermaster supply dump. The citation said that Capt. Jones insisted on remaining with his men in the most dangerous areas, for he felt he could be of greater service to them there.

Another chaplain, Capt. Charles H. Dubra, of Gulfport, Miss., is the first Negro chaplain to win the Legion of Merit award. In this case the citation states the award was made for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services in New Guinea from April, 1942, to March, 1944."

"He gave valuable assistance to commanding officers and to other chaplains in maintaining a high degree of efficiency," the citation concluded. 6-28-44

Pfc. James H. Wilson of Oakland, Tenn., and Pvt. John Page of New Orleans, have been commended for "outstanding performance of duty and paintaking endeavor and loyalty" in the execution of their assignments while serving with an Airbase Security Battalion in the Northern Solomons Campaign.

The Quartermaster Review's May-June issue pays special tribute to Negro troops. Lt. Col. C. C. Holcomb, in an article on their work on the Anzio-Nettuno beachheads, writes:

"Their loyalty and their ability to take it will never again be questioned by any of us who have seen them in action . . . The way they have done their assigned tasks is evident in the fact that the supply situation on this beachhead (Anzio) is considered to be superior to any other our army has had in actual combat."

AN EDITORIAL

The War Dept. lauds the Negro soldier in press releases, yet discrimination goes on, in the armed services and at home. It's about time he got an even break in ways other than in mimeographed handout.—S. T.

To Teach Cadets At West Point

7-14-44

CAMP GORDON JOHNSTON, Fla.—(ANP) — Three Negro enlisted men, who have demonstrated proficiency in operation of amphibian trucks, and two white officers, de-

The enlisted men are: S. Sgt. Pointers not only in operations but in tactics and maintenance.

T. 5 Clarence Adams, Jasper, Tex.

Under command of Capt. Charles E. Stamps, supervisor amphibian truck training at the ASFTC, Houston, Cpl. Walter J. Firby, 4060 the team will instruct the West Point to teach cadets of the United States Military Academy Haverford Ave., Philadelphia and amphibian truck operations.

Tribune—Washington, D.C.
NATIONAL NEGRO NEWSPAPER WEEK
FEB. 27th ~ MAR. 4th
1827 ~~ 1944
3-4-44

3-4-44

"BACKING THE ATTACK ON ALL FRONTS."

Invasion costs many Negro lives

Tribune—Los Angeles, Calif.
7-10-44

WASHINGTON—Pictures documenting the Negro soldiers' part in the invasion of Nazi-held France have been sent back from the beaches of Normandy and published throughout the United States, the War Department announced last week. These pictures coupled with the announcement of heavy casualties among the Negro troops involved attested to their extensive participation in the action.

So far, none of the Negro units have been identified, nor will they be until such time as the unit commanders think it proper and safe to make such disclosures, the War department stated, adding that there was a large number used in the combined operations.

Except for revealing the names of the larger elements forming the invasion forces, Gen. Eisenhower has not given clearance for the release of a further breakdown identifying the units composing his forces. The pictures and the War department's announcement simply verify the presence of Negro combat engineers and other groups on the beaches of France. 7-10-44

These troops, exposed to heavy enemy fire, suffered many casualties while engaged in unloading and handling supplies ashore.

Florida Negro Soldiers Pose With Rome's She-wolf

Enquirer—Columbus, Ga.

BY KENNETH L. DIXON

WITH THE AEF IN ITALY, June 18—(Delayed)—(AP)—They're still kidding Sgt. Roamules Kyler and Staff Sgt. Reamuless Kyler, twin Negro brothers of Williston, Fla., about getting their picture in Stars and Stripes the other day.

Since the 22-year old soldiers were named for Romulus and Remus, the lads who according to legend were suckled by the she-wolf and subsequently founded Rome some 2,600 years ago, it was a cinch someone would hunt them up in Rome.

Sgt. Cyril Hopper, the Army newspaper photographer, not only found them but also found a bronze statue depicting the she-wolf and the famous twins who came to dinner. So he posed the Florida twins in front of it and took their picture.

* * * 7-2-44

Pfc. Bill Held of Chambers, Neb., and Pvt. Norman Cassidy of Detroit are still bragging about the drinking they did while in Rome without getting drunk.

They met a Brooklyn-born Italian who asked them if they were thirsty. "Yep," they chorused and at that moment they weren't thinking of cognac, wine or anything but water.

But the thing they weren't expecting was 10 gallons of cold milk—the first fresh milk they'd tasted since leaving the States.

So the boys sat down and toasted the taking of Rome with glass after glass of moo juice.

* * *

Upon Lake Bolsena Staff Sgt. Ralph Munoz of Los Angeles was astonished to learn there were people who didn't know you could go fishing with hand grenades when that's all the tackle you have.

There were muffled ba-roomps from out over the lake as he spoke and the naked soldier went wading out to gather in the fish.

"It paralyzes them," the sergeant explained. All you have to do is pick up the fish and bring them back, fix them on a stove and you've got everything."

* * *

The people of tiny Onano still aren't quite sure what happened. Some say it was like a tornado; others insist it seemed more like a whirlwind. They are the few who stayed in Onano during the Fifth Army stay while most of the town's population pulled out to the hills until the shooting ended.

Giuseppe, who used to run a bicycle repair shop, is one of those who stayed. Wild-haired and wild-eyed, he is still groping for words to explain what happened.

"The Germans were here," he said, "we remember that. And then, quick! The Germans are not here and the French are here in town. And then, quick! Out they go again."

* * * 7-2-44

Giuseppe was not the only one who was slightly harried. Sgt. Milt Lehman of Pittsburgh, Stars and Stripes writer, told about talking to Lt. Robert G. Menefee, Jr., of Sandusky, Ohio, and Cpl. Charles W. Hughes, Duncan, S. C., up by Acquapendente.

The lieutenant is a forward observer for 155 howitzers and wears the artillery crossed guns tattooed on his right arm. Hughes is his driver.

"When it goes this fast you've got to fire fast," Menefee said. There's no time for digging positions when there's a target and the gun's on the road. All you do is haul it off to the side and fire. By then the target's ready to retreat."

"Just hit and run," said Hughes. "We hit and then run."

THIS MORNING

By John Temple Graves II

Citizen—Asheville, N.C.

"Compound for sins they are inclined to,
By damning those they have no mind to."

5-13-44

Dr. Gallup says that 66 per cent of our civilian population think our civilian population doesn't take the war seriously enough. He says they agree with criticisms voiced by soldiers returning from battle fronts. But do they agree with the record? The record says we have oversubscribed all the war loans, done a war production job basic to winning the war, submitted with only human and harmless grumblings to all rationings, freezings, priorities and controls, and stood by in good order and cheer while every home has made its contribution to the military establishment and mortal chance. If we laugh on occasion, go to the movies, give ourselves whatever good time is available, that is no sin.

GRAVES

* * * *

We don't feel as the Russians do, but that is because, thank God, our situation is a million miles from theirs. We don't go through the same motions and emotions as our men at the battle fronts, but the returning soldier might remember that there is a difference in that respect, too. I say the 66 per cent who agree with the returning soldier are wrong, and so is he. It's an optical illusion. We're taking the war exactly serious enough to win it. What more is to be asked? The real concern is whether we will take the peace seriously enough. 5-13-44

* * *

The situation this Gallup poll reflects is making for an unnecessary gap between people at home and military people who are coming home. The division can do us no good at all, and it has no right to be. In large degree, I suspect it is this very civilian disapproval of civilian behavior which is reflected back to us from the fighting fronts in letters and reports which say our fighters are unhappy about things at home, that their morale is sapped by discouraging pictures of the land for which they fight.

5-13-44

Not that all or even most of our fighting men really feel this way yet. It is something much more written about than felt thus far. Even among the Negro troops, who are supposed to be disgruntled when they think of inequalities back home, there is probably much less concern than is claimed. I thought of this the other day when I was shown a letter written from Burma by Sgt. Harvey Douglass, of the engineers, a young Negro well known and liked in my town! "We have a great job to do, and I wish it was something I could do to bring this war to an end but it's not left to one person. I'm in Burma living high up in the clouds. The monsoon is beginning to set in and I'm sure you have heard how bad it is. We are having a lot of landslides and that makes it hard to accomplish what we are doing but we are real Americans. We can do our job and we will do it well. All that we are asking is that you all have faith and pray to God to give us strength and health to go through this crisis."

I don't believe our men overseas as many. "We have formed an Alabama Club here," he writes, "as a means of consolidating all the news from home. There are nearly 30 boys from Alabama in this comoldly pound. Jack Bentley of Gadsden, came mes over to see Winston and me the other day. has He is in another compound and doing fine. e is ger-area prisoner of war at Stalag Luft III, Ger-

47n-1944

Negro Hero's Wife Sums It Up; Bill Knew Why He Was Fighting

Daily Worker-New York, N.Y. 2-24-44

By Eugene Gordon

Charles Walter David, Jr., Negro, whom the Associated Press referred to as "a giant with tremendous physical strength," was not a giant at all, according to his widow, Kathleen, but just a normal and healthy young American.

David was in the news recently as the hero of a North Atlantic torpedoing. The AP story—which is no more than Mrs. David herself knows of his last exploits—said that the "26-year-old mess attendant, first class," "dived repeatedly into freezing water in total darkness to haul survivors aboard, and finally rescued his executive officer, Lieut. Langford Anderson . . . who had gone overside to work with the rescue crew."

"No," said Mrs. David, "Charles wasn't a giant. He was just six feet and weighed about 175 pounds."

He learned to swim when, as a small boy, he was shoved off an East Side pier by playmates and realized that, literally, it was a matter of sink or swim.

ACCOUNT OF HEROISM

The AP story goes on:

" 'David was over the side on at least three occasions,' Lieut. Anderson said. 'Due to his extreme strength, he facilitated the task of getting aboard survivors who were frozen to such a degree they were like logs.' 2-24-44

"Lieut Anderson, pulled under water by a drowning man, was rescued when David dived in, broke the survivor's strangle-hold, and pulled both men to safety. David died of pneumonia following his exposure and exertions. . . ."

We sat in Mrs. David's little hall bedroom—in which she has also an icebox, a bureau, and other odds and ends of furniture—at the top of a rear staircase. The house is at 342 W. 122nd St., an old brownstone front in a row of brownstones, all with stoops of the same height. Her 16-year-old brother and his young friend sat listening, on the bed.

Yes, they agreed, they wanted to join the Navy. Certainly, they realized it was risky. No, they weren't afraid they'd have to be mess attendants, because, by the time they joined up, Uncle Sam would have learned the folly of turning a good fighter into a mess attendant, merely because that fighter happened to be a Negro.

Widow and Son of a Hero

2-24-44

Mrs. Kathleen David, with three-year-old Neil, widow and son of Charles W. David, Jr., Coast Guard mess attendant who died of pneumonia following his rescue of comrades from the sea when his ship was torpedoed. —Daily Worker Photo

David was born on the East Side of New York on June 20, 1918. He went to the Cooper Junior High School, the Banjamin Franklin Junior High School, and the Industrial High School. Where he learned carpentering and cabinet-making. He loved sports, especially basketball and swimming.

Mrs. David was notified of her husband's death about a year ago. That announcement, however said nothing about his being a hero. She learned of that only when a reporter from a New York paper called on her last week and requested a picture of her husband.

"Were you surprised? Had he ever said or done anything to indicate that he would act like that in a crisis?" 2-24-44

She was silent for a moment.

"I was a little surprised. So much time had passed, you see, and so many things are happening all the time to make one forget . . . But I could imagine his acting like that."

He was, evidently, a fighter—as she seems to be. She has been a member of the Harlem Labor Union since she was 16. She is now 23. She has a small son. She believes in unions. She believes, she says, that a number of good things for the Negro people have come already from this war against fascism. One of these things, she believes, is a more cooperative spirit between the Negro and the white people.

'Duck' Soup To Negro GI's

PM-New York, N.Y. 4-17-44

Staff Correspondence

CAMP GORDON JOHNSTON, Fla., Apr. 15.—On the white sand beaches and in the Titi jungles which stretch far inland from the shores of the Gulf of Mexico some of America's Negro soldiers are training for one of the most vital jobs in amphibious warfare. They're taking it in stride.

These men—there are only three companies so far—are learning to be pilots of the Army's newest and most spectacular amphibious weapon, the Duck, the hybrid vehicle which is half truck, half ocean-going vessel.

The Duck, as it was immediately christened by the GIs, is almost as difficult to pilot as an airplane. It bounds along on six wheels on land and scoots around on water like a boat. There are almost as many controls facing the driver as there are in the cockpit of a fighting airplane. 4-17-44

Newsmen on a War Dept. tour of Army camps were passengers on a land-water jaunt aboard one of the score of Ducks at Camp Gordon Johnston. A convoy of the ungainly hulks, awash with the top milk of American journalism, lumbered through the saw Palmetto and scrubpine for a mile or so past military dumps and onto the glare of the beach. At water's edge drivers switched to the propeller and splashed into the Gulf. The front wheels were still engaged as the prop bit water until the hull was water borne.

The driver of our Duck was Elmer Tracey, a husky corporal who used to drive a truck in Birmingham, Ala. His crew were Pvt. Boles and Pvt. Henry. They love the job.

Every officer in the party was enthusiastic over the Negroes' swift mastery of their Ducks. They have been brisk and efficient chauffeurs of these mysterious amphibians. None have yet been in combat, but their officers were all confident they will make good on invasion beaches wherever they are.

The Duck is a versatile weapon. It is designed primarily to carry supplies to a beachhead but it can transport troops from ship to shore or back again with equal facility. Meanwhile these happy Negro soldiers are winning their wings—"duck wings."

Negro College Drive Launched

The Worker-New York, N.Y.

By ENGENE GORDON

Walter Hoving, president of Lord & Taylor, and recently chosen to lead the Negro College Fund campaign, opened yesterday with the statement that any economically inferior and unskilled group of citizens is a national liability.

When 21,000 Negroes out of 22,000 men are rejected by the Army in Mississippi because of illiteracy, that IS a liability. It means that nine regiments of potential fighting men are thus demobilized. 5-7-44

Losses to the nation in the industrial field are as great. Thousands of possible Booker T. Washingtons, George Washington Carvers, Mary McLeod Bethunes, and Charles Drews are lost to the nation because Negro boys and girls do not have adequate educational opportunities in the South.

The 27 colleges and universities in this $1,500,000 drive used to get along on contributions from alumni and from occasional endowments and gifts. Such sources are now dried up. Nor do many Negro colleges enjoy the War Department subsidy of thousands of trainees.

Jimcrow colleges and universities are incompatible with democracy, as St. Louis (Ky.) University and other private white institutions themselves insist. The people and their organizations must, therefore, support both the present United Negro College Fund drive

Third of Army's Negroes Overseas

PM-New York, N.Y. 5-16-44

Of 664,066 Negroes in the Army Feb. 29, 284,644 were overseas, the War Dept. reports.

There were 81,205 more serving than there were at the last count Aug. 31, 1943.

There were 4979 officers, including 205 chaplains and only 219 nurses. Medical and dental corps had 496. 5-16-44

The Air Forces had 77,335 Negroes, with an increase of 593 officers since August. The breakdown: Infantry 44,022, coast artillery 50,955, field artillery 9043, engineers 106,514, all others 376,197.

LOCAL NEGRO IS HERO IN DEATH

Daily Worker-Birmingham 4-25-44

The Birmingham Negro ran forward to offer help. One of the men in the cab yelled the warning that the truck contained black powder, a terrible hazard when brought close to flames—but Stringer continued his advance.

Pfc. Otto Stringer, Jr., 23-year-while serving as a traffic guard along the Ledo Road.

Warming himself by a diesel old Negro engineer whose home was at 1125 Cahaba Street, Birmingham, gave his life in Burma hours. Stringer was taken to a hospital that two fellow workers might live.descend a hill just south of his

The driver's cab were two the truck reached the As he reached the side of the e hill, it veered sudden-truck, the powder exploded. ed over one of the flares Stringer watched a truck ong the road for night a few miles away and died the following day. The occupants of the and crashed into an em- truck were injured, but both recov-

The public relations office of the post. In the services of supply headquarters, men. foot of the hill United States Army Forces, for China, Burma and India. Sunday placed along made public the story of how the workers.

'OUR BOYS WANT TO FIGHT,' GENERAL DAVIS TELL COAST LEGIONNAIRES

No Complaint Over Inductions

Daily World- Atlanta, Ga. 4-14-44

HOLLYWOCD — (ANP) — The Negro's only complaint with the army comes when they are not permitted to "fight it out," said Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, the army's highest ranking colored officer, in a speech to a local group of American Legionnaires Thursday night.

"There never has been any complaint from the Negro when inducted," he said. "Our people have come forward as volunteers for service who never they have been permitted to do so."

Davis, along with Truman K. Gibson civilian aide to Sec., of war Henry L. Stimson, was a guest of honor at a county council meeting of the Legion. Both were here for the premiere Thursday of "Negro Soldier,' produced by Col. Frank Capra.

General Davis expressed the belief that the film would contribute to better understanding of the Negro and appreciation of his contribution to the development of this nation.

"Many people forget," he said, "that our population is made up of many groups and my group has the distinction of not having been asked whether we wanted to join or not. We were just brought here."

CONTRIBUTION UNDISPUTED

The Negro contribution to the development of America was undisputed, he said. 4-14-44

"We have come forward as volunteers whenever we were permitted to volunteer," he said. "There has never been any complaint from the Negroes because they have been inductd into service. Their only complaint has been made when you dont let them get into the game and fight it out."

He said that most of the trouble current in the world today was caused by misunderstanding. He hoped that "The Negro Soldier" would go far toward removing that misunderstanding in the case of the Negro

ASK FOR RIGHTS

"We're only asking you for the things you have enacted into law," he said, "and have said that we are entitled to.

"If we are not all you would have us be, remember what we are of your handiwork. We're going to be what you make us. We're your responsibility'."

Brig. Gen. Davis, who was escorted to the speakers stand by an honor guard of Air-Wacs, had high praise for the women who are serving with the armed forces and particularly the Wacs.

Truman K. Gibson, Secretary of War Stimson's civilian aide, who also spoke, disclosed that ten percent of the Army is composed of Negroes and that nine and a half percent of the men overseas are Negroes.

How the Black Eagle Plotted Duce's Death

World-Telegram - New York, N.Y. 5-2-44

By IRVING JOHNSON,
World-Telegram Staff Writer.

Col. Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, Harlem's accomplished and many-sided Black Eagle, narrowly failed in a self-assigned plan to assassinate Mussolini in 1934, the ex-Air Minister of Ethiopia revealed today.

The irrepressible Black Eagle remembered his near approach to glory while driving his big car downtown from Washington Heights Traffic Court, where he had gone to answer the traffic ticket he got from Policeman McCarthy in that incident on 55th St. last week.

Warned of Il Duce.

First he pulled off his expensive brown hat and dropped it on the seat beside him. "I must remove my hat," he said, "when I mention my ex-boss, the Emperor of Ethiopia. No man ever lived who did more for civilization."

His plot to murder Mussolini, he went on, came into his head when the Emperor warned against Il Duce and his ambitions and how perilous they were to civilization.

He forgot all about the indignity of his encounter with the cop as he continued with his narrative. The plot was perfectly conceived, he said. 5-2-44

The Plot Fails.

"I made believe I had turned traitor against the Emperor," he said, "and everyone believed it. When I got to Rome an audience with Mussolini was arranged and I went there in morning dress. But I had a gun under my arm so rigged up that it would go off when I raised my arm in the Fascist salute."

He said the plan failed when Count Ciano called Haile Selassi a "monkey." The Black Eagle flinched and Ciano saw he was still an Ethiopian sympathizer. The Count said, "The audience is off," and ushered the Bl[illegible]gle out.

The Black Eagle was strictly the philosopher this morning and his anger against Policeman McCarthy was obscured by such observations as, "You have to, condone these incidents. It takes so many people to make a world."

He drove over to 55th St. near Eighth Ave. and parked his car where it was when Policeman McCarthy pulled alongside. He said he couldn't have been blocking traffic as charged or the officer couldn't have driven to his side—"as a matter of fact he blocked traffic." 5-2-44

Polite to Officer.

He said not a single horn was blown and there were no army or navy trucks in the street, as charged, and he counted out 15 parked cars on the street marked "No parking in this block."

There were 10 the other day, he said, "and I told the officer if he gave me a summons he'd have to make out 10 more for the others."

He said he was polite to the officer until the latter said: "Shut up! Show me your license!"

"So I told him: 'Shut up! This is not Germany!'"

Col. Julian's case was put off till the 11th over his protest.

Pulls Soldiers From Burning Powder Truck

Daily World Atlanta Ga

Refuses To Heed Warning; Caught In Huge Blast

4-27-44

ALONG THE LEDO ROAD —(ANP) — He gave his life that others might live. Pfc. Otto Stringer, Jr., 23, a Negro engineer from 1125 Chaba St., Birmingham, was acting as a traffic guard at 5 a.m., on the famous Ledo Road. It was his regular turn at guard duty Stringer was cold because it becomes chilly in the wee hours in the Burma mountains during January mornings.

He walked from one diesel flare (light for night workers) to another to keep warm. He thought of home where his dependent father and sister waited for him. He thought of school days when he had so much fun. But he had studied too. He thought of working in the grocery store, and of his many friends.

WATCHES BULL-DOZERS

Then, he thought of the many jobs he had mastered since coming into the army. Right now, he was learning to operate a bulldozer. He admired those men who could run the heavy machines up and down mountains without being afraid. He was going to do that, too. He thought of many things. Everyone does, standing his lonely vigil of guard on a chilly night. He has to, in order to pass the time.

Stringer was in this reverie when a truck, driven by two white engineers came down a hill south of his post. That was not unusual. Many trucks came down that same hill. But this one was different. The driver seemed to have lost control of the vehicle.

Suddenly, it ran into a bank at the foot of the hill near which Stringer was standing. As it crashed ,the truck knocked over a lighted diesel flare. He started toward the truck. The driver yelled that it contained black powder. Stringer continued his advance. He would help them. 4-27-44

POWDER EXPLODES

Instantly the powder exploded. Stringer and both occupants were enveloped in flames. Witnesses immediately hurried to the spot. But the flames were too hot momentarily ,and they hesitated before dashing in and pulling the three men out.

They covered the victims to beat out the flames, then rushed them to a hospital a few miles away. Stringer regained consciousness there before he died the next day. He told friends to pack his things in his locker; to bring his toilet articles to the hospital.

The two men he tried to rescue were sent to a base hospital where they are getting along fine.

It Stringer had a reputation among his comrades of being a jolly fellow who was ready to lend a helping hand to anyone at any time. He still lives in their memory.

3 Negro Soldiers Capture 15 Nazis

Detroit—Chicago Daily 7-22-44

WITH ALLIED FORCES IN FRANCE—(ANP)—The capture of 15 Germans by three colored members of the army signal corps recently rates as the foremost news of this section. Those involved in the capture were Cpl. Bernard P. Henderson, 28, of New York City; Cpl. Percy E. Cox Jr., 28, Petersburg, Va., and Cpl. Allie W. Campbell, Planes, Va.

Campbell drove the prisoners to the provost office. The commanding officer, Lt. Charles A. Gray, Audubon, N. Y., was surprised to see Nazis ushered into his presence and congratulated the captors.

The boys carried out their duties in excellent fashion. They had confiscated valuable papers. Henderson and Cox did guard duty while

47n-1944

Colored Russian Officer Personally Kills 126 Nazis

Afro-American - Baltimore, Md. 2-12-44

Red Army Lieutenant Credited With Wholesale Slaughter; Sergeant Kills 14

MOSCOW—Lt. Akaki Tereladze, colored Red Army officer from the Georgian Soviet, is credited with personally killing 126 German soldiers during the encounter in which his rifle company crossed the Dnieper River and captured the village of Monastirek.

The river crossing was made under heavy artillery, mortar and machine gun fire from two German motorized rifle battalions.

The Nazis made twenty two counter attacks, eight of which were led by tanks, before being routed. Several hundred of them were killed and three tanks put out of action.

Sergeant Kills 114

Another colored (Tartar) Russian, Sgt. Gali Kakirov, scored a personal record of 114 Germans killed in two engagements.

Fourteen of these were killed with Sergeant Kakirov's bayonet and rifle butt when he led his squad into a German front-line trench, and the others when a Nazi battalion made a futile attack on a height held by the sergeant's squad.

Men Use Skill, Ingenuity Accomplishing Army Tasks

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga. 5-20-44

HEADQUARTERS, EUROPEAN THEATRE OF OPERATIONS — Negro soldiers serving in a United States port battalion stationed at a North Ireland port keep the huge bulk of invasion supplies moving from American assembly lines to invasion force units in the United Kingdom.

Few of the men of this unit, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel N. W. Dingham of Pittsburgh, Pa., had any civilian cargo-loading experience but they were taught Army technique at a training school.

Daily World, Atlanta, Ga.

The men who load and unload the ever-increasing cargoes use skill and ingenuity in devising the ways to speed up their hazardous operation. One group mounted an unloading boom on a ship and made a hatch ready for unloading in the record time of 15 minutes. Another unit moved a hangar-dull of Army Air Force equipment in 23 hours before the scheduled time.

Atlanta Daily World 5-20-44

LOADED BY CRANES

Cargo ships are loaded by land cranes which swing the loads up and into the hold of the ship where they are stowed in a previously assigned position. Unloading is done by use of a five-ton boom or arm which has to be secured and rigged aboard the ship itself.

A typical ship loading problem is cited by First Sergeant Charles Nichols, 2350 Federal Street, Philadelphia, Pa., as proof that the Army stevedore has of necessity become a technician.

Twenty-one men are required to lead the batch of a ship. A sergeant and a corporal overse thee work, while a second corporal checks off each item as it is stored away.

Six of the men, down on the docks, prepare the equipment for loading. It may be in boxes or crates, and it may vary from a four ton truck to a jeep or an unwieldly 155 mm. field gun. Whatever it is, the loaders must handle it expertly to prevent accidents when the cranes or winches swing the load. Carelessness or improper timeing may result in heavy loss or injury. 5-20-44

HATCH TENDERS SIGNAL

Two hatch tenders stand on the deck guiding the sling-load of valuable cargo by their signals to the winch operator.

The winch man slowly lowers the sling into the hold where eight more men stow the cargo away. Their's is one of the most important operations, for with good stowage a ship can sail loaded to capacity, with no danger of capsizing due to shifting cargo in a rough sea.

There are other specialists in the unit who are as essential as the men directly involved in the loading operation. These are the blacksmiths and welders, the carpenters and coppersmiths who brace and reinforce the crates and boxes; the men who operate the "finger lifts" that raise cargo to the correct height for handling; drivers of the little tractors which move material about the docks; mechanics who service and repair equipment; and the riggers who set up ship loading equipment. Their work must be done before the cargo can be moved.

Veteran's Aid

Daily Worker - New York, N.Y.

— By WORLD WAR II VET —

A special American Legion rehabilitation committee is staying in Washington until the "GI Bill of Rights" is passed. The House and Senate compromise measure with most of the Rankin sting removed is expected to reach the President's desk any day.

Here are some of the major things the bill will do:

If a veteran should be out of a job during the first two years after discharge, he can draw $20 a week unemployment insurance for 52 weeks. 6-19-44

If his education was interrupted when he put on a uniform to enter the service before 25 years of age, he can get a year's schooling, and in some instances a full college education. The government will pay $500 for the year's tuition, laboratory fees, books and similar expenses, and $50 a month for subsistence, plus $25 for dependents.

If he needs a job, he can enlist the help of the United States Employment Service.

If he needs hospitalization, he can get it from the Veterans Administration. (The joint Congressional committee restored $500,000,000 for construction of additional hospital facilities.)

The bill also provides for private loans at four per cent interest, with the government guaranteeing 40 percent, up to $2,000 maximum, of the amount for individual loans for homes, farms and businesses.

* * *

The President has already signed two benefit bills granting increased compensation for veterans of two world wars, their widows and orphans.

H.R. 3356 has two sections. The first provides that monthly rates of compensation payable to veterans of both world wars for service incurred disability be increased by 15 percent, with the permanent and total rate going from $100 to $1,115 and the partial disability rates increased in proportion. 6-19-44

Section two of the measure applies to widows and orphans of veterans who had a service connected disability at time of death but died from other causes. The schedule of payment follows:

	New Rate	Old Rate
Widow without children	$35	$30
Widow and one child...	45	38
Each additional child...	5	4
One child, no widow....	18	15
Two children, no widow.	27	22
Three children, no widow.	36	30
Each additional child...	4	3

Where there is no widow payments to children are to be totalled and then equally divided among all.

H.R. 3377 provides for increased compensation for permanent and total non-service connected disability of veterans of both world wars except where a veteran has held permanent and total disability of veterans of both World Wars, except where a veteran has held permanent and total disability rating for 10 continuous years or has reached age 65, the payment is to be $60 instead of $50 a month. It had been only $40 a month. 6-19-44

A new $10 denomination "GI" War Bond, to sell for $7.50 has been authorized for sale to enlisted and commissioned military personnel. The new bond will not be sold to civilians. . . . Women dentists may now apply for commissions as dentists in the WAVES.

New Times

The Worker - New York, N.Y.

I AM quite certain that a sense of extra pride swept through the Negro population as they read this week's accounts of the participation of Negro American soldiers in the fighting in France. There were pictures in several newspapers showing Negro troops performing mopping up tasks in one of the French towns. Another story related how the Negro aviation squadron, under the command of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., on the Italian front, shot down five Nazi planes with the loss of only one of their own.

These events bring extra thrills to the Negro population and to millions of white democratic Americans, because extra pain is suffered over the discrimination which still exists against Negroes, and other minority groups, within our armed forces. 6-18-44

* * *

THE very fact that we have to single out this recognition of Negro citizens for special comment is itself a condemnation of the situation in which equal opportunities for Negroes to participate in the fighting are so rare.

When we arrive at a point in the armed forces and in civilian life, when no special attention is required for Negro Americans, then we can say that their full integration into the life of our nation as free citizens has become a normal procedure, no longer regarded as an exceptional fact. We can say, however, that progress is being made; for progress always appears on the stage of history as the exception.

* * *

THE participation of the Negroes in the march of the great Allied army of liberation through France is itself a weapon against the stubborn minority of officials who cling to the Hitlerite poison of "white supremacy" in our armed forces. It is the deed which accompanies the splendid effort of the War Department through the picture Negro Soldier to give a creditable accounting of Negro troops to the general public. But the progress of our country in bringing about equality within our armed forces has been and still is too slow, and too little.

See Post War Gains In Employment Of Negroes

Defender- Chicago, Ill
2-19-44

NEW YORK—The chances for greater industrial employment of Negroes during the post-war era than before the conflict were seen in a report of a study made public this week by the National Urban League.

Returns from 300 typical war plants in twenty-five states and 120 cities, covering 150,000 Negro workers indicate that the majority of plants plan to continue to hire Negroes after the war. In 253 plants the officials stated that on the basis of current experience with Negro workers, jobs would be assured them. Twelve plants had made no decisions and the remaining 35 declined to comment.

"Absenteeism" was listed as chief among the difficulties encountered by industries among the Negro personnel. Sixty-seven companies complained of a high rate of absenteeism, while other problems were: race friction in 21 plants; over-aggressiveness and "chip-on-shoulder" attitude in 11 plants; high turnover among Negroes in 13 plants.

Urban league industrial department workers who compiled the survey estimate that more than a million and a half Negroes are now employed in war production. A lag in the employment of Negro women was revealed, however, when it was estimated that only 4 per cent of women war workers are Negroes.

In 154 of the 300 plants Negroes are employed in skilled operations, as semi-skilled workers in 247, and as unskilled workers in all the plants. The league reported that there had been a rapid increase in the employment of Negro workers in war industries because of shrinking labor reserves, an increase likely to continue through 1944, and that Negro workers were being employed in more semi-skilled and skilled jobs than at any time in the past. 2-19-44

"It should not be taken for granted," the report stated, "that this highly desirable change in the status of Negro workers will take place without continued education in industrial relations and application of the highest democratic principle in the distribution of jobs.

"A vigorous program of workers education and community education is needed to offset the explosive emotional reactions resulting from the sudden shifts in population and the rapid changes in the employment status of Negro and white workers.

"Management-labor committees working with Government agencies in the field of industrial relations can be profitably utilized in the further development of good labor relations, worker morale and maximum efficiency of Negro workers."

Between The Lines

All Kansas City, Missouri 2-11-44

By Gordon Hancock

SOUTHERN NEGRO DOING HIS SHARE OF FIGHTING—AND EFFECTIVELY

The story goes that a train was making up for a trip through the deep South and the regular porter could not be found. A worker about the yards was called to dress and make ready for the trip. This he did with all enthusiasm; and with his fine coat of blue and silver buttons he presented a comely picture.

When the train had pulled out and well on its way, the new porter realized that he did not know the stations along the way and felt a keen sense of embarrassment.

But he was resourceful as porters often are, and when the train was pulling into a station, he remained far in the rear until the conductor himself had called the station as conductors are wont to do.

After hearing the station called but unable to exactly understand the name the porter—he must have been colored as porters in the South ordinarily are—with great gusto passed through the car and yelled, "The same thing and I ain't going to say it no more."

The Negro got by handsomely because of his resourcefulness in not divulging that he was totally ignorant of the names of the many stations. He got by. The point here is that Negroes everywhere want the same thing in this country.

The attempt to prove that northern Negroes want more than southern Negroes lacks pith and point. As a matter of fact most of the Negroes in the North who are most clamorous for full citizenship are Negroes from the South. Still there seems to be some misgivings about the ambitions and aspirations of the southern Negroes.

When the Negroes met in Durham in 1942, there was great fear that they might not make a straightforward statement. Many northern Negroes feared this and many southern Negroes, but withal the statement provoked just the reaction that was desired. It stirred the white South to action.

While we are just beginning to function, some things have already transpired that showed the wisdom of the Durham group. It succeeded in getting segregation attacked by a white southerner which has provoked such favorable reaction throughout the nation.

It succeeded in eliciting from Governor Darden of Virginia, one of the most far-reaching programs ever to be launched by a southern state, in that it is a studied attempt to integrate the Negro into the social and economic life of the states. Governor Darden was one of the signers of the Atlanta statement which was a response to the Durham manifest.

In spite of the heroic efforts being made, there are those who fear that Negroes are not putting up a "solid front" when the southern Negroes launch a movement to relieve the immediate pressures peculiar to the South.

Litigation has its place in our struggle. The N.A.A.C.P is being supported to take care of this part of the fight. But litigation cannot tell the whole story.

There are whites of the South who want to cooperate. The Southern Regional council in the process of organization attempts to provide ways and means and occasions whereby the cooperative whites and cooperative Negroes may really and truly cooperate. Litigation alone will not achieve all the desired results, for after 30 years we are still far from the Promised Land.

It takes litigation and cooperation to attain unto the objectives which the Negro is seeking. Strangely enough we have the N.A.A.C.P., a fighting organization, and the National Urban League, a cooperating organization, functioning from New York throughout the country. Nobody ever says they are breaking the "solid front" of Negroes.

We have in New York city four or five well-defined organizations and movements looking forward to interracial anticipation. The Powell group, the Randolph group, the Yergan group, the N. A. A. C. P., and other groups. Nobody contends that they are breaking the Negro's "solid front." It is clear that much of their activity is duplicatory, but all are doing their bit.

In Richmond, we have two groups today doing what the N.A.A.C.P. did yesterday. It is not claimed that they are breaking the Negro's "solid front." The soldiers of this country are scattered everywhere fighting this way and that, but nobody feels that they are breaking the nation's "solid front" because they all are not at one place and are not engaged in the same activities.

There are 48 states in the Union but this is no proof that our national front is not solid. Why should it then be supposed that by rolling up his sleeves to do a little fighting himself the Southern Negro must be suspected of breaking the "solid front" of Negroes when he is working for the same thing? Is this just another way of saying that the southern Negro lacks manhood?

Howard University President Says In Boston Speech

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

Tells Forum Hearers "The Negro Has Received His Nastiest Treatment During the Past Five Years"

2-26-44

BOSTON, Mass.—(ANP)—Speaking on the subject of the "Negro and Our National Destiny," Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard university, told a capacity audience at the Ford Hall forum on Sunday, February 13, that the Negro had been treated nastier in the past five years than ever before in history, and that as a result, the morale of the Negro was at its worse stage since emancipation.

The Negro was fighting the war with guns and not with his soul, because he could not justify his entire reasons for fighting," he said. "This low morale of the Negro is even contagious to the fringe of white peoples who are friends of the Negro, because at the present time they are actually unable to tell just what the Negro is thinking."

FORSEES FASCISM

Johnson also predicted that if the liberal forces in the United States do not muster more strength we will turn fascist within the next ten years. As a result we will see the darker peoples of China, India and Russia pitted against the United States in a fight to the finish.

He also pointed out that the presence of the Negro affects the mentality, the structure of institutions, and the possibility of those institutions in the United States. "In both of the two major crises in American history the Negro has been the determinative factor," said the speaker. "In the formation of the Union and the constitution, there was a compromise on the fundamental basis of liberty in order to help the South. This tragic mistake in giving the South control over the slaves may yet determine our destiny."

RESULTS OF SLAVERY

It is because of this fact that whites are today sending their sons to battle in disproportionate numbers. In the second crisis, the Civil war, Johnson pointed out how the slaveholders of the South and the capitalists of the New England section nearly agreed in 1861 to make slavery a permanent institution.

Today, America faces its third crisis and the American Negro plays a most important role in it. "Within the memory of living persons with grey hair the United States will have made the most determinative change in its history.

America will either be a world order or go down in history as morally unjust." He pointed out how Britain has dominated her subject peoples, and how we were looking forward to Hitler to offset the communist resolution. How we are on the side of Soviet Russia and very restless there. He pointed out how Japan was using the treatment of the American Negro to propagandize the dark folks of the world.

NEGROES WANT WAR TO CONTINUE 2-26-44

Johnson also stated that he could hate to see it happen but he and many other Negroes feel that "it would be best to fight for five or ten years more in order for the whites of the United States to put their body and soul in the fight rather than just their body." He related how many colored people are praying that the whites have to keep fighting for many more years so that, maybe, at last they will let our people go free." He admitted that they had not heard a prayer like that but he was sure that they were being prayed.

He pointed out that fascism had to be beaten in our hearts and institutions. "The emotional contempt of one-fourth of America, the working population, against the Negro is the most important crowbar to prevent the solidarity of the country. In one thrust hence, one-ninth of the labor power is cut off by the working man." He pointed out how the CIO had made inroads into this field of accepting Negro on equality basis.

After pointing to the coming fight between China, India and Russia against the United States, he predicted the crushing of the Negro first, the poor Southern whites next, then the Jews and then all labor, unless the forces of liberalism mustered additional quick strength.

apostles of greed and racial arrogance. Lead us to the saving of our country, and with our sister nations into a world unity that will spell a sure peace—a peace invulnerable to the schemings of unworthy men and , peace that will let all men live in freedom, reaping the just regards of their honest toil. Thy will be done, Almighty God."

Radio pictures from London show a Negro gun crew on D-Day. One of the men is identified as Ferrell Browning of Dallas, Texas, at his job as shell man at a five-inch naval gun.

Negro Gunners Seen In D-Day Invasion Photos

World-Memphis, Tenn.
6-9-44

President Leads Nation In Prayer

WASHINGTON — D-Day, like death itself, expected by everyone but dreaded and feared on arrival, has come.

The invasion brought from Congressman Dawson, only Negro member of the House of Representatives, the following statement:

"D-Day, long expected and long awaited. The President led the nation in prayer which ended with this plea: "With thy blessings we shall overcome the unholy forces of many nations prevail over the unholy forces of our enemy. Help us to conquer the Right in the forefront, manning guns on the boats which made possible, and many races of many of the landings possible, and composed of men many races Negro fighting men. Hitler's long prepared fortress of

For War Success

By HARRY S. McALPIN
(Washington Bureau of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

See Post War Gains In Employment Of Negroes

Defender- Chicago, Ill
2-19-44

NEW YORK—The chances for greater industrial employment of Negroes during the post-war era than before the conflict were seen in a report of a study made public this week by the National Urban League.

Returns from 300 typical war plants in twenty-five states and 120 cities, covering 150,000 Negro workers indicate that the majority of plants plan to continue to hire Negroes after the war. In 253 plants the officials stated that on the basis of current experience with Negro workers, jobs would be assured them. Twelve plants had made no decisions and the remaining 35 declined to comment.

"Absenteeism" was listed as chief among the difficulties encountered by industries among the Negro personnel. Sixty-seven companies complained of a high rate of absenteeism, while other problems were: race friction in 21 plants; over-aggressiveness and "chip-on-shoulder" attitude in 11 plants; high turnover among Negroes in 13 plants.

Urban league industrial department workers who compiled the survey estimate that more than a million and a half Negroes are now employed in war production. A lag in the employment of Negro women was revealed, however, when it was estimated that only 4 per cent of women war workers are Negroes.

In 154 of the 300 plants Negroes are employed in skilled operations, as semi-skilled workers in 247, and as unskilled workers in all the plants. The league reported that there had been a rapid increase in the employment of Negro workers in war industries because of shrinking labor reserves, an increase likely to continue through 1944, and that Negro workers were being employed in more semi-skilled and skilled jobs than at any time in the past.

2-19-44

"It should not be taken for granted," the report stated, "that this highly desirable change in the status of Negro workers will take place without continued education in industrial relations and application of the highest democratic principle in the distribution of jobs.

"A vigorous program of workers' education and community education is needed to offset the explosive emotional reactions resulting from the sudden shifts in population and the rapid changes in the employment status of Negro and white workers.

"Management-labor committees working with Government agencies in the field of industrial relations can be profitably utilized in the further development of good labor relations, worker morale and maximum efficiency of Negro workers."

Between The Lines

All Kansas City, Missouri
2-11-'44

Gordon Hancock

SOUTHERN NEGRO DOING HIS SHARE OF FIGHTING—AND EFFECTIVELY

The story goes that a train was making up for a trip through the deep South and the regular porter could not be found. A worker about the yards was called to dress and make ready for the trip. This he did with all enthusiasm; and with his fine coat of blue and silver buttons he presented a comely picture.

When the train had pulled out and well on its way, the new porter realized that he did not know the stations along the way and felt a keen sense of embarrassment.

But he was resourceful as porters often are, and when the train was pulling into a station, he remained far in the rear until the conductor himself had called the station as conductors are wont to do.

After hearing the station called but unable to exactly understand the name the porter—he must have been colored as porters in the South ordinarily are—with great gusto passed through the car and yelled, "The same thing and I ain't going to say it no more."

The Negro got by handsomely because of his resourcefulness in not divulging that he was totally ignorant of the names of the many stations. He got by. The point here is that Negroes everywhere want the same thing in this country.

The attempt to prove that northern Negroes want more than southern Negroes lacks pith and point. As a matter of fact most of the Negroes in the North who are most clamorous for full citizenship are Negroes from the South. Still there seems to be some misgivings about the ambitions and aspirations of the southern Negroes.

When the Negroes met in Durham in 1942, there was great fear that they might not make a straightforward statement. Many northern Negroes feared this and many southern Negroes, but withal the statement provoked just the reaction that was desired. It stirred the white South to action.

While we are just beginning to function, some things have already transpired that showed the wisdom of the Durham group. It succeeded in getting segregation attacked by a white southerner which has provoked such favorable reaction throughout the nation.

It succeeded in eliciting from Governor Darden of Virginia, one of the most far-reaching programs ever to be launched by a southern state, in that it is a studied attempt to integrate the Negro into the social and economic life of the states. Governor Darden was one of the signers of the Atlanta statement which was a response to the Durham manifest.

In spite of the heroic efforts being made, there are those who fear that Negroes are not putting up a "solid front" when the southern Negroes launch a movement to relieve the immediate pressures peculiar to the South.

Litigation has its place in our struggle. The N.A.A.C.P is being supported to take care of this part of the fight. But litigation cannot tell the whole story.

There are whites of the South who want to cooperate. The Southern Regional council in the process of organization attempts to provide ways and means and occasions whereby the cooperative whites and cooperative Negroes may really and truly cooperate. Litigation alone will not achieve all the desired results, for after 30 years we are still far from the Promised Land.

It takes litigation and cooperation to attain unto the objectives which the Negro is seeking. Strangely enough we have the N.A.A.C.P., a fighting organization, and the National Urban League, a cooperating organization, functioning from New York throughout the country. Nobody ever says they are breaking the "solid front" of Negroes.

We have in New York city four or five well-defined organizations and movements looking forward to interracial anticipation. The Powell group, the Randolph group, the Yergan group, the N. A. A. C. P., and other groups. Nobody contends that they are breaking the Negro's "solid front." It is clear that much of their activity is duplicatory, but all are doing their bit.

In Richmond, we have two groups today doing what the N.A.A.C.P. did yesterday. It is not claimed that they are breaking the Negro's "solid front." The soldiers of this country are scattered everywhere fighting this way and that, but nobody feels that they are breaking the nation's "solid front" because they all are not at one place and are not engaged in the same activities.

There are 48 states in the Union but this is no proof that our national front is not solid. Why should it then be supposed that by rolling up his sleeves to do a little fighting himself the Southern Negro must be suspected of breaking the "solid front" of Negroes when he is working for the same thing? Is this just another way of saying that the southern Negro lacks manhood?

Howard University President Says In Boston Speech

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

Tells Forum Hearers "The Negro Has Received His Nastiest Treatment During the Past Five Years"

2-26-44

BOSTON, Mass.—(ANP)—Speaking on the subject of the "Negro and Our National Destiny," Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard university, told a capacity audience at the Ford Hall forum on Sunday, February 13, that the Negro had been treated nastier in the past five years than ever before in history, and that as a result, the morale of the Negro was at its worse stage since emancipation.

The Negro was fighting the war with guns and not with his soul, because he could not justify his entire reasons for fighting," he said. "This low morale of the Negro is even contagious to the fringe of white peoples who are friends of the Negro, because at the present time they are actually unable to tell just what the Negro is thinking."

FORSEES FASCISM

Johnson also predicted that if the liberal forces in the United States do not muster more strength we will turn fascist within the next ten years. As a result we will see the darker peoples of China, India and Russia pitted against the United States in a fight to the finish.

He also pointed out that the presence of the Negro affects the mentality, the structure of institutions, and the possibility of those institutions in the United States. "In both of the two major crises in American history the Negro has been the determinative factor," said the speaker. "In the formation of the Union and the constitution, there was a compromise on the fundamental basis of liberty in order to help the South. This tragic mistake in giving the South control over the slaves may yet determine our destiny."

RESULTS OF SLAVERY

It is because of this fact that whites are today sending their sons to battle in disproportionate numbers. In the second crisis, the Civil war, Johnson pointed out how the slaveholders of the South and the capitalists of the New England section nearly agreed in 1861 to make slavery a permanent institution.

Today, America faces its third crisis and the American Negro plays a most important role in it. "Within the memory of living persons with grey hair the United States will have made the most determinative change in its history.

America will either be a world order or go down in history as morally unjust." He pointed out how Britain has dominated her subject peoples, and how we were looking forward to Hitler to offset the communist resolution. How we are on the side of Soviet Russia and very restless there. He pointed out how Japan was using the treatment of the American Negro to propagandize the dark folks of the world.

NEGROES WANT WAR TO CONTINUE

2-26-44

Johnson also stated that he could hate to see it happen but he and many other Negroes feel that "it would be best to fight for five or ten years more in order for the whites of the United States to put their body and soul in the fight rather than just their body." He related how many colored people are praying that the whites have to keep fighting for many more years so that, maybe, at last they will let our people go free." He admitted that they had not heard a prayer like that but he was sure that they were being prayed.

He pointed out that fascism had to be beaten in our hearts and institutions. "The emotional contempt of one-fourth of America, the working population, against the Negro is the most important crowbar to prevent the solidarity of the country. In one thrust hence, one-ninth of the labor power is cut off by the working man." He pointed out how the CIO had made inroads into this field of accepting Negro on equality basis.

After pointing to the coming fight between China, India and Russia against the United States, he predicted the crushing of the Negro first, the poor Southern whites next, then the Jews and then all labor, unless the forces of liberalism mustered additional quick strength.

apostles of greed and racial arrogance. Lead us to the saving of our country, and with our sister nations into a world unity that will spell a sure peace—a peace invulnerable to the schemings of unworthy men and a peace that will let all men live in freedom, reaping the just regards of their honest toil. Thy will be done, Almighty God."

Radio pictures from London on D-Day show a Negro gun crew on the vanguard. Many American boys, black and white, are identified as Ferrell Browning of Dallas, Texas, at his job as shell man at a five-inch naval gun.

Negro Gunners For War Success

By HARRY S. McALPIN
(Washington Bureau of Atlanta Daily World and NNPA)

WASHINGTON — D-Day, like death itself, expected by everyone but dreaded and feared on arrival, has come.

The invasion brought from London reports of the action. One of the menare in the vanguard. Many Negro boys are identified for action. Ferrell Browning of Dallas, Texas, at his job as shell man at a five-inch naval gun.

Right in the forefront, manning guns on the boats which brought many of the landings possible, and many races are America's Negro fighting men. Hitler's long prepared fortress of our enemy. Help us to conquer the World-Wide Negro Gunners Seen In D-Day Invasion Photos

Memphis, Tenn.
6-9-44

President Leads Nation In Prayer

On the evening of D-Day, President Roosevelt led the nation in prayer which ended with this plea: "With thy blessings we shall prevail over the unholy forces of our enemy. Help us to conquer the

"D-Day, long expected and long feared, is here. The Allied forces, composed of men of many nations, prevail over the landings possible, and many races

47n-1944

Race And Color Declared World Problems At Ten-Day Institute For An Enduring Peace

N.Y., N.Y. July 22, 1944

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio—Race and color are not local problems or United States problems but world problems. This was the conclusion of over thirty speakers and roundtable leaders at the ten-day Institute on Conditions for an Enduring Peace on the Antioch College campus, July 5 - 15.

Speakers like Dr. Rayford W. Logan, of Howard University; President Charles Wesley, of Wilberforce; the corresponedent and newspaperman, William Henry Chamberlin; Haridas Muzumdar, the friend and biographer of Gandhi; and Richard J. Walsh, the editor of ASIA, were unanimous in their condemnation of racial discrimination and its accompanying evils. — imperialism and the empire system.

In fact, Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, engineer and expert on the small community, and William Henry Chamberlin agreed that color may well be the cause of World War III.

"Race discrimination, imbedded in the feelings and attitudes of Americans, deeply wounds the dignity and self-respect of those discriminated against. More than a thousand million men of color may unite on that issue as soon as they have mastered technology and large-scale administration," Dr. Morgan said July 7 in his address on the small community.

Mr. Chamberlin, in a panel on "Color as a World Problem" the same day declared, "The only approach to the problem of color and race discrimination in the world is unqualified admission of racial equality. Unless this approach is adopted the upshot could very well be a third world war, when the peoples of India and China acquire sufficient technology to meet the Western peoples on equal terms."

7-22-44

Two-fold Solution

The solution to the prblem, all speakers agreed, is two-fold. The first is working on the problem of race relations in America — "specifically," Mr. Chamberlain said, "abolishing immigration laws excluding Orientals by reason of race or color, and admitting these peoples by quota, like the rest of the world. It means getting rid of Jim Crowism, and of our poll tax laws."

President Wesley of Wilberforce pointed out that while "once we in this country could sit behind our oceans and not care what others thought," today, with the world so closely united, "our treatment of colored people in America could be a world scandal, affecting our international relations." And Dr. Rayford W. Logan, in his speech July 10 on "The Good Neighbor Policy," pointed out that one of the greatest obstacles in the way of such a policy "is our failure to live up to the ideals of the Declaration of Independence and the clear intent of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments."

The second part of the problem consists in getting rid of the empire system, which Mr. Chamberlin called "that great bulwark of belief in racial superiority." While much work in education to overcome prejudice and ignorance would remain to be done, Mr. Chamberlin thought, "once imperialism was gone, those prejudices would be at least within the reach of education, and not artificially maintained." Imperialism, declared Mr. Chamberlin, is outdated.

7-22-44

Dr. Logan reminded the Institute, however, that the problem of color is not a simple one. While slavery may at first have been only economic inequality, the resulting rationalization that Negroes were enslaved because they were inferior has taken firm root. Today this idea of inferiority is entrenched "in our North as well as in our South, in Europe, Latin America, Asia, and Africa."

Negro Troops Attack Italian War Prisoners

Tribune - Chicago, Ill.

8-16-44

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 15 (AP).—Twenty-four Italians, members of a service unit at Fort Lawton, were injured in an attack by Negro troops last night, the army's Seattle port of embarkation demand, announced today.

The body of one Italian was later found hanging from a nearby tree.

Fort Lawton is a unit of the port of embarkation command and the Italian service unit, made up of former prisoners of war who pledged allegiance to the allied cause, was barracked there.

The statement, which was the only information available tonight, said the attack occurred about midnight Monday and lasted but a few minutes. The Negroes, who attacked with rocks, were not identified except that they were soldiers.

8-16-44

Several Attackers Hurt.

All of the injured Italians were taken to the hospital. Several of the attackers were less seriously hurt.

The statement did not say that the Italian found hanged, whose name was Gughielmo Olivanta, was hanged by the attacking party.

The port of embarkation statement said:

"At about midnight Monday, Aug. 14, a number of Negro soldiers raided the barracks of the Italian service unit at Fort Lawton while members of the unit were sleeping.

"In the ensuing melee, which lasted only a few minutes, 24 Italians were injured and hospitalized. Several of the attacking soldiers were less seriously hurt.

"The attackers carried rocks which they picked up on the ground by the barracks.

8-16-44

Found Hanging from Tree.

"A short time following the fight the body of one of the Italian soldiers was found anging from a near-by tree. He was identified as Gughielmo Olivanta. A phase of the investigation will be to determine whether this could have been suicide.

"The post authorities placed the attacking soldiers under arrest and launched an immediate investigation. They promised disciplinary action and said no further information would be available until the investigation was complete.

"The Italian service unit has been at Fort Lawton for several months and there has been no previous trouble or appearance of ill will on the part of military personnel at the post. The unit is made up of volunteers who have been carefully screened and found to be neither pro-Nazi nor pro-Fascist. They are used in various labor capacities at the fort."

Army Scatters Personnel Of 372nd Regiment

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

8-20-44

CAMP BRECKENRIDGE, Ky.—(ANP)—Another crack Negro regiment has been decimated. 1100 men of the 372D regiment commanded by Col. Ned Gourdain have been sent to Ft. Huachuca to bolster up the 92d division. With them went 79 officers, the policy being apparently to outfit the regiments with all Negro officers up to and including the positions of first lieutenant. This new policy was followed with the 93d division which was held up at the port of embarkment while Negro officers were rushed to the West coast to replace white lieutenants who were said to have decided suddenly that they preferred not to command Negro troops abroad.

8-21-44

Reports here are that the condition of the 92d was not as good as was desired. The 372d was composed principally of men who by their residence in the North and East were better able to meet the requirements of combat training than some of the less fortunate draftees who were in the division. The fine seasoning and experience which the men of the 372d have had will, it is felt, help to bring the 92d up to par for POR. Rumors persist that the division may see action soon.

Negro Soldiers Give Account

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower has given citations to two Negro units for their conspicuous part in D-Day operations, is far off Normandy.

8-17-44

The one was an anti-aircraft battalion which landed "under artillery, machine-gun and rifle fire" and despite losses, carried out its mission with courage and determination.

The other was a quartermaster company, which also went ashore under fire, salvaged most of its equipment, and within three days had 90 per cent of its vehicles operating on a twenty-four hour basis.

"I commend you and your officers," said General Eisenhower in reading the citations, "for your fine efforts which have merited the praise of all who observed it. And I want you to know that I appreciate your splendid effort and work."

Again,, President Roosevelt in presenting the Distinguished Service Medal, the highest award to a merchant seaman, to Fred C. Archibald of Columbia, S. C. said: "The President of the United States takes pleasure in presenting the Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal to you for service in the line of duty."

8-17-44

Only 70 such medals have been awarded by Congress in 1939.

In World War I there were approximately 400,000 Negro soldiers and 1,200 officers. In the present conflict there are, as of February 1943, approximately 500,000 Negro soldiers and approximately 3,000 Negro officers, an increase of abut 50 per cent over the first World War. There have been 2,686 Negro officers graduated from the officers training schools.

There were no Wacs in World War I. Colored women have been admitted to training and service in the Women's Army Corps in World War II. But they are yet to gain admission into service with the WAVES and SPARS and Marines.

Despite this commendable record of heroism on the part of soldiers in many war theatres, irritating prejudice and injustice continue to subject them to narrow, jim-crow limitations and mistreatment, both in the actual service and by petty civilian officers and bus drivers. Indeed, the mistreatment of the Negro soldier has become so objectionable and disgraceful that both the Republican and Democratic party platforms have found it necessary to make it, if not first, certainly the chief concern and pledge for the Negro vote. Not even a permanent

8-17-44

Fair Employment Practice Committee, as vital and urgent as that is, holds as important a place for solution in the heart of the Negro voters as does this phase of his national grievance.

Negroes Want Freedom Too, While Whites Are Learning Fast

Daily Worker N.Y., N.Y. 8-14-44

By EUGENE GORDON

(First of a Series)

The South, owing to transformations wrought universally by a war of national liberation is today known as that section of our country whose people and ways are undergoing a change of historic importance. 8-14-44

The unprecedented growth of the trade union movement there is credited with much of this change.

My picture was procured through interviewing Negro and white persons in key positions; through interviewing Negro and white persons of whatever station and wherever found; by observing and listening, recording faithfully everything seen, heard and read.

Negro and white labor leaders, informed of my mission, described conditions in shops and the work of their unions. Heads of NAACP and of Urban League branches and of the Southern Negro Youth Congress gave facts and statistics. Negro and white editors expressed opinions; and educators, preachers, politicians and city and country officials provided information.

CROSS-SECTION

Rank and file trade-unionists unburdened themselves; men and women on trains, buses and streetcars and at home talked as to a friend. 8-14-44

I was occasionally told that both Negro and white Southerners were apathetic about the war. I found few supporting facts.

BUYING WAR BONDS

On the contrary, the annual convention of 43 Negro insurance enterprises, held in Louisville June 20-23, sold, at an open meeting one night, $2,763,000 of war bonds. The Atlanta Life Insurance Co. bought $600,000 worth; South Carolina Life took $500,000. Each of two local companies purchased $100,000 worth.

"History is being made," the meeting chairman said, amid applause. "Member companies spent more than $3,000,000 for bonds in 1943; this year we'll buy $4,000,000 worth."

These U. S. Negro troops, photographed in a large shed at an undisclosed port of embarkation, are waiting to board a transport for duty overseas. Their smiles say that they're raring to take a crack at the enemy.

The second example is that of most Southern cities during the 5th war loan drive. Practically every merchant on Canal St., New Orleans—to cite a typical case—contributed not only to special street displays, but put up bond-selling slogans in his windows and above his entrance

"Any change in Negro-white relations as a result of the war?" I asked Tony Duncan, circulation manager of the Louisville Defender.

50 PERCENT ADVANCE

Yes, he said. Louisville Negroes in the first place, had progressed "as much as or more than 50 percent" since Pearl Harbor. Negroes now have jobs "they could hardly have bought' before the war. He added:

"We have had more and better opportunities than ever before in our country The manpower shortage has given the Negro a better break in the South. We'll hold most of these gains when peace comes."

The war has thrown the Negro and white people together in such a way, he thought, as to make for "better acquaintanceship."

Francis O. Bowers, elderly Negro captain of hotel waiters, en route from Memphis to Little Rock, said h. had eight nephews, one son and a brother in the army. He should have been there himself, he said, he being the best shot in the family. 8-14-44

FAVOR THE WAR

"The majority of Negro people down here," Bowers said, "favor the war and know what they're fighting for.'

I did well not to conclude, from these random examples, that Negroes in the South were unanimously for the war.

A Negro preacher, talking glibly to a group of soldiers and sailors in the Houston-bound jimcrow car about the "third world war," said the United States and Britain would "line up against the Indian people, Japan and Russia."

A sergeant, ex-highschool principal going home on leave, praised the minister's assertion that Negro soldiers and sailors would accept dishonorable discharge "right now," just to get out.

"I don't know what I'm fighting for," the sergeant said. "Nobody else knows.'

Neither soldiers nor sailors, sitting by, contradicted him.

A Negro soldier in the Nashville railroad station saw the Pullman conductor confiscate my reservation, bought earlier that day through a friend, thus forcing me to ride overnight to Memphis in a day coach. 8-14-44

The soldier said to me, in a quiet aside:

"And that's what I'm fighting for! Democracy!"

"Dear old Memphis!" I exclaimed to a Red Cap, later. "How are things here?'

"Rotten, brother."

"See any signs of improvement in relations between Negro and white?" 8-14-44

"Hell, no," he said. "These white folks mean as the devil and the Negro mad all the time."

"Anything being done, as far as you know, by any white people, to improve conditions? I mean, in any organized way."

He thought for a moment.

"Yes, something like that is being done. The CIOs. Them whites're really trying to do something."

"You belong to a union?" I asked.

"Oh, sure! Transport Workers, CIO."

"Fine! I'm a CIO-union man myself. Newspaper Guild."

"Sure nuf?"

We shook hands.

Negro Truck Drivers Charge Nazis With Jungle Knives

Washington Post 8-2-44

By Henry T. Gorrell

With the American Forces in France, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—American Negro truck drivers, wielding jungle knives, charged into the fighting line today and started carving up the Germans with enthusiasm and inspiring efficiency in a savage melee north of Percy.

For three days crack German armored and infantry forces had been trying vainly to wedge into our lines and split our front. Attacks and counterattacks became steadily fiercer.

The Germans were trying to hold Percy and Tessy-sur-Vire.

They were fighting with no holds barred, and even their company clerks and cooks were thrown into the line.

The Negro truck drivers heard certainly did not show it and it their guns, leadi

Into Action Without Orders

"We didn't tell them to fight," a colonel said. "They just found the Germans were close up and they started in. Their very appearance scared the daylights out of the Germans. Now when the Krauts see one of them they run like hell."

The Negroes went charging into the hedgerows, looking for Germans, in the manner of the famous Senegalese, and Goon units of Tunisian fame.

Their favorite weapon is a strictly personal one—the jungle knife. It has a startlingly big blade, like a giant butcher knife.

If they were frightened they by throwing grenades and shooting could question them," Brazzard said.

believe that a big attack is on. One of the units is commanded by Capt. Howard C. Brazzard, Tucson, Ariz. 8-2-44 didn't interfere with their carving. 8-2-44

Yanks, Nazis Get Mixed Up

The fighting around here has been wild, with Americans getting mixed up at night and finding it out at dawn.

Each night infantry commando units go out to wreck German tanks with sticky bombs and to kill Germans silently by strangling piano wire.

These units are specially equipped and they wear the commando stocking cap.

Eight men are picked from each company. They are to get them anywhere, with bazookas the other night no fatigue or kitchen and bayoneted its crew as they do their stuff at night emerged.

"My only regret is that most of the Germans were dead before we command posts and the Germans could question them," Brazzard said.

47n-1944

WORLD VIEW

Defender — Chicago, Ill. 4-22-44

By JOHN ROBERT BADGER

Pattern of Post War Asia

Chicago

WITH EACH yard of advance by our forces in the Pacific theater, the complexity of the colonial question increases. For our boys of the 24th Infantry, whose exploits on Bougainville Island were so graphically described for DEFENDER readers by Correspondent Fletcher P. Martin, this question increasingly narrows down to a more direct one—"For what are we fighting?"

Not only Negro-American troops are asking this question. It is a question the common men of every Allied army are asking. And both the military and political leaders of the Allied peoples are beginning to realize that the answer to this question will greatly influence the Allied soldiers' morale. Cynics make bad soldiers. A good fighting man has to believe he is fighting for something important, something worth bleeding and dying for.

So quite a debate is beginning over the colonial question in Asia. Are the Allied armies really armies of liberation? Will they bring liberty to the peoples of Asia? Or will they be instruments for the restoration of western imperialism's control over those peoples?

A Realistic Approach

4-22-44

A GOOD introduction to this debate is contained in the February 1 Report of the Foreign Policy Association, entitled "Independence for Colonial Asia—The Cost to the Western World." Written by Lawrence K. Rosinger, the Report begins with an analysis of the question: do colonies pay?

This is a realistic approach, admittedly, since only the politically naive today cling to the belief that state policies are motivated by ethical or idealistic considerations. Mr. Rossinger gets down to brass tacks by examining the losses or gains of colonial change in terms of materialistic interests of the ruling powers. His findings are not comforting.

"The Western colonial powers at present have a huge stake in their empires—especially in colonial Asia, which in population, resources, investment and trade is the major part of the colonial world," he writes. And he proceeds to analyze what each individual colony has meant to the imperialist interests, which are also the ruling political cliques, within the metropolitan country. His conclusion is that in terms of profit, prestige, and political power, these ruling political cliques have a vast interest in retaining the colonies.

4-22-44

However Mr. Rosinger is not blind to the enormous world changes in class and national and state relations which will inevitably exercise potent influence on the status of colonial Asia. These changes and the forces they have engendered must be reckoned with.

". . . it seems very doubtful that Asia can ever resume its past colonial role in Western economy, even though it may experience a partial recovery," writes Rosinger, adding: "The problem will be accentuated by the rise of colonial nationalism" . . . and . . . "Japanese propaganda against Western control will have a lasting influence . . ."

The West Must Compromise

HENCE, A dilemma confronts the West: "What will it be worth to the metropolitan countries 'to hold their own' if what they hold tends to grow less valuable, as well as more difficult to retain?"

The way out of this dilemma, Mr. Rosinger believes will be a way that will make it possible for Allied armies really to become liberating armies. It does not amount to a complete abandonment of colonialism. Some forms of colonial control will remain. But the West will have to compromise, and the forces it sets in motion through this compromise must inevitably lead ultimately to complete independence for the peoples of Asia.

"The principal wealth of the 'gorgeous East' lies not in its raw materials as such but in its vast populations," he writes, "which are capable of furnishing unprecedented opportunities for investment and trade PROVIDED THAT STANDARDS OF LIVING ARE RAISED." (Rosinger's emphasis. —JRB.)

4-22-44

Thus . . . "the colonial market can enter a new phase of development only by ceasing to be colonial, for to the extent that the metropolitan countries promote desirable economic changes, they will also be encouraging the growth of national consciousness."

This view, I believe, is a sound one. What it boils down to is the fact that Western imperialism, perhaps against its will and its ultimate interests, is actually compelled to act as a liberating force. And our boys on Bougainville are really an army of liberation.

DEMOCRACY WORKS

Tribune — Savannah, Ga. 9-7-44

The Fair Employment Committee and the War Department Directive doing away with segregation in the Armed forces and on government property, and property under government control, are means for implementing democracy in these special areas. They are by no means unusual for the purpose. In other well known cases, it has taken similar action to secure certain rights to citizens and protect them in the exercise of them. And if the political leaders would let the common run of people alone, and, or would advise them to abide by the law and spirit of democracy, the trouble they imagine, more or less wishfully, will never occur. Their attitudes suggest trouble. To insist that rules, directives and regulations, designed to make democracy functional in a democratic country, is blatant insincerity, to say the least.

There are numerous instances of the races working together, fighting together, doing a good job at it, without trouble, without the question of merely associating together ever arising. Democracy will work if politicians will let it.

92nd Div. Faces Bitterest Fight of Italian Campaign

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

By ART CARTER

9-30-44

AFRO War Correspondents with U.S. Troops in Italy

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

FIFTH ARMY FRONT IN ITALY — (By Cable) — Hacking their way yard by yard against murderous mortar and artillery fire, troops of the 92nd Division have pushed some miles past Lucca, a town of 82,000 population, which they liberated last week, and are thrusting forward in an attempt to pierce the Gothic line in their sector of the Fifth Army front.

That their objective is a terrific one is admitted by officials, who described the current fighting as "some of the bitterest of the Italian campaign."

Fortifications Tough

On an inspection tour of torn Gothic fortifications which other Fifth Army troops smashed along a six-mile mountain area Wednesday, evidences of well-prepared hard-to-crack fortresses were plainly visible.

9-30-44

Only combined air, artillery and mortar attacks, plus a stubborn, determined, uphill struggle by infantry, could have done the job, and troops of the 92nd are now battling to achieve similar results.

Nazis Had Advantage

As has been the situation since they launched their attack across the Arno River twenty-six days ago, both prepared defensive works and the terrain have afforded the Germans considerable protection, as well as advantageous fields of fire.

These multiple defenses include concrete pillboxes and individual fortresses, often strengthened by layers of rock and wood and other shell-resistant materials—all well camouflaged.

I observed closely the structure of these fortifications and it is a wonder that any gains have been made against them, though it is also obvious that the Germans cannot long stand the heavy Allied artillery pounding.

Enemy Dead Left Behind

All along the road to the front, German dead lay stinking beside the rain-soaked highway, their faces turning green with rot and their bodies stretched in a dozen grotesque patterns.

9-30-44

In a house which the enemy held only six hours before, another dozen were sprawled in a helpless heap among the debris, while only a few yards away, stacked high, were stores of ammunition, discarded clothing, black bread, rolls, and cheese left by the retreating soldiers.

At gun emplacements where two had fallen, one still clutched a bullet-riddled diary, while the other, now cold and stiff, held a death grip on his rifle.

Resistance Stubborn

The patch of tall pines which served as natural camouflage for their dugouts were split and twisted like the aftermath of a giant hurricane; yet, Jerry still fought desperately, punching hard with artillery and mortar shells.

As we approached the aforementioned house, our party, now dwindled to six, including our two drivers, got a taste of their rear-guard actions. Frank Miles, American Legion correspondent; two white soldiers and myself were forced to take cover for twenty minutes under a huge Sherman tank for safety.

9-30-44

Shells Hit Close

Jerry, less than 1000 yards away, poured shell after shell into the target area. Several landed close enough for the concussion to shake the damp ground on which we lay, and the smell of powder penetrated our nostrils.

We left with a feeling of pity for the tank men, as they had been there for six hours and had to stay for other shellings.

Returning to our bivouac area, the correspondents, led by Col. Stanley Grogan of Scranton, Pa., Fifth Army Public Relations Office chief, we met Generals Sir Harold Alexander, Allied Mediterranean commander, and Mark W. Clark, Fifth Army commanding general, on an official inspection tour.

10-20-44

The Apennines to within impeded by strong infantry opposition.

y miles of Bologna and tion.

s of the 92nd American A German non-commissioned of-otured a bitterly-con-ficer, headquarters here reported, tain position along the told his Eighth Army captors that division captured the terrific concentration of Allied tested mountain the west enemy artillery fire on Germany positions

Ligurian coast near Massa. n increased markedly had been "very demoralizing" to the Farther to the rmy units found every Nazis, and that many of the troops tillery action in their northward advance and Fifth Army would desert if provided a "safe op-

Race Prejudice Big Problem of Post-War World

5-13-44

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

HARTFORD, Conn. — (ANP) — Race prejudice will be the major problem of the post-war world, asserted the Rev. S. Ralph Harlow, professor of religious and social ethics at Smith college, addressing the Fireside forum in Hartford.

"There can be no ultimate peace or functioning of democracy in this country until we go to work on the emotional, irrational, unjustifiable race prejudice that exists in America today in alarming proportions," he declared. Results of surveys made by his Smith college (Northampton, Mass.) students show a frightening amount of race prejudice and social discrimination, he said, and back up his theory that justice, equality and freedom are principles that Americans believe in theoretically but are unwilling to put into practice.

92nd Division Negro Troops Capture Italy Mountain Pass

Daily Worker — New York, N.Y.

10-20-44

ROME, Oct. 19 (UP). Po Valley industrial city of Desena Three today, while to the west American Allied columns moved against the troops carved a path through the

Today's Guest Column

Daily Worker — New York, N.Y.

Economic and Political Progress Go Hand in Hand

by Alphaeus Hunton

TO GET rid of imperialism, it is essential to tear down all that structure of overlordship which rest upon the conviction that technologically advanced nations have the right to dictate and manage the affairs of less economically developed peoples. Just as the principle of the "divine right of kings" was compelled to give way to more democratic political concepts in national governments, so the doctrine of the divine right of imperialist domination must now yield to more democratic concepts in the realm of international relations. The development of capitalist enterprises in past centuries required the extension of the popular franchise and individual liberties; the survival of capitalist enterprise in the 20th century demands the democratic cooperation and full participation of all peoples in this inter-dependent world.

10-26-44

It is generally agreed, even in conservative business circles here and abroad (1) that with the coming of peace domestic economic security in the most advanced countries will hinge primarily on the rapid expansion of foreign trade; (2) that the economically undeveloped areas of the world, principally Asia, Africa and Latin America, represent the best opportunity for new trade markets, and (3) that the development of these markets requires the leveling up of the living standards in such areas.

10-26-44

THE crucial question is how this leveling up is going to be accomplished. Is it to be attempted by the old overlordship technique of imposing plans and schemes upon the indigenous peoples without their consultation, advice or consent? If so, instead of securing their cooperation and participation in developing the plans we will only incur their resentment and hostility. You cannot coerce a people into doing what you think is good for them. Serfdom and social progress were never companions.

"A colonial and subject people cannot build or sustain a modern industrialized economy," Browder observes in his penetrating discussion of this problem in "Teheran." "The industrialization of Africa," he points out, "can be successful, in the final analysis, only to the degree that the African population is drawn into participation in the process and its benefits."

10-26-44

Whether one is thinking of Africa, India, Latin America or any other similar "backward" area, successful progress entails full collaboration of the indigenous population in every stage of the planning and execution of progressive programs. It means enlisting the support of and delegating responsibilities to the trade unions, women's and youth organizations, cooperative societies, religious bodies and all other institutions of the people.

* * *

IN DRAWING up plans for the future, colonial experts and officials should be on guard against a certain type of blindness which permits one to envision economic progress without seeing parallel political progress. These experts and officials should read and reread certain key passages of an authoritative study, recently published, entitled Social Policy in Dependent Territories, prepared by Wilfried Benson, Chief of the Dependent Territories Services of the International Labor Office.

10-26-44

This is one passage, for example, for them to ponder on: "It is essential that a first consideration be, not merely regard for the welfare of colonial peoples, but also the will to obtain their effective association in the establishment of material and cultural well-being. Unless a positive share in forming and executing policy is offered to and is asked of the peoples consonant with their own ethos, even beneficent policies will once again mean that dictation comes from abroad; the policies will be met with indifference or will provoke hostility among the peoples whose partnership it is necessary to secure; plague spots of potential discontent will remain from which disease carriers may infect world peace."

WALTER WHITE'S TOUR STIRS UP RACE INTEREST

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

Negroid Groups Now Plan World Conference On Post-War Status

4-22-44

By GEORGE PADMORE

(Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON — (Censored) — The recent visit to Britain of Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has stimulated discussion among Africans and peoples of African descent in London, concerning the calling of a Pan-African conference to draw up plans on behalf of the Negroid races of the world for presentation to the Peace Conference.

I understand that White had talks with representatives of African and West Indian nationalist movements in London before his departure for West Africa to interview native leaders and Governor-General Felix Eboue, of French Equatorial Africa.

Among those contacted by White here was Robert Broadhurst, "Grand Old Man" of West African nationalism, who was one of the vice presidents of the Pan-African Congress organized by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, leading Afroamerican intellectual and publicist, in 1921.

Broadhurst, although over 80, is still very active in African politics, and holds the position of vice-consul of the Republic of Liberia. He is the "Elder Statesman" among the young radical African students in England.

Mrs. Garvey Backer

On behalf of the African Communities League, Mrs. Amy Jacques Garvey, wife of the late Marcus Garvey, head of the Universal Negro Improvement Association, has issued a statement endorsing the programme of the West Africans for self-government presented to the British authorities by the delegation of African editors from Nigeria, Gold Coast, Sierra Leone and Gambia. The delegation was under the leadership of Nnamdi Azikiwe, editor of the West African Pilot, leading champion of African redemption.

4-22-44

Mrs. Garvey, who is directing the world-wide organization built up by her husband, from her Jamaica headquarters at Mountain View avenue, Kingston, says, "Any plan for Africa, and Africans at home and abroad, must be comprehensive, in order to benefit all of us, and collective in order to carry weight and be effective. Therefore, it is time for Negroes to get together and draw up an African Freedom Charter, designed to free Africans and peoples of African descent, from the disabilities that bind them down, economically, socially, educationally, politically, spiritually and morally.

"Now that Mr. Sumner Welles, lately of the State Department in Washington, has outlined Regional Councils, under the International Organization of the United Nations, our African Freedom Charter would, we submit, require an African Freedom Council as one of the regional councils of the International Organizations of the United Nations."

4-22-44

An African Council

The African Council, says Mrs. Garvey, "should be composed of representatives of Africans at home and abroad, also people of African descent the world over, on the one hand, and European, English and American representatives on the other, in proportion of course. The functioning of this Council would be to put into effect the proposed African Freedom Charter." The Charter will cover the eight points in the Atlantic Charter and President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms.

Africans Overlooked

Mrs. Garvey declares that "This proposed African Freedom Charter will not interfere with the Charter that the West African editors presented to the British Prime Minister and Colonial Office, which is very good and highly necessary but is local. What is now proposed is the framing of a comprehensive charter—a cover-all security plan for all Negro peoples, as our collective bargaining gives power to us and weight to our proposals."

"The Atlantic Charter," she observes, "was made primarily for the future security of the white oppressed nations of Europe. This is, as it has always been, the children of Shem looking out for and protecting their own kind, by Roosevelt and Churchill. It now behooves African and Afroamerican leaders to propose and press for a Charter of African freedom for the oppressed children of Ham, the world over."

4-22-44

Justice to Africa

Concluding her appeal to Africans and people of African descent, Mrs. Garvey asserts: "The security of four hundred millions of people of African blood, and twelve million square miles of the African Continent, is what we are asking the 'Big Four'—Britain, America, Russia and China—the architects of our fate, in the world under reconstruction—to consider, and allow us to rehabilitate ourselves.

"Never will we allow ourselves to be used as helpers to build their superstructure, and the wealth of our land taken from us and used by others; and when their new world is completed and peace reigns again among them, they set upon us, and drive us whither we know not.

"We Africans, the world over," concludes the appeal, "are gladly fighting to bring peace to the warring white peoples of Europe and the troubled world. As we are fighting unitedly for peace, even so we fight for security and the right of self-government."

Negro Land Grant College Presidents Study Post-War Plans

Courier — Homefront Heroes

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — (ANP) — The post-war outlook for higher education and college library facilities; the availability of surplus war material for colleges, and programs for veterans rehabilitation are important subjects listed for discussion during the annual conference of Presidents of Negro land Grant colleges, which meets in Chicago, October 24, 25, and 23.

In outlining the program, Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute and president of the conference, stated that the selected speakers will present such discussions as will focus attention upon the many present opportunities offered for a unified educational plan to help in speedily adjusting our college curricula and facilities from a war to an effective peace time basis.

Session and discussion leaders include Dr. J. M. Gandy, president emeritus, Virginia State College; Dr. Felton G. Clark, president, Southern University; Luther H. Foster, president, Virginia State College; Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president, Fort Valley State College; and Dr. J. F. Drake, president A. & M. Institute, Normal, Alabama.

10-21-44

President R. B. Atwood, of Kentucky State College, is secretary of the conference and Dr. Felton G. Clark, treasurer. Daily sessions will be held at the YMCA, 3763 S. Wabash avenue.

Former Newspaperman Delphine Taylor Supervises Work Of Nazi War Prisoners

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

5-13-44

CAMP BLANDING, Fla.—A former newspaperman, who gained experience with the Atlanta Daily World and Louisiana Weekly, is playing a novel role in the war effort as a civilian employe at Camp Blanding, where he is assigned as a supervisor of the work of a group of German prisoners of war, the War Department reported this week.

Delphine W. Taylor, a graduate of Clark university, Atlanta, Ga., and at one time a student at Northwestern university, Evanston, Ill., has charge of a group of Germans detailed to work in a salvage warehouse under Geneva Convention rules regarding the employment of war prisoners.

The group of prisoners performing their duties under the watchful eyes of Military Police, but looked to Mr. Taylor for instructions and assignments of work. They separate items of equipment which have already been classified, laundered, and repaired for reissue. Packages for shipment are inspected for proper classification.

Today's Guest Column

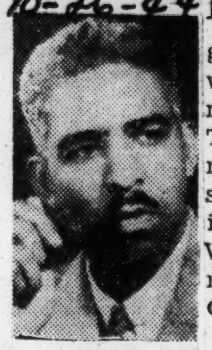
Daily Worker — New York, N.Y.

Economic and Political Progress Go Hand in Hand

by Alphaeus Hunton

TO GET rid of imperialism, it is essential to tear down all that structure of overlordship which rest upon the conviction that technologically advanced nations have the right to dictate and manage the affairs of less economically developed peoples. Just as the principle of the "divine right of kings" was compelled to give way to more democratic political concepts in national governments, so the doctrine of the divine right of imperialist domination must now yield to more democratic concepts in the realm of international relations. The development of capitalist enterprises in past centuries required the extension of the popular franchise and individual liberties; the survival of capitalist enterprise in the 20th century demands the democratic cooperation and full participation of all peoples in this inter-dependent world.

10-26-44



It is generally agreed, even in conservative business circles here and abroad (1) that with the coming of peace domestic economic security in the most advanced countries will hinge primarily on the rapid expansion of foreign trade; (2) that the economically undeveloped areas of the world, principally Asia, Africa and Latin America, represent the best opportunity for new trade markets, and (3) that the development of these markets requires the leveling up of the living standards in such areas. 10-26-44

* * *

THE crucial question is how this leveling up is going to be accomplished. Is it to be attempted by the old overlordship technique of imposing plans and schemes upon the indigenous peoples without their consultation, advice or consent? If so, instead of securing their cooperation and participation in developing the plans, we will only incur their resentment and hostility. You cannot coerce a people into doing what you think is good for them. Serfdom and social progress were never companions.

"A colonial and subject people cannot build or sustain a modern industrialized economy," Browder observes in his penetrating discussion of this problem in "Teheran." "The industrialization of Africa," he points out, "can be successful, in the final analysis, only to the degree that the African population is drawn into participation in the process and its benefits." 10-26-44

Whether one is thinking of Africa, India, Latin America or any other similar "backward" area, successful progress entails full collaboration of the indigenous population in every stage of the planning and execution of progressive programs. It means enlisting the support of and delegating responsibilities to the trade unions, women's and youth organizations, cooperative societies, religious bodies and all other institutions of the people.

* * *

IN DRAWING up plans for the future, colonial experts and officials should be on guard against a certain type of blindness which permits one to envision economic progress without seeing parallel political progress. These experts and officials should read and reread certain key passages of an authoritative study, recently published, entitled Social Policy in Dependent Territories, prepared by Wilfried Benson, Chief of the Dependent Territories Services of the International Labor Office.

10-26-44

This is one passage, for example, for them to ponder on: "It is essential that a first consideration be, not merely regard for the welfare of colonial peoples, but also the will to obtain their effective association in the establishment of material and cultural well-being. Unless a positive share in forming and executing policy is offered to and is asked of the peoples consonant with their own ethos, even beneficent policies will once again mean that dictation comes from abroad; the policies will be met with indifference or will provoke hostility among the peoples whose partnership it is necessary to secure; plague spots of potential discontent will remain from which disease carriers may infect world peace."

WALTER WHITE'S TOUR STIRS UP RACE INTEREST

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

Negroid Groups Now Plan World Conference On Post-War Status

4-22-44

By GEORGE PADMORE

(Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON — (Censored) — The recent visit to Britain of Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, has stimulated discussion among Africans and peoples of African descent in London, concerning the calling of a Pan-African conference to draw up plans on behalf of the Negroid races of the world for presentation to the Peace Conference.

I understand that White had talks with representatives of African and West Indian nationalist movements in London before his departure for West Africa to interview native leaders and Governor-General Felix Eboue, of French Equatorial Africa.

Among those contacted by White here was Robert Broadhurst, "Grand Old Man" of West African nationalism, who was one of the vice presidents of the Pan-African Congress organized by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, leading Afroamerican intellectual and publicist, in 1921.

Broadhurst, although over 80, is still very active in African politics, and holds the position of vice-consul of the Republic of Liberia. He is the "Elder Statesman" among the young radical African students in England.

Mrs. Garvey Backer

On behalf of the African Communities League, Mrs. Amy Jacques Garvey, wife of the late Marcus Garvey, head of the Universal Negro Improvement Association, has issued a statement endorsing the programme of the West Africans for self-government presented to the British authorities by the delegation of African editors from Nigeria, Gold Coast, Sierra Leone and Gambia. The delegation was under the leadership of Nnamdi Azikiwe, editor of the West African Pilot, leading champion of African redemption.

4-22-44

Mrs. Garvey, who is directing the world-wide organization built up by her husband, from her Jamaica headquarters at Mountain View avenue, Kingston, says, "Any plan for Africa, and Africans at home and abroad, must be comprehensive, in order to benefit all of us, and collective in order to carry weight and be effective. Therefore, it is time for Negroes to get together and draw up an African Freedom Charter, designed to free Africans and peoples of African descent, from the disabilities that bind them down, economically, socially, educationally, politically, spiritually and morally.

"Now that Mr. Sumner Welles, lately of the State Department in Washington, has outlined Regional Councils, under the International Organization of the United Nations, our African Freedom Charter would, we submit, require an African Freedom Council as one of the regional councils of the International Organizations of the United Nations." 4-22-44

An African Council

The African Council, says Mrs. Garvey, "should be composed of representatives of Africans at home and abroad, also people of African descent the world over, on the one hand, and European, English and American representatives on the other, in proportion of course. The functioning of this Council would be to put into effect the proposed African Freedom Charter." The Charter will cover the eight points in the Atlantic Charter and President Roosevelt's Four Freedoms.

Africans Overlooked

Mrs. Garvey declares that "This proposed African Freedom Charter will not interfere with the Charter that the West African editors presented to the British Prime Minister and Colonial Office, which is very good and highly necessary but is local. What is now proposed is the framing of a comprehensive charter—a cover-all security plan for all Negro peoples, as our collective bargaining gives power to us and weight to our proposals."

"The Atlantic Charter," she observes, "was made primarily for the future security of the white oppressed nations of Europe. This is, as it has always been, the children of Shem looking out for and protecting their own kind, by Roosevelt and Churchill. It now behooves African and Afroamerican leaders to propose and press for a Charter of African freedom for the oppressed children of Ham, the world over." 4-22-44

Justice to Africa

Concluding her appeal to Africans and people of African descent, Mrs. Garvey asserts: "The security of four hundred millions of people of African blood, and twelve million square miles of the African Continent, is what we are asking the 'Big Four'—Britain, America, Russia and China—the architects of our fate, in the world under reconstruction—to consider, and allow us to rehabilitate ourselves.

"Never will we allow ourselves to be used as helpers to build their superstructure, and the wealth of our land taken from us and used by others; and when their new world is completed and peace reigns again among them, they set upon us, and drive us whither we know not.

"We Africans, the world over," concludes the appeal, "are gladly fighting to bring peace to the warring white peoples of Europe and the troubled world. As we are fighting unitedly for peace, even so we fight for security and the right of self-government."

CAMP BLANDING, Fla.—A former newspaperman, who gained experience with the Atlanta Daily World and Louisiana Weekly, is playing a novel role in the war effort as a civilian employe at Camp Blanding, where he is assigned as supervisor of the work of a group of German prisoners of war, the War Department reported this week.

Delphine W. Taylor, a graduate of Clark university, Atlanta, Ga., and at one time a student at Northwestern university, Evanston, Ill., has charge of a group of Germans detailed to work in a salvage warehouse under Geneva Convention rules regarding the employment of war prisoners. 5-13-44

The group of prisoners performs their duties under the watchful eyes of Military Police, but look to Mr. Taylor for instructions and assignments of work. They separate items of equipment which have already been classified, laundered, and repaired for reissue. Packages for shipment are inspected for proper classification.

Negro Land Grant College Presidents Study Post-War Plans

Confer

TUSKEGEE. —(ANP)— The post-war outlook for higher education and college library facilities; the availability of surplus war material for colleges, and programs for veterans rehabilitation are important subjects listed for discussion during the annual conference of Presidents of Negro land Grant colleges, which meets in Chicago, October 24, 25, and 23.

In outlining the program, Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute and president of the conference, stated that the selected speakers will present such discussions as will focus attention upon the many present opportunities offered for unified educational plan to help in speedily adjusting our college curricula and facilities from a war to an effective peace time basis.

Session and discussion leaders include Dr. J. M. Gandy, president emeritus, Virginia State College; Dr. Felton G. Clark, president, Southern university; Luther H. Foster, president, Virginia State College; Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president, Fort Valley State College; and Dr. J. F. Drake, president A. & M. Institute, Normal, Alabama. 10-21-44

President R. B. Atwood, of Kentucky State College, is secretary of the conference and Dr. Felton G. Clark, treasurer. Daily sessions will be held at the YMCA, 3763 S. Wabash avenue.

Former Newspaperman Supervises Delphine Taylor Courier Pittsburgh, Pa. Prisoners Work Of Nazi War

5-13-44

47n-1944

Effects on the Negro & Race Relations

Harlem Glad, Relieved Final Blow Has Begun

Daily Worker/New York, N.Y.

Harlem is glad the liberation of Europe has begun. Random interviews with 20 Negro men and women on 125th St. and on Lenox and Seventh Aves. revealed that the people are glad and relieved at the news. 6-7-44

"I think it is great," said Oscar McShann, musician, 707 St. Nicholas Ave., "because now we're bringing the war to an end. I'd like to be in it, but they turned me down."

"Thumbs up for victory!" cried Miss Barbara Hall, pretty in her AWVS uniform. "I think the invasion's going to mean better times for us all, and especially the Negroes."

Quentin Jackson, musician with Cab Calloway, was glad the invasion had begun, he declared, because the suspense of waiting was now over. Now the war will soon be over.

The Negro is now better off in the United States than ever in the past, said Dennis Mandy, Pullman porter, of 129 W. 128 St., and, now that the invasion has started, he'll be better off still. For, Mandy said, "people are really being liberated."

Ambrosio L. Roballo, organizer, New York District Council No. 9, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, AFL, said the people want a peace "based on the Teheran agreement" to come after the invasion, such a peace meaning equality of all men, "without regard to race, creed or color."

and Churchill. At the June 26 Negro Freedom rally in Madison Square Garden, Negroes and their friends will show their backing of the western front."

Other community leaders also issued statements.

Thelma Dale, acting secretary, National Negro Congress: American women wholeheartedly support our Commander-in-Chief as we join hands with the gallant women of Britain, the Soviet Union, China and the underground. To Negro women, D-Day has a special significance, for we must now guarantee that our men will return to a nation of freedom, opportunity and security. 6-7-44

Roy Wilkins, editor Crisis Magazine and assistant secretary National Association for the Advancement of Colored People: The job ahead is the complete destruction of Hitlerism and we're on our way.

Rev. James A. Robinson, Church of The Master, Harlem: I'm glad it's come. After all the sacrifices we've made, I hope we're going to win what we're fighting for. The invasion will demonstrate to our Russian allies that we're doing our full share at long last—for they have borne the brunt for a long time.

State headquarters of the American Labor Party urged that the people not stop at special prayer, but that they "back the war effort in every possible way." 6-7-44

"This can be done," the ALP statement said, "by buying bonds in the Fifth War Loan drive, by contributing to the bloodbank of the American Red Cross and by engaging in the various community war aid activities."

Civic Leaders Here Call for Redoubled Home Front Effort

Daily Worker-New York, N.Y.

New York's two Communist councilmen, hailing the invasion, called upon the city yesterday to make it the occasion for fully meeting home responsibilities.

Said Brooklyn's Peter V. Cacchione: "The great record of American workers in production must and will be increased. Where only thousands donated blood, now millions must give to save the lives of our fighting boys. The Fifth War Loan drive should go over the top fast. The people must rally around our President and guarantee his reelection."

Peter V. Cacchione

Councilman Benjamin Davis, Jr., said: 6-7-44

"Negro citizens rejoice with all other Americans at this sacred moment of the invasion of France. On the bayonets of the Allied liberators are the destinies of freedom-loving white, black, brown and yellow peoples, aligned against Nazi and Japanese fascism.

Ben Davis, Jr.

"Our first task at home is national unity in all-out production on the assembly line, in the political arena and in every field of endeavor. All-out support to Roosevelt, Stalin

47n-1944

Foreign Service

Negro Artillery Blasts Germans And Nazi Theory

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

BY ALLEN M. MORRISON
Stars and Stripes Correspondent

At the U. S. Artillery Command Post in France, July 12 (AP) —Showing utter contempt for the "master race" divisions facing them, United States Negro artillerymen firing 155-mm howitzers are blasting German installations and troop concentrations and pounding to pieces the Nazi theory of "inferior" and "superior" races.

7-13-44

The first Negro combat artillery team to fight in this sector is this howitzer outfit which is a member of a four-unit artillery group including a battalion of 105s and two 155-mm long toms.

"These artillerymen have done splendidly," said the colonel at corps headquarters. "We're proud of them. They are one of our best units."

47m-1944

ROGERS SAYS:

Peace
America Must Fight Colonial Imperialism To Prevent Another War

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.
12-9-44

By J. A. ROGERS

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

LOOK out for the question of colonies! It is going to be the hot potato of the peace, not among the vanquished, of course, but among the victors. Already it is getting warm. We saw it last week in the rejection of Count Carlo Sforza as Foreign Minister in the new Italian Cabinet. Winston Churchill, who, the other day, announced in so many words that he had no intention of freeing the colonies, has turned decisive thumbs down on Sforza to the no little amazement of the progressive elements in America and Italy. Sforza is not only Italy's greatest living statesman, but the foremost living opponent of Mussolini.

Mr. Rogers

Rather than serve Mussolini, he gave up his post in the Senate and the Cabinet and went into exile for 16 years. He returned to Italy last year with the apparent okay of Churchill because he promised to support Marshal Badoglio and the House of Savoy. Badoglio, lest we forget, is the Fascist butcher of Ethiopia, while the House of Savoy, headed by Victor Emanuel III, had been the willing puppet of Mussolini. Victor Emanuel even took Haile Selassie's title at Mussolini's orders. We are supposed to be fighting Fascism—no one has uttered stronger denunciation of Mussolini than Churchill—yet it is these Fascist remnants that Mr. Churchill seems to favor most now.

12-9-44

AMERICAN OPINION AGAINST COLONIES

Sforza, as was said, had promised to support Badoglio and Victor Emanuel, but soon after his return he openly declared them both "obnoxious." And that was not all; he asked for the return of Italy's colonies, adding that if these were placed under "international mandate" then the colonies of all the nations should be so placed, too. As for Ethiopia, he was for full independence for her, and this at a time when Haile Selassie was asking the British please to go. Sforza has a mind of his own and is clearly not going to play Churchill's game of colonies.

MY chief reason for saying that the colonial question is going to be a very hot one is that American opinion is very definitely against colonies. America gave Cuba and the Philippines their independence and was the only one of the great powers to reject Victor Emanuel's title as emperor of Ethiopia. Today, America is bearing the chief cost of the war, and already in military casualties she has lost, after only three years, almost as much of the same as the whole British empire after five years.

12-9-44

CRUELTIES LISTED

What are the American people going to say about the future of the continent of Africa, which they did so much to save for Europe? What is America going to say about India, Malaya, and the Dutch East Indies, which she is now working and sacrificing so much to save for Europe? The American people know well that the deep, underlying issue of this war was colonies—that Hitlerism was born of colonial imperialism and that if you permit the mother to remain she will be sure to spawn other terrible broods.

IT is impossible to find words strong enough to condemn colonialism and its evils, past and present. I have before me a copy of Le Crapouillot of Paris, January 1936, devoted to this subject. It has a collection of pictures, some of them early drawings of what the Spaniards, English, Dutch and French did in the New World and also in India and Africa to the natives and the sight makes one's blood run cold. In India, the natives were tied to the mouth of cannon and their bodies blown into a thousand pieces. Truly as Nietzsche says, "How the European has been able to establish colonies is explained by his nature, which is that of a beast of prey."

MUST FIGHT COLONIES

Those who believe in retribution can well say that Europe is now reaping for her sins against the colonies. Every European nation that recognized the so-called conquest of Ethiopia, except Sweden, has, in its turn, had a dose of what the Fascists did to Ethiopia—France, Poland, Denmark, Holland, Greece, Norway, Belgium and England. Even Russia, who did so the last, in 1940, has not been spared. One remembers Wilhelmina, queen of Holland, later to squawk against Fascist rape of her land, and how ardently she advocated recognition of the Fascist rape of Ethiopia.

12-9-44

THIS matter of colonies is vital for the American people because, although their attitude towards Ethiopia was honorable throughout, they, too, were pulled eventually into the mess. While the Allies must stand together firmly during this war, America, at the peace, will have to use her head against colonies if she doesn't want another war in another decade or so.

The Fight Must Go On

Afro-American AN EDITORIAL Baltimore, Md.
(From the N.Y. Post)

The War Department has just given us an example of democratic policy. Henceforth, it orders that the colored soldier shall be allowed to buy at any Post Exchange, sit in any part of a bus (regardless of local custom) attend any post theatre he wants to.

9-2-44

It is a pretty grim commentary on how we practice democracy with regard to our largest minority, that such an order should be hailed in the press.

Of course it is a great step forward. But it is long overdue. And it does not go far enough.

There is nothing in the anti-discrimination order that prohibits the segregation of colored into separate units or that says they shall have equal opportunity for various types of service.

But the War Department has stopped acting the policeman for Southern reactionaries and race-haters. To that extent democracy has won a victory. To that extent we have taken a weapon from the fascist propagandists.

But it is a limited victory. The fight must go on. It can end only when all discrimination ends.

Recognize Rights Of All At Peace Table--Mitchell

Memphis World, Memphis, Tenn
11-28-44

ATLANTA, Ga.—(SNS)—Broadus Mitchell, the noted economist and author, advocated recognizing the rights of defeated nations at the Peace Table, at an Atlanta University Forum on Wednesday sponsored by the University's department of sociology. Dr. Mitchell was speaking on the subject "Will the World be Better After the War?"

The speaker told his listeners that there is hope for a lasting peace in a world where the rights of all peoples, great and small, are given fair consideration. Predicting the future, he stated that if we can trust history, we shall have sustained prosperity until we defeat Japan, then a year and a half of continued activity, then a short depression, which he said will be alarming but brief. Dr Mitchell is of the opinion that war is not the instrument for obtaining the best good. He believes that government should intervene more in public affairs and should take a constructive part in important plans for guaranteeing permanent security.

The ten million unemployed persnos at the beginning of the war were a reproach to America's economic security, the audience was told. In answer to a statement by the nation's chief executive about the "unemployable" persons, Dr. Mitchell pointed to the fact of work for everyone when an economic crisis arose. He declared that there is no such thing as an "unemployable" person, and concluded his talk by stating unless the radically change our design for American life, we shall have unemployment to return.

Dr. Mitchell spent a week on the campus of Atlanta University in the capacity of visiting lecturer in sociology,. He addressed class groups and seminars in addition to speaking at the Forum.

THE NEGRO DOES HIS PART

The American Negro can be proud of the figures just given out by the War Department as to his part in this war. He has contributed 701,678 men to the Army, of whom 411,368 are overseas. There are 5,804 commissioned Negro officers, including dentists, nurses and other medical corps officers, and chaplains. It is clear that the Negro has made progress since the last war, both in the types of service open to him and in his educational fitness for them.

It may be a long time before the Negro has exactly the same opportunities, given the same talents and character as his white fellow-citizen. The important and hopeful truth is that he has more opportunities than he used to have, that his soldierly qualities in war are being given fairer recognition, and that his achievements in the arts, in the sciences, in the professions and as an industrial worker are now too manifest to be denied. In the overwhelming majority of cases the Negro has subdued whatever resentments he may have felt to the nobler emotion of loyalty to his country. His record stands up beside that of his white neighbor. When the profits and losses of war are balanced, these things ought to be remembered in his favor. They should count for something when, after saving democracy abroad, we begin again the long task of perfecting it at home.

Secretary Stimson Says All Races Will Be Treated Alike in Post-War U.S. Army

12-8-44

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—Ne[illegible] specific concern is being given to groes will receive the same con- the problem within the war de- sideration as will other groups in partment. The source of this in- the post-war army, the secretary formation was not prepared to of war said at his news conference say how far this concern extend- Thursday. ed. It is safe to assume nevertheless that the special committee

Mr. Stimson was reminded that on two committees had been appoint- Negro troop policies has been ed by him in October to prepare developing policies now, based upon policies and regulations affecting the experiences of the present war, the reserve components of the organized reserve, the other, in postwar army, and was asked addition to the post-war organiza- "what consideration is being giv- tion. The department's announce- en by these committees to the ment regarding the studies said place and function of Negroes" in that one of the two groups, the this army. army, is composed of three regular

His reply was that Negroes "can organized reserve committee, is just rest assured that every ele- composed of three regular army ment of our population will be officers and three reserve officers given like consideration in the and is charged with preparation of composition of our postwar army." the organized reserve. The other, known as the general committee, is composed of three regular army officers and three reserve officers and three national guard officers, and they will work on similar plans and policies affecting the study of post-war military organizations.

Dennis A. Usoy, a member of two committees are in addition to the national guardCaptain McHenry's Company C, a smiliar function with of the National Defense act, to both reserve and na- giving priority to the study of components.

ee announced last Augustwas hit by AT fire and caught on two committees had been appoint- Negro troop policies has been ed by him in October to prepare developing policies now, based upon policies and regulations affecting the experiences of the present war, the reserve components of the organized reserve, the other, in postwar army, and was asked addition to the post-war organiza- "what consideration is being giv- tion. The department's announce- en by these committees to the ment regarding the studies said place and function of Negroes" in that one of the two groups, the this army. army, is composed of three regular

His reply was that Negroes "can organized reserve committee, is just rest assured that every ele- composed of three regular army ment of our population will be officers and three reserve officers given like consideration in the and is charged with preparation of composition of our postwar army." the organized reserve. The other, known as the general committee, is elaborate. In spite of this, how- ever, it is reliably learned that is composed of three regular army officers and three reserve officers and three national guard officers, and they will work on similar plans and policies affecting the study of post-war military organizations.

The secretary did not choose to known as the general committee, addition to the post-war organiza-

mounted through the escape hatch and sought cover in a ditch. Cpl. Osby discovered one man was missing, and returned to the tank to find the assistant driver, Private Archie Fletcher, unable to dismount because his feet were entangled in a machinegun ammunition belt. Osby entered the burning tank and helped to free Fletcher.

12-8-44

For this deed Lieutenant General George S. Patton, Third Army commander, commended the men personally.

In all this action, the task of the 761st in its first battle action was all the more difficult because it was faced by the members of a German Officer Candidate School of Artillery at Marshal, who fired heavy concentrations at the tanks during the entire engagement.

Colonial Problems Basic Cause of War, Says DuBois

AFRO-American Balty, Md.

12-23-44

HAMPTON, Va. — "War will not be ended by the establishment of an international organization to maintain peace through force, but by an attack on the problem of colonies, which is a fundamental cause of war."

This was the view expressed by Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, director of special research for the NAACP, when he spoke at Hampton Institute Friday.

World War II, he declared, developed out of the desperate attempt of Italy and Germany to regain control of their former colonies and out of Japan's efforts to become the domination colonial nation in Asias.

Warns Against Exploitation

Deploring the failure of the recent Dumbarton Oaks parley to consider the question of colonies, Dr. DuBois also urged the establishment of a mandate commission with distinct power to investigate complaints and conditions in the colonies and make public its findings.

Stating that today colonies have become a means of highly profitable investment, the speaker warned that just as excess profit-making has been curbed in the United States, so must excess exploitation of colonies be curbed.

"The United Nations are making a mistake," he declared, "if they think that democracy and the Four Freedoms have nothing to do with the six hundred million colonials."

Ralph B. Bunche Also At Dumbarton Talks.

BY ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—Questions relating to dependent territories, mandated areas and other type colonies will in all probability, come before the Dumbarton Oaks conference, now in its second week, the ANP has learned on good authority.

The three powers participating in the first stages of the conversations, the United States, Great Britain and Russia, completed organization of the work before them last week and agreed that Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius would be chairman.

Added weight to the fact that colonial matters will be given attention in the course of talks is further evidenced in the selection of Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, expert on the delegation of A. M. Alger, adviser to the colonial office.

From the American side an informed source has said that Dr. Bunche, executive director of the committee on post-war programs for the department, would be "qualified" on the whole "gamut of matters." He also has supervision over the division of territorial studies in which Dr. Ralph E. Bunche, former instructor at Howard University, spent so much time in the past eight months.

Dr. Bunche is also the only Negro technician working at the scene of the conferences at Dumbarton Oaks.

Courier--Pittsburgh, Pa. 9-2-44

DuBois Attacks Colonial Issues At State Department Conference

The New York Age, N.Y.
11-4

WASHINGTON, D.C.—In a statement to the conference of Americans United For World Organization, held at the Department of State recently, in which several hundred were in attendance, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, representing the N. A. A. C. P., raised the whole issue of colonies and imperialism, bringing out the inadequacy of proposals made on each.

11-4-44

Basing his summary remarks on study of the published proposals of the Dumbarton Oaks Conferences, in regard to colonials, Dr. DuBois said, "It virtually says to six hundred million human beings, if not to a majority of mankind, that the only way to human equality is the philanthropy of masters who have historic and strong interest in preserving their present power and income." In outlining precisely, details for the basis of this conclusion, Dr. DuBois elaborated as follows:

11-4-44

"As I have gone through the published proposals at Dumbarton Oaks, I am depressed to realize with what consistency the matter of colonies has been passed over. In chapter one, paragraph three the emphasis is on the fact that this is a union of nations not of races, groups, or organizations of men not recognized as nations; in chapter two, paragraph one, peace-loving States' alone may join the Union; in chapter six, apparently an aggrieved party must be a state in order to complain or appear before the Council; similarly in chapter seven, no colonies as such can appeal for hearing before the International Court of Justice. Elaborate effort is made to protect states from aggression but I find no provisions in chapter seven even to consider aggression of a nation on its own colonial peoples while apparently international military force can be called in to suppress revolt. Indeed, in paragraph seven of that chapter it seems definitely to say that colonial disputes lie entirely beyond the jurisdiction of this proposed government of men. The Economic and Social Council set up in this chapter offers one ray of hope: It can recommend and consider complaints and situations; but there is no direct power to investigate conditions. The Council is appointed by eighteen states, no colonial participation indicated."

DuBois Discusses Colonies

Norfolk, Va. Guide
Journal Guide
12-30-44

HAMPTON, Va. — Pointing out that there has been no more prolific cause of war than the domination of great masses of people in colonial status by a few nations which seek to control the world, Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, Director of Special Research for the NAACP, told an audience at Hampton Institute, Friday evening (Dec. 15) that war will not be ended by the establishment of an international organization to maintain peace through force, but by an attack on the problem of colonies, which he termed a fundamental cause of war.

World War II he declared, developed out of the desperate attempt of Italy and Germany to regain control of their former colonies and out of Japan's efforts to become the dominant colonial nation in Asia.

DUMBARTON OAKS

Deploring the failure of the recent Dumbarton Oaks parley to consider the question of colonies, Dr. DuBois also urged the establishment of a mandate commission with distinct power to investigate complaints and conditions in the colonies and make public its findings. He said that the mandate commission set up in Geneva after World War I, had not been given any real authority to deal with the colonial problem.

Tracing the history of, and various changes in, the colonial system, as well as attempts which have been made to justify it, Dr. DuBois stated that today colonies have become a means of highly profitable investment. But he warned that just as excess profit-making has been curbed in the United States so must excess exploitation of colonies be curbed.

FOUR FREEDOMS

"The United Nations are making a mistake," he declared, "if they think that democracy and the Four Freedoms have nothing to do with the six hundred million colonials and the three or four hundred million other people who inhabit countries which are said to be free, but which are really in quasi-colonial status."

In answer to the question of a West African student in the audience at Hampton, who spoke of the policy of exploitation, with no effort to improve economic and social conditions, which the student said has been pursued by Britain, Dr. DuBois declared that America could help by publicizing the plight of the colonials. He mentioned the present interest of the NAACP in the colonial question and said that he is planning to call a conference with representatives of various colonies to consider colonial demands and the promises made to them by the controlling nations.

Introduced by President Ralph P. Bridgman of Hampton Institute, Dr. DuBois appeared as a speaker in the current lecture series there.

Peace Planners Ignore Race Equality Plea

See 56 1945
Journal + Guide

Norfolk, Va. 10-14-44
Staff Correspondence

WASHINGTON, D. C.—When the second phase of the Dumbarton Oaks peace talks concluded here last week, no action had been taken on China's proposal that the future world security organization acknowledge the principle of equality of all races.

After the talks which involved Russia were ended, China's delegates sat in on a series of conferences with representatives of the United States and Great Britain. One of the first issues spotlighted by the Chinese delegation was the question of equality for the world's colored races in a world security organization such as the one proposed in these exploratory conferences.

The dangers which are suggested by the failure of the conferees to take a stand on this question are best summarized by a letter written to the New York Times several days ago by Pearl Buck, noted author, in which she said:

TWO ITEMS

10-14-44

"By coincidence I read this evening two items which fit together like the parts of a puzzle. The first comes on page 242 of Hallett Abend's excellent new book, 'Treaty Parts.' I quote:

" 'On only one issue debated at Paris (in 1919) were the Chinese and Japanese of one mind and that was on the proposal to amend the League of Nations covenant so as to recognize racial equality. France and Italy voted in favor of this measure, but Britain, Australia and New Zealand were bitterly opposed. The proposal was adopted by a vote of eleven to six, with Wilson and Col. House not voting; but Wilson, who was presiding, ruled that was not effective because the vote was not unanimous . . . Whatever his motives Japan blamed him . . . and became newly bitter against the United States.' 10-14-44

PEARL HARBOR

"That bitterness expressed itself finally in the attack on Pearl Harbor.

"The second item I find in today's newspaper. It says, from Washington, 'China's anticipated request that the future world security organization acknowledge the principle of racial equality was expected today to receive support only from Soviet Russia among the big powers. The United States and Great Britain—as in 1919—will probably oppose any attempt to have such a clause in the Constitution of the new organization.' 10-14-44

"We Americans would do well to put these two items together. Again there will be new bitterness and again it will be against the United States. What, I wonder, will be the fruit of this new attitude, say, in twenty years?"

47n-1944

Peace Table

Should Negroes Sit At The Peace Table

Defender Chicago, Ill. 1-8-44

Every week I hear this question: "Should the Negro Sit At the Peace Table?"

Well, what do you thing about a question like that? I think every sane person would say the same as I, about it, Yes.

The Negro's place should be awaiting him at the peace table when this great war is over. How do you think the boys who are fighting in the dark Eastern jungles, would feel if they were told that they wouldn't be represented at the peace conference? How do you suppose those who have died for the cause of justice would feel if they knew their job was all in vain; thus leaving them unsung heroes, instead of honored.

I am not in favor in sending him there to represent, as I might say an inferior race or creed, but I am in favor of sending him there to represent a people who fought to uphold the principles of what they hold dear. 1-8-44

Is that not what the white man is fighting for? and we...

Well, there are others who would say: Won't we be represented, if an American delegation is present? That depends, on who is present or comprise the delegation.

Public here's a question I want to ask you: Would you in seeking a job send your best friend to the employer for an interview? Now what do you say?

You might say: "That's different!"

Oh! No, Mr. and Mrs. Dark America; there's no difference in it. It's as clear as your nose on your face. Take this for what it is worth. As long as the Minority is satisfied with what the Majority does, he will forever be like a rabbit in flight from a pack of hounds.—Pvt. Johnnye Merrill Spencer, Morehouse college, '42.

Arguments Against Negro At Peace Table

I have been a reader of the Defender for many years and thoroughly enjoy the straightforward and clear-cut manner in which you present news items for public consumption. Defender-

The recent discussions carried by the Defender pertaining to the question of whether or not a Negro shoud sit at the Peace Conference at the conclusion of this war have been quite illuminating, and I feel far reaching in stimulating interest in this matter Chicago, Ill.

There were good arguments for and against the proposition. Some of them quite convincing and thought provoking, while others were not at all of such a calibre. Be that as it may, there is to my way of thinking a very vital question growing out of this series of discussions. Of what practical value will it be to the American Negro to have a representative at such a conference? Aside from the moral tone and passing gesture to democratic procedure, I question seriously the efficacy of such an act. 1-15-44

In the first place the conference is to be an international gathering concerned primarily with such issues as should come before such a group, whereas our problems are in the main of national scope. Of course if we are thinking of taking into consideration Negroes who are British subjects and others who have similar difficulties, then the scope of the issue broadens. But I am concerned here with the problem as it affects us here and now. However, I am not unmindful of the international aspect of the problem at all. That phase should be considered by representative Negroes from all countries where there are existing difficulties similar to our own.

To the point now, let us suppose that we are successful in having a representative at the Peace Conference and I hope that this will be the case on the basis of merit—and that the discussions of this deliberative body will extend to the problems of minority groups within their respective territories. Let us further suppose that this body goes so far as to set up certain regulations regarding the rights and privileges of such minorities. If such should happen to be the case, by what authority and by what technique will the organization be able to make its members live up to or comply with such prescribed mandates?

It goes without saying that at any Peace Conference or any other gathering for that matter, of the United Nations, the United States and Great Britain will be two of the Big Wigs with powerful influence and will seek to maintain the status quo of their national policies. That this is true is evident to every one who has followed the trend of events in recent months.

Now for us to suppose that some miracle will happen or some authority will be created which will solve our problems or even seriously affect our status is merely wishful thinking. We know the attitude in the United States towards Negroes and we should realize that no international police force will be created, of which the United States would be an important integral part, to see to it that this country gives us proper recognition. We have the Constitution of the United States guaranteeing to us certain rights and privileges, but who dares to enforce the Constitution? 1-15-44

This is not a world of idealism, even if idealistic tendencies do make their appearance here and there, but one of stern realism decorated with hard-headed politicians vying with each other for points of vantage.

All groups concerned are seeking to obtain the greatest possible degree of solidarity within their respective ranks to bring to bear as much force as possible in obtaining their desired objectives. This is precisely our weak spot.

What we need most is organization within. We do not have a sufficient number of militant organizations to back our demands. I feel that more stress should be laid on this phase of our problem than any other at this particular time. In the first place, we must seek to maintain the gains already made and organize more to push our f nt to new attainments.—J. H. Owens, Tougaloo, Miss.

Praises Progress Of Negro Press

1-13-44

On this the New Year of your existence, I take this opportunity to extend you my congratulations on having piloted the Defender from its very insignificant beginning to the magnificent heights it has reached today. Defender-

To the memory of Robert S. Abbott we owe much for having brought into action such a powerfull instrument for waging the battle against the wrongs inflicted upon his people Chicago, Ill

I have watched with pride the growth of the Negro Press in Chicago from the little four page sheet known as the Chicago Conservator of more than fifty years ago to the twenty-four page Defender of today. And it has been pleasing and gratifying to note the progress.

From Dustin' by Lucius C. Harper, the Bud Billikens by David Kellum, the sports review by Fay Young, the women's column by Mrs. Rebecca Styles Taylor, the editorials by the staff editors and the other capable correspondents, has come enlightenment, encouragement and inspiration to the Negro people of America to know that through the Chicago Defender they have an uncompromising champion. To the Chicago Defender, joining with the thousands of other well-wishers I extend you my greetings for a greater success than ever.—William A. Wallace.

Approves Halt On Use of Word "Negro"

I would like to say three cheers to the lady who voiced the opinion of so many thousands of our race by asking the question in the issue of December 11, of the necessity of the use of the word "Negro" so often in our papers. One could tell at a glance that it is a race paper by looking at the pictures. About the only time a white paper specifies any person by race is when they are speaking of some one in our group. They never say a Jew got hit by a car, an Irishman was held up, etc.

So I for another one along with Miss Jones would be very happy if so much of this talk about Negro and Negro that could be cut this out.—Mrs. Mattie Gill, Detroit, Michigan.

THE HORIZON

By P. L. PRATTIS

America Should Have Negro With Her to Help Make Peace in Far East

MAYNARD KRUEGER, in charge of undergraduate education in the social sciences at the University of Chicago, made an interesting and provocative suggestion to the delegates at a recent session of the Institute on "America's Role in World Affairs," held under the auspices of the American Friends' Service Committee in Pittsburgh. Mr. Krueger was addressing himself to the sub-similar to those of Dr. Johnson. has also planted the seed of the idea in the White House.

ject, "What Shall We Do with Japan?" The interrogatory subject implied that we are going to whip Japan in this war and that it was going to be America's responsibility to dispose of the problem of Japan after she is whipped. Mr. Krueger found himself somewhat at loggerheads with the subject chosen for him because he didn't see that it was to be our job alone to go to Asia and put Japan in her peace-time place. However, he did make a suggestion as to what America should do, if and when she whips Japan and if and when she is called upon to participate in making the peace in Asia. Hear him!

Mr. Krueger stated that on what-ever peace delegation might set up to deal with the Jap-anese and other Asiatics, here in Asia, the United States should include an American Negro. The president of Howard University, had spoken and created a deep impression. Mr. Krueger said the Negro should have abilities

Mr. Prattis

NEGRO TRUE TEST

THE reasons, are obvious. The true test of America's regard for colored peoples is her treatment of the American Negro. What America does speaks more loudly than what she says. The Far East is looking at what America does. Every instance of fairness to Negroes by Americans is an object lesson to the Far East. Every instance of unfairness strengthens the impression in the Far East that the white man of the Western world can't be trusted. Further, Mr. White, are far all peoples, yellow, black, brown, American whites, or red, have a common understanding. Those who are though they do not all pull to-gether in their attempts to recognize the bat color discrimination, they all entfrety, is fighting know that they are victimized be-cause of their color and that the fellow on the other side is white. Thus they know that they can all understand. The American Negro is determined that the white man shall not return to his old form and role. That is true of the Chinese, even though he may operate as a "lone wolf," recognizes that the Negro is battling the same prejudices that he is. He knows that the Negro has had long experience in this fight. A Negro on America's peace delegation would confound the Far East in the sense that his presence would indicate that America meant to do the right thing. If the American Negro delegate were permitted freedom of action and judgment, he, alone, could do more, through his understanding and courage, to promote goodwill in the Orient than all the money, all the charters, put together.

NEGRO VS. EASTLAND

AMERICA needs to treat her Negroes as equals, first, and, second, to use them to convince the world. It is practical and realistic. It involves elements of strategy. If followed, it will save American lives and American money. It must be done to counteract the "white supremacy" stuff that her enemies, all the Burmese remember the British possession of Manchuria and the Dutch in the Far East. There is a chance for America to establish the basis for Krueger has made an invaluable suggestion toward the future peaceful relationships with the Far

A Good Beginning

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

The Dumbarton Oaks conference on World Security, which got underway at Washington Monday, opened for a three week's run under very fine and favorable auspices. Russia, Great Britain and the United States, very logically termed the Big Three in the United Nations framework, pledged "sovereign equality" of large and small nations alike, which at once gives to the meeting a standing and tone, without which all else would be meaningless to the scores of smaller nations allied in the present conflict.

The great imminence of and early victory in Europe, at least over Germany, will lend increasing strength and momentum to the Washington conversations, looking to the establishment of an international peace and general security.

8.22-44

"Sporadically," said one interpreter for the colored peoples of the United Nations, discussions have broken out in Negro channels of communica on regarding the question of whether or not colored peoples of the world would have a "voice at the peace table". The more recent demand comes from the League of Colored Peoples in London, who declared the ambition of their followers to be heard.

It is gratifying to note, according to press notice, Ethiopia Liberia and Haiti, have all had representation at the past conferences and are again represented at the Dumbarton Oaks meeting now in session.

From our own American stand point, we can see every good reason for representation for the three Negro Republics. They are there and can make a worthy contribution to the thought-process of their particular countries, as no other group can interpret properly the attitude and aspiration of their people. With equal candor, we assert, American Negroes should have a representative present, quite apart from those of Ethiopia, Liberia and Haiti. The success of such a conference will be more inclusive and satisfactory if such a course is extended so as to bring about Negro American representation.

Negroes In Post-War Era Discussed

Defender, Chicago, Ill

What will be the Negro's status during post war time?

That is the question that is ringing through the mind of every American civilian Negro and soldier, who will wake up in the face of a new world. 1-8-44

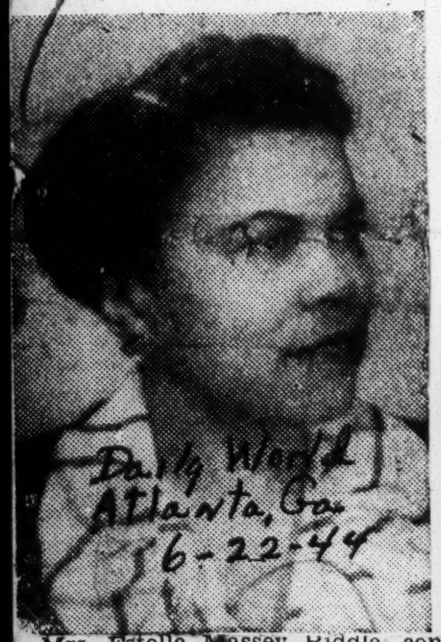
The Negroes on the home front have placed their shoulders to the wheels of commerce, and are pushing with all their might, that the wheels of vast production will not hamper plans and intentions of our military strategists.

The bombing of Pearl Harbor proved the Negro love for his country with the following day finding them in droves at recruiting stations throughout the United States.

Today in training camps throughout this country will find them in its vastness, busy making preparation to meet any future eventuality. Today will find them in various portions of the globe, building and fighting 1-8-44

What will be the status of the Negroes when this war is ended? Will democracy work in full swing? Will it be only for some people and denied others? Will it preach to the world what it does not practice? In this land of equality will there exist the same signs on the wall of public houses, "I am sorry we do not serve Negroes," "Negroes are not permitted at this theatre," "Negroes must sit in the rear of public conveyance," "We do not hire Negroes"?—Sgt. Cleveland W. Johson, Los Angeles, Calif.

Postwar Planner



Daily World Atlanta, Ga. 6-22-44

Mrs. Estelle Massey Riddle, consultant on Negro nursing for the National Council for War Service, has accepted an invitation to serve on the Executive Committee of the Committee on the Participation of Women in Post War Planning. Eleven national women's organizations, including the Y. W. C. A. and the National Association of Women Lawyers, are represented on the Committee.

Mission Council Offers Postwar Problems Plan

Journal & Guide. Norfolk, Va. 1-29-44

By BAXTER LEACH

NEW YORK—The Home Missions Council of North America in its annual meeting here at Marble Collegiate Church last Wednesday presented a comprehensive program to meet the needs of the church in the new erea. Two hundred and fifty Protestant church leaders attended, representing 23 denominations.

A joint statement by the executive secretaries said "During the war the churches and missions have been jolted out of their complacency and old routines. There can be no return to the way missions and church work were carried on before the war.

DEPLORES INCREASE OF RACE HATRED

"Churches must meet the increase of race and minority hatred." and suggest a program of "more rapid integration of language and race groups into the regular churches."

The council named a committee on postwar planning for Negroes. The committee will be represented by a member chosen from each of the denominations.

The Rev. Edgar A Love, superintendent of the department of Negro work, board of church extension, M. E. church, was elected chairman and Miss Helen C. Schmit, white missionary counselor of the Woman's American Baptist Home Missions Society, sceretary. 1-29-44

STUDY CONDITIONS

Each national denominational board will make a study of its own work among Negroes to ascertain what can be done to better the general living conditions of colored people.

The section on home missions and church extension recently selected Dr. Love to go to the west coast where thousands of Negroes have migrated from the south for work in defense factories, to make a study of conditions that the church general may get an accurate insight of racial problems.

The race question was freely and liberally discussed by the large group of American citizens present, a large majority of whom were white.

Dr. Charles E. Stewart, prominent minister of Portsmouth, Va., representing the AME Church, took an active part in the discussion and in an able manner proved himself the "man of the hour."

His eloquence and sound presentation of the subject under discussion swayed the audience who agreed with him in this one idea of "One God and One Human Family." 1-29-44

GROWTH OF STORE FRONT CHURCHES

"Churches must study and act on the spectacular growth of small emotional sects or store front religions," the program said "which are increasing in urban areas more rapidly than the old-established denominations."

"Churches must prepare to meet more fully the social aspects, effects of demobilization and population migration; must become teaching as well as preaching centers for the training of leaders; must foster a revival of youth movements and youth training must be prepared; must coordinate and unify forces to meet the moral deterioriation of American life, the growing juvenile delinquency that is expected to increase after the war and the breakdown of American life and consolidation of churches where possible."

DR. STEWART TO OFFER SELF TO MISSIONS

Dr. Stewart, in an interview after the meeting, declared that should he be elected to the Bishopric of his church at the coming general conference of the AME Church he will be glad to serve in the mission field. He also declared that the future of the church at home and abroad largely depends on a strong and well balanced missionary program.

DR. C. E. STEWART

Baptists Get to Work On Post War Planning

People's Voice-New York, N. Y. 2-26-44

Problems of minority groups, anti-Semitism, discrimination and segregation were listed as foremost among the general themes of discussion of the Post War Planning commission of the National Sunday School and Baptist Training Union congress, at a series of organizational and procedural conferences which began on Feb. 7, at the West Point Baptist church in Chicago and ended Feb. 17, in the Roanoke Baptist church, Hot Springs, Ark.

The members of the commission agreed to study the moral, social, economic and governmental problems confronting Negroes today and to prepare to provide remedial measures for problems which emerge from World War II.

The group listed the following other problems as points of consideration: soldier rehabilitation and re-employment; pastoral counselling and the guidance to the perplexed masses "who will find themselves confused because of the mesh of post war maladjustment"; youth training in the various vocations and in moral and spiritual leadership; full employment in industry; total integration in governmental interests and full cooperation toward the establishment of a just and durable peace policy for all nations.

The commission asks that interested persons please communicate with the office of the secretary, the Rev. David N. Licorish, 7 Albany Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Postwar Adjustment Report Ignores Racial Minorities

Tribune-Philadelphia, Pa. 2-26-44

By HARRY McALPIN
Washington Bureau N.N.P.A.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Ignoring the problem of discrimination because of race, creed, color and national origin, Bernard Baruch and John M. Hancock have submitted a 44-page report to War Mobilization Director James Byrnes, as requested by him, on War and Post War Readjustment Policies, which was released by the White House last week.

No mention is made of this No. 1, acute problem, which has begun already to rear its ugly head in industry cutbacks throughout the country in the form of disproportionate dismissal of Negroes.

The report, though it ignores this very real problem facing millions of Americans—Negroes, Mexicans, Jews and foreign born many of whom are in the armed services and in war work, nevertheless puts considerable stress on "the human problems of demobilization." 2-26-44

Baruch, after a press conference held following release of the report by the President, admitted to this correspondent that discriminations would definitely be one of the problems needing adjustment. He offered no reason for leaving it out of the report. 2-28-44

Hancock, who was the only other person associated with Baruch in preparing the report, told this correspondent that the report deals only with "economic problems." At the suggestion that considerable stress is given the "human problem," he said it was "impossible to cover everything."

"If we give the Japanese people a chance to throw off their military rulers and carry through a people's revolution we may expect at Japan in the future to be a force for world peace and prosperity."

7-9-44

WESTERNERS WARNS

mbree's warning to world was delivered ng session held in the ng session held in the apel. "If European nations to hold the East in sub-

Future Peace Depends Upon World Equality, Embree Says

Daily World—Atlanta, Ga.

Friday, July 21. All phases of inter-racial relations are being discussed at the sessions which are being attended by some 70 Negro and white educational, religious, community, and civic leaders from 17 states.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—All plans for world peace depend upon adjustments that will have to be made by the great white nations toward the colored peoples of the Far East, Dr. Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund and chairman of the newly-created American Council on Race Relations, declared in a lecture delivered before the American Association of Race Relations Institute of Race Relations now being held at Fisk University. The Institute opened Monday, July 3 and will continue through vengeance, or if we bolster the conservative forces, as we have so strangely done in Italy and France and Spain, then we will have the continued enmity of Japan and probably also of China and Soviet Russia." 7-9-44

SEES WORLD POWER SHIFT

After this war, he said, the center of world power politics will shift from Europe and the Atlantic to Asia and the Pacific.

"The great powers that come out of this war will be the United States, Soviet Russia, the British Empire, China and Japan," he said. Possible conflicts between these powers, all bordering the Pacific, will be over the control of the Pacific area, he said.

JOHNSON EXPOUNDS

Analyzing the development of racial prejudice in America and the world, Dr. Charles S. Johnson, race relations director of the American Missionary Association and head of the Fisk University Social Science Department said in a lecture that:

"There are in our American traditions, two philosophies which are deeply ingrained and conflicting." 7-9-44

He said that these philosophies are "the human philosophy which is definitely Christian" and "the philosophy of race based upon hierarchies of ruling races."

But "racial theories are comparatively new in our civilization," he added. "Racial self-consciousness dates back only a few hundred years to the expansion of European nations and the beginnings of the slave trade."

12 Amendments Urge For Peace And Democracy

World — Memphis, Tenn.

7-18-44

Proposals Are Made By N. Y. Harrison Jackson

NEW YORK—(A N P)—Twelve amendments to the constitution, which are designed to strengthen democracy here and influence world pace, were set forth last week by Harrison S. Jackson, prominent local attorney and candidate for general sessions court judge. Jackson, who is also Dr. Adam Clayton Powell's personal counselor and U. S. Government Appeal Agent, said that the 12 constitutional amendments will serve to protect minority groups. 7-18-44

In a preface to his 12 suggested amendments, Jackson said that the formers of the constitution met together for the purposes of forming a more perfect union, and the provisions therein for the government of the people. They had in mind the then present conditions with the possibility of some changing conditions in the future, he said, pointing out that they never could have foreseen the needs, exigencies, the discriminations and persecutions of minority groups, the asticity of the constitution promulgated by the judiciary, contrary to reason. He mentioned the 13th, 14th and 15th amendments and explained how they had been misconstrued by the judiciary and others so as to nullify their protective value to minority groups. 7-18-44

HITS SCOTT DECISION

"The Dred Scott and other decisions stand as a sordid monument to the interpretation of Constitution law by some of the judiciary," he said. "It is only recently and during the Roosevelt administration that the supreme court, practically as a whole, has rendered decisions consonant with good training, deliberation and good sense."

Atty. Jackson's amendments number 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32 and 33.

Amendment 22 advocates more federal protection of property rights for all citizens regardless of race, creed or color, amendment 23 eliminates racial discrimination and segregation in the armed forces; amendment 24 abolishes poll tax, and "white" primaries; amendment 25 deals with the country's educational systems and enforces the inclusion of all data on American citizens in text books regardless of race, creed, or color, amendment 26 sets up a U. S. Employment service and Permanent FEPC; amendment 27 restricts personal income to a $75,000 maximum; amendment 28 gives representation to all minority groups at the peace table, "whether this country is at war or not;" amendment 29 establishes a permanent OPA; amendment 30 abolishes filibusters; amendment 31 establishes U. S. control of all transportation systems; and amendment 32 sets up a federal insurance system for the benefit of all citizens. Congress is given power to enforce each amendment. 7-18-44

HOWARD GRADUATE

A graduate of Howard and Fordham universities, Jackson received his degree in jurisprudence from New York university's law school. He is chairman of the Coordinating Committee for Employment; chief counsel for the People's committee and chief counsel for the Abyssinian Baptist Church and Dr. Adam Clayton Powell, who is a candidate for congress from the new Harlem congressional district.

Optimistic View Taken By Weaver

World — Memphis Tenn.

7-18-44

CHICAGO — (ANP) — An optimistic forecast that spelled greater job opportunities for Negro workers in the post war period was made last week when Dr. Robert C. Weaver, director of Mayor Kelly's committee on race relations, addressed the University of Chicago's fourth annual conference for social science teachers. 7-18-44

Discussing "The Negro and Post War Employment," Dr. Weaver asserted that the Negro's occupational advances and his expanding diversification of employment offer a frame work for his wider interrigtaon in the industries of the nation. Unlike Negroes at the close of World War I, the Negro of today is a participating member in most labor organizations and is knocking at the doors of those unions which exclude him, he said.

"The extent to which these gains will persist will be determined by the general level of employment and the rate and timing of technoligical changes," Dr. Weaver declared. He envisioned the prospect of a disproprotionately large number of Negro workers without jobs if the was is followed by a period of serious long run employment.

Solution of Color Problem Vital to an Enduring Peace

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.

30 Speakers at Ohio Conference See Racial Discrimination as Cause of World War III

7-22-44

YELLOW SPRINGS, Ohio. — That race and color are world rather than local or United States problems was the conclusion of over thirty speakers at the Institute on Conditions for an Enduring Peace held at Antioch College here July 5-15.

Conference leaders included Dr. Charles Wesley, president of Wilberforce University; Dr. Rayford W. Logan of Howard University, William H. Chamberlin, correspondent; Haridas Muzumdar, biographer of Gandhi, and Richard J. Walsh, editor of Asia.

Might Cause Third War

Stressing the need for admission of racial equality, Mr. Chamberlin declared that the color question might well be the cause of a third world war when the peoples of India and China master technology and large-scale administration. 7-22-44

Arthur E. Morgan, engineer and expert on the small community, concurred with Mr. Chamberlin, adding that race discrimination deeply wounds the dignity and self-respect of those discriminated against.

All speakers agreed that the solution to the problem is twofold, the first phase being the abolition of the problem at home and the second the destruction of imperialism and the empire system.

Hurts Foreign Policy

Dr. Wesley's contention that the local solution is significant because of the effect of discrimination in America on international relations was cited by Dr. Logan who pointed out the deleterious effect on the "Good Neighbor Policy."

Declaring imperialism to be outdated, Mr. Chamberlin said that destruction of the empire system would not end the problem but would open the way to the removal of prejudices by education. 7-22-44

"While slavery may at first have been only economic inequality, the resulting rationalization that colored people were enslaved because they were inferior has taken firm root," said Dr. Logan, warning that the problem is not simple.

Persecute Brothers

He further pointed to the fact that certain classes of colored people, such as the aristocracies in Abyssinia, Liberia and Haiti and light-skinned people here, tend to exploit the masses and those darker in color.

Speaking July 11 on "The Individual's Responsibility in a Democracy," Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt declared that only by the strength and patience of the minorities and the fair-mindedness of others can racial difficulties be avoided after the war.

BENEFITS PLEDGED TO NEGRO VETERANS

Times — New York N.Y.

10-1-44

Program Being Developed for Service Men Will Help Them, Officer Tells Urban League

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 30— United States armed forces have under way an extensive rehabilitation and job-counseling program to help prepare veterans for return to civilian life, according to an address by Maj. Samuel P. Roach today at the industrial relations session of the conference of the National Urban League. Major Roach is attached to the classification and replacement branch of the Adjutant General's Office in Washington.

"This program will be of the utmost benefit to Negro veterans in analyzing skills, training and experience, so that they may determine their place in the post-war employment picture," Major Roach said.

Plans are being worked out for setting up centers all over the United States where service men will be sent prior to discharge, to be counseled on demobilization problems, he said. A thorough study of their abilities will be made and a report presented to each discharged man to serve as an introduction to prospective employers, he added. 10-1-44

Richard R. Jefferson, industrial secretary of the St. Louis Urban League, said that the job of persuading workers to accept the idea of Negro integration into industry was even more important than convincing management. He added that the Negro cause could be advanced through gradual education of workers and management rather than by attempt at exerting pressure.

Reviewing the past year's work

...ace, creed or color, league's approach to the problem ...oundest ways to in- of full employment to everyone ...g of a lasting peace. regardless of race, creed or color ...e war but lose the will give management, labor and ...challenge the very Government basic and intelligent ...e human race and techniques for its successful solu... ...ld not justify our tion." ...oduction records at ...ifices on the battle ...time. ...r hope that the regardless of race, creed or color, ...ations." Subjects included "Race Riot Prevention," and responsibility in regard to pressure movements. 10-1-44

Full Employment Urged

R. F. Nelson, vice president of the Arma Corporation of Brooklyn, said in a telegram today to the Urban League conference:

"Full employment for all men, ...of he league, Guichard Parris, industrial relations field secretary of the national organization, declared that the most important program of the league was in industrial relations. He cited the need of working out a course of action to spare the Negro from bearing the brunt of unemployment cutbacks.

The workshop session in the afternoon was given over to discussion of "Racial Conflict Situ...

47n-1944

NEGROES' ROLE IN PEACE WORLD TO BE DISCUSSED

Tribune-Chicago Ill.

A conference called by the planning committee for united minorities will be held next Friday and Saturday at the Pershing hotel, 6400 Cottage Grove avenue. Such topics as the Negro in post-war politics, integration of the Negro into American democracy and the effect of a national service law on Negro labor will be considered. The call for the conference said that it is "paradoxical that the 'cradle of liberty and democracy' should be rocked also by the hand of more race prejudice, race hatred and race discrimination than any other nation now engaged in fighting for freedom." Negroes hope, it added, that one of the results of the conflict will be the right to participate "in the much heralded four freedoms."

2-26-44

A Serious Omission

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga

The conspicuous absence of the names of any Negro leaders from Governor Ellis Arnall's State Planning Commission for Post-War Development in Georgia is most serious and glaring. 1-27-44

The purpose and scope of the governor's Commission is to develop "an entire program for every field of human endeavor and to utilize fully Georgia's natural and human resorces."

Terming it "the most serious job ever undertaken in Georgia", the governor's 21-member State Agricultural and Industrial Board is to formulate a comprehensive "blue print for Georgia's future".

We can think of no strong and sufficient reason for the governor's failure to name some four or five able Negro represetatives to the Commission. In fact, there are many all-important reasons why they should still be added to the Commission.

In any "blue print for a post-war Georgia" we would not like to believe that State officials would overlook or underestimate the grave necessity of Negroes sharing more equitably in the matters of representation on the police forces in our cities; a more equal distribution of public services and salaries, a fuller measure of justice in the courts; fuller participation of Negroes in local government in the state, and less subjection to fear, peonage and other associated evils. 1-27-44

In all seriousness, we believe the governor simply overlooked the importance of naming some Negro representatives to the Commission. And inasmuch as the Commission has not yet begun its work, we recommend their appointment, even at this time.

Postwar Race Conference Planned For Memphis Soon

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga

5-16-44

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(SNS— A man who is an expert map-

Post-War & Peace Plans

ping out plans for the expansion and development of industrial establishments—one whose advice is sought by the leaders of the various industrial plants in Memphis, who has a word in the plans of the numerous new businesses who wish to establish plants in Memphis, and who has one of the most important voices in the employment status and wage scales for Negroes in this area, is Mr. Arthur N. Fields, an Industrial Engineer, and head of the Industrial Division of the Memphis Chamber of Commerce (white).

Next Thursday night, this strategically-placed industrial adviser, Mr. Fields, will occupy the role of being the first authoritative speaker to appear before the hitherto more or less vague and un-objective "Post War Planning Organization," headed by Mr. Matthew "Mayor of Beale Street" Thornton, Sr. The meeting will be held at the East Trigg Avenue Baptist Church, Rev. W. H. Brewster, pastor, Thursday night, May 18th, at 8 p. m.

For several months the "Mayor of Beale Street," Mr. Thornton, has been endeavoring to interest Memphis Negroes in the matter of taking thought as to "what will be the place of civilian and returning Negro service personnel in the world which will exist after the war."

Thursday night's meeting will mark the first time that Mr. Thornton will have been successful in securing the services of a man who can speak with the voice of authority relative to his views about "the Negro in Memphis and the nation following this war."

In an interview last Saturday Mr. Fields revealed that his subject for the address at the East Trigg Avenue Baptist Church on Thursday night will be "Post War Possibilities for Business in Memphis," and in his address he will stress the possibilities for the expansion and development of Negro business in Memphis.

This reporter was astounded to hear him say "possibilities for the development of "Negro Business in Memphis," and asked another question designed to establish whether or not he meant what he said. 5-16-44

Mr. Fields did mean what he said. He elaborated on the theme to the extent of pointing out that "Memphis is located in an area which has only of comparative recent date been centered in the attention of men who build industrial instead of agricultural economics there will be great opportunities for those who realize this trend and prepare themselves to move with it—as the area prospers the Negro business man will prosper as well as the Negro working man."

Mr. Fields, whose job with the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, calls for the compilation of facts and figures which have a bearing on the inviting of new industries to the Memphis area, and recommendations on the expansion of those already located here, is perhaps the city's most important figure whose opinions have a most significant weight in determining "how much money the Negro workers in these parts earns in industrial plants," on "how many Negroes will be employed," and on "how the Negro worker will be treated on his job."

However, Mr. Fields' authoritative position as head of the Industrial Division of the Memphis Chamber of Commerce, and as a trained and experienced Industrial Engineer, who has been working in Memphis for the past five years, is very important in determining the answers local industrialists will make to the problems raised by the presence of the Negro worker in an increasingly industrialized South.

He painted a picture of the opportunities here and the chances that Negro business men have for making advancement based on efficiency and intelligence.

Mr. Fields is convinced that many of the gains which Negroes have made on the industrial front in Memphis will be kept. He said, after pointing out that Memphis was largely an agricultural center in the past, that the city is now rapidly becoming industrialized and that there will be a demand for competent industrial workers.

He disclosed that 'local industrial leaders recognize the trend of industry today to endeavor to bring costs down—selling prices down—so that people can buy more for less—however, they are not pre-occupied or desirous of adopting plans to lower wages or otherwise lower the workers' scale of living." 5-16-44

He pointed out the possible role which modern inventions, such as the mechanical cotton-picker will play in the future industrial employment picture in the South. He observed that the development of this device will be similar to that of the history of the automobile industry which, after passing through a period of extreme expensiveness, proved to be one of the first mass production industris, providing the public with cheaper cars and providing more jobs.

In his address Thursday night, Mr. Fields said there will be a period allotted for questions and discussion from the audience.

Launch Move To Have Negro In Deliberations

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
4-2-44

Propose Tour Of Battlefronts By Jemison, Austin

CHICAGO—(A N P) — Recommendations on post-war planning, endorsed this week by the Baptist Pastors conference of Chicago and vicinity, named Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson of Howard university to be the Negro representative at the peace table. Dr. D. V. Jemison, president of the National Baptist convention, Inc., and Dr. J. C. Austin, pastor of Pilgrim Baptist Church here, were chosen to tour army camps and battle fronts to visit men of the baptist faith.

Declaring that the present world conflict is "destroying many of the gains of man across the centuries," the convention committee on post-war planning pointed out that many of the institutions of civilization are seriously threatened, and the foundations which have been the pillars of civilization have been shaken.

START POST WAR PLANNING

Headed by the Rev. E. J. Coles, president the Baptist Pastors conference, adopted in toto the report of the convention committee on post-war planning which stressed the impact upon weak nations and minority racial groups as a result of this great world crisis and characterized them as "grave and disturbing." There three-points of recommendations are designed to be in keeping with the immediate task of winning the war and the peace. 4-2-44

While endorsing a Negro representative at the peace table, the committee urgd the selection of a man whose voice is "true to the best ideals and highest hopes of Your committee is mindful 3. "Your committee is convinced r reaching work and study that the Baptist men in war ser-to post war world condi- vice yearn to see and hear men suggest that the Prest- of their faith in the camps at appoint a committee in-home and abroad at the war fronts.

our colleges, social leaders Thus we recommend that this isters. board will approve the sending to the home and foreign fields our honored president, Dr. D. V. Jemi-

JEMISON TOUR

com- defined. Your
2. We recommend that a
Johnson possesses the character, careful study of the state of the incident to p the training, the foresight, based country and what these conditions and sug upon the scientific conclusions of forbode for the post-war world: and dent will appo istory, and the courage to fitting- out of their careful and comprehen- cluding our c y represent the race. we recom- sive study report their findings to and ministers mend that he be endorsed to go," our Convention that our course of the conference said. procedure may well be charted and PROPOSE JE son, and the gifted Dr. J. C. Austin, to carry to our Baptist men cheer and comfort and the assurance of our interest in them and concern for them; and that we seek approval of the President of the nationa and secretary of the war departments in sending representatives to the war fronts."

The committee members are: Dr. C. A. Wallace, chairman, Illinois; Dr. Earl Harison, Washington, D. C.; Dr. George H. Sims, New York City; Dr. T. M. Chambers, Texas; Dr. J. H. Brown, Illinois; Dr. E. L. Todd, Michigan; Dr. A. Wendell Ross, California; Dr. G. W. Gayden, Mississippi; Dr. J. R. Jamison, Ark; Dr. T. S. Boone, Texas; Dr. R. C. Woods, secretary, Arkansas and Dr. W. E. Wadlington.

Pursuit Of Democracy

Courier - Pittsburg, Pa.
1-8-44

Post-War Mecca For Rural Negro Youths Is New Western Empire

By MARJORIE McKENZIE

POST-WAR planning in terms of specific and scientific recommendations, rather than the general objectives already well-defined, is one of the first 1944 tasks of our leadership. The best first statement on the post-war problems of Negro war workers and servicemen appears in the final chapter of Dr. Charles S. Johnson's recent study of racial tension areas, "To Stem This Tide." It is clear that minority groups will have to rely greatly upon continued government protection and control for their future security.

Miss McKenzie

In this connection, it is worthwhile to consider seriously the possibilities of implementing the advice of those who exhort the Negro to move out of the South. There is this eminently quotable statement on the subject by Edwin Embree, which appeared in "Survey Graphic's" special edition, "Color: Unfinished Business of Democracy," in November, 1942: "There is no decent life for all of you in the Southern rurals so far as the mind of man can see. You'll have a hard time even in the North and West, but at least you'll have some freedom. You'll once in a while be treated as human beings. You'll have decent schools for your children and some public provision for recreation, for reading and listening to music, for rest and play. You'll have some opportunity for work and professional practice in sections that are prosperous and progressive. And as you leave the South you will relieve your fellows of that pressure which is always heaviest where the colored masses are densest. At least another million Negroes should move out of the South during this decade. Move North, my colored friends, keep moving North and West."

ICKES GIVES ANSWER ON RESETTLEMENT

As a practical matter, however, well-organized families, cautious about their economic security and community status, are not likely to engage in random migration. Less stable, less desirable unattached individuals will risk adventure, but they do not tend to establish new roots and nothing is gained by them or the race through their aimless wandering. But the Negro family in search of freedom and opportunity not afforded by the South, recently has been given one answer to the problems of resettlement by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes in an article appearing in the Sunday magazine section of The Washington Star.

SECRETARY ICKES describes the great promise of what he calls America's new western empire, the public lands of the Northwest, which are being reclaimed by means of irrigation. He states that this newly irrigated territory comprises some of the richest land in the United States and is capable of supporting an additional population of 4,000,000 citizens. This new frontier is the basis of Mr. Ickes' post-war program for returning soldiers.

HOMESTEAD REQUIREMENTS

1-8-44

The extension of irrigation means the building of dams. The annual report of the Bureau of Reclamation indicates that 6 of the 15 storage dams under construction have been completed. War restrictions have halted further operations, but activity will be resumed after the war and this will mean post-war employment. Negro workers who have learned skills in war production should find opportunities at various skill levels in Western locales where color is not a traditional barrier.

AFTER dams are built, the opportunity for homesteading on the public domain should induce many workers to remain. All unappropriated, surveyed public lands, valuable for the production of crops are subject to homestead entry, after classification, if they are not mineral or saline in character or are not occupied for trade or business. A homestead entryman must be 21 years of age or the head of a family and a citizen of the United States. Ordinarily he may apply for 160 acres if he does not own more than 160 acres. Residence must be established on the tract within six months after application and must be maintained for a period of three years. Cultivation of the land for at least two years and the building of a habitable house are required. After he has submitted proof of fulfillment of these requirements and paid approximately $1 an acre, the entryman obtains fee simple title. Special homestead rights are allowed ex-service men.

NO ESTABLISHED RACE PATTERN

The latest report of the General Land office states that there are about 400,000,000 acres in the public land states of the West, most of which are vacant and unreserved, much of which is not yet officially surveyed. 1-8-44

THERE are no segregation laws in these states, no established patterns of discrimination. One post-war mecca of Negro youth of the rural South, should be not the crowded cities of the North or South, but this new unconquered world.

EDITOR'S DIGEST

Weekly Review
By ROBERT DURR
Birmingham Ala.

Post War Planning

1-22-44

Seems that except in general terms, the Negro, in so far as the postwar planning setups are concerned s to be the forgotten man. I do not bel eve in post war planning by various groups for themselves, especially where those groups have the overall responsibility to all groups, but when such is the case, it is well that the excepted group do some planning of its own for the preservaton of its own — that being the first law of nature in the raw.

Real planning to meet the basic human needs of our people represents the greatest single need of the community. What lifth a neglected minorty such as ours, lifts the whole community. Missing the bus in that connection means bongling this whole business of post war planning for peace and prosperity. It might be best in the long run though, for it is far better for one to do his own planning that to have another do it for him, if that must be the case. However, do not forget that it is tragic to be forced by neglect to have to do this far a part of the whole rather than as part of the whole.

It would be quite a fine thing if the ministers of this community were to unite in sponsoring a committee which, with a paid secretary would do some planning for the Negro — the first section to be submitted to the city, county and state boards for execution and the second section for execution by Negroes for Negroes. 1-22-44

Among the many projects we suggest to be included in the first section, would be at least another honest-to-goodness high school; the building of a real library building; a central community center building containing a large auditorium for cultural programs, an auditorium for entertainment such as basketball, twistifications and community meetings, an indoor swimming pool, headquarters for club meetings with kitchen and dining rooms, etc. The Negro hospital effort should be augmented or emplemented in these plans to the end that after the sponsors of the hospital effort have done all they can by the way of raising funds, the rest of the needed money will be forthcoming and a tie in wth some source of public support for the operation of this project may be had.

The second section of the post war plans should, it seems to me, have to do with what Negroes may do to create business and job opportunities for Negroes. In that connection, it would be well for such large Negro concerns as North Carolina Mutual Insursance Company, Atlanta Life Insurance Company, Pilgrim Life and Health Insurance Company as well as the Smith and Gaston interests and similar concerns to be urged to invest intwo or three large better housing projects. The city housing authority as a part of the first section of suggested projects, would sponsor capable individhousing projects.

Some type of national or Southwide holding concern should be set up with Negro capital which would sponsor capable individuals in the opening and first-step operation of various types of businesses until the operators were able to make said businesses walk on their own.

Millions of dollars will be spent by Negroes for automboiles and there should be Negro setups to handle some of that business. There is plenty of room for furniture, clothing and automobile accessories stores and grocery stores operated by Negroes in Negro communities just next door to every such store operated by a non-Negro merchant. This situation would furnish employment for millions of Negroes all over the country through the effort of Negroes. The aid of such setups as the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and FSA might be had to assure a good test of it. 1-22-44 ence, and says Japan's bitterness over this resulted in the Pearl Harbor attack.

---

She then quoted a Times item on China's present request which said, "The United States and Great Britain — as in 1919 — will probably oppose any attempt to have such a clause in the constitution of the new world security organization." 10-14-44 cied two items on this subject with the warning that Americans would do well to consider them together.

---

Repetition of 1919

One was from Hallett Abend's new book on treaties which holds the United States responsible for rejection of a proposal by China and Japan to recognize racial equality at the 1919 peace confer-

---

Baltimore, Md.
(NNPA) — WASHINGTON

The second phase of the Dumbarton Oaks peace talks ended last with no action taken on China's proposal that the future world organization acknowledge the principle of equality of all races and states. 10-14-44

In a letter to the New York Times, before the conference ended, Pearl Buck, noted author,

Equality Ignored at Peace Talks

47n-1944

Post-War Planning

POST-WAR PLANNING

Plaindealer — Kansas City, Kan.

There is much talk about Post-War planning. . . . Everybody is making preparations to live after the present war comes to an end. It is smart to plan for the future, those who prepare for the future are more able to make adjustments to the world than the fellow who only lives for a day.

There are many things that could be said about Post-War planning, but we only wish to make one suggestion.

Our great task in the Post-War world will not be solving the racial problem so much, but rather getting our own house clean. . . . If we can give our people more education, common sense, vision, intelligence, honesty, dependability, efficiency and decency, we will be able to participate in a Democracy. Our status will demand that recognition be given us along all lines. We must keep up the fight to defeat racial barriers, but we must not neglect to keep up the fight to get our own house in order. 8-25-44

Of course, there are thousands of us who can measure up to any requirements of good citizens in all phases, but there are also thousands walking in darkness holding the entire race back. Our great task is going to be keeping the young jitterbug element, the hoodlum, both old and young, the hair-brain radical, the political crooks, the ignorant and the Uncle Tom under control and elevate them to a status that will not take away the social, economic, political and religious gains already achieved. In order to go forward, we must give the problem within our race some real attention throughout this country.

The task is not being neglected, but we wish to call attention at this point to the fact, that too much cannot be done in getting our own house right.

Veterans' Federal Educational Benefits

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va.

BRIGADIER General Frank T Hines, administrator of veterans affairs, has stated that within three weeks after President Roosevelt approved the Servicemen's Adjustment Act of 1944, the so-called GI Bill of Rights, 1,000 veterans of World War II have made applications for federal educational benefits. 7-29-44

Under the provisions of the act a veteran, to be eligible for such benefits must have had at least ninety days military service since September 16, 1940, and his education must have been interrupted by his enlistment in the armed forces. For the purpose of eligibility, veterans who entered the service before reaching 25 years of age are deemed to have had their education interrupted.

The nature of the educational benefits provided are outlined in a news story published elsewhere in this paper. Suffice it to say here that with veterans being invalidated home in increasing numbers, it is highly important that the provisions of the Servicemen's Adjustment Act be emphasized among the race group.

Hundreds of thousands of young men entered the service prior to reaching 25 years of age. The thousands who will be mustered out, in spite of the devastation of war, will be automatically eligible for educational and other benefits. It is here where community, civic and educational interests should exert pressure, to the end that only an insignificant minimum of these men do not ignore or pass up the opportunity to gain an education, which otherwise might not have been their advantage to gain. 7-29-44

The provisions of the law regarding veterans' loans and employment are exceedingly worthwhile, but the younger men discharged from military service should be primarily concerned with the educational aid. Aid derived from this source carries a higher moral, spiritual and economic value, and is more permanent in its effect.

CHINA SPEAKS

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

Unity and Respect for Minority Rights Is Key To Post-War Security

By LIU LIANG-MO

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

8-26-44

LAST week I spoke to a group of American people in a beautiful chapel on Huntington Beach by the shore of Lake Ontario. There I met an old couple who showed to me a piece of Chinese embroidery, with four Chinese words: "Flying hero over China." They told me that it is a gift of the Chinese people to their son who was a flyer in China. "But," they said, "our son had died only a few days ago in the city of Hengyang, the city which fought to its last man. He wanted us to love the Chinese people because he loved them deeply." They quietly left me, didn't even leave their names. I was deeply moved. It is people like these who are winning the war and winning the peace. They are great. They are brave. Fascists of the world can never conquer them; or rather, they will defeat the Fascists, and build a new, free world where people will respect, understand and help each other.

Mr. Liu Liang-Mo

This American Unknown Soldier has shed his blood in China, and had buried his body and heart side by side with his Chinese comrades whom he deeply respected and loved. It is the duty of us who are still living to win the war and peace so that the next generations will not go through the baptism of fire and death again.

BEWARE OF HATE MONGERS 8-26-44

But then I hear some people are crying: "Hate the Jew! Hate the Negroes! Hate the Communists! Hate all the foreigners!" That is the cry of Fascists. They are sowing the seeds of a third war. Beware of them.

I hear some people are crying: "Let us negotiate peace with the enemy." Beware of them and mark them well, for they are wolves in sheeps' skin. They speak for the enemy. They want to help the enemy to regain their strength, so that they can fight the world again.

I SEE that the preliminary conference on international post-war security, between America, Great Britain, Soviet Union and China has begun its discussions. This is another step toward real world peace. We must watch it very carefully.

A lasting peace can only be built on equality and harmony. As a matter of fact, that is the exact meaning of the Chinese words for peace: "Ho-Ping" — Harmony and equality."

We must not overlook the rights of the small nations and peoples. Last week I told you about the propositions of the World Citizens' league; this week I want to pass on to you the following two things:

Frank Kingdon, radio commentator, said on April 24, 1944: "If we really want peace we can have it. The difficulty is that we want peace and a lot of other things that are inconsistent with it. We want empire. We want advantages in world trade and politics. If a nation is going to put this first and peace second, then we will not have peace." The era of imperialism is over. Imperialism breeds war. 8-26-44

The American Jewish conference has placed before the post-war security conference an "International Bill of Rights" which states:

1. Full and complete protection of life, liberty, freedom of worship and civil rights for the inhabitants of all countries without discrimination of birth, nationality, language, race, or religion.
2. Equality of rights in law are in fact for all the citizens of every country.
3. The inalienable right of all religious, ethic and cultural groups to maintain and foster their respective group identities on the basis of equality.
4. The establishment of appropriate and adequate and international machinery to secure the enforcement of these rights.

ONE of the most important phases of this conference is how to stop the aggressor if there is one. We prefer a quick and direct way rather than a prolonged and indirect one. 8-26-44

The key to the success of this conference is unity among the United Nations and respect for the right of all the peoples and nations of the world, especially the oppressed, exploited and the minorities.

"I Went to My Own and Washington, D.C. Tribune — Washington, D.C. They Received Me Not"

We have always tried to keep the interest of our readers foremost in our effort to publish a newspaper. For twenty-five years we have stood as a watchdog here in the nation's capital for the rights of Negroes in and around Washington. We have lost no time in pulling the cover off of those who have denied these people their rights as American citizens and have given credit to those who have aided in making Washington a better place for all citizens. 8-26-44 will have the charge-

We inaugurated, a few weeks ago, a house-to- THE TRIBUNE — Washington, D.C. Tribune house survey to determine the economic and consumer status of the Negro in and around Washington. This to your attention the fact that we must less to bring to yo is a public service feature which we hope will enable for the hard days ahead. This means now prepare for t ns to properly present your case to those persons who that we (Tribune) must have the information that is asked on the questionnaire. If we are to be able to present the facts, so we may demand a place for your loved ones, of the arm forces, to return to, if we are to have a Washington that will practice the tenets of the democracy that so much sacrifice is now being made for, it is necessary that we have the truth and the whole truth. 8-26-44

We have a group of well trained young ladies making this survey. These people are making the survey to help you, and you, and you. It has been reported to us that there are some people who not only refuse to answer the questions asked them, but are also discourteous. This is a sad indictment on the culture of Washington. We hate to think that there are Negroes living in Washington who are so disinterested in their own welfare that they will refuse to answer questions that will aid in the plans for making their future secure.

These young ladies must be able to appreciate the saying of the Master, "I WENT TO MY OWN AND THEY RECEIVED ME NOT." We are not criticizing those of you who fail to aid in shaping a better future for you and your posterity. We still have enough faith in the people of Washington to believe that we will get enough information to propertly present your case. 8-26-44

We are attempting to get the truth and nothing but the truth. Negro agencies, when fighting for the rights of our people, have often been criticized for not properly presenting their cases and have lost quite a few, because of this. We are going to have the correct information and we will win because we will have the facts. Remember, "I WENT TO MY OWN AND THEY RECEIVED ME NOT."

Negro Postwar Parley Today

Daily Worker
New York, N.Y. 10-4.

Many problems facing the Negro in the postwar world will be the theme of a two-day conference beginning at 11:30 this morning (Saturday) at the Abyssinian Baptist Church, 132 W. 138th St. The series of panel discussions and reports will end at 5:30 p. m. today and will be continued from 3:30 to 5 p. m. tomorrow.

Dr. Adam Clayton Powell will make the keynote speech. Dr. Dan W. Dodson, executive director of the Mayor's Committee on Unity, will make the introductory address. James Egbert Allen, president of the New York State Conference, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, will preside today. 10-21-44

PANELS

There will be panels on "Health and Hospitalization." "Housing and Rents." "Minority Groups," "A Permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee." "Problems Confronting Youth," "Veteran and Soldier Rehabilitation," "Reconversion," "Re-employment," "Responsibility of Government in Reconversion," "Responsibility of Labor In Reconversion." 10-21-44

Scheduled speakers also include Mabel K. Staupers, executive secretary, National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses; Alma Vesels, assistant consultant on Negro program, National Nursing Council for War Service.

Dumbarton Peace Proposal Condemned By Dr. Du Bois

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
10-22-44

Failure To Accept Principle Of Racial Equality Is Rapped

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (SNS) — In a statement to the conference of Americans United for World Organization, held at the Department of State, October 16, in which several hundred were in attendance Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, representing the NAACP, raised the whole issue of colonies and imperialism bringing out the inadequacy of proposals made on each.

Basing his summary remarks on study of the published proposals of the Dumbarton Oaks Conferences, in regard to colonials, Dr. DuBois said, "It virtually says to six hundred million human beings ,if not to a majority of mankind, that the only way to human equality is the philanthopy of masters who have historic and strong interest in preserving their present power and income." In outlining precisely, details for the basis of this conclusion, Dr. DuBois elaborated as follows: 10-22-44

PLAN DEPRESSION

"As I have gone through the published proposals at Dumbarton Oaks, I am depressed to realize with what consistency the matter of colonies has been passed over. In chapter one, paragraph three, the emphasis is on the fact that this is a union of nations, not of races, groups, or organizations of men, not recognized as nations; in chapter two, paragraph one, peace-loving 'States' alone may join the Union; in chapter six, apparently an aggrieved party must be a state in order to complain or appear before the Council; similarly in chapter seven, no colonies as such can appeal for hearing before the International Court of Justice.

"Elaborate effort is made to protect states from aggression, but I find no provisions in chapter seven even to consider aggression of a nation on its own colonial peoples while apparently international military force can be called in to suppress revolt. Indeed in paragraph seven of that chapter it seems definitely to say that colonial disputes lie entirely beyond the jurisdiction of this proposed government of men.

"The Economic and Social Council set up in this chapter offers some ray of hope: It can recommend and consider complaints and situations; but there is no direct power to investigate conditions. The Council is appointed by eighteen states with no colonial participation indicated." 10-22-44

HASTIE PRESENT

Among organization representatives, Dr. DuBois was one of the few recognized for a statement, by Under Secretary of State, Stettinius. Judge William H. Hastie also represented the NAACP at this meeting designed for discussion, relative to proposals for an international organization to maintain peace and security.

Urges Support Of Dumbarton Agreement

Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.
10-21-44

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Calling it "the keystone of international cooperation for achieving world democracy," officers of the Council on African Affairs, headed by Paul Robeson, have indicated their endorsement of the main principles embodied in the Dumbarton Oaks agreement for the establishment of a general international organization to be called the united nation.

The council's officers declared that the proposals agreed upon by representatives of the United States the Soviet Union, Britain and China should have the fullest support of the Negro people and all progressive forces.

"The isolationists and imperialists who are opposed to our present foreign policy will do their best to distort and defeat these proposals for the establishment of a world organization which is stronger, more comprehensive, and more democratic in its structure and aims than the old league of nations." it was said. 10-21-44

Particular attention was called to the provisions for an economic and social council which is described as follows in the published text of the proposals.

"With a view to the creation of conditions of stability and well-being which are necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations, the organization should facilitate solutions of international economic, social and other humanitarian problems and, promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. Responsibility for the discharge of this function should be vested in the general assembly and, under the authority of the general assembly, in an Economic and social council."

A Trumpet Player

Interned By Nazi's Four Years

Call — Kansas City, Mo.

Liberation Comes as Allie Free France; Tells of Propaganda Used to Split Men

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR

9-22-44

PARIS. — (ANP) — Arthur Briggs, the famous trumpet player, was the first musician of distinction I met in Paris after coming here with Allied forces. He had just been released from the prisoner of war camp at St. Denis where he had been detained for four years, and was able to give me a graphic account of Nazi propaganda efforts aimed at colored prisoners, and also told of how the Germans tried to kill them all as the Allied troops neared the prison camp.

Briggs, reputed to be the best trumpet player in Europe and achieved fame in practically every European capital, played for Noble Sissle when he was in Europe. Noble wanted Briggs to be his first chair man and in consequence he offered him a colossal salary. Arthur Briggs gave up his band and joined Noble. He went with him to London where the orchestra had a great success playing at the famous Ciro's club. An interesting partnership developed between Noble Sissle and Arthur Briggs, for not only was he first chair man but he bec me Noble's secretary and returned to America with the orchestra. 9-22-44

When France capitulated, Briggs made no attempt to get away for he did not contemplate an entry of the German forces so rapidly. Hence, he stayed in Paris with his wife. Six weeks later a general census of all foreigners were taken and he was told to report to police to be interned. The order was suddenly cancelled but he was later arrested and sent to St.. Denis camp Oct. 17, 1940.

Three days after he was in the camp he formed an orchestra of six pieces to break the monotony and boredom of camp life which was fearfully depressing at the outset. They started out with swing music but later when the orchestra was augmented to 25 pieces, they devoted their endeavors to classical music. The orchestra became a source of much happiness and comfort to the 2,000 internees of the camp.

At the beginning of their internment a trio was formed as well which consisted of Briggs, Gay Martin from West Afirca and Owen Macouly, of England. The orchestra rehearsed every morning in the theater. Among the internes there were men from every profession in life hence they were able to build a theater just as perfect as any in Paris. It was called the St. Denis theater. Red Cross boxes were used to build the stage and dressing rooms; and cigaret tins were employed for stage settings. The artists in the camp did the decorating and scenery.

There were about 50 colored boys in the camp and Briggs told me that there were no manifestations of color prejudice. Briggs himself was well respected by every member of the camp. On the whole the Germans behaved decently with the exception of a few Nazi upstarts who tried to show their leopard spots.

9-22-44

Germans Bombed Camp

On the night of Aug. 24 the Germans opened the gates of the camp and ran away. Next day the Swiss consul went to the camp and told the men that they were free but must remain in the camp until arrangements were made for transportation. The night of the 25th, in typical Nazi fashion, they were encircled and the Huns did their best to destroy them. They were bombarded by a Tiger Tank which dropped a number of shells on the camp.

After that horrible night every one tried to get away the best way possible. Briggs hired a cart together with a pal of his and pushed it five miles to their destination with their belongings. Arthur Briggs was once again united with his wife. 9-22-44

While interned the commandant gave him extra leave of absence to go wherever he liked. His family, who lives in Long Island, N. Y., and in California, would be happy no doubt to know that he is free, safe and well.

Four Years Under German Rule; War Prison Family Is Reunited

People's Voice — New York, N.Y.

9-30-44

Last March when the SS Gripsholm arrived in this country bringing exchange prisoners, among them was Freddy Johnson, pianist who for sixteen

9-30-44

THE JOHNSON FAMILY as they looked when they visited PV offices last week. Not having seen any of their own newspapers for so long, they were amazed to find the progress made by American Negroes as recorded in PV, for the last four years. L-R Daddy Freddy, Jacqueline, younger of the two girl, mama Ida and Marily.

9-30-44

years had lived and worked in Europe. When Germany occupied Holland in 1940, Johnson, his wife Ida, and their two daughters, Jacqueline and Marilyn, were in Van Hague, where they had made their home since 1930. Interned in different camps, Johnson was first to be picked up being in a concentration camp from December '41 to March '42, at which time he was returned to his native land.

Mrs. Johnson and the two girls lived under the German occupation in Holland for two years before they were sent to a camp in Liebenan, Germany, eleven kilometers (6 miles) from Friedrickshafen, which was constantly under bombardment by the Allies. The camp was anything but comorftable. Conditions in the camp according to Mrs. Johnson and the girls were not too bad due largely to the fact that Liebenan is a convent town and there were many nuns interned there. They were allowed to keep all of their personal belongings and received weekly boxes from the Red Cross which contained food, cigarettes, and candy. Clothing and shoes were issued when needed.

9-30-44

FOOD NOT TOO BAD

For the youngsters, classes were conducted three hours a day. Algebra, Dutch history, German, English and Dutch were taught. Asked about food in the camp, Mrs. Johnson said "actually we ate better than those who were not interned. We had meat daily except on Friday and that was because the majority of the internees were Catholic." She said many people made application to be interned because there was

...es had already been there.) ...ion at a cost of $5 a day apiece. ...ve days and six nights, the ... In Liverpool, England, they saw ... family moved toward the ... for the first time Negro Red Cross ... border never quite believ- ... workers who took them in tow. ... they would make it. Once ... They also met Roi Ottley who told ...on, Portugal, the American ... them something of what they ... took excellent care of ... might expect on their arrival in ... Accomodations were made ... the states, which was last week. ... in Paris, and rode a troop and ... Consul took them in the best hotel in Lis- ... Freddy is now providing the ... Johnson, Marilyn and Jacqueline ... ammunition train to Tours which ... them. Accompanied by this time in complete ruins, for them in ... et out to joint Freddy in America, ...

9-30-44

Nine days after D-Day Mrs.

music for Tony's in 52 st, where Mabel Mercer reigns as queen. the younger daughter, Jackie, will continue her interrupted education and Marilyn will concentrate on music. The girls have not adjusted themselves as yet to Harlem, this being their first impression. They were taken to Europe as babies. They did say, though, that they are fascinated by our swing music and jitter-bug dance. You should hear them speak English with a Dutch accent. Cute. —(Fredi.)

9-30-44

Pianist's Wife Tells Prison Experience

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

9-2-44

Saw No Discrimination Under Nazi Rule; Free Until United States Entered War

By GEORGE PADMORE, Courier London Correspondent

LONDON, England—After 19 months in a German concentration camp, Ida Johnson, wife of Frederick Johnson, the well-known pianist, arrived in Liverpool, accompanied by her pretty daughters, Marilyn and Jacqueline Johnson, aboard a Swedish Red Cross ship. The Johnson family is the only colored group in the latest batch of American civilian war prisoners to reach British soil in exchange for Germans. They are on their way to America.

Mr. Johnson, who was also made a prisoner when the Germans moved into Holland, where the Johnson family was living at the time, has already been sent back to New York. His wife and daughters are anxiously looking forward to the re-union after two years' separation.

TREATED WELL AT FIRST

Describing her experiences, Mrs. Johnson said: "When the Germans attacked Holland in 1940, my daughters and I were living happily at Hague. My husband worked with Wooding's dance band in Rotterdam and my daughters were attending high school. Both girls speak Dutch, French, German and English. Rotterdam was completely destroyed by the Luftwaffe, but not much damage was done to Hague."

9-2-44

After the Germans occupied the Dutch capital, the Johnson family, although distinctly colored, was not molested by the Germans. The children continued to attend high school along with white children, and their father continued to play in fashionable cafes patronized by high ranking German officers. Never once were members of the family ever jim crowed, assaulted, molested or badly treated in public.

Life, however, became harder for the family due to the food shortage, but they received the same rations as the whites.

THINGS CHANGE WHEN U. S. ENTERS WAR

Things changed radically when Uncle Sam entered the war. All Americans, including the Johnsons, were immediately arrested and interned in war prison camps at Amersfoort in Holland. Here 1400 white and colored prisoners were all mixed together. "Here," says Mrs. Johnson, "conditions were primitive. The food consisted of two slices of bread and undrinkable coffee without sugar in the morning for breakfast. Dinner consisted of beans and potatoes and sometimes cabbage. Three times a week we got oatmeal and milk. Supper was bread, butter and tasteless coffee."

9-2-44

After two months at Amersfoort, the Johnsons were transferred to another camp located at Liebenau inside Germany near Switzerland. Before asking about life here, I asked Mrs. Johnson whether she ever witnessed or personally experienced ill treatment while at Amersfoort.

WITNESSED TWO BRUTAL BEATINGS

She replied: "Neither I nor my children had any trouble, but one day I saw a Nazi guard strike a male prisoner in the face for failing to work faster. On another occasion I saw a German soldier kick a man, knocking him down to the ground, and every time the man tried to rise, the German knocked him to the ground until the man was unable to move. Later I heard the man died from the injuries. These are the only two incidents of bad treatment I witnessed personally during my two years."

Invited to describe her life at Liebenau where she and her daughters spent 19 months along with 4,000 other female prisoners, American, British, French, Polish, Dutch and Belgian, Mrs. Johnson praised conditions highly. Situated in beautiful surroundings near the Swiss Alps, Liebenau was formerly used as an insane asylum conducted by nuns.

9-2-44

WOMEN PRISONERS POOL RESOURCES

When converted into a female camp, the nuns continued to cooperate with Liebenau, thereby giving the place a humane Christian influence which served to temper the Nazis militaristic brutality. The prisoners were allowed freedom of movement within the confines of the vast and spacious grounds. A real communal spirit existed within the camp. The women, regardless of race or creed, pooled their talent and material resources, and with co-operation of the nuns and the German guards, with whom many of the women had romances, they created for themselves a world of their own.

Plenty of food and clothing was obtained, thanks to the American Red Cross. Each American received an average of two food boxes weekly and shared the contents with non-American inmates. They even supplied anti-fascists and Allied soldier prisoners working on German farms nearby. By agreement the Allied soldiers and the underground anti-fascists would meet in certain places when the German guards were asleep. The American women would throw Red Cross boxes of food and cigarettes over the camp wall. In this way Liebenau internes maintained contact with the anti-Nazis right under the noses of the German camp guards.

9-2-44

AMERICAN CAUGHT HELPING DUTCH

On one occasion, Mrs. Johnson said, an American girl was caught dropping food over the wall. She was brought before the German camp commander and warned not to do it again. Two Dutch boys, caught picking up the food, were arrested but not shot, for they continued to hang around the camp a few weeks later. That was the only time American internes came into conflict with the German camp officials who preferred the Americans to the Britishers.

Asked how internees managed for recreation, Mrs. Johnson said that the women organized concerts, dances, sports, and even celebrated Independence Day by singing "The Star Spangled Banner." However, they were not allowed to receive English newspapers or listen to Anglo - American broadcasts, but by listening to the German radio, they were able to know what happened. For instance, the German radio first announced the invasion of Europe.

9-2-44

The Germans published an English weekly called "Okay" filled with Nazi propaganda which nobody wasted time reading.

Mrs. Johnson and her daughters are anxiously looking forward to their departure from Liverpool. During their stay in England the Johnsons have been the guests of the American Red Cross club director, Howard McKinney, and his colored staff.

12 YEARS UNDER HITLER

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

By JOHN WELCH

Exclusive to The Pittsburgh Courier

Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of articles by John Welch, American pianist, who, going to Germany before the Nazis took over, lived for 12 years under Hitler's rule until he returned recently with other American repatriates on the S.S. Gripsholm. In these articles this Negro New Yorker gives his impressions of Nazi-land in peace and war, and what it means to live as a Negro under the rule of Adolph Hitler.

4-22-44

It was midnight, the third of September, 1932, that I left these shores for the purpose of studying music in Germany. I little dreamed that during my stay in Germany, a much darker midnight would one day evolve from this land, cast its shadows over Europe and finally engulf that entitre continent in its blackness. Nor did I dream that I was to be subjected to a series of arrests ending with my internment in Bavaria.

John Welch

Germany, at the time of my arrival, was wavering between Communism and Fascism. On the streets one would see a Brown Shirt and a Communist on one corner, each ballyhooing and collecting money for "the cause." The burning of the Reichstag—I believe it was in November '32—for which the Communists were unjustly accused, created a wave of indignation against them which was most instrumental in turning the tide in favor of Fascism. This was decidedly Hitler's coup d'etat since all evidence pointed to the probability of the Nazis having fired the building themselves.

Now prejudice, like any other vice, may be likened to lava smoldering in the bowels of a volcano ever ready at some mysterious provocation of the elements of nature to gush forth, destroying with its white heat every vestige of civilization lying in its path. This provocation of nature's elements found its embodiment in Hitler, and although comparatively little was known about his book "Mein Kampf" when he took up the reins of the government in January, 1933, his "Hymn of Hate" became more and more audible until at last, swelling to a mighty crescendo, it threatened by its very reverberations to shake not only the foundations of the European continent, but also those of the whole world.

NEGRO UNTOUCHED

4-22-44

So far as the Negro in Germany is concerned, it would be unfair to state that he has had to suffer to any considerable degree through Hitler's endorsement of racial prejudice. Nevertheless, one must take into consideration that there exists no color problem in Germany. The few Negroes living in the country are mostly from Cameroon or Togo—former German colonies. Others of the younger generation are children and grandchildren of the above and of mixed parentage. These people however, as a whole, represent such a minority as to make even the suggestion of a color problem seem absurd.

Let us assume that the percentage of Negroes in Germany was, as in the United States, one-tenth or more of the entire population. Would the colored man, under the present-day Hitler regime, have to suffer the same persecution as the Jew? This question I leave open for dispute. One cannot deny however, that Hitler's poisonous doctrines, after spreading swiftly and effectively to the farthest corners of the earth, have made the whole world race-conscious and whereas the Negro, as such, does not suffer under the Nazi rule, the progress of the Negro as a race in the fight against discrimination has definitely been retarded the world over, as a result of Nazi propagandists.

LOUIS-SCHMELING

Except for the occupation of the Rhine by Hitler's troops, little happened of any great significance in the next few years that followed, and as it is only the years immediately preceding the war in which this story is concerned, I shall merely touch on certain incidents as they may occur to me.

4-22-44

One of the things about this time which I shall never forget was the Louis-Schmeling fight in 1936. The consensus of opinion was that Schmeling would win. Whether they believed this in their hearts, I am inclined to doubt, but at any rate they gave their countryman the odds. As the fight was to be transmitted to Germany, I was invited to "listen in" on the radio with friends. It was about 3 a. m. Central European time when the fight began. Luckily, I had closed only a small bet with someone—so small in fact, that I can't remember what it was. I do remember that when the fight was over, I got up from my seat feeling weak in the knees, as though I myself had been in the ring, and bidding the company goodbye, walked home in a daze.

The Germnas made a political victory at this bout, and when the fight film was shown it was under the title "Schmeling's Sieg ein deutsche Sieg" (Schmeling's victory a German victory). Clean sportsmanship was cast aside for cheap political propaganda. Thereafter, and until the novelty died down, persons encountering me on the streets or in some public place, would call me jokingly "Joe Louis" and laugh like hell. And did I boil! But oh—that next fight!

47n-1944

Two Men With Strange Story Walk Through Battle Lines

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN
Guide War Correspondent
(Copyright. Reproduction Forbidden)

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY (Via Radio) — Two men made their way through the danger that lurks between lines of two armies drawn up in battle to reach safety in a town held by our infantry. The men, one an American Negro, who spoke immaculate English, and the other a Dane, told an amazing story of hunger and hardships in the custody of the Fascists and Germans since the war started.

The Negro identified himself as Edwin Peggram, age 30, of Summer Court, in Dorchester, Boston, Mass., and the other, his inseparable friend, said he was Gerth Hauptman, age 28, a native of Copenhagen, Denmark. They are collaborators in literary work and students of comparative literature.

This odd, exciting pair said they had been held in lousy Italian prisons and had finally been liberated by Partisans near Milan. After their escape, they had made the long, hard trek through the bitter cold mountains with nothing to eat but roasted chestnuts.

One of the men was almost shot as a hostage by the Germans when Hauptman refused to leave his friend, Peggram, to work in a German labor camp. They were saved when the Partisans attacked the prison.

Once the Negro was placed in a Jewish concentration camp, but was left behind when the Germans carried off the Jews. Peggram was classified as an Aryan since that time.

A Catholic, Peggram was not forced to labor since he was an American. He speaks five languages and holds the B.A. and M.A. degrees from Harvard University and studied comparative literature at the University of Paris through a Rosenwald fellowship. He also studied in Copenhagen. Further studies brought him and Hauptman to Italy.

MOTHER IN JERSEY

Peggram's mother, Mrs. Mary Farrar, was last heard from in Bayonne, N. J., and his grandmother, Mrs. Laura Reid, is believed to live at the Boston address.

Asked about his future plans, Peggram told this correspondent that he and Hauptman hoped to go to America and to continue there collaboration on their literary works. He emphasized that he would not return unless Hauptman receives permission to accompany him.

Peggram said he hoped no racial difficulties would develop. "Racial differences are so silly," he said, "because our first desire is friendship and collaboration. We are in agreement on so many things: literature, music, ideas, and religion."

Should racial difficulties arise they hope to go to France or Switzerland, they said.

HARVARD GRADUATE

Peggram graduated from Harvard in 1936 and then studied at Columbia University and the University of Paris. He then did research work in Copenhagen and Florence, Italy. His studies were interrupted by the war. He had a chance at that time to leave for America while the United States was not at war with the Axis, but he refused to leave Hauptman.

Penniless, he communicated with the Vatican and the Archbishop of Lisbon. Peggram said he has $1,200 tied up at Lisbon. In 1943 their plight became a scandal in the vicinity of Lucca and the Italian government allowed them eight lire per day, but they had to live separately for friendships between different nationalities in the area are looked upon with suspicion. The Swiss legation allowed them 1,000 lire per month for several weeks, then stopped.

They were saved from starvation by the good people of the area. Work was forbidden them because they were foreigners.

GERMANS MOVE IN

With the German occupation in 1943 they were put in a concentration camp. The camp was machine gunned by Allied planes and five were killed. They miraculously escaped. The Germans shifted them around from prison to prison until they were placed in solitary confinement as spies. Subsequently they were sentenced to death at the firing squad, but the sentence was prevented by the sudden Partisan raid on the prison.

Repatriates

Musician, Held By Nazis Tells Of Life In Prison

NEW YORK—"We learned to live in hell and got used to it."

These words summed up the experience of Maceo Jefferson, music arranger, who arrived here recently from France where he, an American, was interned in a Nazi civilian prison camp for two and a half years. Jefferson, who is now employed arranging scores for a number of outstanding orchestras, had made his home in Europe since he went there with the famous Lew Leslie's "Blackbirds," starring the immortal Florence Mills.

Jefferson explained that he was among the American prisoners exchanged for German prisoners and came over on the last trip of the Gripsholm. He does not know how he happened to be chosen as one of the lucky ones, for he left many of his comrades behind in the prison camp.

The musician was in France when America declared war on Germany and was incarcerated in Frontstlag 122, about 70 miles from Paris. During air raids on this area, three colored prisoners, close friends of Jefferson, were among those killed.

Between 1100 and 1200 civilian prisoners were imprisoned in the camp, among whom were a good number of Negroes, but there was no racial discrimination, the musician said. Although civilians, the internees seemed to have had no more privileges than if they had been military prisoners of war.

He said they were guarded by German soldiers, kept behind barbed wire and six machine gun nests were perched above the camp grounds. They were permitted to have visitors for ten minutes only, every fifteen days, and had to talk to them through mesh wire.

Having been taken prisoner early in the war, these first groups suffered from lack of recreational facilities, and, of course, the food was merely something to eat. They had soup once a day and herb tea once or twice. A common food like oatmeal was a treat. It was served every Friday afternoon, he said.

I Lived

12 YEARS UNDER HITLER

By JOHN WELCH

(Exclusively to The Pittsburgh Courier)

(Reproduction in Whole or Part Expressly Forbidden)

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fifth of a series of articles by John Welch, American pianist, who, going to Germany before the Nazis took over, lived for 12 years under Hitler's rule until he returned recently with other American repatriates on the S.S. Gripsholm. In these articles, this New Yorker gives his impressions of Naziland in peace and war, and what it means to live as a Negro under the rule of Adolph Hitler.

NEW YORK—Prior to the Nazi occupation of the Rhineland in violation of the Treaty of Versailles, which is represented by Hitler as the source of all of Germany's evils, he (Hitler) accused France of sending colonial troops across the Rhine to "contaminate German blood" and, by so doing, of committing the crime par excellence—the crime against race. Verbally, he said: "Contaminated by contact with inferior races which it has called to its aid. The French people are destined to inevitable decay and are approximating more and more the cultural level of the Negro. In a few more centuries, a Negroid France will constitute a prodigious semi-African and semi-European state, stretching from the Rhine to the Congo."

John Welch

SOME HOLD HITLER IN CONTEMPT

In quoting these words of Hitler, which express in no uncertain words his belief in white supremacy and the subjugation of the Negro, my intention is to keep in the minds of readers, that which I have constantly tried to emphasize in earlier articles. Hitler, despite the fact that no atrocities against Negroes have been committed in Germany—does not consider the Negro as being on a par with his white brother, and, such sentiments are, from time to time, echoed by the Nazi publications. It is the people (and I DO make a distinction between the German people and those who rule them) who are not willing to accept this thesis blindly and without the "why" and "wherefore." For, within the Third Reich with its fanatical jubilance for "der Fuehrer," there is another Germany which has cloaked itself in silence. A Germany, whose hate and contempt for Adolf Hitler and all he represents, is almost as great as that of any Jew whose loved ones have been torn away from them to suffer unspeakable horrors in a Nazi concentration camp or in a ghetto in Poland—as great as the hate of any mother whose son's blood has been shed in the fight to break him—as great as that of any lover of fairness and true liberty.

CITES JESSE OWENS' TRIUMPHS

Hitler's contention that German blood was being "contaminated" by French colonial troops was simply used as a subterfuge to hide his real purpose in occupying the Rhineland. He had nourished a bitter hatred against France, since the first World War, and believing he could risk such a drastic step without the danger of retaliation by that country whose aims were definitely pacific, he marched his troops into the demilitarized zone of the Rhineland, without warning, on an early morning in the Spring of 1936.

The year 1936 was that of the Olympics, in Berlin. The German press unanimously agreed that if it weren't for the laurels captured by our colored participants, headed by Jesse Owens, who won three (or was it four?) gold medals, all by himself, America would have made a poor showing, indeed. Hitler snubbed the colored entrants, at the games. That man!!

47n

Negro Vet Won't Be Here When The Trouble Begins

Amsterdam News — New York, N. Y. 12-23-44

By JAMES CASEY

The theory that the returned Negro veteran will function as a belligerent factor in the post-war fight against discrimination was discredited this week by Dr. Alphonse Heningburg, director of the Department of Public Education for the National Urban League.

"The many people who feel that the returning Negro veteran is going to engage in any big-scale violent protest against discrimination in this country will find that theory knocked into a cocked hat," Dr. Heningburg asserted with emphasis. "No matter how bitterly this veteran may resent conditions on the home front," the Urban League official explained, "he simply will not be in the community where friction may develop."

Dr. Heningburg's forthright statements on the matter were made, Tuesday, during the course of an interview in which he pointed out certain post-war problems which are sure to develop from the simple fact that the great majority of Negro servicemen have been restricted to the non-combatant branches of the U. S. Army.

Few Combat Troops

According to a recent release from the War Department, more than a million Negro men and women have been inducted into the armed forces. Of this number, more than 700,000 are now in active service, approximately 400,000 of whom are serving overseas. The War Department release reveals that only a small percentage of these are combat troops; for the engineering branches include 133,180, while "all other" non-combatants total 408,000. 12-23-44

Stressing the significance of these figures, Dr. Heningburg quickly illustrated two reasons why they are scheduled to exert an important influence on Americans in the immediate future.

"The first reason is that Army services of a non-combatant character provides for a wide range of jobs. This means that thousands of young Negroes, who had been limited in civilian life to the most menial occupations, have become highly skilled as bakers, machinists, and ground field mechanics."

Troop Return Delayed

"The other important fact," he continued, "is that service battalions will undoubtedly return to this country at a much later date than combat troops." It would be this lateness of the Negro veteran's arrival on the American scene, he added, which would prevent such veterans from actively participating in possible inter-racial disturbances in the immediate post-war period. 12-23-44

That will not be the only important effect of the delayed return of Negro veterans to this country. "It also means," the Urban League official stated, "that even though all veterans will enjoy job priority, the Negro veteran is likely to arrive on the scene after the best jobs have been passed out."

Too Late for Job

"When this danger is considered in connection with the already expressed resistance of organized labor to giving any serious attention to permanent legislation for fair employment practices," he went on, "it can be seen that the Negro veteran is very likely to find himself minus the job that he is now being promised."

Turing his attention to the problems of veterans who may wish to settle down on the farm after the war, Dr. Heningburg warned that "When it is realized that returning veterans who wish to go into farming will have to buy land through channels controlled by white agents throughout the South, the immediate exploitation of these men can be foreseen."

Land Purchase Evils

"Unless the Federal Government establishes controls to prevent the Negro being cheated out of the money which the GI Bill-of-Rights permits him to borrow, he will be coerced into buying depleted farm lands on which even a magician couldn't raise a crop," it was pointed out. 12-23-44

If the long history of land purchase in the South repeats itself, he said, these unfortunate would-be Negro farmers will be labeled as "lazy and shiftless" because they will not be able to produce good crops under such unfavorable conditions.

USES Offices Hit

In an outspoken comment on the United States Employment Service, Dr. Heningburg declared that "As long as the 1,500 local USES offices are dominated by individuals who refuse to give Negro applicants fair clearance, the veteran who hunts a job in the city will be but little better off."

Even during the war, he asserted, these "segregated" USES offices have consistently failed to classify and refer Negro applicants on the objective basis of skill and ability.

"The whole question of the readiness of this nation to facilitate the dignified return of the Negro veteran," he said in conclusion, "may easily determine whether America can hold its place in the family of nations or can long guarantee security to any of its citizens."

Veterans

Full Benefits Requested

Pgh. Courier — Pa.

Urge Posts For Negroes In Veterans' Administration

12-2-44

WASHINGTON—If colored veterans are to benefit fully from the programs Congress has established for the care and readjustment of every returning veteran, disabled or not, the appointment of colored administrative officers in the Veterans' administration is absolutely necessary.

The Veterans' administration, with offices throughout the United States, administers the laws granting benefits to veterans and their dependents. The major benefits for veterans of World War II are: aid in securing employment, education and vocational rehabilitation, Government life insurance at favorable premium rates, medical treatment, hospital and domiciliary care, guaranty of loans for the purchase or construction of homes, farms or business, unemployment allowances, and pensions for disabled veterans and their dependents.

RESISTING EFFORTS

Key officers in the Veterans' administration are reported to be resisting efforts to effect the appointment of colored administrative officers in that agency. Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Julius A. Thomas, director of industrial relations of the National Urban league, it was learned, recently requested President Roosevelt to direct the appointment of a colored administrative officer on a policy-making level in the Veterans' administration.

The President is said to have referred them to Major General Frank T. Hines, administrator of Veterans' Affairs, who listened attentively to their proposal but made no commitment.

Representatives of the James E. Walker post of the American Legion also conferred with General Hines regarding the appointment of colored men, preferably veterans, to key positions in States which will have large numbers of colored veterans to aid in readjustment in civilian life.

These representatives reported that General Hines indicated that he will consider their request.

A spokesman for the James E. Walker post, who asked that he not be quoted, said that "knowing the general attitude of white Southerners, he believes the appointment of colored administrative officers is absolutely necessary because white officials of the Veterans' administration in Southern States will not fully inform colored veterans of their rights and will not attempt to enforce their rights for them."

The Veterans' administration operates 53 regional offices and nine area offices where claims for disability pensions and other benefits are adjudicated. In addition, 67 contact and branch offices have been authorized through the United States and there are 54 Veterans' administration hospitals where a claimant may receive aid in filing claim for a pension or other benefits. There are also 104 trained contact representatives located at Army and Navy installations to inform veterans of their rights and assist them in filing claims.

In each State there has been established a Veterans' Service committee consisting of representatives of the Selective Service system, the United States Employment service, and the Veterans administration. These committees represent the Federal Government in the States with respect to veterans.

"It is particularly desirable," said General Hines, "that persons returning from service be encouraged to seek the employment and educational advantages offered."

Veterans Council In Post War Planning Activities

Citizen-Review — Los Angeles Alabama

Incorporation Is Granted In Missouri

11-4-44

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 28.—This week two important events took place in the life of the National Council of Negro Veterans, Inc.: the appointment of a Post-War planning committee and the issuance of incorporation papers in the state of Missouri. The incorporation in Missouri followed similar action in the state of Nebraska about three weeks. The Post-War planning committee, as announced by national commander, B. H. Muldrew, consists of the following personnel: Vernon C. Coffey, chairman, Kansas City, Kansas; Molton H. Gray, Birmingham, Ala.; J. R. Booker, Little Rock, Ark.; Dr. M. C. Lewis, Kansas City, Mo., and Earl B. Dickerson, Chicago, Ill. This committee will be charged with the responsibility of mapping Post-War activities for the organization throughout the twelve states in which it operates. The scope of work of the committee will include such subjects as the training of sons and daughters of veterans in citizenship and statecraft through youth organizations conducted by the parent body; devise means and methods of cooperation with other national veterans organizations on matters of mutual interest; and to seek aid from the Veterans Administration and other federal, state and local agencies dispensing aid and service of any kind to veterans, in carrying these services to Negro veterans, especially in certain sections of the south where they are denied membership in other similar organizations. N-4-44

The need of this organization has long been recognized by veterans and their families which accounts for the rapidity with which the council is spreading into each of the 48 states. November 11 marks the beginning of the fourth year for the organization, and local councils in all states report that they are sure to have all 1944 members paid up for 1945 by that date. Little Rock, Arkansas, has the largest local council and Birmingham, Alabama, with its charter issued less than one year ago has the second largest local.

The organization has been working hard for the past several months on legislation now pending in both houses of congress, which if enacted into law will incorporate it by an act of the Congress of the United States as nation veterans organization. In our effort to push the bills out of committee and have them passed and signed into law, we have circularized the entire membership of both houses of Congress and find that most of the members who state that they will support the bill are from southern states, says National Commander Muldrew. This condition, he went on to say, is proof that many of the controversial issues between the races in those states are due to misunderstanding. When once the isms and purposes of this organization are known, no fair-minded American of either race can honestly oppose it. Ranking officials in both the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars have expressed their opinion privately that the National Council of Negro Veterans fills a gap in veteran circles and offers opportunity for veterans of all groups to make their best contributions toward the winning of the war and the peace un-membership at large ed Forces of the United States are

For information and eligible for membership. Veterans for membership-at- in this section are to contact John a card or letter to Snow Edmonds at the Van Hoose mander B. H. Mul- Funeral Home, Tuscaloosa, or ark Avenue, Kansas Frank P. Thomas, publisher of the Any honorably dis- CITIZEN-REVIEW. er, sailor or marine embers of the Arm-

hundred per cent larger than it established, membership of was at the last convention. During is permitted. For the expansion period, two types of application for the first of January to perfect memberships are offered: member-at-large, address a c plans for the second bi-annual na- ship in local councils and member-National Commander tional convention which meets in ship-at-large. In communities
Little Rock, Ark., during August, where local councils have been es- City 1, Mo.
1945. tablished, membership must be charged soldier, sa
From all indications the mem- through local, where no local is and present membe bership at that time will be several

Negro Veterans

Citizen-Republic Tuscaloosa 11-4-44 Citizen Republic

Word has been received that the National Council of Negro Veterans, Inc., of Kansas City, Kansas, has been incorporated in two states. While we are not in position to determine the actual financial condition of this organization, we do feel that B. H. Muldrew, the commander, and his staff should be commended for their efforts in bringing Negro veterans together. With over 100,000 Negro ex-servicemen discharged from the present conflict, it is time that someone became interested in seeing that these persons availed themselves of the liberal provisions made by our government. In the communities of the North and East, where the American Legion, the Disabled American Veterans and the Veterans of Foreign Wars admit veterans of color, they are being cared for. Here in the South where conditions are different, there is a need for an organization to give our former fighting men the social and material benefits they deserve. This does not mean that Southern post of the Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and other groups do not help Negroes. They do but due to custom and tradition will not permit them to accept Negro members. Here in this section little is being done to encourage returning Negro Veterans to apply for the many benefits made available to them by the "G. I. Bill of Rights." Veterans of former wars should busy themselves to the extent of seeing that steps in this direction are taken immediately so that our boys now fighting will know that an opportunity awaits them upon their return.

World War II Veterans To Fight Racial Prejudice

Defender — Chicago, Ill. 11-18-44

WASHINGTON.—With a membership of 84,000 veterans of World War II admitted without regard to "race, color or creed," the newly-formed AMVETS will soon rival the American Legion, observers here predicted last week.

AMVETS claims an affiliation of 83 groups in all 48 states, and is now waiting for Congressional action on its charter which was submitted Sept. 16.

Promotion of better race relations will form a definite part of the growing veterans organization, a field neglected by the American Legion as a group.

"I feel some American traditions GI Joe has been fighting to preserve have, in the meantime, been killed here at home," declared John A. Mack, publicity chairman of AMVETS.

"I have in mind strikes, racial prejudices — about which the Legion, as a group, did nothing."

The American Legion's attitude toward this group is far from cooperative. However AMVETS' organizers state that they are in "close friendship" with the Order of the Purple Heart, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the Disabled American Veterans." 11-11-44

Any enlisted man or person commissioned assigned to active duty for more than 60 days between Sept. 16, 1940 and the end of the war is eligible to membership.

Temporary Commander Elmo Keel, 30-year-old discharged vet, announced last week, "I am interested in protective legislation and security for this war's veterans and believe AMVETS, not an older organization, can best get it.

"World War II vets who joined the American Legion tell me they have a membership card and a back seat. I don't want this war's veterans organized for the sake of power alone."

New Vets Avoid Old Organizations

AFRO-American Balt., Md. 12-23-44

WASHINGTON (ANP)—Determined to have some kind of an organization for themselves, returning veterans are withholding their memberships from organizations already in existence.

While it is true that the American Legion has opened its ranks to the new veterans, they are not flocking to join up with this outfit, which many claim is prejudiced against colored veterans.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars are also opening their ranks to the new veterans but, as in the case of the Legion, the youngsters are steering clear of this organization also. 12-23-44

Fear Being Submerged

Sensing the power that such organizations wield, they are not willing to cast their lots with the existing outfits in which they would be submerged into the mass membership and would not be in a position to help formulate policy or dictate procedures.

Probably one of the strongest and least racial-minded unit is the one now being formed in New York, known as the American Veterans' Committee. It has indicated it will extend memberships to colored veterans on a full participation basis.

21,760 Negro Vets Receive Pension Aid

Tribune — Philadelphia Pa. 11-18-44

A total of 21,760 colored veterans of the present war were receiving veterans' pensions from the Veteran's Administration on August 31, 1944, for disability incurred in or aggravated by service in the armed forces, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, announced this week. They represented 8.7 per cent of all veterans receiving such pensions.

At the same time, General Hines revealed that 334 colored veterans, disabled as a result of service in the present war, were taking vocational rehabilitation courses in educational institutions and in placement training designed to overcome the handicap of disability. These trainees represented 8.9 per cent of the total number of veterans receiving such training.

WILL ENABLE VETERANS TO MAKE ADJUSTMENTS TO CIVILIAN LIFE

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.
8-26-44

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The underlying principle of the recently enacted law providing Federal aid for the readjustment in civilian life of returning World War II veterans, which colored men and women who are in the armed forces or who have been honorably discharged need to understand, is that it is designed to encompass all the rights and benefits to which they are entitled. This law—the so-called "G. I. Bill of Rights"—makes unnecessary the passage of bonus legislation. The benefits provided by it are considered to be of greater advantage to veterans, at a lesser expense to the Federal Government, than could possibly be accomplished by a law giving them a bonus.

BRIDGES GAP

The Mustering-out Pay Act was intended to bridge the gap between the veteran's discharge from the armed services and the determination of his eligibility for and making of awards of benefits under existing laws. That act provides mustering-out pay of $300 for persons who have performed active service for 60 days or more, have served outside the continental limits of the United States or Alaska; $200 for persons who have performed active service of 60 days or more within the continental limits of the United States or in Alaska, and $100 for persons who have performed active service for less than 60 days. 8-26-44

Other laws now in effect pertaining to veterans' benefits include those for pensions, insurance, hospitalization and domiciliary care, medical care and treatment and vocational training and rehabilitation.

The servicemen's readjustment act of 1944 covers the entire scope of the post-war veteran re-adjustment program not previously enacted into law, excepting only the question of social security (old-age and survivors' insurance) to persons in the armed forces or the freezing of their status, if they were covered, as of the date they entered active service.

ADMINISTERS ALL BENEFITS

Title I of the act relates to procedures and other matters pertaining to hospitalization and claims of veterans. It authorizes:

1. Adequate organization of the veterans' benefits, except employment. There are approximately 1,000,000 colored men and women in the armed services. In its expansion of personnel, appointments of colored persons on a staff level should be made to concern themselves with the interests of colored service men and women, as well as to perform general administrative duties. 8-26-44

2. Adequate hospital facilities for the care and treatment of veterans for non-service-connected disabilities or diseases as well as for disabilities or diseases incurred in service. A question of policy here arises. Will other Jim-crow hospital facilities be erected for colored veterans, similar to the facility built at Tuskegee, Ala., after World War I, or will they be admitted to all facilities of the Veterans' Administration without regard to race?

3. The right of the veteran to have explained to him before discharge or release from active service all rights and benefits to which he may be entitled, and an opportunity, if he so desires, to file a claim for them. The Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, Major Gen. Frank T. Hines, has authority to place officials and employees designated by him in Army and Navy installations to adjudicate disability claims and to give aid and advice to members of the Army and Navy who are about to be discharged or released from active service. The service of colored officials and employees should be utilized in this connection.

4. The right to adequate prosthetic appliances—artificial limbs, eyes and teeth—and necessary training to effect the greatest possible benefits in the use of such appliances.

5. Adequate safeguards as against forced statements against the interests of the veteran.

6. The Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to permit accredited representatives of veterans' organizations, certified by General Hines, to aid persons about to be discharged or released from the armed forces in the preparation and presentation of their claims for benefits. This would be in addition to the services furnished by the American Red Cross. 8-26-44

7. General Hines is authorized to review certain cases of veterans separated from active service by a dishonorable discharge or a discharge for certain causes generally considered as constituting dishonorable conditions, and upon his determination that the person was insane at the time the offense was committed, he may authorize benefits otherwise payable under the law.

8. The Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to establish boards of review with authority, upon request of a former officer or enlisted person, to consider the type and nature of discharge or dismissal, except by sentence of court-martial, and upon the facts found, to change, correct, or modify such discharge or dismissal. No request for review will be valid unless filed within 15 years after the date of separation or 15 years after the effective date of the servicemen's re-adjustment act.

GI TODAY IS CITIZEN TOMORROW

Informer — Houston, Texas
8-26-44

Among the many things that we should discuss with soldiers when they are on their three-day passes and furloughs and in our letters to them are matters concerning their post war plans and alterations in their rights and privileges during their absence. This does not infer that soldiers do not read, and are not conversant with what is taking place while they are serving their country. The above statement is made with a ense of the obligation that we have to these absent ones as guardians of their welfare here on the home front.

Two of the postwar subjects that are uppermost in the minds of servicemen are employment and education. We are therefore obligated to learn all that we can about the possibilities of employment, how veterans compensation will be handled, and what educational assistance can be expected by those whose education was interrupted by service in the armed forces. 8-26-44

GI Bill of Rights

Under the GI Bill of Rights, every veteran under the age of 25 at the time of induction, or with education interrupted by service in the armed forces is entitled to one or four years of training in whatever academic or technical institution he chooses. Under the Disabled Veterans Act, provisions are made to train those who can prove a vocational handicap. Churches, Clubs, fraternities and similar organizations would do well to give some of their attention to disseminating information to the parents and wives of service men who will need as much help as possible in effecting a proper adjustment after the war.

GI Voting Rights

Many service men do not know whether they can vote, or not. Those of us on the home front who are trying to keep abreast of the gradual changes in the extension of the privilege of using the ballot to those who have been denied its use in some sections; should not forget the men and women who are in service. Each service man and woman should be reminded to ask the commanding officer of his or her unit what one must do to secure an absentee ballot. If the commanding officer cannot give the information, or does not have the form, a ballot can be secured from the Secretary of State. 8-26-44

Voting will be a new experience for some soldiers whose states have had laws which barred them from the polls. Negroes in the states in question are learning with startling rapidity that they must use the right to vote to its maximum degree. This means that the more quickly these in the armed forces who were heretofore unaccustomed to voting get acquainted with its rewards and obligations; the better off they will be.

Army Prepares Negro Soldiers For Wartime Rehabilitation

Age — New York, N.Y.
8-26-44

HOLABIRD SIGNAL DEPOT, Baltimore, Maryland. — The U. S. Army Leads the Way In Education — Wartime Rehabilitation. The United States Army has long been known to be open to new ideas. One of these new theories is being put into practice successfully at the Holabird Signal Depot, Baltimore, Maryland, by the 1342 Service Unit, Special Training Unit, which has been operating there since September, 1943. This unit has been doing splendid work in its mission of making men more useful to the Army ,while, at the same time, fitting them for more rewarding work in the world of tomorrow. Although the United States has without question one of the world's greatest educational system, there are still men who, due to unfortunate circumstances, have not had their share of educational benefits. It is the rehabilitation of these men which concerns the 1342 SU-STU. This unit is a school for illiterate Negroes who cannot meet the army's minimum standard of education which is set at the fourth grade level. A maximum of twelve weeks' time is allowed to bring these men from the stage of total illiteracy to the required leevl, although the average time required is only eight weeks. The course is covered in five grade levels: IA, I, II, III IV. The IA level was added after it was found that many men need orientation to prepare them for the subjects undertaken in level I. 8-26-44

These are men who in many cases have been holding well-paying jobs in civilian life—men who have families and responsibilties which they have been meeting despite the handicap of illiteracy. Therefore, throughout the course, and especially at its beginning, their interest and motivation must be stimulated and maintained by means of graphic examples which show how education will help them become better soldiers and citizens. Also, there is the additional obstacle of embarrassment over having reached a mature age without learning the fundamentals of the three R's. Great credit for the mental conditioning of these men, therefore, goes to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and civilian instructors of the unit.

The 1342 SU-STU is ably commanded by Lt. Col. Joshua W. Davis who is assisted by a staff of officers who have been selected because of their specialized training and experience. Captain Reginal DeVaux, officer in charge of Plans and Training, directs and assists his company officers in all their problems. His work is clarified by complete statistical information about each man, each class and the entire school. All of the officers are working as a team for the success ,not only of the school, but also of each individual soldier under their supervision. With the exception of the officers, the entire 1342 SU-STU staff of instructors some of whom are non-commissioned officers and some civilian instructors, is composed of Negroes. They come from the country's finiest universities and many are ,holders of advanced degrees and all have had years of previous teaching experience. 8-26-44

Teaching Methods Differ

The school is not conducted along the lines of the usual elementary school with which we are familiar. Since the instructors are dealing with adults who are already familiar with the language, the subjects can be approached differently. Also, the theory of learning the whole first, and of then taking up its component parts, is being used only lightly because of the need for goes hand in hand with the school class is studying reading, it may be learning writing, arithmetic, and In fact, it is the intention mlitary terms at the same time. school to teach all subjects In levels IA and I, five weeks are tion to their military use by spent learning the basic fundamentdier. For example, while a als of reading and writing. The mar and spelling are touched upon The military instruction of the men the soldier.

SOLDIERS RECOVER RAPIDLY IN REHABILITATION CENTER

8-26-44

8-26-44 — New York, N.Y.

sounds of the vowel and cnsonant combinations which make up simple words are associated with the appearance of the written letters in both script and printing. From this it is a short step to the actual reading of short sentences and then to writing a post card home. Later short letters are attempted as the soldiers progress in their study of the Army Reader, a practical book designed for the course and filled with approprite visual aids. All the examples and terms undertaken are those that are seen and heard daily in army life, and there is a constant effort to show how each new bit of information will be of practical value in the service.

In levels II, III, and IV, reading and writing are carried to completion and arithmetic is introduced. Again by use of practical examples, such as learning how to make up personal expense accounts, the incentive to learn is created. All the subjects plus military training are coordinated and presented as a whole. When learning to read, the words and text are military in nature and problems in arithmetic are expressed in terms of guns and men instead of apples. Half of each day is spent in the classroom; the rest of the time is spent in marching on the drill field, attending military lectures, receiving rifle instruction, and in becoming familiar, in general, with all aspects of basic training.

8-26-44

To help put across the material, the instructors have all types of training aids at their disposal. Posters, drawings, "flash" cards, film slides and motion pictures are all used extensively and most of the material is created in the unit's own complete art shop. Any idea that an instructor has may be developed and put into practice at once. The War Department in Washington, D C., publishes a special war news bulletin for these special training units called "Our War." It gives the news in simple language and uses many pictures and cartoon strips to encourage the men to read.

8-26-44

Well-Chosen Personnel

The non-commissioned officers of the unit and carefully selected civilian government employees comprise the staff of instructors. The civilian instructors, before beginning their teachng, must take a thorough orientation course to familiarize themselves with the military aspect of the school and its principles. Therefore the student always receives the course from the military viewpoint, whether he is taught by a soldier or a civilan. For men in the army, army life itself is naturally the primary interest and the greatest motivating force of the soldier student.

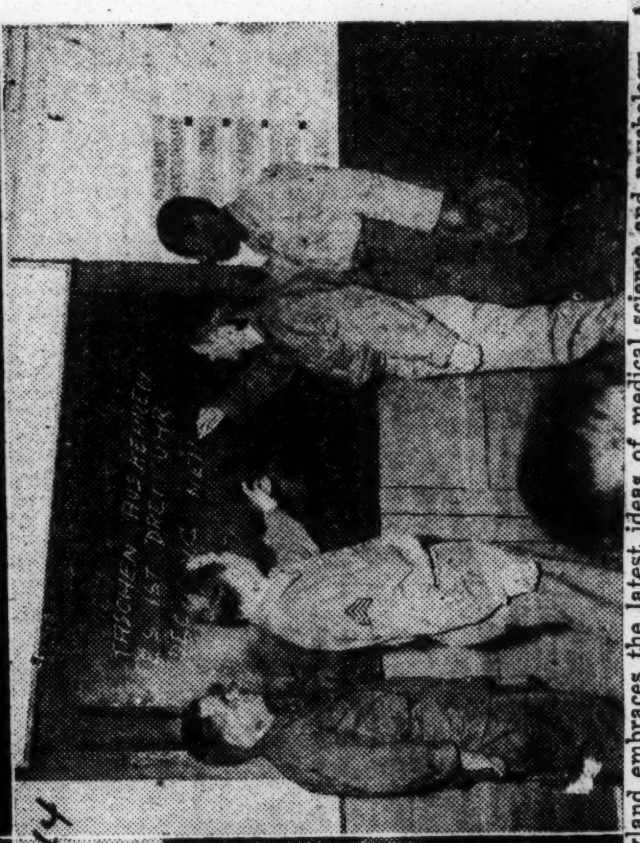
This is not an eductaional assembly line created to push men through quickly by merely tightening the nuts and bolts of their education. The first consideration of the instructor is the individual, and for that reason classes are limited to only six or eight men. Whenever a man's work shows that he is not on the same level as the rest of his class, either above or below, he is shifted to a class where he can progress with his fellow students. Individual problems are many but no effort is spared to help the student adjust to this new life.

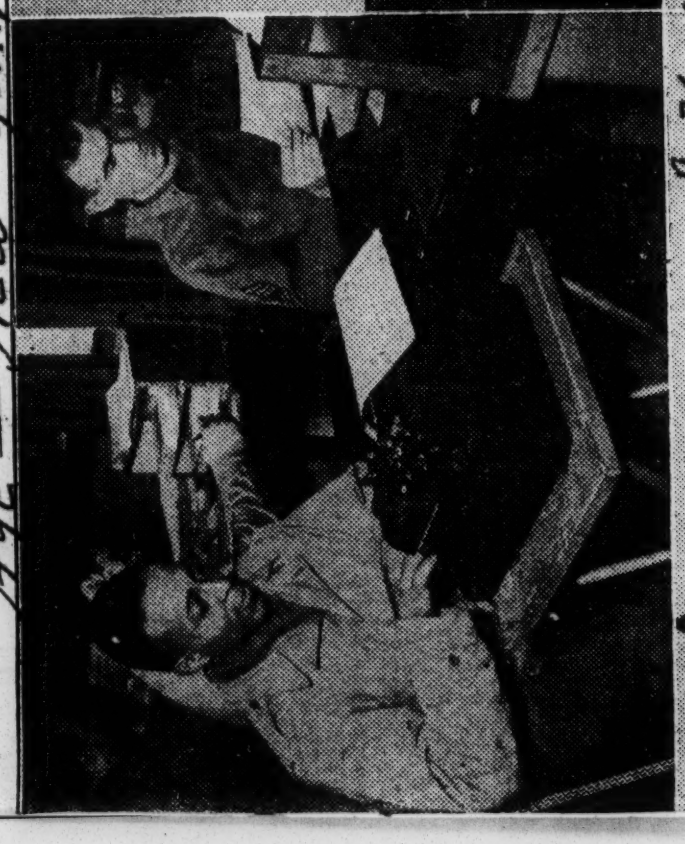
The visitors' lounge, the company day rooms, and the unit theatre provide fine recreational facilities for the men. Here, too, the motif of training is to be found in the provision of newspapers, magazines, and war news displays which encourage the men to use some of their leisure time in trying out their new educational wings.

Many men have been through this school since it was first organized and letters they have written to their former instructors attest to its success. Most men go from Holabird to a regular army basic training camp, but because of his education and military training, the former student may quickly become a non-commissioned officer. This is not unusual for the exceptional student.

8-26-44

Without the training provided by the army, these Negro soldiers would be fit only for army labor battalions, and in civilian life the handicap of illiteracy would always keep them in the laboring class despite natural potentialities. The army, therefore, is opening new fields of endeavor to these men, and they respond by showing appreciation and eagerness to acceps the training. The officers, non-commissioned officers, and civilian instructors of the unit are all vitally interested in this project and are convinced that it should be continued after the war. Naturally changes would have to be made to provide for removal of the military aspect, but it is evident that the approach now being used would also be successful in civilian adult education. In fact, it is believed that many of the ideas could readily be modified to serve in the elementary schools, since they would not only accelerate the educational tempo, but would also make it possible to teach a greater number of studies and to give a greater understanding of their relationship, one to another. Practical application of these new theories, as they function with the 1342 SU-STU at the Holabird Signal Depot, Baltimore, Maryland, is pointing the way to important future achievements in the field of education.





8-26-44

The program followed in a U. S. Rehabilitation Center in England embraces the latest ideas of medical science and psychology. As a result, about 70 per cent of the patients, or "trainees" as they are called, are returned to field duty within 60 days. Upper left photo: GIs working in the headquarters of the hospital—left to right, Pvt. Walter D. Seawright, of Cleveland, Ohio, and T/Sgt. Charles Urksta. Upper right: Pvt. Claude Huey, of Birmingham, Ala. (left), and Pvt. Russell Cocklin, of Stockton, Calif., at work in a Morse code class. Lower left: A class receives instructions in dismantling the .30 calibre machine-gun. Holding the barrel is Cpl. Oscar Williams, of Baltimore, Md. Lower right: Trainees receiving instructions in the German language—left to right, Pfc. Bonnie Hughes, of Biddleport, Ohio; Sgt. Morris Hellman, of Philadelphia; T/Sgt. Litton Thomas, of Crossville, Tenn., and Pfc. Leroy Chatman, of Baldwin, Md. (U. S. Army Signal Corps Photos.)

47n-1944

Veteran Rehabilitation

ARMY REJECTIONS AND WHITE SUPREMACY

Defender — Chicago, Ill.

A study of the rejections by the Army because of educational and mental deficiencies, just published by the American Teachers Association, completely destroys the myth of "white supremacy." The American Teachers Association is a professional organization of teachers of Negro children and of educators interested in achieving equal opportunity for all American children, regardless of sectional or racial differences. 9-16-44

Here are some of the findings of the committee of five eminent educators who conducted the survey:

Up to September 1, 1943, a total of 341,200 registrants were rejected for military service because of educational deficiency, namely, lack of ability "to read and write the English language as well as a student who has completed four years in an American grammar school."

A direct relationship was found between rates of rejections for educational and mental deficiencies and the per capita expenditures for schooling in each state.

Annual state expenditures for education vary from $157 per pupil in New York City to $7 per Negro pupil in Mississippi. Rejection rates for failure to meet minimum "intelligence" or educational standards were lowest in those states with the highest per capita expenditures, and vice versa.

Selective Service figures in one southern area showed that about 4 per cent of the white registrants and about 25 per cent of the Negroes had not completed one year of elementary schooling. 9-16-44

The Negro rejection rate for educational deficiency was generally much higher than the white rate North and South, mainly owing to lesser education opportunities for Negroes in most areas of the country and to the fact that a large percentage of northern Negroes are recent migrants from the South.

The figures reveal an alarmingly low educational level for southern whites as well as southern Negroes. The rejection of white selectees in South Carolina was four times as high as the rate of Negro rejections in Illinois. Rep. Andrew May of Kentucky, who successfully barred the pamphlet "The Races of Mankind," from the armed forces because it exposed the fallacy of "white supremacy," will have to work overtime to keep these facts from getting into the wrong hands.

It is an indictment to the "American Way of Life" when statistics show that the rejections for educational requirement alone cost the Army 15 full divisions, and that in America today there are over 10,000,000 adult illiterates. 9-16-44

Selective Service has shown that better schooling is a nation-wide and not a local problem. A selectee rejected in Georgia for illiteracy means the drafting of another skilled man or a father in New York. Federal aid together with federal planning is the only solution to this sordid condition. Phony states rights issues must not be allowed to defeat measures that will better educate America.

Specially Trained By Famous Guerilla Chief

Gold Coast Independent — Accra, Gold Coast, West Africa

4-29-44

A Well- kept secret of the Burma war has been made public with the announcement that West African troops have taken part in the air borne invasion of Burma and are now operating from allied strongholds miles behind the Jap lines.

The troops who were specially asked for by the late Major-General Wingate, are mostly Nigerians and unknown to themselves were assigned to their important role even before their ships sailed from West Africa some months ago.

On arrival in India the men of this formation separated from their comrades who are now in the Arakan, and proceeded to a special training area somewhere in India. Here under the direct supervision of the late Major-General Wingate they were trained along with other allied troops for the arduous tasks involved in their special role. An especially high standard of physical fitness was demanded of both Africans and Europeans and it can safely be said that the men who have flown into Burma in this daring expedition are amongst the fittest and best trained that West Africa can produce.

4-29-44

That they were destined for "something different" was soon evident after their arrival in the special training area. Supplies of the most modern equipment came forward in almost unlimited quantity and the men, although already trained in jungle warfare before leaving West Africa, were taught the lessons of long range jungle penetration, learned in the Wingate expedition of last year.

4-29-44

Particular attention was paid to physical endurance, and long and tiring marches were undertaken on the minimum of rations. An amusing story is told of a West African infantry man who, on being handed his 'K' ration for the first time, poured the entire contents — tea, sugar, chocolate, chewing gum etc., into a mess tin with some water, consumed the lot and said it was fine'.

The news that their brothers were in action in the Arakan spurred the men of this formation on to greater efforts and when they finally left by train for their long journey across India to their Eastern air base, spirits and enthusiasm were high An officer who was present when the men entered their troop carrying planes for the final move into Jap territory said that they were much less excited with what was, to nearly all of them their first air trip than they were with the prospect of at last getting to grips with the enemy whom they had come so many miles to fight. Even the mules who have accompanied the men right across India and for whom they have a profound attachment seemed to realize the importance of the occasion and behaved themselves perfectly.

4-29-44

47o-1944

Repatriates

Two Scholars Flee Concentration Camp

Modern Damon and Pythias Story Revealed as Men Reach 92nd Lines . .

New Englander, who went abroad to study in 1938, says he refused two chances to return to America because his friend was denied clearance. Pair put in concentration camp following German occupation of Italy. Former students tell of being placed in solitary confinement because the Dane refused to leave his American buddy to work in Germany. Say Nazis took identification papers.

WON'T BE SEPARATED: Reed Peggram, Harvard graduate, and inseparable Danish friend say they want only a place where they can work together in peace.

By MAX JOHNSON, AFRO War Correspondent

WITH 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY (By Cable)—A modern Damon and Pythias, in the persons of a colored Harvard University graduate and his inseparable Danish friend, stumbled through the 92nd frontlines with a harrowing tale of escape after two years in Italian and German concentration camps. One gave his name as Reed E. Peggram of Dorchester, Mass. The other said he was Gerdh Hauftman of Copenhagen, Denmark. Ragged and near collapse from hunger and fatigue, the two met an advanced patrol led by Lt. James Young, Buffalo, N.Y., near a town on the 5th Army front.

Their rescue ended a long hike through rains and snows over the difficult Apennine mountains.

Whether their troubles are now over is undetermined at this writing because neither has documentary evidence to establish his identity. Following their assertion that such papers had been taken by Nazi captors, the Army criminal investigation commission here began conducting a check.

Whether authorities will allow the pair to remain together as they so fervently desire is also undetermined.

Happy as Two Kids

I met the pair shortly after they came through the 5th Army frontlines. Both wore ill-fitting clothing given them by Lieutenant Young and Italian partisans but they were as happy as two boys with Christmas gifts.

Peggram, who is brown skin and slight of build, with an erect carriage, speaks with a decidedly British accent. Hauftman is a thin blonde with a scholarly appearance.

Speak Five Languages

Both speak five languages including English, French, German, Italian, and Danish. Peggram taught Hauftman English, and he, in turn, taught Danish. They learned Italian together, and both knew German and French previously.

I shall repeat chronologically the story of their experiences which they said came because they had bonds of friendship so strong that even the Nazis were unable to break them.

Peggram said he graduated from Harvard in 1935, got his M.A. there the following year in comparative literature, and studied further at Columbia University. He said he came overseas in 1938 on a Rosenwald fellowship and attended the University of Paris.

There, he said, he met Hauftman, a student in the same field, and the two continued research in Copenhagen. In 1940, and then came to Italy with the intention of returning to America together.

Refuse to Be Separated

Authorities wouldn't allow Hauftman clearance because Denmark was under Germany and the latter country was then at war. Peggram refused to return alone and refused a second time when similar opportunity came in 1942 while the two were still in Italy.

The pair were then in desperate circumstances because their funds were exhausted except for a joint account of $1200 banked in Lisbon, Portugal, which they couldn't get for authorities refused to allow American money to be brought into the country.

They lived in Italy on a Swiss Legation allowance of 1000 lire ($50) a month for a while and then in 1943 the Italian government allowed them eight lire (40 cents) a day. They couldn't obtain work because there was a law forbidding foreigners employment unless given permission by certain State officials.

Sent to Concentration Camp

Following the German occupation of Italy late in 1943, the two were sent to a concentration camp at Bagni Di Lucca in the vicinity of Pistoia, Italy, along with Jewish prisoners. They were held there until Allied planes gunned the camp in January, 1944, and the site was moved.

Peggram said the most amazing feature was that Germans termed him as Aryan because of his Catholic faith and both received better treatment than other prisoners. He added that officials were apologetic for his detention, occasionally explaining it had to be done because the two were prisoners of war.

Tell of Escape

In March of this year, the two friends were shifted to various camps throughout Italy, ending with their sudden release by rescue partisans in the vicinity of the town of Piacenza just after being put in solitary confinement by the Nazis because Hauftman refused to leave Peggram to work in Germany.

Peggram said officials wouldn't ask him to go, stating their reason as "You are American."

Still behind German lines the pair remained with partisans until some weeks ago when they started for American lines. The two said they traveled at night, hiding in barns, woods, and friendly partisan homes during the day until finally their break-through came. The only resistance came just before this when Germans sighted and machine-gunned them, but neither was hit.

Heard from Home in 1941

Peggram said he last heard from home in 1941 when he then had a grandmother, Mrs. Laura Reed, in Dorchester, and a mother, Mrs. Mary Farrer, in Bayonne, N.J.

He said he believed he was heir to $11,000 according to notification left in 1941 by Monteford Variell, Harvard graduate of New York, but wouldn't come to America to investigate if it meant leaving Hauftman. . . . . .

The manuscripts of both scholars, including Peggram's fellowship work, are said to be buried in a German-held village in Italy.

Peggram said that they both knew Actress Valaida Snow from association in Copenhagen, and Dr. Beryl Orris, of Chicago.

When I asked whether they wanted to return to America, Peggram said, "We are not principally concerned with going to America. We only want to go some place where we can be assured remaining together to work in peace."

Woman, Two Daughters Leave Nazi Prison After 19 Months

NEW YORK—(ANP)—Nineteen months in a German prison camp is the experience of Mrs. Ida Johnson, wife of Frederick Johnson, well known Harlem pianist, and her two daughters, Jacqueline, 18, and Marilyn, 17. Mrs. Johnson and her daughters were en route to America recently via Liverpool aboard a Swedish Red Cross ship.

The separation of the Johnson family occurred when the Germans overran Holland in 1940. Johnson, who was playing in the leading night spots of the Hague, the Dutch capital, was made a prisoner of war when America declared war against Germany. He was the first of the family to be imprisoned.

Prior to America's declaration of war against Germany, the Johnsons were allowed their freedom. Her daughters were permitted to continue their education at a Dutch High School, Mrs. Johnson said, until that time and her husband continued to play with his orchestra in fashionable Dutch cafes. There was no jimcrow in the Dutch capital, Mrs. Johnson declared.

SENT TO CAMP

When her husband was arrested by Germans, she and her daughters were sent to an interment camp for females at Amersfoort in Holland and later transferred to another prison camp at Liebenau in Germany near the Swiss border, Mrs. Johnson recalled. Life in the latter camp was better than in the Amersfoort camp, she said, as the Lieubenau camp, formerly an asylum for lunatics, was supervised by nuns but guarded by German soldiers.

Mrs. Johnson described the Lieubenau camp as having about 4,000 female war prisoners of British, French, Dutch, Poles, American and other national groups. Situated near the Swiss Alps, health conditions in the camp were very good and the nuns gave the place a Christian and humane atmosphere, which had the effect of keeping the German guards in their places.

However, there were many romances between some of the female internes and the guards, Mrs. Johnson revealed. The guards were the only men the women saw during their entire period of imprisonment with the exception of the prison doctor and one or two clergymen, who conducted weekly services.

Parties, dances, concerts were frequently staged, Mrs. Johnson remarked, adding that the inmates were allowed to walk about freely over the vast and spacious grounds of the camp and were even allowed to organize their own forms of recreation. The Britishers organized Empire day celebrations and the Americans, Independence day, she declared.

She praised the British and American Red Cross for keeping them supplied regularly with food, clothing, cigarets and other comforts, which arrived about twice weekly. The American women shared their boxes with anti-Fascists and allied soldier-prisoners who were working on German farms near the camp.

This was accomplished by a pre-arranged plan between the women and the war prisoners, Mrs. Johnson revealed. The prisoners would send one of their party to spots outside the camp and when the German guards were not looking the women would drop boxes of food and cigarets over the camp wall.

One wman was caught dropping food but was not punished, Mrs. Johnson said, as she was about to be repatriated with other Americans, but the Germans severely punished the men found with the boxes.

Woman, Daughters Leave Nazi Prison After 9 Months

NEW YORK—(ANP)—Nineteen months in a German prison camp is the experience of Mrs. Ida Johnson, wife of Frederick Johnson, well known Harlem pianist, and her two of war against Germany, the Johnsons were allowed their freedom. Her daughters, Jacqueline, 18, and Marilyn, 17, who came back to of the family to be imprisoned. Prior to that time, the John ment camp for females at Amersfeert in Holland and later transferred to another prison camp at Liebenau in Germany near the Swiss border, Mrs. Johnson recalled.

Life in the latter camp was better than in the Amersfeert camp, she said, as the Lieubenau camp, formerly an asylum for lunatics, was supervised by nuns but guarded by German soldiers.

Mrs. Johnson described the Lieubenau camp as having about 4,000 female war prisoners of British, French, Dutch, Poles, American and other national groups. Situated near the Swiss Alps, health conditions were very good and the nuns gave the place a Christian and humane atmosphere.

12-16-44

Prison Camp Romances

However, there were many romances between some of the female internes and the guards, Mrs. Johnson revealed. The guards were the only men the women saw during their entire period of imprisonment with the exception of the prison doctor and one of two clergymen who conducted weekly services.

She praised the British and the American Red Cross for keeping them supplied regularly with food, clothing, cigarettes and other comforts, which arrived about twice weekly. The American women shared their boxes with anti-Fascists and Allied soldier-prisoners who were working on German farms near the camp.

This was accomplished by a prearranged plan between the women and the war prisoners, Mrs. Johnson revealed. The prisoners would send one of their party to spots outside the camp and when the German guards were not looking, the women would drop boxes of food and cigarettes over the camp wall.

I Lived

Pgh. Courier — Pa.

5-27-44

12 YEARS UNDER HITLER

By JOHN WELCH

(Exclusively to The Pittsburgh Courier)

(Reproduction in Whole or Part Expressly Forbidden)

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the sixth of a series of articles by John Welch, American pianist, who, going to Germany before the Nazis took over, lived for 12 years under Hitler's rule until he returned recently with other American repatriates on the S.S. Gripsholm.

NEW YORK—Germany followed the conflict between Italy and Abyssinia with a certain amount of reserve, flavored with a touch of irony. She was not in the least bit alarmed at Italy's colonial ambitions. Germany had ambitions of her own. The Nazi press took certain pacifists to task who were crying out for sanctions against Italy, forgetting that that country's act of aggression was not more than all colonizing people had permitted themselves any number of times. Little sympathy was shown for the Abyssinian cause. In fact, the newspapers were inclined to minimize the stubborn resistance which the Italian troops had to face at every turn. In Berlin the man on the street sang a different tune. Many people with whom I spoke were less reserved and often used the remarks of biting sarcasm when referring to Italy and the comparatively slow progress her troops were making, considering the modern devices of war at their disposal.

John Welch

Italy's final conquest of Ethiopia, which, by menacing English domination in the Mediterranean caused the first break between the two countries, placed Germany in a rather favorable position, by diverting the attention of the rest of the world for a moment from Hitler, who, up to that time, was the first to throw pebbles into the apparent calm of the European pool of politics.

RECOGNIZED ITALIAN CONQUEST

Germany was the first country to recognize the Italian King as Emperor of Ethiopia, and the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Ciano, who visited Hitler after the annexation of Ethiopia, was the first to hear of this friendly gesture. He little suspected that his host would one day be his murderer. Count Ciano, who later became Mussolini's son-in-law, was suspected of having negotiated with the present Badoglio Government and was among those high Italian officials who were executed at Hitler's command, just a few months ago.

Meanwhile, Nazi pressure against Jews increased, from day to day. Certain benches in the parks were painted yellow, with the words, "Nun fur Juden" (only for Jews) printed on them. The movies, theatres and libraries were closed to them, and many restaurants, cafes, beer gardens and even shops had signs on the entrances, "Judenist der Ientritt verboten." (Jews are not permited to enter). All books and literature of Jewish authorship were confiscated and burned publicly, not excluding the works of Heine, one of the great German poet-philosophers. The music of Mendelssohn, Offenbach and all other composers of Jewish blood, was no longer allowed to be performed in public. It was forbidden for Jewish doctors to treat Aryan patients. I am sure the Aryans suffered the most through this latter prohibition!

A BEER PARLOR INCIDENT

5-27-44

Then came the time when Jews were deprived of their radios. They were simply ordered to give up their sets at the nearest police station. Still later, all electrical devices, such as vacuum cleaners, electric irons, stoves and refrigerators were confiscated. They were no longer allowed to keep dogs, cats, canaries or any house pets. In short, everything from which they might derive some little pleasure, was denied them.

One evening I was in my favorite beer garden when two fellows sauntered up to the bar where I was standing and ordered some drinks. That they were Nazis I recognized by the party button pinned on their lapels. One turned to the other and said "Ein Neger," which in German means "a Negro." The words, themselves, were nothing to be offended about; it was the tone in which they were spoken. I turned to him and asked what he meant, whereupon he answered rather innocently that he had said nothing pertaining to me. I told him my organs of hearing were very good and that they were never disposed to playing tricks on me and I advised him either to drink his beer quietly, or to scram. Both drank their beer quietly—and scrammed. I ran into these two chaps about a week later, or, I'd better say, they ran into me! Space doesn't permit the completion of this little incident. today, but I shall finish it in the next issue.

470-1944

Linwood Walker, Jr., Blind Marine, Receives Readjustment Training In Navy's Program

Age — New York, N.Y.

12-23-44

By MARY E. FINGER

The New York Institute for the Education of the Blind recently inaugurated a new policy in cooperation with the Bureau of Medicine of the U. S. Navy Rehabilitation Division—that of readjusting lives of Marines and Navy personnel who suddenly find themselves in a world of darkness. This program is designed to give wounded returning heroes a two-weeks course in scientific methods of determining their manual dexterity and mental aptitudes.

Last week six boys were transferred from the Naval Hospital in Philadelphia, to the Institute to undergo a two weeks training period. In this group was one Negro, Marine Platoon Sergeant Linwood Walker, Jr., a twenty-one year old youth who was blinded on August 4th, while serving with an amphibious unit at Saipan. The lad, who has developed a sense of humor about his affliction, was majoring in social administration at Ohio State College, prior to his induction two years ago. His plan is to continue in that feild as a social worker and he will return to Ohio State as soon as he receives his discharge papers.

Jokes About His Blindness

During an interview last Wednesday at the Institute, Walker said that he has resigned himself to his present condition, and is trying to carry on as if nothing has happened. When he was asked to explain how he became blind, he laughed and said "That's a joke".

"What's a joke", I asked.

He answered, "My blindness! I was just minding my own business, that's the joke of it. I was with three other boys and we came upon a booby trap. The others weren't hurt, just me. That's the joke. That's why I can get such a kick out of it."

12-23-44

"What was your first reaction when you realized you were blind", I asked?

Walker again laughed and replied, "I knew I was blind when I fell to my knees, and I decided then to make the best of it." He continued by saying "everything happens to me on the first. I was shipped overseas the first of June, got hurt the first of August, returned to the States around September first, became a patient at Naval Hospital on October first and finally arrived in New York on December first."

The Ohio marine expressed a keen desire to be with his fighting buddies in the Pacfic. He praised his comrades for the magnificent job they are doing inspite of the difficulties they are forced to undergo. He made it clear that color lines disappear when Jap bombs begin to fall. The only thing counts is the rattle of machine guns.

Linwood Walker who can see blurry figures at a distance of a few feet, remarked that it is quite disgusting to the boys who return home and find the people complacent about the war.

Walker showed great enthusiasm in the work being accomplished by the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind. The building, which serves high school and elementary pupils, has a student population of 200, including 21 Negroes.

12-23-44

Since Walker came to the school he has been given many aptitude tests and attended classes. Part of the day's work is to observe the methods being taught other blind students and their progress. The evening hours are spent visiting local places of interest.

Dr. Clarence Athearn, director of research at the Institute, stressed the fact that discrimination is completely missing. He said that students of all nationalities work and live together harmoniously. At social functions couples of mixed groups dance together. "There's no discrimination among the blind," he said.

Several years ago a young Negro fellowship student attending Columbia University served as a practice teacher. "The school is anxious to have qualified teachers of any nationality, creed or color, to serve on its faculty", Dr. Athearn told The New York Age. The Institute is located at 999 Pelham Parkway, the Bronx.

Veterans

ALABAMA CITIZEN - Tuscaloosa

CHARLES ORR'S APPOINTMENT ALA.

We hail the appointment of our friend Charles Orr, former principal of the Industrial High School and president of the Alabama Teachers Association, to the State Veterans Educational Advisory Committee as a forward step. The placing of a Negro in a responsible position on a committee charged with the task of seeing that ample educational facilities are available to the thousands of Alabamians now serving on our far-flung battle fields, gives us more assurance that Negro veterans will get their share of training opportunities. Of all the many provisions of the "G. I. Bill of Rights" none should have greater attraction for the Negro than those providing an opportunity for further study. We hope that Mr. Orr's committee will use its power to make these liberal training offers as attractive as possible so that veterans of all educational levels will be encouraged to re-enter the classroom. We hope that through this means that hundreds who were limited to hard, laborious labor by the lack of proper training will be helped so that they can earn a decent living. We hope that many whose educational deficiencies have made them burdens of society will be re-trained as dependable upright citizens. We are confident that Mr. Orr will use his influence to see that no stone is left unturned in the effort to re-educate our returning fighters. His brilliant record as a student and educator assures us that all possible consideration will be given our group.

11-25-44

Veterans

Linwood Walker, Jr., Blind Marine, Receives Readjustment Training In Navy's Program

Age - New York, N.Y.

12-23-44

By MARY E. FINGER

The New York Institute for the Education of the Blind recently inaugurated a new policy in cooperation with the Bureau of Medicine of the U. S. Navy Rehabilitation Division—that of readjusting lives of Marines and Navy personnel who suddenly find themselves in a world of darkness. This program is designed to give wounded returning heroes a two-weeks course in scientific methods of determining their manual dexterity and mental aptitudes.

Last week six boys were transferred from the Naval Hospital in Philadelphia, to the Institute to undergo a two weeks training period. In this group was one Negro, Marine Platoon Sergeant Linwood Walker, Jr., a twenty-one year old youth who was blinded on August 4th, while serving with an amphibious unit at Saipan. The lad, who has developed a sense of humor about his affliction, was majoring in social administration at Ohio State College, prior to his induction two years ago. His plan is to continue in that feild as a social worker and he will return to Ohio State as soon as he receives his discharge papers.

12-23-44

Jokes About His Blindness

During an interview last Wednesday at the Institute, Walker said that he has resigned himself to his present condition, and is trying to carry on as if nothing has happened. When he was asked to explain how he became blind, he laughed and said "That's a joke".

"What's a joke", I asked.

He answered, "My blindness! I was just minding my own business, that's the joke of it. I was with three other boys and we came upon a booby trap. The others weren't hurt, just me. That's the joke. That's why I can get such a kick out of it."

"What was your first reaction when you realized you were blind", I asked?

12-23-44

Walker again laughed and replied, "I knew I was blind when I fell to my knees, and I decided then to make the best of it." He continued by saying "everything happens to me on the first. I was shipped overseas the first of June, got hurt the first of August, returned to the States around September first, became a patient at Naval Hospital on October first and finally arrived in New York on December first."

The Ohio marine expressed a keen desire to be with his fighting buddies in the Pacfic. He praised his comrades for the magnificent job they are doing inspite of the difficulties they are forced to undergo. He made it clear that color lines disappear when Jap bombs begin to fall. The only thing counts is the rattle of machine guns.

Linwood Walker who can see blurry figures at a distance of a few feet, remarked that it is quite disgusting to the boys who return home and find the people complacent about the war.

Walker showed great enthusiasm in the work being accomplished by the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind. The building, which serves high school and elementary pupils, has a student population of 200, including 21 Negroes.

12-23-44

Since Walker came to the school he has been given many aptitude tests and attended classes. Part of the day's work is to observe the methods being taught other blind students and their progress. The evening hours are spent visiting local places of interest.

Dr. Clarence Athearn, director of research at the Institute, stressed the fact that discrimination is completely missing. He said that students of all nationalities work and live together harmoniously. At social functions couples of mixed groups dance together. "There's no discrimination among the blind," he said.

12-23-44

Several years ago a young Negro fellowship student attending Columbia University served as a practice teacher. "The school is anxious to have qualified teachers of any nationality, creed or color, to serve on its faculty", Dr. Athearn told The New York Age. The Institute is located at 999 Pelham Parkway, the Bronx.

Full Integration Of Negroes In Program Viewed

Daily World - Atlanta Ga

Urge Immediate Passage Of Bill Protecting Race

12-10-44

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The existence of a new veterans' organization which is committed to the full integration of Negroes was revealed by Capt. Grant Reynolds, former army chaplain, whose outspoken interest in the welfare of Negro soldiers and veterans led to his honorable discharge from the Army. Capt. Reynolds was the luncheon guest speaker of the Capital Press Club last week.

The new organization is the American Veterans' Committee with headquarters in New York City. Reynolds has been invited to become a member of the organization's Planning Committee, which he has accepted.

12-10-44

In correspondence with the new organization, Reynolds was advised by Charles Bolte, head of the group, that the Planning Committee is in complete sympathy with his views that problems facing the Negro veteran are for all to solve. He declared the organization ready to demonstrate its good faith with Negro veterans by full integration.

URGE BILL PASSAGE

The organization is recommending to its Washington Committee that they urge immediate passage of Senate bill 2992 which would make it a federal crime to assault or kill a man in the uniform of the United States Army, Navy or Marine Corps. It is prepared to go to the bat against cases of unjust imprisonment of Negro soldiers growing out of discriminatory practices of the Armed Services. It is in accord with the view that a qualified Negro should be appointed administrator of Veterans Affairs in the government.

Reynolds believes, however, that there is still a need for a national lobby to work with these veterans organizations. He does not want to see Negroes return to a segregated veterans organization, however. He has organized such a lobby, called the National Council for Abolition of Discrimination in Military and Veterans' Affairs.

TO STUDY LAW

12-10-44

Unfortunately, he says, he will not be able to head up the council. He plans to return to school in February to study law. "There are going to be a lot of problems after the war for Negro veterans which the Church cannot solve," he declared.

"Unless we are alert and press our national legislature and get the President to take the lead in establishing racial accord, we are going to have blood flowing in the streets of American cities," he said.

21,760 Negro Veterans Of This War Are Now Receiving Veterans' Pensions As Disabled

Age - New York, N.Y.

New York Age

A total of 21,760 Negro veterans of the present war were receiving veterans' pensions from the Veterans Administration on August 31, 1944, for disability incurred in or aggravated by service in the armed forces, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, announced this week. Negro recipients represented 8.7 per cent of all veterans receiving such pensions.

At the same time, General Hines revealed that 334 Negro veterans, disabled as a result of service in the present war, were taking vocational rehabilitation courses in educational institutions and in placement training designed to overcome the handicap of disability. These trainees represent 9.7 per cent of the total number of veterans receiving such training.

The training program for disabled veterans has been getting off to a slow start, General Hines said, because of excellent employment opportunities available to veterans in war production industries. Of the 184,000 disabled Negro and White veterans notified of eligibility, 150,000 have not applied. Only 34,000 applications for training benefits had been received through October 1, 1944, and more than half of this number have either been deferred or denied.

11-25-44

During the fiscal year of 1944, a total of 21,699 Negro veterans were admitted to Veterans Administration institutions for hospitalization or domiciliary care.

Many of the 21,699 veterans who received hopsital care during the fiscal year were in hospitals for only a few weeks. A large percentage of them returned to active duty or to civilian life.

General Hines pointed out that more than 80 per cent of the claims filed for disability pensio have been adjusted, and that this currency is due largely to the establishment last spring of nine area offices, which have adjudicated more than 100,000 pension claims made by veterans of the present war.

The Veterans Administration has at present 94 hospitals containing 89,000 beds of all types. This capacity will be increased by 20,000 beds during the next eighteen months. In addition to this, construction of 23,000 additional beds has been approved, which should give a total of 132,000 veterans' beds during 1947.

Veterans Of Present War Organize To Kill Racial Prejudice

The Whip - Miami, Fla.

11-26-44

WASHINGTON (PPNS)—While American soldiers abroad are fighting to vanquish Hitlerism and restore peace to a weary world, veterans of the present global conflict are organizing to combat un-American practices on the home front. A sesuel to the American Legion of World War 1 has been created with the formation of the AMVETS, which is a group pledged to fight strikes, racial prejudices and to preserve "here at home" American traditions that GI Joe is fighting for on foreign soil.

An impressive membership of 84,000 bespeaks of the determination of men who have fought and shed blood for a common cause to bring about more amiable relation between the races and equal opportunities regardless of "race, color or creed." The AMVETS shall operate entirely independent of the American Legion, which, according to AMVETS organizers, has not expressed any desire to cooperate with the newly formed organization.

11-25-44

A minimum of 60 days active service in the armed forces since Sept. 16, 1940, is required by those seeking membership.

80,444 Veterans Of 2 Wars Placed By USES

New York Age N.Y.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A total of 80,444 placements of veterans of the last war and the present war volving disabled veterans whose skills, attitudes and experiences made them to perform many was made during September through offices of the United States Employment Service, announced Friday by Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the Manpower Commission. Of the total number of jobs found during the month, 60,064 were for veterans of this war, these total Mr. McNutt said, and 10,892 placements in-12,492 were for service men with disabilities.

Colored Officials Needed to Protect Veterans' Rights

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
11-25-44

WASHINGTON

Nomination of Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans' Affairs, to be also Retraining and Re-employment Administrator indicates that he will be the dominant official in the administration of laws pertaining to re-employment of veterans.

The Retraining and Re-employment Adminsitration was created within the Office of War Mobilization by Executive order on February 24. Congress, however, was convinced of the necessity of maintaining this agency and in the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act gave it legal sanction.

Co-ordinating Agency

Its functions are to supervise and co-ordinate the activities of all government agencies relating to the retraining and re-employment of veterans and persons released from war work, and to develop programs for the adequate care of veterans.

The Servicemen's Readjustment Act, known as the G.I. Bill of Rights, provides for these services for veterans to be administered by the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs.

Since General Hines is to head both agencies, the necessity for the appointment of competent colored personnel at staff levels to participate in the formulation of policies and the direction of activities becomes all the more apparent.

11-25-44

Efforts So Far Futile

Efforts to effect such appointments have been made but to no avail. Key officials in the Veterans' Administration, it was learned, have taken the position that theirs is not a new agency, but an old one which has demonstrated its ability to escape criticism of unfairness from colored people.

No colored oicial has served in the Veterans' Administration since 1924, when Dr. J. R. A. Crossland was transferred from Washington to the Tuskegee Veterans' Hospital.

The same persons who established this jim-crow hospital and have operated this agency without aid or advice from colored persons are still running the Veterans' Administration and resisting the appointment of colored persons to administrative positions.

11-25-44

Assistants Needed

In addition to positions as assistants to the Administrator of Veterans' Affair and the Retraining and Re-employment Administrator, it is also desirable that colored administrative assistants be appointed in regional offices or other sub-offices of the Veterans' Administration to assist colored veterans in getting the benefits to which they are entitled under the G.I. Bill of Rights.

The Veterans' Administration has opened four of several contemplated offices for the purpose of processing home loans to veterans—in New York, Washington, Chicago and San Francisco.

The G.I. Bill of Rights authorizes the Administrator of Veterans' Affairs to guarantee 50 per cent of loans secured by veterans for the purchase and construction of homes, farms or business property, or for equipment for a farm or business property, but restricts the guaranty to not more than $2,000.

Pressure Needed to Obtain Representation for Vets

Afro American — Baltimore, Md.
12-2-44

By Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON

If colored veterans are to benefit fully from the programs Congress has established for the care and readjustment of every returning veteran, disabled or not, the appointment of colored administrative officers in the Veterans' Administration is absolutely necessary.

The Veterans' Administration with offices throughout the United States, administers the laws granting benefits to veterans and their dependants.

What They Are Entitled To

The major benefits for veterans of World War II are aid in securing employment, education and vocationl rehabilitation, Government life insurance at favorable premium rates, medical treatment, hospital and dimiciliary care, guaranty loans for the purchase or construction of homes, farms or business, unemployment allowances, and pensions for disabled veterans and their dependents.

Key officers in the Veterans' Administration are reported to be resisting efforts to effect the appointment of colored administrative officers in that agency.

Walter White, secretary of the NAACP, and Julius A. Thomas, director of industrial relations of the National Urban League, recently requested President Roosevelt to direct the appointment of such an officer on a policy-making level.

12-2-44

Hines Non-Committal

The President is said to have referred them to Maj. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Administrator of Veterans Affairs, who listened attentively to their proposal but made no commitment.

Representatives of the James E. Walker Post of the American Legion also conferred with General Hines regarding the appointment of colored men, preferably veterans, to key positions in States which will have large numbers of colored veterans to aid in readjustment in civilian life.

These representatives reported that General Hines indicated that he will consider their reqeust.

State Assistants Asked

They asked for an assistant to the Administrator in the central administrative offices in Washington and an assistant to the director in each State to aid colored veterans in obtaining fairness under the rehabilitation programs.

A spokesman for the post said the appointment of colored administrative officers is absolutely necessary because white officials of the Veterans' Administration in Southern States will not fully inform colored veterans of their rights nor attempt to enforce their rights for them.

12-2-44

Offices Numerous

The Veterans' Administration operates fifty-three regional offices and nine area offices where claims for disability pensions and other benefits are adjudicated.

In addition, sixty-seven contact and branch offices have been authorized through the United States, and there are fiftyfour Veterans' Administration hospitals where a claimant may receive aid in filing claim for a pension or other benefit.

There are also 104 trained contact representatives located at Army and Navy installations to inform veterans of their rights and assist them in filing claims.

Each State Has Unit

In each State there has been established a Veterans' Service Committee consisting of representatives of the Selective Service System, the U.S. Employment Service, and the Veterans' Administration. These committees represent the Federal Government in the States with respect to veterans.

Exceeds Dixie

AFRO-AMERICAN

J.C. Demands

Balt., Md.

Hotel Manager Had Admitted Vet, Wife

11-11-44

HAD BEST ROOMS

Indians, Other Darker Races Already There

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—That Uncle Sam's Army jim-crow has officially been raised against returning veterans was disclosed here last week when a colored couple was refused admittance to the redistribution center in the famous Arlington Hotel by army commanders.

11-11-44

Fellow service men and townspeople were incensed when the pair, whose names were withheld were ousted by army officials after W. E. Chester, veteran manager of the hotel and himself a Southerner, had assigned them to one of the best rooms in the establishment.

The manager, who for many years has employed several hundred colored workers, contended that since many nationalities, including Indians and other darker races were already guests at the resort, he saw no reason that the colored veteran and his wife should not remain.

11-11-44

Sent Back to New York

But an army captain ordered the couple removed and they were shipped back to Lake Placid, N.Y.

The redistribution centers are established for the reorientation of troops who have seen overseas duty before their reassignment to new posts in the U.S. or in new theatres of war.

The personnel is kept at these posts for periods ranging from two to three weeks, during which they are given thorough physical and mental check ups.

To Afford Relaxation

The military part of the program is planned to be carried on as briefly as possible and to take up only a few hours of the day in order to permit complete relaxation of the men.

Facilities are provided so that wives, relatives and sweethearts may visit with the veterans. Such centers are established throughout the country.

afro-american Baltimore, Md.
11-11-44

4/3-1944

VFW Colored Post Formed Here; One Of 3 In Georgia

Athens, Ga. Banner-Herald

With the chartering and installation of Wakefield C. Brunt Post No. 3910, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Athens now has one of the three colored posts of that organization in the state The other two are located at Savannah and Augusta. 6-5-44

Colored veterans applied for the charter and the post was installed by the State Department Commander, Mayo C. Buckley, with Harry Jones as post commander.

Other officers of the post are John V. Gilmore, senior vice-commander; Willie A. Robbins, junior vice-commander; W. Howard Jones, quartermaster and adjutant, Charles E. Lumpkin, post advocate; Rev. P. E. Dorsey, chaplain; William Peterson, surgeon; Albert Lumpkin, officer of the day; Bennie Jones, historian; Oscar Wilson, service officer.

Trustees are Jessie B. Moore, Joe Andrews and Ernest Elder; Hampton Redd. sergeant major; Mark Wise, quartermaster sergeant; Shep Moore, guard; Enos Williams, sentinel; Ben Milner and Arthur Cooper, color bearers; Wiley Lane, bugler.

The post will sell Buddy Popples throughout the city generally on Saturday, June 3, and at the Athens High & Industrial School the following day. Sale of the poppies is to raise funds for needy veterans in this community and the post expects a good response, especially among the colored people of Athens. Citizens are asked by the post to give as much as they can for a worthy cause. 6-5-44

According to Post Commander Harry Jones, the post will be represented at the Department encampment to be held at Augusta on June 7 and 8.

There are many colored Athenians serving in the armed forces, both in this country and overseas.

47-1944 47 P.

War Veterans

About Aid To Negro Veterans

Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

(From The Jackson (Miss.) Advocate)

3-5-44

According to recent reports the White Veterans Organizations of the state are sponsoring a bill that may be considered and passed by the present state legislature to broaden the existing law with respect to furnish aid to War veterans. A work that has been carried on by this agency through its service officer, who is charged with the responsibility of furnishing aid and advice to War veterans in the filing of claims for compensation, and with respects to the matters that may arise under the laws of the state and of the nation dealing with the welfare and rehabilitation of War Veterans.

47D

Under the proposed law the request is being made that a number of such service officers be authorized in view of the large increase in the number of veterans which will come as a result of the present conflict, and every one who has the slightest knowledge of the complications that may arise in the presentation of a rightful claim of a veteran for the benefits he may be entitled to under the law will at once see the need for an increase in the State Service Officers. 3-5-44

For many reasons, which must include the large increase in Negro veterans growing out of the present conflict, the greatest of which, however, is the peculiar mental reaction of the less literate of the Negro group to the probings that sometime become necessary in order to reach the basis for a claim. When done by others than members of the group, and in the knowledge that experience has shown that an able and intelligent Negro, both because of greater sympathy, and deeper knowledge of the social patterns of the group, can better obtain the information always needed in such matters, it would be a great aid to the Negro veterans of Mississippi who will come out of this war if a number of able and intelligent Negroes were appointed to the position of State Service Officers.

47q-1944 Prisoners

50 Negroes Held As Nazi Aides In French Prison

Defender — Chicago, Ill. 11-4-44

FACES FRENCH TRIAL

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

PARIS — Among thousands of suspected French collaborators milling over huge five acre courtyards in dreaded Drancy, former Nazi concentration camp, I saw at least fifty Negroes.

There may have been more in this packed prison where 6,000 are accused of selling out to the Nazis, of treason and intelligence with the enemy which under Article 75, of the French Penal Code, is punishable by death. 11-4-44

"Not all are guilty," said a tough looking young FFI (French Forces Interior) hardly more than 19, with long machine gun slung under his arm ready for action. "But undoubtedly some of them are, and their heads will go where France's traitors belong—to the guillotine!"

Here was an unforgettable scene. Frenchmen and women who had sold their birthright for a mess of pottage stood silently now awaiting their fate—release, hard labor for long terms or the guillotine. Jammed into this big, oblong, five storied, dingy-white building resembling a worn housing project, men and women, young and old take hourly turns in the crowded yard pressed so closely together that this exercise walk is done very slowly lest they trod upon each other.

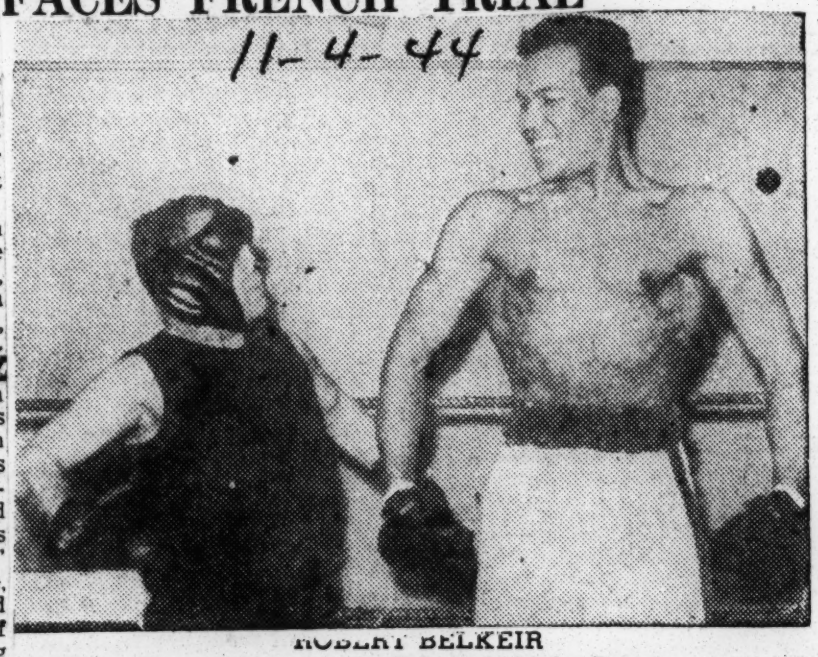
Courts Start Work

Located on the outskirts of Paris, a few miles from Le Bourget airfield where Lindbergh landed on his non-stop flight in 1927, is this former Nazi torture chamber which during the Nazi occupation housed 5,000 Jews.

Hours after the liberation of Paris, the FFI began filling up Drancy with collaborators. Even before the liberated Jews had time to learn that they were free and even before they had time to tear from their breasts the five pointed yellow star of David that the Nazis made all Jews wear, the loaded vans kept pulling up at Drancy all night long.

Now with two months since the liberation and with many men and women tried by Provincial courts and their swift justice long ago meted out, the Paris courts are just beginning. In Marseilles, death sentences averaged 20 a day in one month.

Not all are death sentences as prison terms of hard labor may be dealt for buying furniture looted by the Germans, or five years for the price of being mistress to a German officer, or death for a Vichy agent of the Gestapo.



ROBERT BELKEIR

Youthful French Negro prizefighter held in Drancy concentration camp for trial as Nazi collaborator. With him is a white boxer.

Fighter Jailed

Many big fortunes have been made by some of the many walking in this very yard, I am told by my FFI guide. Some are known to have exacted large fortunes from Jewish and political refugees for pretended protection only to turn them in later for more money. Some worked with Germans because they had to eat and still incur the enmity of neighbors. some had done nothing other than

Such a man was, if his story is to be believed, this handsome, well-built, copper colored, Negro lad, Robert Belkeir. A prizefighter at 21, when the Nazis came into Paris, Robert had been fighting here and there and his press clippings showed he had made many promising fights and his massive physique certainly belied his gladitorial abilities. 11-4-44

He did not know why he was arrested and he could tell of no reason why he could have been even suspected of doing anything. Someone had made him the goat but he had to get out.

I listened to this big, brown lad with his radiant smile and flashing white teeth, while he repeated his few words in English over and over. They were: "Me come America; fight Joe Louis; me be heavyweight champeen!" His simple manner seemed strangely true and genuine but having learned from bitter experience that it is wiser not to interfere unless one has all the facts, I merely inquired of one friendly official about Robert.

Many Negroes

It was his opinion that Robert's case was not serious but there were so many cases and only two hundred were being released daily, he thought that with no developments Robert might be heard from soon. Overjoyed Robert gave me his photo and his press clippings and was certain that I'd hear of him in America where he was sure to meet the "champeen!"

It was difficult to move towards the gate as I was completely mobbed by Negroes of all descriptions. A tall Senegalese with tribal markings on his forehead begged for cigarettes; a light complexioned youth hardly more than 20 stood aloofly outside of the group surrounding me; a squat, fat, dark man looking fiftyish in age handed me a note—all firm in their belief that American newspapermen in uniform can accomplish almost anything. Clearly, there was nothing anyone could have done. Guilty or innocent, they would have to wait their investigation.

Passing through the crowded office filled with attractive young women wearing yellow bands on their arms, my guide explained that these were collaborators also. They hoped to absolve themselves by aiding in keeping records of these unfortunates. The records were in shambles; nowhere was there orderliness. 11-4-44

Prostitutes Caught

Remarking on the general comeliness of the office force, my guide said of the most attractive: "Her offense was not merely sleeping with Germans; the crime was talking in her sleep." It is a known fact that all of the painted filles dancing nightly in Montmarte cafes with Americans generally slept, danced and ate with Germans but their business is prostitution, the Frenchman says, and they were not classed as criminals against the State as long as they confined it to amour.

The situation was entirely different in other parts of France, however, for in Dinard, the sleepy little resort city near St. Malo, I saw thirty raucous trollops and trulls whose heads were shaven and made to publicly exhibit themselves. In Lesvenen, on the British peninsula, ten closely cropped girls were forced to work for FFIs with bared shining heads. They were brought out for our party to view. 11-4-44

Leaving the sordidness of dreary Drancy, we were stopped at the gates where the guards opened the barbed wired barricade to let in a truck filled with more traitors accused of anti-nationalism and collaboration. It was obvious that as we passed out that there were many who would never leave here, except to hear their sentence in historic Palais de Justice.

Nazis Sought Negro Women As Mistresses In Paris

By EDWARD B. TOLES

PARIS.--"Black men collaborators?" gasped astonished Womendugas Lucas French native of the Cameroons but for many years a gay dancer in Montmarte's famed Cafe de Paris.

His wrinkled, tribal-designed forhead, furrowed in amazement, Lucas shook his head in a determined negative manner.

"No, there are no actual Negro collaborators," he said. "I know because I was just released from Drancy where I was charged with be-that all the cases will soon be sifted out the same as mine."

Negro men suffered most after the Germans came according to Lucas. All up and down Montmarte, German patrols daily walked up to well-dressed Negro men and asked to see their hands. If a man has gnarled, callused palms, his reply that he was a workman might save him from six months' imprisonment in a concentration camp.

Lacking an occupation of labor and the accompanying workman's hands there was a large bread knife in my tiny flat and my concierge pointed me out as a very dangerous man."

"Negro people love freedom too much and they love France better than to sell her. There are a lot of pure spite cases thrown into the class of collaborators but I think fortifications and walls.

For Negro women, the Germans had other uses, said Lucas. Attractive girls were forced to accept

,

For Negro women, the Germans had other uses, said Lucas. Attractive girls were forced to accept

For Negro women, the Germans had other uses, said Lucas. Attractive girls were forced to accept employment as maids only to find when they reported for work that the usual French maids were still on the jobs. The "Master Race" wanted them as their mistresses.

German fondness for Negro bed companions took quite a shocking turn when their stolid, plain looking Nazi womenfolk stalked into France as nurses, orderlies, and auxiliaries for they too began frequenting Montmarte casting covetous glances at unemployed Negro youths.

One occasion, said Lucas, three of our boys and three German nurses never were seen again when a hotel burned one night. The Gestapo was seen all over the neighborhood that night.

Defender--Chicago, Ill. 11-18-44

Vets' Administration Still Barring Colored Officials

Afro American — Baltimore, Md
12-16-44

By SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
WASHINGTON

While activities of the Veterans' Administration are increasing and will continue to increase for some time as the result of the present war, there is yet no indication that colored persons will be appointed to administrative offices in that agency.

Data showing the number of colored employees by grades and classification were not available, but so far as is known the only colored persons employed in professional capacities are on the staff of the jim-crow hospital facility at Tuskegee, Ala.

Most of the colored non-professional employees are serving in the lower clerical and custodial grades.

$123,000,000 Pay Roll

The Veterans' Administration has a total of 50,235 authorized positions. Of that number, 13,566 with annual salaries of $29,479,666 are in the central administrative offices in the District of Columbia, and 46,679 at an annual salary cost of $94,043,785 are in the field.

Within the level at which a colored administrative office in the central administrative offices is being sought, there are fifty-one authorized positions, all now held by whites, ranging in salary from $4,600 to $7,500 a year.

Re-hiring Time Extended

Under an act upon which Congression action was completed, Thursday, the time within which veterans of World War II may apply for restoration in their former civilian employment has been extended from 40 to 90 days following release from active service.

The legislation also provides that, if hospitalization immediately follows release from active service and does not last for more than one year following such release, application for re-employment may be made within 90 days after release from hospitalization.

Trainee Earnings

Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission, recently announced that wages earned by veterans who qualify for apprentice training will be supplemented by the $50-$75 monthly allowances provided by the "GI Bill of Rights."

The combined earnings may not exceed regular wages in the trade for which he is training.

Many Fields Open

There are more than 100 skilled occupations in manufacturing and construction industries for which men are trained through apprenticeship.

12-16-44

A veteran who wants to learn a skilled trade may apply to the U.S. Employment Service, where the veterans' employment service representative will advise him where there are the most likely opportunities for an apprenticeship in the trade best suited to his capabilities.